One of the primary methods used over the decades by the Illuminati to advance their conspiratorial objectives has always been to surround leaders by its proteges or advocates - such as Leon Brittan, one of the most evil-looking men the Author has ever seen, who was clearly prepositioned into Mrs Thatcher's entourage before she took power. It will be recalled from our examination of Jesuit methodology that The Order (Jesuit manifestation) concentrated considerable resources on befriending potentates, princes and wealthy women (whom they especially cherish, given their expectation that, in due course, they will become wealthy widows who can be encouraged to hand their wealth over to the Order before their death). Exactly the same (Jesuit) grasping and control methodology is deployed routinely by The Order of the Illuminati. Adam Weishaupt stated plainly that the Illuminati's plan was to surround ruling authorities with members of The Order so that its representatives would be as close to seats of power as feasible and, through close influence and if possible actual occupation of the highest offices, to usurp such power directly. Thus he instructed: 'These powers are despots, when they do not conduct themselves by its [the Order's] principles; and it is therefore our duty to surround them with its members, so that the profane' (that is, Illuminati- and Freemasonic-speak for the rest of us who haven't been initiated into their evil ways and don't go along with their arrogant plans) 'may have no access to them. Thus we are able most powerfully to promote its interests. If any person is more disposed to listen to Princes than to the Order, he is not fit for it, and must rise no higher. We must do our utmost to procure the advancement of the Illuminati into all important civil offices'[100]. To lay long-term plans as devious as this, one must surely indeed be possessed.

THE DETAILED HISTORICAL BACKGROUND ACCORDING TO ROBISON

Robison revealed in his own introduction to his work that the Illuminati survived their 'abolition' by the Bavarian Court of Enquiry, in the following passage:

'... abolished in 1786 by the Elector of Bavaria, [the Order of the Illuminati were] revived immediately after under another name, and in a different form, all over Germany. It was again detected, and seemingly broken up; but it had by this time taken so deep root that still subsists' (as of 1798 when Dr Robison's book was published) 'without being detected, and has spread into all the countries of Europe. It took its first rise among the Freemasons, but is totally different from Freemasonry. It was not, however, the mere protection gained by the secrecy of the Lodges that gave occasion to it, but it arose naturally from the corruptions that had gradually crept into the fraternity, the violence of the party-spirif (i.e., the 'seething energies of Lucifer)' which pervaded it, and from the total uncertainty and darkness that hangs over the whole of that mysterious Association'[101].

Freemasonry originated in England, which has accordingly cursed the whole world by inventing this system of secret Lodges which have been converted into transmission mechanisms for the dissemination of the 'Ancient Mysteries' and the degradation of civilization. Robison observes at the outset that he had detected indications of extensive intermeddling by Jesuits in Masonic Lodges in the 17th century:

'I have met with many particular facts, which convince me that... at this time' (referring to the English Revolution and the Civil War period) 'the Jesuits interfered considerably, insinuating themselves into the Lodges, and contributing to increase that religious mysticism that is to be observed in all ceremonies of The Order'. And Robison had observed, too, that the Jesuits used all sorts of ruses and label-changing tactics to enhance their power and influence: 'This Society is well known to have put on every shape, and to have made use of every mean that could promote the influence and power of The Order' (Jesuit version). 'And we know that at this time they were by no means without hopes of re-establishing the dominion of the Church of Rome in England. Their services were not scrupled at by the distressed Royalists, even such as were Protestants, while they were highly prized by the Sovereign'[102].

When, following the English Revolution, King James II took refuge in France with many of his most zealous adherents, his entourage took Freemasonry over to the Continent, 'where it was immediately received by the French and was cultivated [there] with great zeal. The Lodges in France naturally became the rendezvous of the adherents to their banished King, and the means of carrying on a correspondence with their friends in England. At this time also the Jesuits took a more active hand in Freemasonry than ever. They insinuated themselves into the English Lodges, where they were caressed by the Catholics, who panted after the re-establishment of their faith, and tolerated by the Protestant Royalists, who thought no concession too great a compensation for their services. At this time changes were made in some of the Masonic symbols... which bear evident marks of Jesuitical interference'[103]. This was nothing new, for in an earlier era, 'in all this progressive mummery we see much of the hand of the Jesuits, and it would seem that it was encouraged by the Church'[104].

Lodges held at St Germain's added the Degree of Chevalier Macon Ecossois to the three 'symbolical' or 'Blue Degrees' of English Masonry, providing a connection with the 'alternative theory' that the author of the complex kabbalistic 'mummery' detailed in Manly P. Hall's rare work, cited in Chapter 6, may have been the 'Count of St Germain' - a title sometimes used as an alias of Sir Francis Bacon himself, notwithstanding that Bacon had been dead a good century or more by the time the Lodges were meeting at St Germain. 'It is certain', Robison elaborated, 'that before 1743 ... the Lodges of Free Masons had become the places for making proselytes to every strange and obnoxious doctrine. Theurgy, Cosmogony, Cabala, and many whimsical and mythical doctrines which have been grafted on[to] the distinguishing tenets and pure morality of the [Torah] Jews and Christians, were subjects of frequent discussion in the Lodges', and the ferment in the French Lodges 'fully account for the zeal with which all this patchwork addition to the simple Freemasonry of England was prosecuted in France'[105]. One of the 'daughter Lodges' of the Lodge at Lyons, the Lodge Theodore von der guten Rath, at Munich, a centre of occult activity through to the era of Hitler and beyond, 'became so remarkable for discourses dangerous to Church and State, that the Elector of Bavaria, after repeated admonitions during the course of five or six years, was obliged to suppress it in 1786' along with Weishaupt's Order of The Illuminati[106]. Citing the 'Archives Mystico-Hermetiques', Robison notes the subtlety with which gross heresies and sorcery were alluded to, which 'accord with a general spirit of licentiousness in morals, religion, and politics. Although every thing is expressed decently, and with some caution and moderation, atheism, materialism, and discontent with civil subordination, pervade the whole'[107] - against which a student had marked, in the Author's copy of John Robison's work, 'present situation 2004'.

In seeking the precise source of these abominations, we are assisted by Robison's important statement about Freemasonry in Germany - bearing in mind that the pagan Rosicrucianism elaborated (according to Manly P. Hall) by Sir Francis Bacon, had its or-joins in 14th century Germany: 'But now it is time to turn our eyes to the progress of Freemasonry in Germany and the North of Europe; there it took a more serious turn. Freemasonry was imported back into Germany somewhat later than into France. The first German Lodge that we have any account of is that at Cologne, erected in 1716, but very soon suppressed. Before the year 1725, there were many [Lodges], both in Protestant and Catholic Germany. Those of Wetzlar, Frankfort on the Mayne, Brunswick, and Hamburg, are the oldest.... All of them received their institution from England and had patents from a Mother Lodge in London. All seem to have got the mystery through the same channel, the banished friends of the Stuart Family. Many of these were Catholics, and entered into the service of Austria and the Catholic Princes'[108]. Robison alludes in this context, to the observed German fascination for 'the gross absurdities of magick, exorcism, witchcraft, fortune-telling, transmutation of metals, and universal medicine', and that Germans in the Lodges 'listened with greedy ears to the nonsense and jargon of fanatics and cheats; and though they every day saw examples of many who had been ruined or rendered ridiculous by their credulity, every new pretender to secrets found numbers [of 'Useful Idiots' - Ed.] ready to listen to him, and to run over the same course'[109]. Enter, once again, the Rosicrucians, followed noch einmal by the Jesuits: 'Freemasonry, professing mysteries, instantly roused all these people, and the Lodges appeared to the adventurers who wanted to profit by the enthusiasm or the avarice of their dupes, the fittest places in the world for the scene of their operations. The Rosycrucians were the first who availed themselves of the opportunity... a set of Alchymists. Pretenders to the transmutation of metals and the universal medicine, who, the better to inveigle their votaries, had mixed with their own tricks a good deal of the absurd superstitions of that sect, in order to give a greater air of mystery to the whole.... These cheats... persuaded their pupils that they were the only true Masons. Rosycrucian Lodges were soon established and became numerous, because their mysteries were addressed... to the curiosity, the sensuality, and the avarice of men. They became a very formidable band, adopting the constitution of the Jesuits, dividing the Fraternity into circles, each under the management of its own Superior, known to the President, but unknown to the individuals of the Lodges. These Superiors were connected to each other in a way known only to themselves, and the whole was under one General'[110].

ROSICRUCIANS AND JESUITS WORKING TOGETHER

So here we have, from this respected academic source, confirmation of the intertwined machinations of the Rosicrucians and the Jesuits - a combination that raises the question: were certain Jesuits (Weishaupt for instance) also Rosicrucians? Whatever the truth of the matter, there is no further need to wonder that both the Jesuits and the Rosicrucians used (and use) the tell-tale label 'The Order', for they were truly rats out of the same sewer. When rats emerge from a sewer, no distinction can be made between them: all are brown.

Due to such influences, the 'simple' Lodges adopted the sorcery and alchemy practiced in the Rosicrucian Lodges, many of which overlapped with the "'regular' Lodges in Europe: 'and, in like manner, exorcism, or ghost-raising, magic, and other gross superstitions, were often held out in their meetings as attainable mysteries, which would be immense acquisitions to the Fraternity, without any necessity of admitting along with them the religious deliriums of the Rosycrucians'[111].

Concerning Weishaupt's Jesuit background, Robison explained that: 'Of the zealous members of the Lodge Theodore [in Munich], the most conspicuous was Dr Adam Weishaupt, Professor of Canon Law in the University of Ingolstadt. This person had been educated among the Jesuits; but the [temporary] abolition of their Order had made him change his vows, and from being their pupil, he became their most bitter enemy'[112], probably because of bottled-up resentment at the oppressiveness of the regime from which he had been released, with its environment of universal espionage and consequent distrust (very similar, unfortunately, to the environment prevalent throughout the colossal US intelligence community, and within British intelligence, as well).... 'In his first fervour and high expectations, he [Weishaupt] hinted to several ex-Jesuits the probability of their recovering, under a new name, the influence which they formerly possessed, and of being again of great service to society, by directing the education of youth... now emancipated from all civil and religious prejudices'[112].

Detailed information about the collective mentality of The Order of the Illuminati that Weishaupt, by now an implacable enemy of the Jesuits, went on to (re)found - on Jesuitical principles - emerged from the Elector of Bavaria's Court of Enquiry, from depositions given in 1783 by four Jewish Professors from the Marianen Academy, named Utschneider, Cossandey, Renner, and Grunberger, plus two others. According to John Robison, their testimonies revealed that 'The Order was said to abjure Christianity, and to refuse admission into the higher Degrees to all who adhered to any of the three (Christian) confessions. Sensual pleasures were restored to the rank they held in the Epicurean philosophy. Self-murder (suicide) was justified on Stoical principles. In the Lodges, death was declared [to be] an eternal sleep; patriotism and loyalty were called narrow-minded prejudices, and incompatible with universal benevolence; continual declamations were made on liberty and equality as the inalienable rights of man. The baneful influence of accumulated property was declared an insurmountable obstacle to the happiness of any nation. Nothing was so frequently discoursed of as the propriety of employing, for a good purpose, the means which the wicked employed for evil purposes [the end justifies the means]; and it was taught, that the preponderancy of good in the ultimate result consecrated every mean employed [i.e., murder and lying are OK if the outcome is deemed 'good' by the perpetrators - Ed.];... [and] the great object of The Order was held as superior to every consideration [viz, all is permitted, in pursuit of the interests of The Order of the Illuminati - Ed.]. They concluded by saying that the method of education made them all spies on each other, and on all around them'[113].

In a later document, written by Weishaupt from 'exile' at Regensburg, he confirmed that Communism was invented and/or elaborated by The Illuminati, and that rulers who belong to the Illuminati must adhere rigidly to its agenda, without deviation. This is an insight of extreme importance, as it explains why, for instance, President Clinton was not ashamed to write, on White House stationery on 22nd June 1993, to the World Federalist Association on the occasion of its Global Governance Award honouring its past President, Norman Cousins, that he (Cousins) 'worked for world peace and world government... Best wishes for an enjoyable reception and for future success'. It explains why certain contemporary rulers, such as allegedly even The Queen, go along with the project for World Government while, in double-minded fashion, purporting nonetheless, to represent exclusively the interests of their nations:

'Rulers who are members must be promoted through the ranks of The Order only in proportion as they acknowledge the goodness of its great object, and [its] manner of procedure' (i.e., what lies in store for nation states and their rulers, namely that they are subordinated to the New World Order scheme and will in due course become redundant). Its object may be said to be the checking of the tyranny of princes, nobles, and priests, and establishing an universal equality of condition and of religion' (a universal tyranny). The pupil was now informed 'that such a religion is contained in The Order, is the perfection of Christianity, and will be imparted to him in due time'[115]. This of course was just another brazen lie. Apart from other considerations, the interests of the state - meaning, of 'the Brotherhood' - are placed permanently above that of the individual; whereas of course True Christianity is exclusively about the reconciliation of the human individual, to a personal God, not to the impersonal, cold-hearted state. Everything the Illuminati propagate and perform represents the reverse of what is good and true - from their devious rationalisations, to the abominations that Illuminised intelligence communities routinely commit in accordance with their upside-down principle that 'the end justifies the means'. In parallel with this Luciferian doctrine, Weishaupt also promulgated the evil principle - espoused by US intelligence criminalists, for instance - that anything is permitted and there is only one sin: getting caught. 'All men are subject to errors, and the best man is he who best conceals them'[116]. As a matter of fact, the modern Illuminati recognise just one other 'sin' - stealing money (even if the money stolen has already been stolen previously). What this means is that sorcery,

Dear Mr. Setzer:

Enclosed is the information you requested pertaining to the Army's policy and guidance for establishing civilian inmate labor program and civilian prison camps on Army installations. This information has not yet been published (it is currently at the printers), however, it has been funded, staffed, and does reflect current Army policy. I hope you find this information useful.

With kindest regards, I am

Sincerely yours,

Bill Hefner

Figure 79: Copy of a letter from Representative Bill Heffner dated 24th March 1997 confirming the establishment of a 'Civilian Inmate Labor Program' and prison camps on US Army installations under the Clinton (Illuminati) Administration. The existence of this letter in the public domain 'illuminates' the partial list of US GULAG concentration camp-like installations given on pages 612-613. 'Democracy' is thoroughly despised by the Synagogue of Satan. Note Hefner's implied approval of this abomination.

fornication, filthiness, brutality, bearing false witness, murder, lying, scamming, routine deception, two-faced behaviour, double-mindedness, ruthless pursuit of enemies, cynicism and uncontrolled anger, are all permissible. The guiding principle of Ordo Templi Orientis is 'Do as Thou wilt'. But if one steals money - which is ironically the root of all evil[117] - then there is 'no forgiveness'. How ironic that if one steals the root of all evil there is no forgiveness among these criminalists! Jesus Christ teaches that there is only one sin that attracts no forgiveness, ever: blasphemy against the Holy Spirit'[118].

The ex-Jesuit Weishaupt also attached special importance to Bavaria as a central source of anti-Christianity. For he wrote: 'I did not bring Deism into (Catholic) Bavaria more than [exists] in Rome. I found it here, in great vigour, more abounding than in any of the neighbouring Protestant states. I am proud to be known to the world as the founder of The Order of Illuminati'[119].

U.S. CONCENTRATION CAMP SYSTEM NAMED THE 'REX PROGRAM'

The Degrees, ranks and progress of Illuminati candidates or pupils were organised by Weishaupt and his collaborators in accordance with the system shown in the diagram on page 497 [Figure 78). From this diagram, it will be seen that the penultimate Degree, and the first of the two Degrees of the Greater Mysteries of the Illuminati is MAGUS, which this Author believes provides the true meaning of that mysterious 'M' on the late Pope's coffin. The second Greater Mystery Degree, and the last of Weishaupt's system, is that of REX. This is the basis for the use of the codename 'Rex 84' to denote the US GULAG prison camp system, elements of which are listed on pages 612-613, also referred to as the Civilian Inmate Program - the existence of which was confirmed as early as 24th March 1997 by Representative Bill Hefner, a Jewish member of the US Congress, to his constituent, of Jewish extraction, Mr Zell Setzer [see Figure 79 on page 505]. The US concentration camp system goes by the name of the 'highest[7] 'Greater Mysteries' Degree or Rank of The Order of the Illuminati, because when the intended US GULAG is brought fully into operation, the Illuminati plan to commit atrocities and crimes against humanity which will leave history to judge that the Holocaust was a mere prelude to what was to follow - as these criminals, driven exclusively by the 'seething energies of Lucifer', implement the full force of their madness against those refusing to go along with their false prospectus and with their ruthless implementation of the New Underworld Order.

The Illuminati cadres driving this project in the United States, occupying the highest positions in the country, are arrogantly certain of their mission, since they are indoctrinated into the knowledge of the Illuminati's past achievements. For instance, well before the establishment, one after the other, of the two 20th Century regimes of darkness, the USSR and Nazi Germany - both of which were established by German Illuminists -Illuminati cadres had brought about the unification of Germany through the destruction of its smaller states: for Weishaupt asserts "that the German Union was, to his certain knowledge, the work of the Illuminati'[120], as was the unification of Italy, presided over by the sorcerer-Mason Jewish Illuminist criminal drug operative, Giuseppe Mazzini.

As to the Illuminati's modus operandi, its secrecy and its Jesuitical manner of operating de facto behind-the-scenes and going underground whenever necessary, or changing labels like underwear, Adam Weishaupt laid down that 'there must (a la Jesuite) not a single purpose ever come to light that is ambiguous, and that may betray our aims against religion and the state'. And in language almost identical to that of the German agent Lenin half a century later, Weishaupt added: 'One must speak sometimes one way and sometimes another, but so as never to contradict ourselves, and so that, with respect to our true way of thinking, we may be impenetrable'.

To this overt acknowledgement of how the Illuminati were to operate, Weishaupt tacked on the principle which is extensively used today in the United States (and increasingly in Britain, also), of testing the 'trance state' of the general population. This is done, for instance, by means of 'limited exposures', which may also serve a diversionary purpose. The principle is contained within the following statement by Weishaupt: 'When our strongest things chance to give offence, they must be explained as attempts to draw answers which discover to us the sentiments of the person we converse with'[121].

This accounts for the Author's unpleasant experiences over the past three decades, especially in the United States - where serious researchers are liable all too often to be befriended by people who turn out to have an ulterior motive, to be untrustworthy, to be double-minded, and/or to be 'working' for one of the country's innumerable intelligence agencies. The Author feels understandably violated and abused by these people.

'WE SHALL SET ALL IN MOTION AND IN FLAMES'

And in his voluminous correspondence, Weishaupt made it clear that there was intended to be no end to the global machinations of the Illuminati, just as the Jesuits (against whom Weishaupt finally had turned with a vengeance, while all along infecting the Order of the Illuminati's structures with their system of discipline, secrecy and mutual spying) had never ceased scheming with and against potentates and heads of government everywhere. Referring to his overall revolutionary plan, which he maintained is revealed in part through ritual initiation, Weishaupt boasted that 'by this plan, we shall direct all mankind. In this manner, and by the simplest means, we shall set all in motion and in flames. The occupations' (within our Order) 'must be so allotted and contrived, that we may, in secret, influence all political transactions'[122].

It is this secret association of Black Operatives, driven by the 'seething energies of Lucifer' accessed by demonic programming and led by Dark Actors Playing Games, that is responsible for destabilising the whole world - inter alia by seizing control of the mainstream and secondary media, by spreading pornography, drugs and confusion via the Internet, by developing and controlling the global drug trade, by rigging the price of oil, by manufacturing and orchestrating, through innumerable cutouts, cynical provocations such as 9/11, 7/11, the East Asian tsunami and the Pakistan earthquake (via satellite-mounted scalar technology), the Madrid bombings and terrorist atrocities in Bali and India, by the systematic infusion of entertainment and all electronic media with their depravity, by the corruption of education, by indoctrinating all levels of government and using its resources to spread their 'New Age' pagan philosophies and false prospectuses, by further corrupting and perverting the already corrupted churches, by commandeering the sciences to develop more and more 'evil things', by the mixing of medicine and pharmacology with alchemical means of decimating or controlling targeted elements of the population through such criminal acts as the deliberate contamination of vaccines or 'flu jabs', by means of the criminalisation of the banking system, through the relentless promotion of occultism starting with the 'in-your-face' display of the Illuminati's actual emblem on the $1.0 bill, by corrupting little children, and by perpetrating such atrocities as the devastation wrought in the New Orleans area as an 'exercise', preparatory to the optional military takeover of each one of the seven Illuminati regions of the United States and the progressive implementation of the intended strategy of herding recalcitrant objectors and 'non-cooperators' onto death trains and buses en route for the 'Rex-84' concentration camps or replicated Nazi-style death chambers.

It is this secret association of Black Operatives, driven by the 'seething energies of Lucifer' accessed by demonic programming and led by Dark Actors Playing Games that has been responsible for such Luciferian suggestions as that put forward by the top Illuminist Zbigniew Brzezinski in his book 'The Grand Chessboard' (1997) that a new 'potential' enemy was needed 'since the end of the Cold War', and that the 'immediate' task would be 'to develop and simultaneously control a "direct external threat" to manufacture an attack "like a new Pearl Harbor"'. Earlier, on 3rd July 1979, Brzezinski had revealed that, unknown to both Congress and the public, President Carter secretly authorised $500 million to be used for creating an international terrorist movement that would spread Islamic fundamentalism in Central Asia to destabilise the Soviet Union -a venture known as 'Operation Cyclone', which fostered the likes of 'Tim Osman' (Osama Bin Laden: see Figure 80, page 507) and eventually cost $4.0 billion. The operation financed inter alia Islamic terrorism training schools in Pakistan. Some of the funds were absorbed by the CIA's very own terrorism training school in Virginia, where Al-Qaeda operatives were trained, with some of the trainees being recruited in the United States. In Pakistan, such operatives were directed by MI6 and SAS. This suggests that British intelligence reports about DVD global terrorism culpability, while accurate, are also motivated in part by the need to cover up nefarious British involvement.

With his Pearl Harbor remark, Brzezinski was, of course, predicting 9/11.

What was required was a credible (at least in the public mind) and well-developed enemy. The need for the same kind of attack (provocation) was mentioned by the notorious 'Project for a New American Century' (PNAC) in its September 2000 report 'Rebuilding America's Defences'. Such an attack would then provide a pretext for massive sequential military intervention to secure the energy supplies of the Middle East and the lesser (but important) oil-bearing regions, including West Africa, Venezuela, Colombia, certain portions of the Southwest Pacific, and any other region with smaller but more readily accessible reserves. The essential thing would be that terrorists or their "allies" must conveniently turn up in each targeted area, on schedule. No problem, argued the US intelligence analyst Michael Ruppert. That's what the CIA, Mossad, MI6, and every other major intelligence agency does for a living'.

'DARK ACTORS' IN THE UNITED STATES, AND SATANIC TRAINING

Nor should anyone underestimate the sizeable numbers at the disposal of these Dark Actors Playing Games. According to 'Svali', 'when I left the flluminati' (which she did very courageously in 1995), 'approximately 1% of the US population was either part of the Illuminati, sympathetic to it, or a victim of Mind Control (and therefore considered useable). [Some authorities place this estimated figure as high as 2% - Ed.]. While this may not sound like many, imagine 1% of the population highly trained in the use of armaments, crowd control, psychological and behavioural techniques, armed with weapons and linked to paramilitary groups'. The psychomanipulative training techniques used to manufacture niuminati killers (of whom the Author has met at least two, whose main observable characteristic was their tendency suddenly to switch from a placid disposition to one of extreme, uncontrollable anger), replicated by the CIA's MK-ULTRA (Manufacturing Killers Under Lethal Trigger Requiring Assassination) programme, plumbs the depths of satanic depravity, as 'Svali' explained:

> 'ASSASSIN TRAINING: HERE IS HOW IT IS DONE (HOW IT WAS DONE TO ME):
> 1. When the child is two years old, place it in a metal cage with electrodes attached. Shock the child severely. [This model was confirmed to the Author by an impeccably informed prior source].
> 2. Take the child out, and place a kitten (or rabbit) in its hands. Tell the child to wring the kitten's neck. The child will cry and refuse.
> 3. Put the child back into the cage, and shock it until it is dazed and cannot scream any more.
> 4. Take the child out, and tell it again to wring the kitten's neck. This time, the child will shake all over, cry, but will do it, afraid of torture. The child will then go into the corner and will vomit afterwards, while the adult praises it for "doing such a good job".

5. This is just the first step. The animals get bigger over time, as the child gets older. The child will be forced to kill an infant at some point, either a set-up, or virtual reality, or in reality. The child will be taught by the age of nine to put together a gun, to aim, and to fire on a target and on command' (Author: which is what Palestinian children have been taught by their Illuminati trainers to do). They will then practice on realistic 'Mannikins'. They will then practice on animals. They will then practice on "expendables", or in virtual reality. They will be highly praised if they 'do well', and tortured if they don't comply.

6. The older the child or teen, the more advanced the training. By age 15, most children will also be forced to do hand-to-hand combat in front of spectators (high people who come to watch the "games"...). These matches are rarely done to the death, usually until one child goes down. They use every type of weapon imaginable, and learn to fight for their lives. If a child loses a fight, they are heavily punished by their trainer, who loses "face". If they win, they are again praised for being "strong" and adept with weapons. By the time they are 21, they are well-trained combat/killing machines with command codes to kill, and they have been tested over and over to prove that they WILL obey on command. This is how children in the German Illuminati are brought up, and I went through it myself.

This Author would not have published this information if the precise procedure outlined above had not been independently explained to him by a member of a known US Illuminati family, whose members seem to alternate between people of the highest moral calibre and intelligence, and reprobates whose lives are obsessed with the evils arising from their family's tradition of Illuminati training or associations. 'Svali's' description of how Illuminati children are trained in Germany is identical to the procedure in question, which is believed to have been applied in the upbringing of the offspring not least of certain prominent and notorious US criminalist intelligence families.

All those participants in the Synagogue of Satan who practice the extreme abominations against children* that have been summarised here deserve the most implacable condemnation, and a fate at least equivalent to that specified by Jesus. Christ's anger against such evil people is reiterated three times in the Gospels - a sure indication of the extreme severity of these offences:

'But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea'.

Matthew, Chapter 18, verse 4.

'And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones that believe in me, it is better for him that a millstone were hanged around his neck, and [that] he were cast into the sea'. Mark, Chapter 9, verse 42.

'It were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he cast into the sea, than that he should offend one of these little ones'. Luke, Chapter 17, verse 2.

Nor is it surprising that these evil people are unhappy, and discontented with their situation. They are trapped in the hell of their own and their peers' invention, and by the loathesome oaths they have sworn, and by fear of the ultimate penalty for 'betraying' them. However they - even these Illuminati - could escape, like 'Svali', without fear, if they had the courage to acknowledge the only Name that can rescue them from perdition:

'Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in unto him, and will sup with him, and he with me'.

Revelation, Chapter 3, verse 20.

* The Author knows of a tragic recent case in which it appears that a carefully planned operation was conducted against a target by his estranged wife. Knowing the targeted individual's love for his twin grandsons, the ex-wife appeared for a Thanksgiving holiday, after which the entire family fell seriously ill with some passing infection. A few months later, at a critical time for other reasons, one of the twins fell ill again with a grave sickness, and his vomiting became so bad that he had to be evacuated by helicopter to the nearest specialist hospital. He was falsely diagnosed with a brain tumour, a horrendous operation took place, he died, and the surgeon was heard to exclaim afterwards: 'Why have I done this?' The probable answer is that at some earlier stage of his life, he took a Masonic blood oath. The Illuminati may call upon the services of their operatives - such as surgeons - just once in a lifetime. They are then required to 'cooperate'. Should they refuse, their own children will be targeted. The wrong operation was performed on a Masonic handshake.

GERMAN SPOKEN AT THE HIGHEST LEVEL OF THE ILLUMINATI

German is spoken at the highest level of the Illuminati, because its Germanic Branch is, as 'Svali' has confirmed, the primus inter pares, overseeing the British Branch, which handles the finances - even though Belgium is, also according to 'Svali', the actual financial centre. The French-Russian Branch, consisting of the two European Great Powers that have experienced modern satanic revolutions to date is, with the British Branch, subordinate to the German centre, based in Berlin and Frankfurt. There is extreme tension between the German and the British Branches, in particular. Throughout this investigation, the central importance of the German dimension of the Illuminati has been conspicuous: the overwhelming importance of the German Branch has simply 'fallen out of this analysis'. And in the German context, the central importance of Jewish/Khazar Illuminati has always been undeniable and self-evident. For at the top, the Jewish (Zionazi) and German Illuminati brainwashed mentalities 'agree', and work together. It should surely by now be no surprise that the German-Jewish Nazi Illuminati regime slaughtered millions of Jews, or that the industrialisation of the Nazi slaughterhouse was directed by a Jew called Adolf Eichmann. One of the leading Nazi implementers of the industrialised slaughter of Jews, gypsies and others was SS-Brigadefuhrer Dr Otto Gustav Wachter, the Jewish Nazi Governor of Galicia, Poland. Many other senior Nazis were also of Jewish extraction, as demonstrated in a directory of Jewish implementers of the World Revolution published in the Author's journal Soviet Analyst in December 2005 [Volume 29, #8-10].

The behaviour of the militant Israeli Zionist minority towards their satrap people, the Palestinians, has been indistinguishable from the behaviour of the Nazis in crucial respects - notwithstanding the extreme provocations to which the Israeli people have been subjected. These things should come as no surprise because, clearly, if such people are capable of abominations such this Author has had to allude to (and of many which have been excluded so that we do not waste time in the darkness), why would Jewish Illuminati operatives be distressed at the suffering of their own people?

Why indeed are Illuminati operatives, from whatever background, indifferent to the suffering they routinely inflict upon others and upon their own members who may appear likely to betray the odious blood oaths they have taken? Because they are possessed with the 'seething energies of Lucifer' - that is, they are 'demon-possessed'.

But what gives us certain, lasting comfort and perfect peace, is The Lord's assurance, as he parted from His disciples, that nothing that these despicable, depraved maniacs can inflict upon humanity can ever succeed, other than temporarily. Children and innocents, as well as brave opponents of these evils, will suffer and die either because they are innocents or because of their resolute determination to resist these evils by whatever means may be open to them. But the Gates of Hell shall not prevail.

For 'Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptising them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world'. Matthew, Chapter 28, verses 18-20.

And there is nothing that The Order of the Illuminati can do about it. Given that they are all, in secret, profoundly discontented, longing for a way out, it may help any of them who read this treatise to start by pondering the wisdom expressed in Psalm 14, verse 1 [and Psalm 53, verse 1]: The fool hath said in his heart: There is no God'. ■

2. Technical information concerning the demolition of the Twin Towers and the other two buildings by explosives is derived mainly from the work conducted by George Humphrey of Austin Texas and published in booklet form under the title '9/11: The Great Illusion: End Game of the Illuminati', in which that author managed with great skill and courage to avoid the pitfalls set by certain controlled disinformation websites that he mentions, to concentrate upon the irrefutable technical evidence that the buildings were demolished by explosive devices set below ground.
3. The thinking behind this part of the analysis is derived from a report by Finton Dunne, an analyst based in Ireland, who runs BreakForNews.com, PsyOpsNews.com and Wagnews.Blogspot.com. This Author expresses no opinion (here) as to whether that analyst's conclusions are independently authoritative or whether they may be driven by 'other considerations'. He notes that in the list of websites that BreakForNews.com has published under the rubric 'The CIA Internet Fakes', two of the leading Internet sites, newsMax.com and worldnetdaily.com, were omitted. Finton Dunne prefaced his list of suspect damage limitation and confusion-generating websites controlled by intelligence, with the following note: 'We do not contend that everyone associated with these websites are knowing intelligence operatives' - although this Author has positively, with colleagues, identified and exposed several, confirming Finton Dunne's analysis - adding that: 'Some have been professionally manipulated, others merely misled. In any event these are promoting the PsyOps agendas and disinformation themes of the covert controllers. This is also not meant to be a fully comprehensive listing of all the fake websites' - which may account for the exclusion of the two US websites mentioned. Shortly after its foundation, newsMax.com was employing or contracting with with an alleged 55 people, requiring a huge annual budget. The list of 'CIA Fake Websites' published in August 2005 by BreakForNews.com, which includes aljazeera.net and aljazeera.com, was as follows:

Notes: 1: Now cloakanddagger.de. This is a particularly vicious Black website (complete with Black Illuminati background), notorious for its venom against all things British, especially the British Monarchy. As a source of confusion and instrumental disinformation, it has no equal. Its venomous attacks against the Queen reached such a pitch of notoriety that it decamped to a German ISP (hence its new .de suffix). It was probably informed by Canadian authorities that its presence was not welcome, which would have been an understatement. Unfortunately, the late Sherman Skolnik suffered a judgment lapse and became too closely involved with this site, suffering reputational damages as a consequence. 2. Sherman Skolnik, veteran analyst sadly died in May 2006. Although his reports heaped venom on his targets, especially the British, there was a great deal of affection for him, and his presence is greatly missed; 3: The owner of which was murdered in 2005 Australia, it is believed because he revealed the use of scalar technology to induce the tsunami of 26th December 2004 and for weather modification ops).

10.Then said he unto me, Son of man, hast thou seen what the ancients of the house of Israel do in the dark, every man in the chambers of his imagery? For they say, The Lord seeth us not; the Lord hath forsaken the earth'. Ezekiel, Chapter 8, verse 12. See also Isaiah, Chapter 29, verses 15-15: "Woe unto them that seek deep to hide their counsel from the Lord, and their works are in the dark, and they say, Who seeth us? And who knoweth us? Surely your turning of things upside down shall be esteemed as the potter's clay: for shall the work say of him that made it, He made me not? Or shall the thing framed say of him that framed it, He had no understanding?'

11. Then said he unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? Is it a light thing to the house of Judah that they commit the abominations which they commit here? For they have filled the land with violence... Therefore will I also deal in fury: mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity: and though they cry in mine ears with a loud voice, yet will I not hear them': Ezekiel, Chapter 8, verses 17-18. Scripture clearly and repeatedly predicted what the fate of the Jewish people was liable to be, as a consequence of their deviation from the Lord of Hosts.

12. Ezekiel, Chapter 23, verse 15: see main text for explanation.

13. Ezekiel's metaphors using the two originally virginal sisters Aholah (= Samaria) and Aholibah (= Jerusalem) is intended to explain to us, in simple language, how the children of Israel never wholly cleansed themselves from the abominations that they learned while sojourning for over 400 years in the land of darkness, and how, despite the partial cleansing occasioned as a consequence of their embracing the Word of the Lord and His Holy Spirit, they nevertheless allowed themselves to become doubly polluted by the sorcery that was rife in Babylon - although a remnant saved themselves. Like the entire story of Exodus, this 'real-life' metaphor is spiritual (all Scripture is spiritual) and has pressing relevance for us today, not least because it provides scriptural confirmation and affirmation of the kabbalistic sorcery perpetuated, as of old, in the dark chambers which are replicated today in the form of the Lodge. The passages from Ezekiel using the metaphor of the two wayward sisters are taken from Chapter 23. Note, in verse 4, that the two sisters 'were mine' (the Lord's). We should not be surprised or dismayed at the sexual connotations of this imagery: for sorcery, witchcraft, the Craft (Masonry) and the abominations of the Illuminati are sexual, as the Devil uses sex, especially deviant sex, as his fastest means of corrupting a target.

14. For instance, Isaiah, Chapter 35, verse 10: 'And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy... they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away'.

15. The European Union is quintessentially kabbalistic-Talmudic, since within its universe, there is zero truth. Lawyers are confounded by it, as they wrestle with the meaning or implications of any given Article, subsection, subparagraph, protocol or statute, all of which are (a) transitory (because they may be amended, deleted, merged, adjusted or otherwise intermeddled with at any time, given that the 'rolling' collective treaty is updated and rewritten roughly every four years; and (b) susceptible to arbitrarily confusing rulings by the European Court of Justice, which exists not to dispense justice, but rather to advance the 'cause' and 'interests' of the political collective.

16. In Revelation, Chapter 2, verse 8 (part), John cited Jesus as saying: These things saith the first and the last (Alpha and Omega = Jesus Christ), 'which was dead, and is alive [rose from the dead]'; [verse 9:] 'I know thy works, and tribulation, and poverty, (but thou art rich)' [Masons 'give' to or are taxed by Freemasonry all their lives, so that their families are deprived of some of the Mason's resources; but at the highest levels, the funds paid loyally by the lower orders of 'Useful Idiots', who are despised by their superiors, although the lower orders do not know this, ensure that the fat cats at the top enjoy access to a limitless stream of finance] 'and I know the blasphemy of them which say they are Jews and are not, but are of the Synagogue of Satan'.

17. The second reference to the Synagogue of Satan is found in Christ's instruction to the angel of the church at Philadelphia in Asia Minor - the name of the town where the US Declaration of Independence was signed in that Masonic Lodge that can be visited to this day: indeed, when the Author exclaimed within the earshot of the official guide: 'It's a Masonic Lodge', the guide said: 'Oh, so you're a Mason, too!', which was of course quite untrue. The Declaration of Independence sealed the Masonic coup d'etat which set the United States on the path to perdition as the home of criminal governance that it has become today, by way of great riches (which Satan gives to many of his disciples as they seek in vain to create heaven upon earth (for themselves)). At Chapter 3, verse 7, it is written: 'And to the angel of the church in Philadelphia write: These things saith he that is holy, he that is true, he that hath the key of David, he that openeth and no man shutteth; and shutteth, and no man openeth'; [verse 8:] 'I know thy works; behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it...'; [verse 9:] 'Behold, I will make of them of the Synagogue of Satan, which say they are Jews, and are not, but do lie; behold, I will make them to come and worship before thy feet, and to know that I have loved thee'. [And verse 10:] Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth'. In the mysterious passage leading into and including verse 10, we appear to have here a partial unveiling of the mystery that is the United States: for, though founded as a geomasonic experiment, and polluted with Masonry at all levels of its official structures, and though its landscape is defiled with such monstrosities as the Masonic Temple at Alexandria and the vast Masonic edifice in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, the United States is also the home of the largest Christian remnant in the developed world (albeit existing within and alongside myriad false churches). In verse 9, they of the Synagogue of Satan, who say they are Jews and are not, will be made to 'come and worship before thy feet, and to know that I have loved thee', a prophesy that began to be fulfilled when Albert Pike consolidated what he purported to be the seat of world Masonry in Charleston in 1870. The prophesy seems to suggest that because those of Philadelphia 'have kept the word of my patience' despite the Masonic coup which Luciferians perpetrated over their heads, the good people of America will be 'kept from trie hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world' to test our faith: and it is manifestly the case that despite the perpetual outpouring of decadent kabbalistic filth and the deliberate proliferation of drugs by the US Illuminati cadres who have hijacked governance, the faith and resolution of many good people in the United States remains unaffected.

31. The present extended global terrorism phase is consistent with the intent of the Bolsheviks' 'Period of Escalating Violence', as laid down by the Comintern 'wing' of overt Illuminism at its Congress held in Moscow in 1928. For the perpetratrors of terrorist atrocities, the loss of human life that their operations involve (and these people are all, without exception, intelligence operatives), is neither here nor there: it is referred to as 'collateral damage'. A nurse known to the Author's third daughter (who had tended her in the past) had to have both her legs amputated after the atrocity that took place at Russell Square on the Piccadilly Line on 7th July 2005.

In other words, as soon as we know Him - as opposed to knowing ABOUT him - our hearts and minds are 'kept' in Christ and therefore abhor all the abominations discussed, unfortunately but necessarily, in this book.
65. Epistle of Paul to The Ephesians, Chapter 3, verse 19: 'And to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fullness of God'. As the Author was seeking this scripture, it was revealed to him what Paul meant by 'passeth knowledge'. He meant both that we cannot comprehend the breadth and depth and height of the love of Christ for us, because of his joy that we have resisted the wiles and traps of Satan; and also that His love surpasses what Satan has to offer in the form of the abominations perpetrated in the darkness, as described here and by the prophets, including of course Ezekiel, who described the abominations in a 'Masonic Lodge' in the fifth century before Christ.

A total of THIRTEEN trains had been cancelled or postponed on the Saturday in September 2005 concerned, as a deliberate measure imposed on Amtrak, to impede the large numbers of war protesters who were scheduled to have descended on Washington to join in an anti-Iraq War rally. Amtrak is of course a key infrastructure organisation which will be used when the Illuminati's diabolical plans to fill the vast FEMA Gulag with recalcitrant 'non-cooperators' - those who, in the face of the military takeover that will abolish the Constitution and ditch 'democracy[1] which the elite considers just a temporary means of keeping the masses under control and confused, have been given an opportunity to 'go along' with the Illuminati's cause, and have rejected it, notwithstanding threats of imprisonment in a concentration camp, or selection for fast-track dispatch to the gas chambers including those located at an Indianapolis Amtrak centre.

Brzezinski's book is a prime example of evil proposals put forward in the typically reasonable and terribly 'sensible' language typical of high Illuminati operatives, It contains the blueprint for the tasks that the Illuminati require to be implemented by the 'enforcement arm'.

JEWISH CONCERN OVER THE PERVERSE AND REPROBATE REVOLUTIONARY BEHAVIOUR OF CERTAIN JEWS

'The terrible fact remains that their actions contributed, each in his own degree, to the Nazis' anti-Jewish and anti-human war machine'.
JERUSALEM POST on the Jews who worked for the Nazis

'What has proved most disturbing is the picture we have of the extent of the betrayal - truly overwhelming in sheer bulk. The fact that many Jewish American radicals participated in espionage for Russia sticks in people's throats.... Spies, spies everywhere. [Recent books about the subject] are invaluable for what they add to our knowledge of the (Cold War] period and may yet spur a bout of soul-searching among the remnants of the progressive community in America, so many of whom were - and are - Jewish. [Such betrayers] allowed the Soviet Union to develop atomic weapons years before it may have been otherwise possible'.
JEWISH EXPONENT, 1999.

'... With the Russian economy in a shambles [in 1999]... even Jews are grumbling that too many Jews stand close to the reins of power and too many Jewish names fill the headlines... All the Jews, I don't understand their motivation, to show they are rich... [to say] "I am an owner, and you are a slave", complained Alexsandr Liberman, the Jewish Director of the Union Council's Russian-American Bureau of Human Rights, "If I were an ordinary Russian and I saw and heard only Jews in the Government... [I would think] 'we are all without money because the Jews have all the Russian money".... People have quite bitter memories of Jews in the Communist Revolution", noted Michael Chlenov, the President of the Jewish Va'ad of Russia'. FORWARD Newspaper, New York, 1997.

A Jewish Russian immigrant living in New York of considerable renown, the novelist Edward Topol, whose work was once banned in Russia, stirred controversy and deep concern in the world Jewish community because of a published letter he had written to a Russian newspaper in which he had referred to prominent Jewish bankers as 'puppeteers' who manipulated Russian politics and the Russian economy. The collective puppeteer, he said, 'has a very long Jewish name - Berezovsko-Goussinsko-Smolensko-Khordrokovsko..., etc.... How come all or most of the money in this country ended up in Jewish hands?' he asked. Mr Topol's main premise... "'is that for the first time in a millennium, Jews have gained real political power and financial control over Russia and can pretty much decide whether to "cast the country down into chaos of wars and poverty, or raise it from the mud"'. FORWARD Newspaper, New York, 1999. [This conveniently omitted to recall that Jewish Communists have been running Russia unhindered and with total control since 1917].

'The capitalist 'restoration' in Russia is a "Jewish Revolution" The practices of Jewish 'oligarchs' had resulted in the "humiliation of the Russian people and [have] provoked hostility among the Russian people to the Jews.... parallel with accusatory statements against Russian patriots, much more aggressive statements by Jews regarding non-Jews are printed in Jewish newspapers published in the Russian Federation.... They try to mask their racism by slapping the charge of anti-semitism (i.e., racial hatred) on all those who do not agree with their immorality, their activities, their wars'. OPEN LETTER TO THE CHIEF PROSECUTOR OF THE RUSSIAN FEDERATION BY PROMINENT FIGURES AND JOURNALISTS, 26TH JANUARY 2005.

'Our beliefs must be adjusted to the truth and not vice versa. Apparently, the truth is that a relatively small clique of Jewish banking families and their non-Jewish allies in the leading families of Europe and America have usurped control of money creation, and with it the destiny of the world.

This overclass owns or controls most of the world's largest corporations, media organisations, intelligence agencies, secret societies, universities, politicians, foundations, think tanks and NGOs. It also appears to dominate organised crime. September 11, the War on Terror and Iraq are part of an inexorable process by which this overclass increases its wealth and control. The end goal is a world police state in which the masses will be deprived of their wealth, freedom and possibly their lives.

US Neo-Cons are really Neo Communists. They jeopardise the security of their fellow Jews (as well as all Americans) by their evil machinations. Jews must follow my example and repudiate them.

The overclass wants us to see it as a 'Jewish problem'. This way it can divert blame onto innocent Jews and dismiss opposition as 'hatred' and 'racism'. The problem is mainly one of money creation (credit) that has led to an untenable concentration of wealth and power in a few hands. Jews are not unique. Almost everyone who is 'successful' in society, Jewish or not, is forced, wittingly or unwittingly to align themselves with the overclass. Our religious, cultural and political institutions have been subverted. This explains the false quality of social life in the West'. DR HENRY MACKOW, prominent Jewish researcher and writer, 2005.

*ROLE-PLAYING ABERRATION

On 7th December 2006, The Daily Telegraph' carried a front page article entitled: 'PRIMARY PUPILS ARE URGED TO ACT DRUNK AND 'TAKE ECSTASY'. It stated that 'Pupils as young as seven are being encouraged to act out being drunk at a wedding while 10-year-olds pretend to take ecstasy as part of a new drug awareness campaign'. The script includes the following: 'I think Gary's dead. He's not moved for a week and he's starting to smell'. The text uses current druggie jargon such as "fix", "cutting", and "hyping up". FACT: G-2, a UK 'Black' Intelligence unit, controls two drug cartels and supervises the distribution of drugs in Britain. Illuminati double-mindedness. ■

DEGREES AND MEMBERS OF THE PRIEURE DE SION

The Devil has no new tunes - which means that the myriad Orders of the Illuminati have no new ideas, either. These Orders are all organised along the same lines, exploiting the standard, always unchanged, lie that discernment knowledge and understanding can only be obtained by means of initiation into successive 'Degrees'. Initiation is a device of the Devil, as specifically confirmed by his servant Aleister Crowley: "This serpent, SATAN, is not the enemy of Man, but He made Gods of our race, knowing Good and Evil; he bade 'Know Thyself, and taught Initiation'. [Source: Aleister Crowley with Mary Desti and Leila Waddell, Magick. Liber ABA Book 4, Parts l-IV, York Beach, Samuel Weiser, 1997].

The Prieure de Sion is no different. It has two effective groups - The Legion, charged with managing 'the apostolate'; and The Phalange, the so-called 'guardians' of the (fabricated) tradition. A hierarchy of nine Prieure de Sion Degrees ('grades') is known to exist:

• In the 729 Provinces:	1. Novices:	6,561 members
	2. Croices:	2,187 members
• In the 27 commanderies:	3. Preux:	729 members
	4. Ecuyers:	243 members
	5. Chevaliers:	81 members
	6. Commandeurs:	27 members
• In the Arch 'Kyria':	7. Connetables:	9 members
	8. Senechaux:	3 members
	9. Nautonnier*:	1 member

* The supreme office of Nautonnier, or Navigator, is symbolised internally by the boat of Isis.

- It will be noticed that the number of members of each grade below the ninth is a multiple of three.

There are three times as many Connetables as there are Senechaux, three times as many Ecuyers as there

APPENDIX 3 TO CHAPTER 7:

THE JASON SOCIETY OF THE ORDER OF THE QUEST

The JASON Society is among the least known and best disguised components of the US 'caste' of Illuminati. Weishaupt and his associates laid down that the Illuminati are never to be referred to by that name, so they hide inside innumerable other 'Orders'.

The JASON Society, consisting of 32 members (just as there are 32 European Union specified 'crimes' for which Europol was created), also known as the JASON scholars, represent a branch of The Order of the Quest, a senior Order of the Illuminati. The name JASON, which reflects the Georgian story of Jason and the Golden Fleece, is always spelt in capital letters. However the members shroud their Order in secrecy. The group will not reveal its membership list and its members refrain from mentioning JASON membership on career resumes. It is administered by the intelligence organisation known as the Mitre Corporation (MIT - Massachusetts Institute of Technology). The JASON group is a mainly scientific organisation formed and hired by the JASON Society to 'invent evil things' (Romans Chapter 1, verse 30), having for instance brought together almost every leading physicist to construct the atomic bomb during the Second World War. The group consists mainly of theoretical physicists and is considered to be the most elite gathering of scientific minds in the United States. The JASON group has always been available to provide the US Government with scientific assistance that it cannot find anywhere else, and its members are probably the only group of scientists some of whose members know the true state of the highest technology, which is probably 20 years ahead of information available even in the rarefied components of the public domain. A secret control group operates within the JASON Society called Majestic 12 which in turn is responsible for 'US Majestic Intelligence and Security'. Each department and its head are designated MJ-1, MJ-2 etc. MJ-3 is responsible for coordinating all scientific investigations. MJ-5 conducts highly sensitive operations about which no open information is available. MJ-6 conducts applied research in new technology fields, trying out new gadgets. No open information is available on the other departments. Majestic 12 is also known, for security reasons, as Majority 12.

- Along with the Open Friendly Secret Society (the Illuminati's name for the Vatican, which is the only nation state that does not belong to the United Nations) and the Russell Trust, the allegedly drug-running organisation behind Skull and Bones, the JASON Society and Group are arguably the best disguised components of the Illuminati. Equally well 'hidden' are the Knights of Malta, consisting of parallel European and US organisations with threads weaving through business, banking politics, intelligence communities, organised religion, education, the legal profession, the military sector, foundations, think-tanks, the United States Information Agency, the United Nations and numerous other globalist-oriented organisations. The Knights of Malta's world head is elected for life with the Pope's approval. Both the European and US manifestations of this Order are sworn to work towards the establishment of a New World Order with the Pope as its head. The Vatican is today heavily infiltrated and compromised by Illuminati Orders. Knights of Malta have diplomatic immunity (which is claimed by the parallel US Order as well). This means that Knights can slip across national borders without paying duty or customs charges and can be (and often are) used to carry diplomatic documents and special secret messages to Heads of State. On 27th November 1983, the late Pope retracted all outstanding papal bulls against Freemasonry, allowing Catholics, after several hundred years, again to belong to secret societies without fear of excommunication.

- A veteran US intelligence officer named Bob Curran was reported to be so 'big' in this respect that he has been known to present himself at Buckingham Palace and to ask to see The Queen - without an appointment (inside information to the Author). This is the kind of access that a Knight of Malta may enjoy. The Knights of Malta are organised along Jesuitical 'initiation' lines, contrary to the teaching of Christ that no secrecy or special procedures are ever required in order for Him to 'open the door' to us. ■

*It was significant that George Bush Sr's primary 'gopher', James Baker, appeared in Tbilisi two months after MVD General Eduard Shevardnadze, the former Soviet gauleiter of Georgia known locally as 'Stalin II', was 'parachuted' in from Moscow to take over the Georgian Presidency after the legitimately elected President Zviad Gamsakhurdia had been forced to flee for his life following three attempted putsches by Soviet Military Intelligence (GRU) forces secretly assisted or 'facilitated' by the Americans. Mr Baker delivered a speech from the balcony of the so-called Presidential Palace, but was forced by gunfire in adjacent streets to go inside and stop speaking for approximately 20 minutes, while Shevardnadze's brutal forces suppressed some demonstrations. When Baker resumed his speech, it was all about the Georgian legend of Jason and the Golden Fleece. No doubt Masonic members of his audience understood what the former US Secretary of State was saying. US operatives were closely involved in operations to remove Shevardnadze from his pedestal some 12 years later.

CHAPTER EIGHT

THE THOUSAND-YEAR REICH

OBITUARY OF GENERAL REINHARD GEHLEN

On 11th June 1979, The Daily Telegraph reported that 'General Reinhard Gehlen, West Germany's elusive but legendary spymaster from 1946 to 1968, has died aged 77 at his Bavarian mountain resort home. He established what was to become known as the "Organization Gehlen" [sic] and later the BND (Bundesnachrichtendienst), or Federal News Service, West Germany's intelligence agency [which is] directly responsible to the Chancellor. He is credited by many as establishing and maintaining the best anti-Russian spy network during the 1939-45 war, following his appointment in 1942 as head of the Foreign Armies East Department'.

The article, which was accompanied by a photograph of an extremely unpleasant-looking man in a homburg hat and a description of Gehlen as "a terrifying figure with boundless energy and professional ambition", contained the officially sanctioned intelligence which had been cleared for the public domain at the time of publication.

According to this source, Gehlen's task was to evaluate intelligence reports and to assess the intentions of Soviet forces. But in April 1945, Hitler sacked him, saying that his analysis of the Eastern Front situation was "completely idiotic". Presumably this version of events was obtained from the highly unreliable lips of Gehlen himself, after he had approached the advancing US forces. 'They flew him to Washington where he underwent an extensive period of "debriefing". His theories and prognostications on the Russians persuaded the Americans that, despite his days as a "bad guy" serving Hitler, he should now be regarded as a "good guy" and help fight the Cold War against the new enemy, Russia. With a budget of around $5 million a year provided by the Americans, he set up a spy network comprised of many former Nazis'.

In an indication that the material for this article was written by British intelligence, it continued with typically ersatz 'fill-in colour', along these lines: 'He liked organising from the background, rarely making appearances in public without his identity being obscured by dark glasses or some other guise. Even his children attended school under assumed names'. Following these statements, the newspaper article elaborated: 'In 1968, he was forced to retire, mainly because two of his aides were discovered to be Soviet agents'. This particular fact appears to have been expunged from subsequent assessments of Nazi General Reinhard Gehlen's career.

The British newspaper article concluded: 'But three years later he stepped into the limelight with the publication of his memoirs, "Der Dienst" (The Service). In them he claimed that he knew about the Berlin Wall before it went up; the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia before it occurred; and to have correctly predicted the outbreak of the 1967 Arab-Israeli War'[1]. Of course nobody could verify these claims which, in any case, dealt with past events, so that intelligence connected with them could be safely 'burned'. The US intelligence establishment paid far too much intention to this veteran Nazi strategist and operative, who leveraged his privileged 'turncoat' position to facilitate the perpetuation and implementation of the German Illuminazis' long-range strategy. In London, Guy Liddell of MI5 warned, to no effect, that allowing Gehlen's intelligence organisation to exist itself risked the likelihood that Gehlen was in fact engaged in reestablishing the nucleus of a revived Abwehr, This is exactly what happened: Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst, the 'Black' intelligence organisation based in Dachau, referred to in greater detail shortly is part of, or the central locus of, the continuing Gehlen organisation, which is the Nazi Abwehr Continuum. The CIA office in Frankfurt (COREA) is believed to be closely allied with German intelligence generally - in contrast to the CIA elements based in Brussels, which, according to the Author's information, are not dominated by Germans or their allies and penetration agents, but see much more clearly the extreme dangers faced by both Britain and the United States as a consequence of the cumulative 'successes' of the long-range strategies pursued by Nazi 'Black' intelligence.

GEHLEN TOLD THE AMERICANS WHAT THEY WANTED TO HEAR

Gehlen fed the gullible Americans with as much disinformation as he could concoct with impunity. For instance, in his self-serving memoirs, he claimed that Hitler's Deputy, Martin Bormann, was really a Soviet agent, who died in the USSR in 1979, even though the 'facts' on which he based these assertions were thin and were dismissed by the large continuing community of 'Bormann hunters' around the world. As a colleague of Dr Josef Goebbels, who is posthumously notorious for his well-known assertion that if the public is lied to for long enough, it will come to believe any lie that is fed to it, Gehlen was no slouch when it came to making the intelligence fit inadequate facts. Accordingly, to satisfy his new employers, Gehlen realised that he needed to feed them with information that fitted Washington's preconceived 'take' on international affairs.

In the judgment of Victor Marchetti, a former chief CIA analyst on Soviet military capabilities and the author of 'The CIA and the Cult of Intelligence', 'The Agency loved Gehlen because he fed us what we wanted to hear. We used his stuff constantly and we fed it to everybody else: the Pentagon, the White House, the newspapers. They loved it'. And Marchetti elaborated: 'Gehlen had to make his money by creating a threat that we were afraid of, so we would give him more money to tell us about it. In my opinion, the Gehlen Organisation provided nothing worthwhile for understanding or estimating Soviet military or political capabilities in Eastern Europe or anywhere else'[2]. The final result of these cloak-and-dagger exercises was a reputed Cold War that lasted for almost half a century, and cost American taxpayers alone over $8 trillion. The author Craig Roberts has elaborated: 'Peacetime intelligence-gathering had become big business -profitable not only to the growing intelligence organizations, but to the defense industry and the investors who financed both it and the government'[3].

Actually, the intelligence organisations learned both from their connections with the Sicilian Mafia (heirs of Giuseppe Mazzini's organised criminal operations) and as a consequence of the mass penetration of US intelligence by German operatives and scientists under the postwar 'Operation Paperclip', how to exploit opportunities for open-ended criminalist operations under the blanket cover of 'national security', both for the progressive enrichment of the agencies themselves, and for the purposes of lining the pockets of certain integrated criminal political families whose underworld expertise was superior to that of their intelligence associates.

The scale of Gehlen's deception operations against the Americans was mind-boggling. Reportedly more than 70% of reports submitted to Washington on CIA stationery were simply Gehlen's own words. One 'former' CIA operative is reported to have confirmed that 'Gehlen's reports and analyses were sometimes simply retyped onto CIA stationery and presented to President Truman without further comment[4]. As a consequence, President Truman abandoned attempts to curb the military budget, and expanded spending for weapons research ('inventing evil things'), military equipment, aircraft and the Nazi-directed US space programme.

Truman also ordered an expansion of the nuclear weapons production and development programme, and initiated the process of pumping large sums into the intelligence community's 'Black' budget to finance covert operations - a tradition which continues to this day, even though the volume of funds maintained and exploited offshore and off-balance sheet by the US intelligence community grows exponentially by the day and has long since ensured that the intelligence community is a 'stand-alone' state within the US state, directing the affairs of every important department of the Federal Government, self-selecting its own personnel for the highest offices including the Presidency and the Vice Presidency, and self-appointing its own 'handlers' so that its covert appointees do as they are told. Already, over the ten years that followed President Truman's acceptance of Gehlen's lies and distortions at face value, the CIA contrived to consume over $200 million that did not need to be accounted for - equivalent to some $4.0 trillion in today's debauched US fiat 'funny' money.

ABWEHR'S SUCCESSORS PAINTED THE U.S.S.R AS DEADLY MENACE

US funding for the Gehlen Organisation only ceased as late as 1956. In 2000, United Press International (UPI) revealed that the CIA had finally acknowledged its past relationship with Gehlen, in response to an appeal under a Freedom of Information Act request by a US researcher, Carl Oglesby, according to a spokesman for the National Archives. The QA had 'pledged' to release its records on General Gehlen in accordance with the Nazi War Crimes Disclosure Act, setting up the Nazi War Criminal Records Interagency Working Group (IWG). It started declassifying documents related to the Second World War in 1998, releasing them through the National Archives.

British intelligence sources have informed this author that the Dulles Brothers, like key British intelligence figures, were long-term agents of the German (Nazi) Abwehr. No doubt this was indeed so, explaining why General Gehlen encountered no resistance to the fairytales that he was retailing for the benefit of the Americans' 'innocenf ears. In the decade following the Second World War, the Americans had little understanding of the Soviets' military capabilities; so Gehlen painted as bleak a picture as he could of the Red Menace - which was real enough, but of course represented a dialectical 'threat', as long intended by the Illuminati manipulators. What actually happened was that the postwar scenario did not develop as they may have planned - a deduction that is consistent with information provided privately to this Author from a high-level US source that President Reagan's intention was to terminate, rather than to 'win', the Cold War, because it had been realised (by the Illuminati) that it had become both unproductive and counterproductive, especially given the electronic 'new technology' advances. 'All that Gehlen needed to do was to paint as bleak a picture of the situation as he could, and to continue creating reports that indicated that the scenario was continually deteriorat-ing. The more bad news he gave Washington, the more money he would have to work with. He knew that in peacetime, the only way to justify a large intelligence organization was to make sure there was always an "enemy at the gates'"[5].

HOW GEHLEN EXPLOITED THE EMBEDDED FIFTH COLUMN

By way of quite well-known examples of exaggerations, disinformation or outright lies fed by this long-range Nazi Continuum agent to the gullible and eagerly expanding US intelligence community, the following examples are often cited:

Gehen's organisation reported directly to Allen Dulles, the Director of Central Intelligence (DCI), and thus to President Truman, that the Soviets were poised to attack Western Europe. Specifically, he asserted that Soviet forces in Eastern Europe consisted of 208 crack assault divisions, most of which were high-speed-capable motorised rifle and tank divisions, modelled after the Nazi blitzkrieg precedent. The data accompanying these reports suggested that the Communists outnumbered Western forces by about ten to one.

Early in 1947, Gehlen told the newly established Central Intelligence Agency, which succeeded the OSS and its follow-on Central Intelligence Group (CIG), that his agents had observed subtle changes in Soviet billeting and leave policies, with leave cancelled and troops being recalled for some unexplained reason - from which he purported to deduce that these indications might signal a 'preparation phase' for the suspected blitzkrieg invasion, which was in reality a figment of his cynical imagination.

Gehlen then predicted that the Soviets would move quickly once all their troops and equipment had been activated and made ready for the attack.

In reality, as a number of analysts have pointed out, the Red Army in 1946 was grossly over-extended, under-equipped and exhausted, consisting of units that had suffered severe combat degradation. And it had certainly been the case that many of the Soviet battalions had entered Berlin on foot. The reality was that the Soviets even lacked sufficient motor transport to be able to move one entire division without depriving another of its motorised assets. As late as 1946, almost 50% of the Red Army's transport was still horse-drawn, as at the beginning the century. Also in the public domain is the fact that US intelligence had itself established that most Soviet forces in Eastern Europe were bogged down consolidating Stalin's conquests, rebuilding and establishing repression systems in the Eastern zones, reorganising security structures, and carrying out government administrative functions given the collapse of governing infrastructures. Indeed, US intelligence assessments had confirmed that Soviet ground and air forces would not be combat-effective against the Western powers for at least a decade.

Gehlen and his 'believers' within US intelligence managed somehow to 'confuse with figures'. A Soviet military division was usually one-third as strong as an American or British division, with far less effective leadership, because instead of being able to function flexibly in combat by taking decisions on the battlefield, Soviet officers had to wait for orders from on high before reacting to any change in battle circumstances - a state of affairs which had often caused the Soviets massive losses and defeats in the course of land battles. By contrast, US military doctrine encouraged battlefield decisions during the heat of conflict to be made at the lowest levels. (It may well be the case that some of the atrocities committed by US troops in Iraq may have reflected this doctrine -at least, that is what the officer class has encouraged the jaded outside world to believe).

THE BETRAYAL OF 'PROJECT PAPERCLIP'

Much has been written about President Truman's decision in 1946 to authorise 'Project Paperclip', under which the late President Roosevelt's policy of allowing Germany to experience the bitter consequences of its excesses, was turned on its head - under the influence of the US State Department in general and the Germany-educated George Kennan (see below) in particular. No doubt the information in the public domain on this subject is woefully incomplete. But under the policy, selected German scientists were brought to the United States ostensibly to work on behalf of America in the face of the developing 'Cold War'. President Truman expressly excluded any German scientist or intelligence operative initially 'found to have been a member of the Nazi Party and more than a nominal participant in its activities, or an active supporter of Nazism or militarism'.

Accordingly, the US War Department's Joint Intelligence Objectives Agency (JIOA) carried out background investigations of the scientists. In February 1947, the JOIA's Director, Bosquet Wev, submitted the first group of dossiers to the US State and Justice Departments for their review. Samuel Klaus, the State Department's representative on the Board of the JIOA, immediately argued that the dossiers were damning and that all the scientists in the first batch were 'ardent Nazis'; so their visa 'requests' were denied.

Several commentators have pointed out that Mr Wev was furious. He accordingly wrote a memorandum in which he insisted that 'the best interests of the United States have been subjugated to efforts expended in "beating a dead Nazi horse". So far as he was concerned, Nazism was dead - a catastrophic error of judgment that has compromised the United States' future and is well on the way to procuring the destruction of the Republic. As part of his argument, Mr Wev suggested that returning the Nazi scientists concerned to Germany, or leaving them there, would expose them to being exploited by the United States' enemies - a state of affairs which presented a 'far greater security threat to this country than any former Nazi affiliations which they may have had or any Nazi sympathies that they may still have'.

Meanwhile General Gehlen, having formed a close relationship with Allen Dulles, who has recently been exposed by British intelligence as a German Abwehr penetration agent, persuaded the Director of Central Intelligence that it would be in the United States' long-term interests to accept the German scientists. Allen Dulles apparently assured Gehlen that his organisation would survive scrutiny. For his part, Mr Wev evidently prevailed upon Dulles to allow him to have the suspect Nazi scientists' dossiers rewritten, so that incriminating evidence was eliminated. As a consequence of this fraud, over 770 Nazi scientists, initially, entered the United States and were incorporated into the military-industrial complex, the universities and the intelligence community.

Although a similar Nazi penetration occurred in the Soviet Union, the United States 'inherited' a large number of Heinrich Himmler's 'Black' scientists who had been engaged in gross, Satanic experimentation operations, including abominations against inmates in Nazi concentration camps. Most analysts are agreed that the myriad 'Black' umbrella projects later sponsored by the CIA, including MK-ULTRA, Operation ARTICHOKE and Operation MIDNIGHT CLIMAX, were encouraged, if not 'inspired', by this corrosive German Nazi influence inside the CIA's 'Heart of Darkness'.

THE EXPOSE OF THE NAZI MOLES BY LINDA HUNT

Our knowledge that the Nazi scientists' dossiers had been doctored under the German agent Allen Dulles arises mainly from an expose published in 1985 by Linda Hunt, in the 'Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists', in which she said that she had examined more than 130 reports on 'Project Paperclip' candidates, and had found that 'every one had been changed to eliminate the security threat classification'. This must surely rank as one of the most extensive mass penetrations of Western intelligence and structures in history - surpassed only by the mass penetration effected by 'ex'-KGB and Soviet military Intelligence (GRU) officers under the Clinton Administration, which resulted, according to a source with the Wackenhut Corporation, in more than 17,000 GRU operatives being placed as both 'actives' and 'sleepers' all over the United States.

Authorities are also in agreement that President Truman, who had explicitly ordered that no 'serious' Nazis were to be admitted into the United States and its structures under 'Operation Paperclip', was never made aware that his directive had been violated. In other words, the intelligence servants of the President of the United States deceived him - a pattern of behaviour which has become routine, not least given that Presidents are controlled by intelligence 'handlers'. Memoirs of officials from that era, together with US State Department archive materials, confirm that the President was kept in ignorance. Indeed, officials threw a blanket of secrecy over 'Operation Paperclip' and the issues it raised, specifically in order to ensure that the truth of the matter did not leak into the Oval Office. According to an authoritative work by Clare Lasby on this subject, 'Project Paperclip' officials 'covered their designs with such secrecy that it bedevilled and compromised their own President: at Potsdam he denied their activities and undoubtedly enhanced Russian suspicion and distrust'[6].

In the case of the top Hitler missile scientist, who had inflicted death and destruction over southern England with his V-l and V-2 rockets - which the Author remembers struck horror into us when the engine switched off, a signal that the bomb was about to detonate - a report datelined 18th September 1947 stated that 'Subject is regarded as a potential security threat by the Military Governor'. But in February 1948, a 'revised' security evaluation of Von Braun asserted that: 'No derogatory information is available on the subject.... It is the opinion of the Military Governor that he may not constitute a security threat to the United States'. Whether the Military Governor was the same person who had provided the earlier advice is not reported. Even so, the new assessment was still conditional: otherwise the word 'may' would have been 'will'.

Further information on the mass infiltration of Nazi scientists and practitioners of abominations into the US structures after the Second World War was summarised in Chapter 4. One of the worst cases was that of Kurt Blome, the high-ranking Himmler scientist who had told US military interrogators in 1945 that he had been ordered in 1943 to experiment with plague vaccines on prisoners in Nazi concentration camps.

In 1947, this ogre was tried at Nuremberg on charges of practicing euthanasia disguised as the extermination of sick prisoners 'who were going to die anyway', and conducting unconscionable experiments on humans. Incredibly, he was acquitted, but his earlier admissions were common knowledge and it was generally assumed that he had indeed participated in the gruesome experiments. Two months after he was acquitted at Nuremberg, Blome was being interviewed at Camp David, Maryland, on the subject of biological warfare. He was hired in 1951 by the US Army Chemical Corps to work on chemical warfare operations, on the basis of a file that contained no mention of his trial at Nuremberg.

The fate of another leading Nazi scientist, Major General Walter Schreiber, was also reviewed by Linda Hunt in her article. She reported that the US military tribunal at Nuremberg heard evidence that 'Schreiber had assigned doctors to experiment on concentration camp prisoners and had made funds available for such experimentation'.

The Assistant Prosecutor had stated that the evidence would have resulted in Schreiber's conviction if the Soviets, who held him from 1945 to 1948, had made him available for trial. But Schreiber's 'Operation Paperclip' file made no mention of this evidence. Instead, the Americans found work for him at the Air Force School of Medicine at Randolph Field, Texas. When the veteran columnist, Drew Pearson, publicised the relevant Nuremberg evidence in 1952, the resulting negative publicity jolted the JIOA to arrange, according to Ms Hunt, 'a visa and a job for Schreiber in Argentina, where his daughter was living', and on 22nd May 1952, he was flown to Buenos Aires. This departure was just one of a large number of Nazi flights to South America.

According to Craig Roberts, while the 770 or more 'Operation Paperclip' Nazi (Himmler) scientists were boldly establishing themselves in the United States, General Reinhard Gehlen, acting with the tacit agreement of the Abwehr agent Allen Dulles, was busily engaged in rebuilding his intelligence connections and networks - inside West Germany. The so-called Gehlen Organisation rapidly re-established control over the majority of his former agents within the Iron Curtain territories, and, with the help of many members of his former staff, put them back to work. Of course, he double-crossed the Americans, since although he had agreed not to hire any former Gestapo, SS or SD members, this pledge (as he knew perfectly well) was wholly unenforceable. Far from refraining from employing such operatives, he systematically sought them out and placed them on the US-financed payroll, while the already deeply compromised and penetrated CIA did nothing whatsoever to stop this process.

His recruits included Dr Franz Six and Emil Augsburg, both of whom had been participants in an SS mobile Death's Head murder squad - the model for subsequent 'death squads' all over the world - which had hunted down and murdered Soviet Jews, intellectuals and partisans wherever they could be found. Dr Six was known as a

'Streber', or 'Eager Beaver', because of the relentless and ruthless manner in which he pursued his human prey. General Gehlen further recruited the former Gestapo chiefs operating in Paris, and in Kiel, Germany. He also hired the Jewish senior former Gestapo leader in southeastern Europe, Willi Krichbaum.

NOTORIOUS NAZI JEWS AND THE HOLOCAUST ('SHOAH')

This man was far from the only Jew to function at senior level within the Nazi hierarchy. The most notorious of the Nazi Jews who served Hitler at high level was of course Adolf Eichmann, SS Gruppenfuhrer Heinrich Muller's aide and the head of the notorious Department IVD4 dealing with 'emigration and evacuation' under the Gestapo, who epitomised the previously mentioned aphorism that 'a Jew's greatest enemy is another Jew'. This operative was among the most senior Jewish Nazis who presided over both a parallel programme to expatriate and/or 'evacuate' certain Jews (who were primarily Sephardim), and the industrialisation of the Nazi killing apparat, which followed the Nazis' pre-existing T4 'euthanasia' programme* under which 270,000 members of the general population considered to be 'unfit' to continue living were arbitrarily murdered. Among Eichmann's senior subordinates were many other Nazis of Jewish extraction, including a Dr Jacobi, of the General Management, Railway Directorate East, in Berlin, a chief requisitioner of 'special trains' for those destined for the concentration camps and gas chambers, who went under the euphemism 'resettlers'; and the notorious SS-Brigadefuhrer Dr Otto Gustav Wachter, the Nazi Governor-General of Galicia, Poland, who was a key member of special intelligence planning sessions which took place at certain departmental levels in the German Military Transportation Command (Kommandatur) in Akademizca (University) Street, Lemburg [Lvov], where, according to an eye-witness - the Jewish SS Lieutenant General Horst Hoyer - details of the 'final solution' were clearly laid out - by Jews, of whom Wachter was the most senior.

Wachter was thus a also a collaborator of SS Gruppenfuhrer Heinrich Miiller, the Jewish Nazi SS General in charge of the Gestapo and the concentration camps who clandestinely reported to his fellow Jew, Lavrentii Beria, the head of Stalin's MVD (Interior Ministry). Lavrentii Beria was the deepest German Abwehr penetration at the summit of Soviet power - wielded of course by Stalin, whose real Jewish name was Iosiph Viss-arionovich Djugashvili-Kochba, a descendant, like Beria, of Jews/Khazars from Georgia. The success of the Abwehr (secret intelligence) in penetrating Stalin's closest entourage had only been paralleled in the 20th century by the placement of Grigory Rasputin, the demonic semi-literate fake peasant monk and 'mystic', who exercised extraordinary and evil power over Tsar Nicholas and his wife Alexandra, and whose drunkenness, nepotism and sexual excesses, accompanied by accurate rumours that he was a German agent, led to his murder by a group of Russian noblemen in December 1916.

* In the recent literature, the Nazis' T4 'euthanasia' programme is mentioned, for instance, on pages 101 and 109 of 'Eichmann: His Life and Crimes', by Professor David Cesarani [William Heinemann, London, 2004], thus: The 'police captain' he [Eichmann] met, and whom he described as 'vulgar' and possibly drunk, was almost certainly Police Commissioner Christian Wirth, who had been transferred from the T4 'euthanasia' programme to [SS Brigadefuhrer Oldilo] Globocnik to design and build a mass murder installation' [page 101]; and: 'In October and November [1941] murder experts from the T4 unit were loaned to him [Globocnik, who was SS Police Chief in the Lublin area] and work began on Belzec' [= Belsen] [page 109]. Concerning the T4 'euthanasia 'programme which preceded the 'Final Solution' operation, Professor Cesarani, of Royal Holloway College, at the University of London, refers to the gassing techniques employed to murder thousands of the physically and mentally handicapped in sanatoria and asylums in Germany and the annexed areas in 1939-40.... [In SS circles at this time, against this background] 'the biological destruction of the Jews was now being seen as a viable alternative or adjunct to deportation' [page 94]. In 2006, the notoriety of the US National Security Agency [NSA] was further aggravated, given controversy surrounding detailed indications of NSA spying not only against foreigners, but also against American citizens, under a vast operation referred to obliquely by intelligence officials simply as The Program'. The actual codename for this operation is 'The T2 Program'. The labelling of this operation presupposes the existence of a T1 Program, and arguably of T3 and a T4 (et al) Programs. Given the clear continuing Nazi orientation, being implemented by the Nazi Fifth Column operating at the highest levels in the US structures, the possibility that these people have replicated the Nazi hierarchy of secret control operations and that a US T4 'euthanasia' Program exists, cannot be excluded.

According to Horst Hoyer, exclusively Sephardic Jews (exiles of Jerusalem) were removed from Galicia under Wachter's watch, with whole families being flown out by the German Air Force and aircraft operated by its Axis allies, so that accordingly only Ashkenazim (to which group most Jews, as discussed earlier, were thought to belong) were to be targeted for annihilation. Hoyer's own testimony on the detailed involvement of certain key Jews with preparations for the 'Shock' (incorrectly labelled 'the Holocaust') was presented to the West German Government in connection with the signing of the German-Israel Peace Treaty in 1952, and subsequently to the Institute for Post-War German History. The intelligence source for this information was published by Grabert Verlag, of Tubingen, in two revealing articles that appeared in a bulletin for researchers and teachers entitled Hochschullehrerzeitung in 1967 and 1968[7]. The translator of Hoyer's material into English was Henning Fikentscher, also of Jewish extraction. Commenting on this intelligence, Professor (Emeritus) Reuben Clarence Lang, M. Theol., MA, PhD, a Christian German of Jewish background, has revealingly stated:

'One must be mindful of the intense inner-Jewish tension and contrasts, above all between the objectives of the nationally-assimilated Jews and those of world Jewry and Zionism. These divisions are much, much deeper than the relationships between believing and non-believing Jews. As one becomes aware of this, many other factors, that are otherwise incomprehensible, about Jewry, become clear - the most important in this context being that one group of Jews (Ashkenazim) fell victim to another, and that, of those Jews who were targeted, few escaped'[8].

HIDDEN JEWISH ETHNIC CLEANSING AGENDA

Seen against this authoritative background, the reality that Nazi Jews such as Adolf Eichmann, Muller, Wachter, Krichbaum, Horst Hoyer and many others of senior rank including certain of Hitler's associates and key operatives - Otto Meissner, Walter Funk, Hans Frank, Alfred Rosenberg, Karl Fiehler, Max Amann, and in the Occupied Territories (Reichskommissar), Wilhelm Frick (Bohemia and Moravia), Karl Hermann Frank (State Minister, Bohemia and Moravia), Robert Wagner (Alsace), Erich Kocherich (a.k.a. Koch) (Bialystock), Friedrich Rainer (working in Carinthia and Carinola) and Gustav Simon (Luxembourg) - together with an estimated 155,000 Jews who served in the Nazi military and repression structures [see Figure 85, page 534] mainly to procure protection for themselves and - they hoped - their families) from the industrialised pogrom, becomes distinctly less problematical to contemplate[9]. (Certain other top Nazi police and SS chiefs not mentioned so far, such as Ernst Kaltenbrunner, Erwin Schultz, Panzinger and Walter Schellenberg, are also believed to have had Jewish backgrounds).

The realisation that cynically heartless and evil Jews sided with the Luciferian German Nazis to exterminate millions of their own race in what amounted to an inter-Jewish civil war and ethnic cleansing operation directed by Germany's Satanic industrialised extermination structures, may be a dimension of the 'mystery of iniquity'[10] that we are not called upon to comprehend. However in view of the ghastly fact that the United States is maturing before our eyes as a monster regime that may make the Hitler era look like a golden age, we will need to factor this paradox firmly into our 'hard disks'. For 'he that now letteth will let'[11].

In summary, a large cadre of Germans were or became 'infested' or even in some cases 'possessed' - and this has to include ALL those who had any part in the industrialisation of mass murder organised and presided over by the likes of Adolf Eichmann and Wachter, aided and abetted by a cadre of senior Nazi Jews who perpetrated a colossal ethnic cleansing operation - the controlling Kahal Jews being in agreement with their German colleagues that the Jewish community was 'polluted' by Khazars (Ashkenazim) who were not really Jews at all - a view which, as this Author showed in Chapter 7, is a lie.

It would even appear that the primary instigators of the 'Shoah' (Holocaust) were Jews. Others named by SS Lieutenant General Horst Hoyer as having planned the minutiae of the 'final solution' at Lemburg included Jews named Walter Sonnenschein, Zuckerhorn, Spitze, Loewenstein, Gregor and Feckler. Hoyer's memorandum also contained the following observation: 'At the time, those Jews [listed as having attended the meetings at Akademizca Street, Lemburg] feared world Jewry, putting me in their confidence, didn't they? They pleaded for my help, knowing full well that I was utterly helpless in the face of these underhand activities'. Two weeks after the ratification of the German-Israel Treaty, an official Jewish approach was made to Horst Hoyer offering him a large sum of money (DM30,000) for his memorandum on Jewish complicity in the 'final solution' which he had handed to the West German Government. The proposal contained a demand that Hoyer was to sign a document to the effect that the memorandum was fictitious. He refused, and was murdered some years later.

On 24th March 1933, the Daily Express, which then cost one penny, and was owned then, as today, by Jewish interests, carried the following headline right across its front page: JUDEA DECLARES WAR ON GERMANY. The only copy of this issue that the Author has been able to obtain consists of the degraded photocopy shown in Figure 86 on page 535. Beneath a picture montage showing four Jewish judges examining a Nazi, the front page announced, coinciding with Hitler's 'coup d'etat by instalments':

Thus Jewish financiers helped to finance an Illuminati Black regime which set about planning and implementing an ethnic cleansing programme within Jewry which was supported and facilitated by prominent Jews both within the Nazi apparat, and externally - illustrating again the perpetual double-mindedness of the Illuminati and their dupes.

A strange and unforeseen sequel has emerged from the stories of German Jew-baiting. [Due to a later highlighting or erasure, the next sentences are almost illegible]. All Israel is rising in wrath against the Nazi onslaught on the Jews. Adolf Hitler, swept into power by an appeal to elemental patriotism, is making history of a kind he least expected. Thinking to unite only the German nation to race consciousness, he has aroused the whole Jewish people to a national consciousness'.

JEWISH SUPPORT FOR THE ILLUMINATI'S 'BLACK' REGIME

In the light of the foregoing information on the participation of a ruthless cadre of Jewish Nazis in the subsequently developed mass extermination machine, it is suspected that collaboration along these Luciferian lines between participating Nazi Jews and the German Nazis may have been a feature of this Illuminati 'Black' regime all along. And given the fashion in those days for 'racial purity' considerations (eugenics), this Author does not consider it to be out of the question that there may have been a deliberate intention by certain controlling Israelite cadres to 'purge' the Ashkenazim in order to 'manage' the intended mass emigration of Jews to the planned State of Israel that had been arranged by Chaim Weizmann with the British. Eichmann, too, was extensively involved with operations to transport Jews around Europe and to Palestine. In other words, an underlying explanation for Jewish Nazi collaboration in this gigantic abomination of Figure 85: Given that Communism and Nazism are two dialectical 'opposites' developed respectively by one of the two Illuminati Karls - Communism by Karl Marx, and Fascism (Nazism) by Karl Ritter, both German Jews - it is not surprising that a large number of German Jews participated in the Nazi war and extermination machine, just as a large number of Soviet Jews participated in the Stalinist war and extermination machines. Comprehensive details about the Jews who belonged to the Nazi intelligence and military apparat were published several years ago, and have appeared in a paperback edition of 'Hitler's Jewish Soldiers: The Untold Story of Nazi Racial Laws and Men of Jewish Descent in the German Military', by Brian Mark Rigg, Modern War Studies, ISBN 0-7006-1358-7. The late 'suicided' CIA Director William Colby agreed with this Author that the Nazis have 'hidden behind' the Soviets since 1945. The pictures above are side and front 'mugshots' of the understandably frightened Anton Mayer which accompanied his application for 'exemption' so that he could stay in the Nazi military ranks, and also to spare his parents, spouse or other relative from incarceration or the death camps. Hitler's own signature is found on may of these 'exemption orders'. The photographs evoke a certain human compassion, given the expression of terror on the man's face. Many Jews worked as spies for the Hitler regime, including Hans Arnheim and Joseph Jakobs, Rudoph Korda, a Hungarian-born Jewish journalist who headed a Nazi spy ring until 1942, Ivan Lissner, a Jewish Nazi collaborator and Nazi Party member, Karl Molnar, the Jewish chief of Hungarian Intelligence in Istanbul, Hans Mosberg, a Shanghai-based Jewish spy who served the Abwehr, and of course the continuing STASI-Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst (DVD) operative, Marcus Wolf.

'ethnic cleansing' may have been an intention to ensure that the Jewish gene pool imported into the new state would be as 'pure' as could be arranged - illustrating the perverse and widely overlooked reality that the Nazi and the Zionist mentalities are interchangeable and essentially identical: hence this Author's new name, Zionazis.

That the Hitler regime was supported by the Jewish financial power is confirmed by Figure 84 [page 533] which shows that the appointment of H. H. C. Schacht as Governor of the Reichsbank by Hitler on 17th March 1933, as soon as he had achieved supremacy had to be agreed by the international banking community, whose representative was Max Warburg, the brother of Paul Warburg, the chief architect of the Federal Reserve System, which is 'privately' owned by a majority of European financial institutions

As for Wachter, he is believed to have made his way to Italy, where he was thought to have been murdered by partisans - having intended to take advantage of the Vatican's 'rat-run' route by means of which Nazis on the run escaped to Latin America. His family members survived. Gehlen's new employer, the OSS, working with the Vatican, not only encouraged but financed an escape mechanism negotiated and set up by Gehlen for his Nazi colleagues. Although the Vatican has always been 'blamed' for developing the 'rat-lines', for which it provided ample cover in its monastic and church establishments (enabling operatives like Karol Wojtila to enter holy orders, an alternative option), it was in fact the so-called Gehlen Organisation which established, with OSS assistance, the underground escape network which Nazi war criminals could use to escape prosecution by war crimes tribunals. As a consequence, more than 5,000 Nazis secretly made their way out of Europe, and were relocated all over the world.

Figure 86: The Jewish-owned Daily Express served the British Government as a propaganda organ for many years. This shows part of the newspaper's front page on 24th March 1933, shortly after Hitter had double-crossed the Reichstag and had corralled the Reichstag's power for his Cabinet and before he stole the Cabinet's powers for him-self. The newspaper's headline, JUDEA DECLARES WAR ON GERMANY, should be compared with Figure 84 on page 533, which illustrates part of a financial document dated 17th March 1933 signed by Hitler and the Jewish financier, Max Warburg. Other Jewish banker friends of the Fuhrer were gentlemen by the names of Abs and Pferdmenges.

the United States under 'Operation Paperclip' and subsequently, and who were retained within Stalin's new Empire and were put to work for the Soviets, as well as some Nazis who were similarly used by the British authorities, the underground 'rat line' system enabled the Nazi Continuum to establish a global network which, as will be seen, has never ceased to pursue Nazi global hegemony policy. This was always in fact simply an extension, 'by other means' to cite Lenin, of a policy of Germanic expansionism that can be traced back to Frederick the Great, Bismarck (who was Jewish, like his British counterpart, Disraeli), the Kaiser, and German policy following the First World War.

It was, after all, the same German Abwehr that established the cancer of the Muslim Brotherhood, a neo-Masonic organisation, in the Middle East, as an instrument for the destabilisation of British power there. The Iraqi Ba'ath regime which succeeded and displaced British influence in Iraq, represented, in reality, nothing less than the imposition of a disguised Nazi apparatus in Baghdad. On Channel 4 News broadcast on 3rd August 2005, there was a segment on the killing of a New York Times reporter in Basra, three days after he had published a critical report on local developments in his newspaper. The camera accidentally captured a wall poster showing a skull with the following slogan written in large English characters immediately beneath it: NAZI BA'ATH CRIMES.

NAZIS EXPORT THEIR 'TOTENKOPF' DEATH SQUADS

Most of the 5,000+ Nazi war criminals fled to Argentina, Chile, Nicaragua and El Salvador - all of them countries in which the United States has subsequently intermeddled. Within a few years of the arrival of these Nazis in those countries, 'right-wing' 'death squads', modelled on the Nazi SS mobile 'Deaths' Head' (Totenkopf) killing squads that had hunted down and killed Jews, intellectuals and partisans in the Soviet Union and parts of Eastern Europe, made their appearance. Among the Nazi expatriate communities were the notorious 'high' Uluminist Dr Josef Mengele, who collaborated with US intelligence and whose speciality had been to conduct crude experiments on Jewish concentration camp inmates - and the infamous 'Butcher of Lyons', the mass murderer, Klaus Barbie. It is believed that James Jesus Angleton, who worked for the Abwehr agent Allen Dulles and who later in life grew orchids - a plant with occult connotations - for pleasure, was primarily responsible for providing escaping Nazis with new identities prior to their leaving the detainment camps.

On 2nd October 2005, 'The Sunday Express', which these days is owned by the shameless Jewish pornographer Richard Desmond, whose TV offerings routinely plumb new depths of depravity and who is allegedly 'close to Mossad', according to an informed British intelligence source, published details of a renewed global hunt for a notorious living Nazi 'Dr Death', a certain SS Dr Aribert Heim, who carried out hideous experiments on prisoners at Mauthausen concentration camp in Austria in 1941. Prosecutors for the southern German State of Baden-Wurttemberg in Stuttgart were said to have doubled their reward for information leading to this old Nazi's arrest.

A spokesman was reported to have said that Heim 'is top of our list of wanted Nazi war criminals, and has been for more than 40 years. We have intelligence that he is alive - aged 91 - and healthy and competent enough to stand trial'. Heim was also reported to be at the top of the list under Operation Last Chance, which is the operational title for a continuing hunt for Nazi war criminals spearheaded by the Simon Wiesenthal Centre in Vienna, a spokesman for which told the Sunday Express that 'we believe that he is still alive, and we desperately want him because he is the last big fish of the Nazi regime who must answer for his role in the destruction of six million people'. According to Michel Klose, the Baden-Wurttemberg prosecutor, Heim 'operated on people when they were fully conscious. In one case, he removed the liver, spleen and bowels of a patient without anaesthetic. The patient died in agony'. Prosecutors listed Heim as having come second only to Dr Josef Mengele in his capacity for cruelty. A former concentration camp prisoner, Hans Marsalek, said that 'he did not know the meaning of mercy. He injected patients in the heart and had their heads cut off so that he could experiment on their skulls'. Unbelievably, this ogre was known to have been living quietly in the spa town of Bad Nauheim, close to Frankfurt, which is essentially, with Berlin and Dachau, a primary German locus of Luciferian Illuminati operations. In 1949, he married another doctor, and they had two sons, settling in Baden-Baden, where he opened a gynaecological clinic. The Austrian authorities belatedly started an investigation after having collected witness statements from dozens of Mauthausen inmates, and five years later prosecutors in Baden-Baden issued an arrest warrant for him. He vanished shortly before police appeared at his home. It is believed he was tipped off by the organisation of former SS operatives, Odessa, which specialised in providing wanted SS men with papers and funds with which to escape. His wife remained a doctor practicing in Baden-Baden, and was known to be still functioning as a doctor there as late as the autumn of 2005. Heim was believed in 1998 to be living in Spain, but there appear to be traces of him having visited or lived in Egypt (a key Nazi locus, not least because of its occultic connotations.), Venezuela, Brazil - and the United States[12].

STALIN-STYLE PURGE OF U.S. INTELLIGENCE OPERATIVES ET AL

For a number of years, the US 'underground', now dominated by the Internet, has specialised in exposes of the alleged leading American intelligence-political 'crime' families, led by the Clintons and the Bushes. During the Clinton years, observers more or less lost count of the number of intelligence operatives, military officers, drivers, bodyguards and others who had been 'whacked' - to use the intelligence jargon that seems to be in vogue - in the context of a Stalin-style purge of those involved with the nexus of intelligence operations and drug-related scams collectively referred to as Tran-Contra'. The similarity to life under Stalin can certainly not have been lost on Russian observers and intelligence officers working out of the Russian Embassy in Washington, who were carefully monitoring the endlessly burgeoning list of 'Iran-Contra' operatives who were found dead, or who wound up in jail on Stalinesque trumped-up charges.

Since 2000, the focus has been on the alleged nefarious serial criminality of members of the Bush family, with many respectable researchers highlighting such facts as that President Bush's grandfather, like Jewish bankers and steelmakers, was instrumental in Hitler's rise to, and consolidation of, power. Rather than revisit such secondary and occasionally questionable or carelessly researched sources for this damning background information, the Author prefers to rely primarily upon decisive confirmation of all this, published in The Guardian on 25th September 2004, which was based upon 'newly discovered' files in the US National Archives proving that Prescott Bush, the Yale Skull and Bones father of George Bush Sr., was a Director of a firm that was involved with the financial architects of the Illuminati's 'Black' Nazi regime. This had been separately alleged in a number of 'underground' analyses; but now we have the concrete evidence. Today, it is allegedly George Bush Sr. who has been single-handedly directing the Illuminati's push for global control, literally telling Bill and Hillary Clinton and, reportedly, his son George W. Bush Jr., what to do; and the 'white hatted' component of the US intelligence community has been intimidated into impotence, in the face of this clique's powers. The controller today of the secret financial dimensions of the Bush Family's alleged criminalist intelligence operations and affairs is allegedly the family member who is least heard of, Eddie Bush, operating out of Toronto, Canada.

The Guardian reported that Prescott Bush's 'business dealings, which continued until his company's assets were seized in 1942 under the Trading with the Enemy Act, have led more than 60 years later to a civil action for damages bring brought in Germany against the Bush family by two former slave labourers at Auschwitz.... The evidence has also prompted one former US Nazi war crimes prosecutor to argue that the late Senator's actions should have been grounds for prosecution for giving aid and comfort to the enemy'.

'The new documents, many of which were only declassified last year (2003) show that even after America had entered the war and when there was already significant information about the Nazis' plans and policies, he worked for and profited from companies closely associated with the very German businesses that financed Hitler's rise to power'.

For analysts who have not taxed their brains to unravel how the Illuminati operate - seeking always to place their agents in high places and manipulating both sides of a given dialectic to their own advantage and in the furtherance of the agentur's long-range criminal global hegemony strategy - this revelation may have come as a surprise. It illustrates that at the highest Illuminati levels, the false dialectic does not apply.

PRESCOTT BUSH AND JEWISH SUPPORT FOR THE NAZIS

Specifically, the US banking institution of which Prescott Bush was a Director, Brown Brothers Harriman (BBH), acted as a US base for the German Jewish industrialist Fritz Thyssen, who helped finance Hitler in the 1930s before ostensibly falling out with him at the end of the decade. Supporting allegations reiterated in the secondary sources, 'The Guardian's' analysis confirmed evidence that Prescott Bush was also a Director of the New York-based Union Banking Corporation (UBC), which represented Fritz Thyssen's US interests, and that he continued to work for the bank even after the United States had entered the war. Furthermore, Prescott Bush was on the board of at least one of the corporations that formed part of a complex multinational network of front companies, which enabled Thyssen to move assets around the world.

Thyssen owned the largest steel and coal company in Germany, and grew wealthy from Hitler's rearmament programme between the First and Second World Wars. As one of the primary corporations in Thyssen's international corporate network, UBC worked exclusively for, and was controlled by, a Thyssen-controlled bank in The Netherlands, (which has always been a central locus of Nazi Illuminati funding: hence the alleged prominence today in this context of Dutch banks). Prescott Bush also maintained close links with the Consolidated Silesian Steel Company (CSSC), located obviously in Silesia, which is rich in minerals, on the German-Polish border. During the war, this company made extensive use of Nazi slave labour from the concentration camps, including Auschwitz-Birkenau. Documents declassified in 2004 from the National Archives link Prescott Bush to CSSC, although it is not clear whether he and UBC were still involved with the company when Thyssen's American assets were seized by the US authorities in 1942.

The National Archives are maintained at the University of Maryland, but some of the documents seen by The Guardian were made available for scrutiny by the Library of Congress. The British newspaper cited three sets of documents:

1. The Harriman papers at the Library of Congress: These show that Prescott Bush was a Director and shareholder of a number of companies involved with Thyssen, the Nazi steelmaker, who, as indicated, was of Jewish extraction.

2. The second batch of papers, located in the National Archives, is contained in Vesting Order Number 248, which records the seizure of the company's assets. The files show that on 20th October 1942, the Alien Property Custodian seized the assets of the Union Banking Corporation, of which Prescott Bush was a Director. Having gone through the books of the bank, the authorities made further seizures against two affiliates - starting with the Holland-America Trading Corporation. By November 1942, the Silesian-American Company, another of Mr Prescott Bush's ventures, had also been seized. A Memorandum written by Homer Jones, chief of the Alien Property Corporation's Investigation and Research Division, stated that the stock in UBC is held ... 'solely as nominees for the Bank voor Handel, Rotterdam, Holland, which is owned by one or more of the Thyssen family, nationals of Germany and Hungary. The 4,000 shares hereinbefore set out are therefore beneficially owned and held for the interests of enemy nationals, and are vestable by the APC. Jones recommended that the assets should be liquidated for the benefit of the Government, but in fact UBC was maintained intact and was eventually returned to the US shareholders after the war.

3. The third batch of documents, also located in the US National Archives, was contained in files concerned with the German chemical corporation and notorious manufacturer of Zyklon-B, I. G. Farben. A report issued by the Office of the Alien Property Custodian in 1942 stated, concerning the companies, that 'since 1939, these (steel and mining) properties have been in possession of and have been operated by the German Government and have undoubtedly been of considerable assistance to that country's war effort'.

The Union Banking Corporation was specifically established by Averill Harriman, the wealthy son of the railroad magnate E.H. Harriman and Prescott Bush's father-in-law, George Herbert Walker ('Bert'), whose daughter Dorothy, Prescott Bush had married in 1921, after emerging from World War I as an artillery captain. Averill Harriman was an Illuminati opportunist who squandered a considerable proportion of his inherited railroad fortune trying to exploit raw materials in Soviet Georgia, only to have his assets there confiscated under Stalin's regime, which handed him worthless paper certificates in exchange. Since 1990, many latter-day Harrimans have followed his example.

NAZI MODEL FOR HIDDEN INTERNATIONAL INTELLIGENCE SCAMS

The model for gigantic, ruthless cross-border raw materials and financial warfare transactions with criminalist overtones, which has become the norm at the hidden intelligence and intergovernmental levels today, was thus established in the 1930s, as the following background information reveals. August Thyssen-Bornemisza, Jewish founder of his family's dynasty, had made his money during the First World War, and as a direct consequence of the requirements generated by that conflict. After having contributed extensively to Germany's war efforts, he and his sons Fritz and Heinrich set up a network of overseas banks and corporations so that their assets and funds could be removed offshore, if they were to be threatened by political developments at home. In our own era of money-laundering and drug-trafficking, it is usually forgotten that a primary purpose of offshore accounts is to hide funds from acquisitive, greedy, grasping governments and their penal taxation regimes, which support uncontrolled spending.

By the time Fritz Thyssen inherited the business empire in 1926, Germany was in severe renewed economic difficulties. After hearing the Illuminati's carefully selected Adolf Shicklgruber (Hitler) speak, Thyssen was duly mesmerised. He joined the Nazi Party in 1931. In his autobiography entitled 'I paid Hitler', he admitted backing the Nazi leader when the National Socialists were still a radical fringe party undergoing Illuminati training. In 1928, Thyssen bought the Barlow Palace, Briennerstrasse, in Munich, which Hitler converted into the Brown House and set up as the National Socialist Party's headquarters. Funds for this purchase were obtained from the Jewish Thyssen's Rotterdam-based Bank voor Handel en Scheepvaart.

By the late 1930s, Brown Brothers Harriman, which claimed to be the world's largest private investment bank, and Union Banking Corporation, had bought and shipped millions of dollars' worth of gold, fuel, steel, coal and US Treasury bonds to Germany, thereby feeding and financing Hitler's war preparations. Between 1931 and 1933, UBC bought more than $8 million worth of gold, of which $3 million was shipped abroad. 'The Guardian' saw documents confirming that after UBC had been set up, it transferred $2.0 million to Brown Brothers Harriman accounts, while between 1924 and 1940 the assets of UBC averaged around $3.0 million, falling occasionally to $1.0 million These data need to be multiplied by, say, 4,000 times to approximate current degraded fiat currency equivalents.

NEW REVELATIONS FROM THE U.S. NATIONAL ARCHIVES

Thyssen's partner in United Steel Works was the Jewish steel magnate Friedrich Flick, who also owned part of IG Farben. Flick's plants in Poland made heavy use of Jewish and other slave labour from the concentration camps in Poland. According to a 'New York Times' article published on 18th March 1934, Friedrich Flick owned two-thirds of the Consolidated Silesian Steel Company (CSSC) while 'American interests' held the rest. The Guardian' reported that the released US National Archive documents reveal that Brown Brothers Harriman's involvement with CSSC was more than simply holding the shares in the mid-1930s. A former US Attorney who prosecuted Nazi war criminals in the 1970s, John Loftus, stresses the importance of the cover-up: 'How could it have gone on so successfully for half a century, and does that have implications for us today? This was the mechanism by which Hitler was funded to come to power. This was the mechanism by [means of] which the Third Reich's military industry was re-armed; this was the mechanism by which Nazi profits were repatriated back to the American owners; this was the mechanism by which investigations into the financial laundering of the Third Reich were blunted. The Union Banking Corporation was a holding company for the Nazis, for Fritz Thyssen', Mr Loftus told 'The Guardian', without referencing Thyssen's Jewish background - but presumably knowing that he was telling a British newspaper what cannot yet be published in the United States, given US subservience to interests subject to the evil powers exercisable by the criminalist Illuminati 'families'.

'At various times, the Bush family has tried to spin it, saying they were owned by a Dutch bank, and it wasn't until the Nazis took over Holland that they realized that now the Nazis controlled the parent company, which is why Bush supporters claim that when the war was over, they got their money back' - Prescott Bush having reportedly been able to sell his shares for the then gigantic sum of $1.5 million. But the American Treasury's investigations and the intelligence investigations in Europe completely belie that; it's absolute horseshit. They always knew who the ultimate beneficiaries were'.

'There is no-one alive who could be prosecuted, but they did get away with it. As a former Federal Prosecutor, I would make a case for Prescott Bush, his father-in-law (George Walker) and Averill Harriman [to be prosecuted] for giving aid and comfort to the enemy. They remained on the boards of these companies knowing that they were of financial benefit to the nation of Germany'[13].

Some intelligence analysts have (as of the first quarter of 2006) moved considerably beyond noting glaring comparisons between the behaviour and mentality of the Nazis and those of the Bush Family and the Bush II Administration. The similarities today are obvious. To begin with, the intellectual and information environment has been deliberately and provocatively contaminated by the US Information Warfare apparat with lies, distortions, diversionary red herrings and deception - through maximising the potential of the Internet and the controlled 'mainstream' media to promulgate lies and generate confusion, almost to the point at which all controlled reports and analyses have become counterproductive because the decibel level of deception 'noise' is so great that no-one knows what to believe, clearing the way for lies to become embedded as truth.

To this more sophisticated environment of Goebbelsism is perversely added a streak of ruthlessness, a self-evident absence of any mercy, an official environment of arrogant and opinionated self-regard, and abundant evidence of the 'Heart of Darkness' inadvertently revealed by intelligence sources [see page 2], reignited at intervals by further Abu Ghraib-type revelations and images*. In mid-February 2006, the Australian public television station SBS showed more abominable pictures from Abu Ghraib itself, with injured Iraqi prisoners, an apparently dead prisoner, and sexual abuse. These pictures were broadcast less than a week after the release of video footage showing British troops behaving not unlike the barbarian Americans, kicking and beating Iraqis in the southern city of al-Amarah in 2004. A Pentagon official had the temerity to inform 'The Times' (London) that the Australian broadcast threatened to exacerbate an already tense situation, with the usual cover 'line' that 'the release of these images endangers the lives of US soldiers and in the case of Iraq not just American soldiers'. While that statement was obviously accurate, there was of course no hint from the Pentagon that the pictures would not exist if the grotesque abominations had not been officially sanctioned and taught, in the tradition of Himmler, in the first place. At no stage since the barbarism of the Americans, evidently to some extent copied by the feckless British, became notorious around the world, has any indication ever emerged of a determined intention to obliterate such behaviour from the intelligence services and military units involved - for the simple reason that these abuses are indeed taught and officially sanctioned.

Intermittent broadcasts and print reproduction of these gross atrocities serve the Illuminati's hidden purpose of sensitising the whole world to brutality - which is exactly the way the German Nazis behaved. 'The Times' reported as follows:

'Al-Jazeera and Al-Arabiya aired footage, including video of a man repeatedly banging his head against a wall, photos of a hooded man in his underwear and of a naked figure lying on the floor next to what appeared to be a pool of blood. Other pictures shown on the SBS current affairs programme 'Dateline' included those of a man whose throat had apparently been slit, a group of men being forced to masturbate in front of bloodied Iraqis who had been shot, and prisoners with burns and weeping wounds'.

* On 11th March 2006, The New York Times' led its front page with a report about Ali Shalal Quaissi, who claimed to be the Iraqi in the notorious photograph of US Nazi brutality which became iconically symbolic of the United States' officially-sponsored no-holds-barred arrogance and barbarism, in which a hooded Abu Ghraib prisoner was shown standing clad in a blanket on a box with his hands attached to electrical wires. In a follow-up report published in the same newspaper on 18th March 2006, it was ambiguously implied that Quaissi was not the prisoner in question, even though in the same article, the paper reported Mr Quaissi as saying, in tears: 'I know one thing... I wore that blanket, I stood on that box, and I was wired up and electrocuted'. According to Mr Quassi's lawyer, Philadelphia-based Susan Burke, who was representing Mr Quaissi and other former prisoners in a lawsuit against civilian interrogators and translators at Abu Ghraib, 'the sad fact is that there is not only one man on the box.... Haj Ali [Mr Quaissi] is but one of many victims of the torture'. 'The New York Times' 11th March article contained the following unbelievable paragraph: 'A spokesman for the American military in Iraq declined to comment saying it would violate the Geneva Conventions to disclose the identity of prisoners in any of the Abu Ghraib photographs, just as it would to discuss the reasons behind Mr Quaissi's detention'. The reader need hardly be reminded that throughout the period 2003-06, the whole world was treated to the spectacle of US legal officials competing with one another to elaborate reasons why the United States is not bound by the Geneva Conventions in the context of the so-called global 'War on Terror'. Now, all of a sudden, the US military was relying on the Geneva Conventions in order to cover up information of legitimate public interest, not least given the preceding routine official denial that the United States is bound by the Geneva Conventions - a classic example of the double-mindedness of the lluminati and their suckers.

'Although just a handful of the images were leaked in 2004, causing perhaps the worst US public relations disaster since the invasion of Iraq, hundreds more were kept secret by the Pentagon'.

'They are now the subjects of a legal battle in the United States. The American Civil Liberties Union has sued for their release. And the whole matter is before the courts. A spokesman for Dateline declined to say how the programme had obtained the images, but said that SBS was 'confident of the credibility of the source'. A Pentagon official confirmed last night that the images were authentic'[14].

Of course, Baghdadis, who had lived under a Nazi (Ba'ath) regime since 1958, have known all along what kind of occupiers invaded their country. 'Nothing is new to us', Muhammad Shati, 34, a Baghdad telecom engineer, told 'The Times'. 'Those are the Americans we know already. They should stop giving speeches on fighting for freedom: an army of terror cannot defeat terror'[15]. However the Nazi mentality of the US repression machine, disagrees. The United States is accustomed to the 'death penalty culture', given the persistence there of a mediaeval tradition of state revenge at the official level, notwithstanding mounting revulsion among ordinary Americans at this revolting practice. On 22nd February 2006, it was reported in the US press that the execution of a prisoner was cancelled after jail officials in California could not find a doctor or nurse willing to administer the lethal injection; and similar reports are not infrequent. A film by Michael Winterbottom, reconstructing scenes of torture and abuse at Guantanamo Bay Cuba - and who has joined others, led by the UK Conservative Party's Foreign Affairs spokesman of the day, William Hague, in calling for the concentration camp there to be closed - shows prisoners being beaten, manacled to floors and subjected to deafening Satanic 'music' in solitary confinement. These are all practices that 'Svali' would recognise.

NAZI-STYLE ATROCITIES COMMITTED BY U.S. AND BRITISH CADRES

The de facto US Nazis were reported in early 2006 to be paying no attention whatsoever to any criticism of their barbaric behaviour, and actually to be engaged in expansion of the Guantanamo Bay 'facility' so that more prisoners could be housed and abused. However in March 2006, it was abruptly announced, without explanation, that Abu Ghraib - which was, after all, the most notorious of all Saddam Hussein's torture and execution prisons, a tradition that the US 'replacement' Nazis seamlessly perpetuated -was to be closed. A few days later a US intelligence source informed this Author that the Gantanamo Bay 'facility' was also soon to be closed down, but that this hadn't yet been announced. These developments, when considered in the context of certain other setbacks experienced by 'black hats' among the US criminal intelligence classes, suggested the possibility of at least a period of consolidation among the Illuminati - along the Leninist lines of 'one step forward, two steps back'. Perhaps there is even a limit to how much bad publicity the thick-skinned intelligence-criminalist thugocracy can handle. For, as we have seen, it is not exactly keen on its acknowledged 'Heart of Darkness' being revealed.

A number of former prisoners who have managed to obtain release from US Nazi prisons, including several naturalised, albeit seriously deranged or misguided, 'Britons' of Arab or North African backgrounds, have provided credible reports of the abominations perpetrated at these crude contemporary US Nazi-style concentration camps. Mourad Benchellali, who left France in 2001 for a Taliban camp aged 19, has recounted the sheer, relentless horror of his detention by the Americans at their hellish installations located deliberately (for occultic reasons) at Kandahar on the 33rd parallel in Afghanistan - and later at Guantanamo.

On 16th March 2006, George B. Mickum, a partner with the Washington law firm of Keller and Hackman, who represents Bisher al-Rawi and Jamil al-Banna, two of eight British residents held in Guantanamo, published an extended front-page report in 'The Independent' (London) in which he described the betrayal of these men by the British Government and their degrading treatment at the hands of the CIA and the US military, which models its barbaric behaviour on German Nazi practice. Mr al-Banna was reported to have said: 'When they came and arrested and handcuffed me, they were all wearing black. They even covered their heads black'. The men were taken to the notorious 'Dark Prison' in Kabul, Afghanistan, where they were 'imprisoned underground in isolation and darkness and tortured over [the space of] two weeks. They were held in leg shackles 24 hours a day. They were starved, beaten, dragged along floors while shackled, and kicked. Round-the-clock screams from fellow prisoners made sleep impossible. Subsequently they were transferred to the US Air Force base in Bagram, Afghanistan. Although they were chained hand and foot and hooded, while waiting to be transported, their captors beat them.... In Bagram, they were imprisoned and tortured for another two months. They were beaten, starved and sleep deprived.... Mr Al-Banna has repeatedly refused offers of freedom, money, and passports in exchange for false testimony. Ultimately, both men', Mr Mickum elaborated, 'were transported to Guantanamo, a trip so harrowing that a government informer, who was posing as a prisoner and had to be transported and treated the same as other prisoners, stated in a television interview that, at the time, he wished someone would shoot him. Forced to wear darkened goggles, face-masks, and earphones, chained at the ankles, handcuffed behind their backs with thin plastic that caused incredible pain, and, in some cases, lasting damage, starving and sick prisoners who had been deprived of sleep were forced to maintain a sitting position, legs forward and chained without moving for nearly 24 hours.'

'If they moved, they were beaten, kicked, hit with blunt objects.... During the first month at Guantanamo in which both were kept in strict solitary confinement, the pair were interrogated six hours per day and kept in the interrogation room for 14 hours per day, sometimes in freezing temperatures to induce hypothermia, one of the many techniques approved for use by the Bush Administration. In some cases, they were short-shackled, hand behind heels for the entire time.... Congress voted to ban torture by an overwhelming majority in December 2005, but President Bush signed the bill into law with a clarifying "signing statement" that allows him to ignore it whenever he chooses. Of more immediate concern is Congress's recent legislative reversal of the US Supreme Court's decision to allow prisoners at Guantanamo to file petitions for habeas corpus. In response to the Detainee Treatment Act, the US Government moved quickly to dismiss all of the habeas corpus cases filed by prisoners at Guantanamo, including those filed by Mr al-Rawi and Mr el-Banna. Neither man can return to the UK because their visas have expired. The British Government adamantly refused to reissue them visas or allow them to return home on humanitarian grounds. If the cases were dismissed, the US military intended to transfer Mr al-Rawi to Iraq and Mr al-Banna to Jordan. There, each will be jailed with the host country's pro-American acquiescence. Recent reconnaissance indicates [that] the US Government is negotiating with foreign governments to jail prisoners from Guantanamo indefinitely'. By this means, the US authorities were, at one stage, preparing the closure of the notorious Guantanamo Bay concentration camp with the unreasonable expectation that, with its closure, the stench of its abominations could thereby be obliterated from the public consciousness.

AN 'IN-YOUR-FACE' ESOTERIC MILITARY SYMBOL ON DISPLAY

On 19th March 2006, The New York Times carried a front-page article entitled 'IN SECRET UNIT'S 'BLACK ROOM', A GRIM PORTRAIT OF U.S. ABUSE'. The 'Black Room' was a component of a temporary detention site at Camp Nama, the secret headquarters of a shadowy military organisation known as Task Force 6-26, but which changes its name regularly to enhance its anonymity (starting out as Task Force 121 when formed in the summer of 2003, and now operating under a different designation again). According to the newspaper's report, in the windowless, jet-black garage-size room, some soldiers beat prisoners with rifle butts, yelled and spit in their faces and, in a nearly area, used detainees for target practice in a game of jailer paintball.... Placards posted by soldiers at the detention area advised: 'NO BLOOD, NO FOUL'. The slogan, as one Defense official explained, reflected an adage adopted by task Force 6-26: If you don't make them bleed, they can't prosecute for it".

'The New York Times' article was accompanied by an illustration of the image on the placard [see Figure 87, page 545], which showed a black triangle with a white hole in the centre along the lines of which were displayed the words NO/BLOOD/NO FOUL. What the newspaper failed to point out, of course, was that the triangle is the primary occult geomasonic Illuminati symbol, and that the fact that it was solid black except for the 'game hole', signified the Black nature of the abominations being routinely committed in this Black environment - where Black is universally emphasised, denoting the enduring 'Heart of Darkness' of the US intelligence community and the military. The abominations at Camp Nama 'were' replicated 'at small field outposts, in Baghdad, Falluja, Balad, Ramadi and Kirkuk.... At the outposts, some detainees were stripped naked and had cold water thrown on them to cause the sensation of drowning'. One of Saddam Hussein's bodyguards 'was forced to strip... was punched in the spine until he fainted, put in front of an air-conditioner while cold water was poured on him and kicked in the stomach until he vomited'. The narrative elaborated: 'Army investigators were forced to close their enquiry in June 2005 after they said Task Force members used battlefield pseudonyms that made it impossible [sic] to identify and locate the soldiers involved', as though the abuses were unauthorised from above (an implied lie). 'The unit also asserted that 70 percent of its computer files had been (conveniently) lost'. The newspaper reported that, imitating the Nazi tactics used by their Nazi Ba'ath predecessors, 'in early 2004, an 18-year-old man suspected of selling cars to members of the Zarqawi terrorist network was seized with his entire family at their home in Baghdad. Task Force soldiers beat him repeatedly with a rifle butt and punched him in the head and kidneys'.

'The New York Times' attributed its research to an examination of declassified documents and interviews with more than a dozen military and civilian Defense Department and other US Federal Government personnel, some of whom 'agreed to speak about their experiences and observations out of what they said was anger and disgust over the unit's treatment of detainees and the failure of Task Force commanders to punish misconduct

By ERIC SCHMITT and CAROLYN MARSHALL

As the Iraqi insurgency intensified in early 2004, an elite Special Operations forces unit converted one of Saddam Hussein's former military bases near Baghdad into a top-secret detention center. There, American soldiers made one of the former Iraqi government's torture chambers into their own interrogation cell. They named it the Black Room.

In the wtndowless, jet-black garage-size room, some soldiers beat prisoners with rifle butts, yelled and spit in their faces and, in a nearby area, used detainees for target practice in a game of jailer paintball. Their intention was to extract information to help hunt down Iraq's most-wanted terrorist, Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, according to Defense Department personnel who served with the unit or were briefed on its operations.

The Black Room was part of a temporary detention site at Camp Nama, the secret headquarters of a shadowy military unit known as Task Force 6-26. Located at Baghdad International Airport, the camp was the first stop for many insurgents on their way to the Abu Ghraib prison a few miles away. Placards posted by soldiers at the detention area advised, "NO BLOOD, NO FOUL." The slogan, as one Defense Department official explained, reflected an adage adopted by Task Force 6-28: "If you don't make them bleed, they can't prosecute for it." According to Pentagon specialists who worked with the unit, prisoners at Camp Nama often disappeared into a detention black hole, barred from access to lawyers or relatives, and confined for weeks without charges. "The reality is, there were no rules there," another Pentagon official said.

TASK FORCE 6-26 Inside Camp Nama

The story of detainee abuse in Iraq is a familiar one. But the following account of Task Force 6-26, based on documents and interviews with more than a dozen people, offers the first detailed description of how the military's most highly trained counter-terrorism unit committed serious abuses.

It adds to the picture of harsh interrogation practices at American military prisons in Afghanistan and Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, as well as at secret Central Intelligence Agency detention centers around the world.

The new account reveals the extent to which the unit members mistreated prisoners months before and, after the photographs of abuse from Abu Ghraib. were made public in April 2004, and it helps belie the original Pentagon assertions that abuse was confined to a small number of rogue reservists at Abu Ghraib.

The abuses at Camp Nama continued despite warnings beginning in August 2003 from an Army investigator and American intelligence and law enforcement officials in Iraq. The C.I.A. was concerned enough to bar its personnel from Camp Nama that August.

It is difficult to compare the conditions at the camp with those at Abu Ghraib because so little is known about the secret compound, which was off limits even to the Red Cross. The abuses ap-more aggressively' - a ridiculous observation, given that the culture of 'Black abuse' flowed from the top and was in any case inculcated into the abusers, many of whom are emotionally damaged angry young men who have experienced a mind-mapping education with zero spiritual content designed to create a nation of spiritually vacant, controllable zombies. In conversation with an expert on how the American educational system has long since been perverted by evil manipulators along German lines (as previously reviewed) into a diabolical social control conveyor belt, the Author was told that 'it's not their fault. They are full of anger' because they have been brought up as though they are animals, with no spiritual dimension at all. It was hardly surprising, therefore, that these young men, once further brutalised by the US military, treat prisoners like the animals they are themselves. The brutalisation and 'animalisation' of American youth has been paralleled by a similar process in parts of the Middle East.

UNDER SECRETARY OF DEFENSE FOR INTELLIGENCE

DATE 6/26/04

MEMO FOR Gerry Boykin

Get to the bottom of this immediately.

This is not acceptable.

I want a fuller report of action taken, etc., by Wednesday.

In particular I want to know if this is part of a pattern of behavior by TF 6-26.

Figure 88: A note written by the Under Secretary of Defense for intelligence, Stephen A. Cambone, dated 26th June 2004, to his Deputy, Lieutenant General William G. Boykin, instructing him to look into and report immediately on US military and intelligence-driven abominations at Camp Nama, adjacent to Baghdad International Airport. This note was displayed with 'The New York Times' analysis on 18th March 2006 of abuses routinely committed by the Americans against prisoners. Its purpose was doubtless to signal that such abominations are anathema to senior officials, notwithstanding evidence of a systematically inculcated Nazi-style US culture of institutionalised brutality.

BAD PUBLICITY PROMPTS SECOND THOUGHTS AT HIGHEST LEVEL

'The New York Times' article just cited conveyed the distinct impression of an officially controlled face-saving 'clean-up' operation, designed to pre-empt further bad publicity by imposing an 'official version' of events and of measures taken to 'correct mistakes' - providing another indication in the first quarter of 2006 that the chaos generated by the Nazi-style Iraq and Afghanistan invasions had exceeded whatever level of global criticism the controlled Illuminati cadres can tolerate. Taken with other indications that the immediate period of US and collaborating British neo-Nazi aggressive foreign adventurism might have been subject to very temporary revision, this report was among several that suggested a belated (insincere) rethink, for public consumption purposes anyway, at the highest levels in the White House, the Pentagon, and in Congress, which is so vulnerable to corruption. "The New York Times" prominent display, accompanying the article, of a

ADOLF EICHMANN AND AMIN AL-HUSSEINI

In the Arab world, the founding father of the Palestinian movement is usually said to be Amin al-Husseini, an associate for the founder of the Muslim Brotherhood, El-Banna. The Muslim Brotherhood was originally an operation of the German Abwehr, its purpose being to destabilise British power and influence in the Middle East. As early as 19209, Al-Husseini instigated a pogrom against indigenous Palestinian Jews. After being convicted in absentia, he was pardoned by the British Mandate Governor, the British Jew, Herbert Samuel. The Governor then proceeded to elevate Al-Husseini as Mufti of Jerusalem, thereby establishing the extraordinary tradition whereby Western leaders prefer extremists over moderates - as, for instance, in the case of the elevation and 'coronation' of the veteran Hamas terrorist Mahmoud Abbas in the context of the Palestinian Authority (the only extenuating circumstance being that Hamas is reliably reported to be controlled by Israeli intelligence - another example of this epidemic of double-mindedness).

In 1936, al-Husseini met Adolf Eichmann, one of the Jewish masterminds of the ethnic deansing offensive and shoah against the Ashkenazim Jews. The meeting took place in Palestine, where Eichmann visited for a few days. As a result of this meeting, Al-Husseini was then put on the Nazi payroll, and received Nazi funds which he used, in part, to instigate the Arab Revolt of 1937-39, according to testimony from the Nuremberg and Eichmann trials transcripts.

In 1941, Al-Husseini played a key role in instigating a pro-Nazi putsch in Iraq. This was the first of three Nazi Abwenr/Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst-sponsored coups d'etat in Iraq, designed to procure German access to Iraqi oil and to weaken the British. The business dealings between Donald Rumsfeld, President George Bush's Defense Secretary, originally of German extraction, and George Bush Sr. on the one hand, and their intelligence client Saddam Hussein on the other, proceeded seamlessly in this context - until the parties double-crossed each other, as criminalists always do. Following the collapse of the Nazi coup in 1941, Al-Husseini - one of the most hyperactive Arab intelligence provocateurs in history - helped to instigate the Fahud, or the murder campaign against the indigenous Jews of Iraq, a campaign that has been compared to the kristall-nacht in Hitler's Germany. The Jews of Iraq, very few of whom remain, are of course among the oldest inhabitants of that country, dating at least from the Babylonian captivity of around 590BC.

In November 1941, Al-Husseini travelled to Berlin to take operational orders directly from Hitler. During his visit Al-Husseini was treated like a head of state. He then spent the remaining war years in Nazi Germany, where he was officially recognised as the Head of State of a Nazi-Arab government in exile - Hitler having promised him that he would be appointed the chief administrator of the Arab world following the Nazi 'liberation'.

While in Nazi Germany, this top Arab nazi operative participated directly in in the Holocaust by preventing the exchange of Jews for German POWs, thereby ensuring their delivery to the crematoria. Al-Husseini also led the operation to train Bosnian Muslim brigades and other Muslim terrorist groups in Europe, who were involved in multiple atrocities. Al-Husseini distributed monies from the Sonderfund, representing funds looted from Jews en route to the concentration camps, sending funds to the Middle East for use in promoting Nazi and anti-Jewish propaganda.

After the war, Al-Husseini escaped to Cairo ahead of indictment at Nuremberg.

This Arab Nazi spent the rest of his life agitating against Israel, and died in Beirut in 1974. ■ peremptory note from the Under Secretary of Defense for Intelligence, Stephen A. Cambone ordering his deputy, the 'fake Christian' Lieutenant General William G. Boykin, to report back to him immediately on allegations of the abuse of detainees at Camp Nama, adjacent to Baghdad International Airport [see Figure 88, page 546], was of course calculated to imply that senior officials were opposed to these abominations - a 'line' that lacks all conviction, given the pervasive culture of abominable conduct that is not merely condoned, but inculcated into the military, and 'permitted' by the CIA's outsourced 'contractors' tasked with giving new meaning to its self-acknowledged 'Heart of Darkness'.

Nevertheless, as 'Svali' informed her debriefer, the Illuminati and their collaborators are usually (but, as may have become the case by the spring of 2006, not universally) indifferent to exposure of their 'Black behaviour'. She elaborated that the reason for this usual pattern of indifference is their knowledge that the general population will always be reluctant to believe abominations that lie so far beyond their own experience. Certainly, the Author found few signs, during discussions in the United States in March 2006, of any general revulsion at US military and intelligence excesses in this context -given the bombings, atrocities and killings of US personnel in Iraq and Afghanistan, which, for most people interviewed, provided a convenient rationale for the appallingly barbaric conduct of their military. A few people seemed uncomfortable when the subject was raised; but the usual response was to change it. Witnessed in parallel was something even more sinister: relative US official indifference to the 'public relations disasters' consequent upon the exposure of past atrocities. A similar syndrome was observable in London.

This indifference reflects the sinister reality that, as already explained, such exposures actually serve the Illuminati's evil purpose - of desensitising the entire world to abominations, death and destruction, which is their sole enduring speciality, and with which they are permanently preoccupied. After all, those who follow Lucifer are, by definition, bound to the force of death and perdition. Their 'Heart of Darkness' ensures that death is their only product. 'As righteousness tendeth to life: so he that pursueth evil pur-sueth it to his own death' [Proverbs, Chapter 11, verse 19] and to the deaths of others.

Having learned nothing from history, if they know any, the new generation of Nazis, spiritual and physical children of the 'Operation Paperclip' scientists, intelligence officers and Himmler cronies, are possessed by the same 'seething powers' as their predecessors - but are far more dangerous because of the immense accumulation of physical and (fake) fiat financial power that they control (or think they control), and because so many of them are personally compromised through blackmail. Because of their own spiritual corruption, they may believe that they have 'no alternative' but to continue with their mad project to consolidate the global hegemony of the self-appointed Illuminati elites whom they serve, and to whom they are allied, and to whom they are often bound by Masonic blood-oaths. So, comparing the Bush II regime's tactics with those of Hitler and documenting connections between Prescott Bush and the Nazis, is nothing like enough to explain why the United States is being transformed into a Fascist police state - even if this process may appear briefly, at times, to be halting or on the verge of being postponed or reconsidered. The mystery is deepened by the curious reality that President George W Bush is himself said to be far from enamoured with his father's German-oriented manipulative behaviour.

However talk of a split between the senior Busche and his son cannot be confirmed, and may represent disinformation, given repeated indications of German (DVD, Dachau) influence at the highest levels in Washington - the appointment of General Mike Heyden, who reports to John Negroponte, who allegedly reports to Bush Sr., being a case in point.

SOVIET JEWISH COMMUNIST-FASCISTS SERVING UNCLE SAMUEL

To help them impose the Fascist model, the US proto-Nazis notoriously invited two 'for-mer' KGB Generals, Oleg Kalugin (the poisoned umbrella expert, of Jewish extraction) and Alexander Karpov, former KGB Rezident at the Soviet Embassy in Washington, to join the consultancy payroll of the Department of Homeland Security in 2004. They were subsequently joined by KGB General Yevgeniy Primakov (Finkelstein), the former head of Russian external intelligence, Gorbachev-era Prime Minister, Supreme Soviet official and top intelligence and Middle East expert, who publicly rejoiced at this opportunity to come aboard the US 'gravy train'. Specifically, the Author's intelligence publication Soviet Analyst[16] reported in April 2003 that 'the appointment of Yevgeniy Primakov as a 'consultanf to the US Department of Homeland Security' was among the most alarming developments to have been monitored since President Bush Jr. came to office. 'The former KGB chief, who of course allegedly has blood on his hands 'in spades', will, among other things, provide the United States with the benefit of his unparalleled population control experience in connection with the development of a State Security (SS) Citizen Threat File, recently set up under the auspices of the US Department of Transportation (because the Transportation Department's budget was raided to finance the purchase of the computer hardware and software that was needed)'.

'Data processed through this equipment will be disseminated to a division entitled the Office of Internal Security - established by and serving the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), the Department of Homeland Security, and several other agencies. This agency, under the previously disgraced, since rehabilitated and dubiously-pedigreed Admiral Poindexter, is coordinating a colossal operation to establish 'Citizen Threat Files' on every citizen of the United States. The resulting database will incorporate credit files, medical files, political and religious affiliations, military histories, attendance at anti-Government rallies, and other dimensions of human existence. When questioned about what personal information the US authorities would actually be liable to access, the Department of Homeland Security replied that it would defeat the purpose of the programme if it were to reveal what kind of information would be sough?.

'Assisting General Primakov in the installation of this US version of the Soviet-style repressive control apparat will be General Aleksandr Karpov, the former KGB station chief (that is, Rezident) in Washington. The two Soviets, who of course continue serving the covert Communist Party of the Soviet Union, will draw substantial remuneration for their 'services'. In a recent interview, Primakov said amid cynical laughter that he couldn't wait to join the 'Pay Corps', and that a large number of 'former' KGB Generals and Colonels were lining up to join the rush to be signed up for their American official pay checks. After all, Khrushchev Jr. works for the Washington-based Heritage Foundation'.

'General Primakov, who personally spearheaded arrangements for the implementation of the GRU's global terrorism 'work' using ignorant and brainwashed Islamic radicals, was voluble when asked what all this was supposed to be about. The establishment of the State Security Citizen Threat File was just one of many steps being prepared by the US Government to tighten security in view of the terrorism threat - of which he failed to remind his interviewer that he was one of the chief Soviet architects. He volunteered that when the National Identity Card Act (NICA) is passed, the Posse Comitatus Act is overturned, and other items of repressive legislation are approved by Congress, the White House will have acquired greater control over the American people than the Kremlin could exert over the Russian people when Stalin was alive'.

'Primakov thought that was very funny, and laughed. He elaborated that he also found it highly amusing that 'all these right-wing flag-wavers' who were so anti-Communist, were now supporting a state policy involving the introduction of 'internal passports' (his words). Yes, he reiterated that the State Security Citizen Threat File and NICA were among measures being developed in order to sensitise the US population to new kinds of documentation and to the carrying of identity cards, pursuant to America introducing the Soviet policy, as he put it, of 'internal passports'.

Meanwhile the former KGB Chief, who remains a top Soviet strategist, continues to assist the GRU in prosecuting the Party's revolutionary global terrorism sub-strategy'[16]. His knowledge of what is going on in the United States is sufficiently well-honed for him to have understood that Fox News seems like a propaganda organ of the Bush Administration. In an interview in July 2004, Primakov joked: 'We had [sic] Pravda. Your Republicans have Fox News'. In June 2004, Primakov stated in a separate interview that the Bush II Administration was engaged in 'the Sovietisation of America and that when the full provisions of Patriot Act II became law, the authorities would be 'allowed' to establish an American GULAG'. As indicated in Appendix 1 on pages 612-613 the structures for the US GULAG have been in place for some years. The language of Patriot Act II said to be almost identical to that of the 1965 Soviet Internal Security Enhancement Act.

PRIMAKOV AND FRIENDS JOIN UP WITH GENERAL RICHARD SECORD

In yet another interview conducted (in early 2006), KGB General Primakov - whose code-name means that he is the primus inter pares - noted that he, Karpov and Kalugin, had joined the former East German secret police (STASI) chief, General Marcus Wolf, also of Jewish extraction, to run a newly established corporation based in downtown Sophia, Bulgaria. Sources say that the new entity's title approximates Trans-Global Security Consulting Group Limited, and that General Richard Secord, likewise of Jewish extraction, is on the firm's board. Marcus Wolf had further been co-opted as a consultant to the Department of Homeland Security where, according to misinformed or deliberately obfuscating British intelligence sources, he was supposedly being 'debriefed'. Wolf's speciality, while in charge of key components of the East German repression apparat, was to convert an estimated one-third of the population into spies - against each other, their families, and everyone else.

The objective of the Sophia-based organisation, Primakov told an intelligence-connected interviewer, is to provide ongoing training for the heads of the vast new political organisation, linked to and spawned by close associates of George Bush Sr., to be known as the Neighbourhood Watch Association network. Training will also be provided to assist the development of the new Civilian Defense Force (CDF) when fully funded. In the familiar tradition of Leninist 'candour', General Kalugin, who knows what he is talking about, is on record as having said that the intention is to form a new Gestapo in the United States. As will be reviewed again later, the STASI was and still is used as long-range cover by the successor 'Black' intelligence agency to the Abwehr, a.k.a., the Gehlen Organisation, a.k.a. DVD - Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst, based in Dachau. For confirmation that the Communist and Nazi lines' are two sides of the same dialectical coin, in the unlikely event that the reader may have momentarily forgotten this, see Figure 89 on page 551. This image provides graphic proof that Nazism (Fascism) and Communism are FALSE dialectical opposites. They were developed by 'the two Karls', as will be explained.

INSTALLATION OF 'NEIGHBOURHOOD CONTROL COMMITTEES'

The former Chairman of the Republican National Committee, Ed Gillespie, boasted in February 2006 that he had already reached his objective of recruiting at least three million 'spies' for the Neighbourhood Watch Association, who will operate Soviet-style 'neighbourhood committees' and will sit in bars and coffee shops across the country, listening for hints of prospective sedition, making notes and finding out people's names and addresses. The organisation he had put together on instructions evidently issued by Republican Party cadres has received funding from the American Freedom Association, which must not be confused with a legitimate organisation of the same name. The Foundation was said to be providing an initial $5.0 million annually to finance this 'free-standing' embryonic domestic spying network. The objective is to establish a 'private' Gestapo in the hands of the globalist criminalist Illuminati cadres who have long since seized control in the United States, but whose decisive grip on permanent power is not yet (as of 2006) 'irrevocably' cemented into place. The spy network is to be 'privatised' in order to separate it from any question of official control, and from any restrictions, in terms of what kinds of people are employed to man this sinister 'fifth column' network, such as gangsters and operatives from the criminal underworld with which the organisers are very familiar. Whether these new 'brownshirts' wearing civilian clothes will mushroom to become a free-standing Interior Ministry in Leninist competition with the Department of Homeland Security, a.k.a. Ministry of State Security, remained, in 2006, to be seen. Under the Patriot III omnibus spending legislation, the Department of Justice was expected to restart its previously suspended 'Inform on Your Neighbour' programme, upgraded to form the nucleus of parallel para-militarised and politicised Neighbourhood

Figure 89: An early Nazi Labour Day Emblem: This piece of Nazi 'memorabilia' definitively confirms that National Socialism (Nazism) was/is twinned with Communism. The emblem illustrates the young Karl Marx, a hammer and sickle, and the spread-eagled bird sitting astride an occult circle inside which is an occult swastika. The bird with its wings outstretched is an occult symbol used by the Rosicrucians [see Figure 90, page 553] and derived from the winged globe of Egypt, illustrated in a rare Rosicrucian geomasonic work by Manly P. Hall [see Figure 91, page 555]. Source: Nazi Regalia, Jack Pia, Ballantine, 1971.

Watch Association and Civilian Defense Force structures, the outlines of which were only emerging as this book was being finalised. Whatever the outcome, the models for all this frenetic secret activity are the Illuminati's Nazi and Communist formulae.

The choice of Bulgaria as the location for the 'Trans-Global Security Consulting Group Limited' was suspicious. Bulgaria is a small, poor, and totally corrupt country and, since the 1980s, has been the primary external seat of Russian, Turkish and other organised criminal enterprises, of which Bulgaria's own KINTEX is a notorious example. The country is an important transit link between 'Heroin Number 4' exports from Afghanistan to Europe - greatly boosted as a direct consequence of the American invasion, which resulted in heroin production soaring from a 'negligible' 100 tonnes under the Taliban in 2001, to over 4,500 tonnes in 2004, in conformity with the Illuminati's greed for drug-related 'pipeline' funding - to Europe and the United States. Deals are usually arranged between the Turkish Mafia intermediaries and Italian Mafia traders, who buy heroin from the Turks and ship it to Europe. They also make extensive use of the Polish port of Gdansk, assisted by Italian Mafia operatives resident in Poland[17]. For any Soviet-US 'security consulting' group to be located in Sophia therefore smells of further intelligence preparations for the proliferation of New Underworld Order corruption, even suggesting that the real purpose of the intended Neighbourhood Watch Association arrangements is actually to provide cover for unimpeded drug-trafficking, and pre-emptive precautionary structures against any official operations designed to disrupt this burgeoning criminalist activity. For make no mistake: the hegemony of the Illuminati, which is still not inevitable and which, in any case, will fail, after wreaking historically unprecedented death, chaos and destruction, presupposes the unhindered primacy of open-ended criminalism in every corner of governmental and 'free-standing' components of society. Why else was the corrupt British 'New Labour' Government engaged, in 2006, in establishing gambling houses in British provincial cities, if the intention was not to provide a bridge into Britain for US organised criminal gangs and further outlets for drug- and organised crime-related money-laundering? The point here is that the new US Reich is built and motivated by corruption, which means that the structures that its progenitors develop will corrupt themselves, as happened in Nazi Germany.

REPUBLICAN PARTY CONNECTIONS WITH THE NAZIS

In the 1930s, the US Republican Party paid for Nazi broadcasts and employed German Nazis to assist with the formulation of election campaigns. Herbert Hoover, of German extraction, reportedly conspired with top Nazi officials in Berlin to unseat President Roosevelt in the General Election held in 1940. When George Bush Sr. was Chairman of the Republican National Committee, he set up ethnic heritage groups within the Party as havens for former Nazis. He also employed known Nazi criminals on his campaign staff. Moreover, in the United States, as in Germany, Nazism has crucial Jewish connections, beyond the Jewish background of prominent figures on the political stage today. One of the most important Jewish influences on the US Nazis and so-called 'neo-cons' (who are almost all Jewish, and whose philosophy is akin to Trotskyism in many respects) was a certain German Jewish Fascist posing as a 'refugee', Leo Strauss. The Zionist mentality and the Nazi-Fascist mentality are identical, being progeny of the same genes; and there has always been a close and sinister association between Zionism and the Nazis, as is implicit in the preceding Chapter. The Zionists actually attempted to limit the choices available for European Jews to two: emigrate to Palestine (under the provisions wrung by Chaim Weizmann and his colleagues from the British Mandate) or perish in the (intended) Holocaust. This reality 'illuminates' does it not, the suppressed collaboration between senior Nazi Illuminati Jews and the German ethnic Illuminati Nazis over the industrialised mass murder 'ethnic cleansing' abomination. This collaboration was much more extensive than has yet been reported, with new glimpses of what was going on surfacing from time to time. For instance, in 1951, a Jewish doctor then employed in the Tel Aviv municipal hospital, was accused by several witnesses of brutal acts committed at Vlanow camp, where he had acted as 'assistant to the German camp commandant'. A female witness said he had beaten her unconscious, and when she had recovered, she had found her three sons, aged 12, 15 and 18, shot dead. Two weeks earlier, she said, she had seen the accused order the Ukrainian camp police to remove 30 prisoners, including her husband, who were then shot. On 8th May 1948, the Jewish Telegraph Agency reported that 'the verdict in the trial of 23 guards at the Breendouck concentration camp in Antwerp, one of the lesser-known Nazi hells, was announced here yesterday. Among the guards are three Jews, Walter Obler, Leo Schmandt and Sally Lewin. Obler and Lewin have been sentenced to death and Schmandt to 15 years' imprisonment'. Many such reports are believed by researchers to have been 'censored' by intelligence or Jewish-linked cells attached to press rooms.

As a student, Leo Strauss studied Nietzsche, Heidegger, and Schmitt, the philosophers who provided the basis for Fascism - a concept developed by one of the Two Karls' (see page 558), Professor Karl Keller, of Frankfurt University. As his studies progressed, Strauss's views became increasingly Fascist, focusing his thinking on the necessity of totalitarian government. He rejected all principles of international law and believed in maintaining the masses ignorant and in general servitude - which is being achieved in the United States and Britain 'as we speak' by means of the deliberate confusion fostered through the Internet, the fake and sterile 'celebrity culture', the proliferation of demonic 'music' (demon-noise) and Luciferian games, videos and pornography, the mass sports culture, and the myriad other cynical means of procuring the 'dumbing-down' of the general population in contemporary conditions.

Figure 90: Two Rosicrucian symbols that employ the 'spread-eagle' symbol adopted by the Nazis. As Figure 91 on page 555 shows, this symbol is borrowed from the ancient Egyptians. Egypt was and is the Biblical metaphor for 'Darkness', an 'honour' which it shares with Ba-BeAon, where Baalim (demon-gods) were worshipped. Other Rosicrucian occult symbols include a large number of Masonic images, notably one beneath which is inscribed the words: ROSICRUCIAN ILLUMINATI. The secret Rosicrucian network penetrated Freemasonry from 1617 onwards. Weishaupt's consoldiated the penetration at Wilhemlsbad in 1782.

Leo Strauss was one of the most important Nazi agents of influence to have penetrated the US structures, having left Nazi Germany in 1934 with the warm commendation of the Nazi jurist and philosopher, Carl Schmitt, who was personally responsible for arranging, in 1934, a Rockefeller Foundation scholarship for Strauss. This enabled him to leave Germany, to study first in France and then in Britain. Strauss arrived in the United States from England in 1937. After a brief spell as a research fellow in the Department of History at Columbia University, he then became a member of the graduate faculty at the New School for Social Research in 1938, which he infected with some of his weird and sick Illuminazi ideas.

ILLUMINAZI IMPERATIVE TO CONTROL THE 'MAINSTREAM' MEDIA

The New School of Social Research was founded in 1919, a year after Willard Straight, the father of Michael Straight, who was associated with the 'Cambridge Five' (see page 560) had died during the post-First World War influenza pandemic. Straight Sr., who had been a partner of J. P. Morgan, thought that the United States' security depended upon the British fleet, and that it was in the United States' best interests to enter the First World War. Naturally, he also saw the war as a brilliant opportunity for US bankers and industrialists, as always, to make substantial gains inter alia at Britain's expense. In 1915, Straight Sr. had left the Morgan empire for a position within the American International Corporation, which was affiliated with National City Bank. A year earlier, Straight had founded and funded the 'New Republic', a left-wing current affairs magazine which his son Michael was to edit years later. J. P. Morgan became obsessed with the media during the First World War - emulating Lenin's parallel obsession with publishing, newspapers, film and theatre as propaganda vehicles - and willingly helped to finance the journal, for three interesting reasons which typify the thinking of the 'Illuminati'. First, the journal would keep him informed of the thinking in left-wing circles, given the assumed imminent ascendancy of Communism, which he seemed to know all about: he even financed an agent inside the US Communist press. Secondly, Morgan believed that a journal such as Straight's 'New Republic' would allow the Left (component of the Left-Right dialectic) to blow off steam, thereby providing a safety valve. Thirdly, his calculation was that sponsorhip of the journal would give him the power of veto over any plans originated from the Left.

Illuminist J. P. Morgan's sponsorhip and control of the 'New Republic'- an operation remarkably similar to the British Rothschilds' interest in 'The Economist', the Fabian journal, complete with its red masthead, which sells itself as an objective journal of international affairs - was only one of the steps he took to procure control over the media. In 1915, he brought 12 newspapermen together (12 newspapermen + J. P. Morgan = a Council of 13) and commissioned them to determine how the US national press could be brought under control; and his panel decreed that all that was necessary was to achieve control over 25 of the most influential papers. Morgan's immediate response was to send agents to BUY the editorial policies of the 25 selected and targeted newspapers. Morgan also used his deep pockets to finance the American Legion and to craft it into a trade union-busting and agitprop organization of hired thugs who ran amok during the 'Red Scare' of 1919, terrifying and murdering countless trade union leaders and leftists. Of course, these details of the United States' early Nazi/Fascist 'brownshirt' history have been conveniently 'forgotten' and are never mentioned in 'polite society'.

It is usually asserted that the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR) is an offshoot of, or 'controlled by' (or both) the Royal Institute of International Affairs (Chatham House), Britain's premier globalist think-tank. This is a remarkably long-lived piece of disinformation. In reality it began as yet another Morgan (Illuminati) front group, aimed at influencing the American population. It emerged specifically during the First World War from the Rhodes Roundtable Group. Most of the earliest members were Morgan employees who had met their British counterparts during the Paris Peace Conference. The CFR was meant to be a bridge between the Morgans and the Rockefellers, with the Rockefellers providing much of the necessary finance. As the Rockefellers' fortune began to outgrow that of the Morgans, the Council on Foreign Relations came to be more dominated by the Rockefellers. The links between the Morgan and Rockefeller dynasties were further promoted by the Yale Skull and Bones 'patriarch' Percy Rockefeller, one of the darkest US Illuminati grandees of his age, who served on the Board of Morgan Guaranty Trust.

Meanwhile Leo Strauss remained at the Morgan-connected New School of Social Research for ten years. In 1948, he accepted a position at the University of Chicago, founded by the Rockefellers, which became the source of the theory of 'monetarism', a mechanism for the 'control' of the expanding fiat money supply. Significantly, this 'economic philosophy' did not 'take off' until after the collapse of the Bretton Woods system, which gave rise to the uncontrolled expansion of the US dollar money supply. It first gained a foothold in the United Kingdom, not least as a consequence of detailed coverage published in successive issues of 'International Currency Review', and became the dominant theme of Mrs Thatcher's Governments.

In the United States, monetarism was preached by Milton Friedman, and his teachings fell on decidedly receptive Federal Reserve Board ears, given the need for an intellectual 'discipline' to govern and control the expansion of the fiat money supply both domestically and internationally. In the event, the expansion of fiat money has been hidden from general public view because it has taken place primarily in the intergovernmental sector, the banking system, and with the use of offshore corporations, banks and accounts - which is where the New Underworld Order of the Illuminati has achieved its most profound impact and where it has sown the seeds of its own destruction.

Figure 91: The Winged Globe of Egypt. This symbol, which appears over the pylons or gates of many ancient Egyptian palaces and temples, is emblematic of the three persons of the Egyptian Trinity. It can thus be seen from Figures 89 and 90 that (a) Nazism is the dialectically opposite 'wing' of Communism and (b) it was/is an illuminati operation deriving its occultic symbology via Rosicrucianism from Egypt (= The Darkness'). Hence, the Rosicrucians launched the 'New World' Order, Communism and Nazism as mechanisms for the prosecution of their global hegemony objectives. The wings, the serpents and the solar orb in the image above are the insignia of Ammon, Ra, and Osiris. This illustration, originally from Maurice's 'Indian Antiquities', was reproduced in the extremely rare Rosicrucian edition of the late (1920s) US occultic Masonic authority, Manly P. Hall's 'Encyclopedic Outline of Masonic, Hermetic, Qabbalistic and Rosicrucian Symbolical Philosophy', 1928. Only about 100 copies were of this work were printed (by the H. S. Crocker Company Inc., San Francisco). It was intended only for high-level adepts.

Not only was Strauss a fanatical Jewish promoter of Fascist ideology, but his entry into the United States and his work there for most of his life was supported financially by two of the most powerful American Fascist-Illuminati families. The Rockefellers' Fascist credentials are extraordinary. For instance, the Rockefeller-owned Standard Oil Company did business with the Nazis during the Second World War; while it was the Rockefeller Foundation that provided the funding for much of the Nazi regime's research into eugenics, including funding for the occultic research into twins conducted in the concentration camps by Dr Mengele and his colleagues. The German Himmlerian scientists' fascination with the minds of twins is among the most sinister of the Nazis' Luciferian preoccupations, which has long been transferred to the United States.

Leo Strauss's legacy within the ideological intelligence and 'neo-con' communities in the United States is extensive. For quite simply, Leo Strauss passed on his fervent Fascist totalitarianism to a generation of figures who duly achieved positions of influence and power, and whose Nazi mentality is in the ascendant. Many 'neo-cons' serving in the Bush II Administration or in the American Enterprise Organization, which funded the notorious Project for the New American Century (PNAC) which promoted unilateral military intervention in defiance of international law and public opinion, were students and followers of Leo Strauss. It was during Strauss's tenure at the University of Chicago that David Rockefeller and David Ashcroft received degrees from the University of Chicago.

THE CHICAGO SCHOOL AND AN ECONOMIC POLICY OF RUIN

The Rockefeller family not only funded Strauss but have been instrumental in helping to destroy Third World economies. Several respected analysts have concluded that the Rockefellers have used the University of Chicago and their various family foundations to promote what, in the Third World context, has often led to an economic policy of ruin. The laissez-faire economics promoted by the Chicago School has failed numerous times in the past, and was one of the leading causes of the 1929 stock market crash and the resulting Great Depression. Such economic policies only lead to global Fascism and corporate rule, considered objectives of the Rockefeller and other Illuminati families.

One of the most successful operations sponsored by the Rockefellers and their allies fostering a latent Fascist mindset in the United States and Britain, has been their effective control over economic thinking. During the 1920s, the German-speaking Jewish academics Ludwig von Mises and Friedrich A. Hayek, who became well-known economists, rose to prominence assisted by Rockefeller funding. Von Mises toured the United States in 1926, thanks to sponsorship by the Laura Spelman Rockefeller Foundation, and successfully promoted the views of the Austrian (to become the Nazi) School of Economics. Von Hayek personally tutored David Rockefeller in economics, and in 1950, Von Hayek was brought to the United States to teach at the University of Chicago, as Professor on the Committee of Social Thought. One intelligence report states: 'This was an exceptionally dangerous position for a man that held the views Hayek held'. In 1945, Hayek's poorly written book 'The Road to Serfdom' openly attacked the concept of the nation state. Lo and behold, this 'right-wing' tutor was teaching the same doctrine as Lenin - a fact that should come as no surprise to us, given that Leninism and Fascism are simply two dialectical FALSE 'opposites' manipulated and controlled (behind the curtain like the Wizard of Oz) by the Illuminati -just as the so-called right-wing capitalist bankers J. P. Morgan and the Rothschilds financed left-wing publications. Von Hayek argued that the nation state was a hindrance to peace, while socialism presupposed totalitarianism; so he proposed a form of totalitarianism to take the place of the nation state, namely a supranational authority or World Federation consisting exclusively of the (corrupt) financial elite.

In case the governing structures of the existing nation states and even of the institutionally corrupt European Union Collective should fail to advance such a prospect with sufficiently decisive momentum, the 'financial elite' have long since resolved to drive towards this outcome on their own initiative - which explains why so many shadowy new financial networks and structures are springing up and being developed, that have only tenuous relationships with the nation states within which they are being established. These networks, which dispose of and handle flows-of-funds that dwarf the Gross National Products of many nation states, consider themselves to be 'stateless'. They are 'needed', inter alia, to distribute the vast and ever-accumulating flows of secret funds that are being generated by the drug-trafficking sector and as a consequence of clever untaxed exploitation of the Babylonian fiat money banking system. As this hidden process proliferates, centres of financial strength are developing within the framework of existing political structures which command buying and financial distribution powers placing them effectively in a higher echelon than the nation states in which they operate.

THE MALEVOLENT MINDSET OF FRIEDRICH VON HAYEK

In 1947, Friedrich Von Hayek created the Mont Pelerin Society, consisting of members the European financial elite, as a first step towards the realisation of the supranational authority he had written about in his book 'The Road to Serfdom'. This 'wholesale' organisation has, over the succeeding years, created numerous 'retail' 'conservative' think-tanks that promote free-market, laissez-faire policies on behalf of the Establishment (i.e., in the shadows, the Illuminati). Among such 'retail' think-tanks it has spawned have been the Heritage Foundation (1973), which behaves like a mouthpiece for CIA policies, the Fraser Institute (1974), the Manhattan Institute (1977) and the Pacific Institute for Public Policy Research (1978). It is very likely that the London-based Centre for Policy Studies, founded by the late Sir Keith Joseph, Mrs Thatcher's in-house guru, and directed for a time by Sir Alfred Sherman, a former Communist, has a similar origin. Since 1969, most of the Nobel Prizes for Economics have been awarded to promoters of laissez-faire economics - despite its spectacular Third World failures, and its built-in tendency to expand the loan portfolios of the Illuminati-friendly banks.

The connection between the University of Chicago and Fascism was vividly illustrated in Chile, when the 'boys from Chicago', disciples of Milton Friedman, destroyed the economy and reduced Chileans to near-serfdom under President Pinochet's version of the Nazi utopia - where dissent was eliminated by 'death squads'. It is not yet clear, but soon may be, how far away from such a Fascist outcome Britain and America were when this book was being finalised in 2006: but that both countries had moved far down the same road was becoming evident to a widening public as both Governments floundered amid the chaos they created, to begin with, in the former Nazi state of Iraq.

Friedrich Von Hayek's prescription requires corporations to assume effectively the status of sovereign nations, while the underlying nation states are reduced to the standing of quislings of the corporate state and enforcers of the laws that they require. Many powerful US 'Trotskyite' 'neo-cons' linked to the official structures are cloned with the mindset of Von Hayek, due to the fact that they believe in Mandeville. Never heard of him? Von Hayek rejected the truth that Man is created in the image of God[18], and traced his philosophical ancestry to the early 18th century Satanist, Bernard Mandeville.

THE DIALECTICAL WORK OF GERMANY'S 'TWO KARLS'

Two 'rival' but instrumental 'philosophies' were developed by the Illuminati controllers in the 19th century, to assist with the acceleration of their mad plans. At the very same time that Karl Marx (Moses Mordecai Levi) was writing the 'Communist Manifesto' under the direction of one group of Illuminists, the Jewish Professor Dr Karl Ritter of Frankfurt University was developing the Antithesis under instructions from another cadre of the Illuminati - so that those directing the long-range strategy at the highest levels could, in accordance with the perverse logic intended, exploit the differences between these two opposing 'mechanistic forces' to divide larger and larger components of the human race into opposing camps so that they could be armed and then enticed to destroy each other, along with their political and religious institutions. The evil work started by Professor Karl Ritter was continued by the nihilist German Illuminati Magus and philosopher Friedrich Wilhelm Nietzsche (1844-1900), and by Heidegger, and Schmitt, and was elaborated into Fascism en route to National Socialism, thus providing the controlling elite with the desired 'Black Regime' tools for the fomentation of the First and Second World Wars.

Figure 89 on page 551 shows definitively that Nazism and Communism are two gross manifestations of the same Luciferian 'Black' abomination. The early Nazi Labour Day emblem shows a youthful Karl Marx, a hammer and sickle, and a bird with its wings outstretched perched on an orb inside which is engraved a Nazi swastika.

Figure 90 on page 553 illustrates two Rosicrucian symbols that employ the 'spread-eagle' symbol used by the Nazis; and Figure 91 on page 555 reveals the original source of the 'Winged Globe of Egypt', displaying the actual derivation of these occult symbols: they are taken from 'The Darkness'. It was out of 'The Darkness (symbolised by ancient Egypt, where the civilisation was in thrall to the cult of death) that the children of Israel were led towards 'the land of milk and honey' - symbol for the light of the true God, away from and the opposite to, the darkness of Lucifer. According to Professor Rev. Sir Henry Chadwick[19], the 'milk and honey' metaphor would have been easily understood by the Israelites, since it was used in contemporary pagan mystery rites. The 'Exodus' from 'The Darkness' towards the 'land of milk and honey' is a living, real-time historical metaphor for the work of God in leading each of us towards the Truth, if we so wish.

Between 1859 and 1871, the American Satanist and Magus, Albert Pike, who was certainly 'possessed' and was able, as we have seen, to summon up evil spirits, elaborated a 'Blueprint for Global Revolution' involving three massive, successive upheavals or revolutions, which he thought would catapult the Illuminist conspiracy to its final stage during the 20th century. In the event, everything of course went badly wrong - with the possibly unintended Cold War stand-off, for instance, seriously undermining the timetable of his maddened successors; so a catastrophe was launched at the beginning of the 21st century in order to reignite and re-kick-start the World Revolution and to restore it so that it would conform more closely to the Blueprint. The 9/11 attacks were designed to set the agenda for the whole of the 21st century; and given the purported Islamic connection, clearly represent a Luciferian determination by the conspirators to generate the conditions for Pike's 'third conflagration'.

Most of Albert Pike's evil planning work was conducted in a 13-room mansion that he had built in Little Rock, Arkansas, which 'just happens' to have been the seat of the Clintons before Bill Clinton was elevated (by the Illuminati, of which he is a key member) to the US Presidency. Little Rock is also the home town of the Rose Law Firm, which is allegedly a continuing hyperactive servant of the secretive US Illuminati structures.

THE THREE CALAMITIES PLANNED BY ALBERT PIKE

As the episode involving Sister Ingersoll (see page 286) makes clear, General Albert Pike was certainly 'possessed' - a condition brought about by the scale of the slaughter over which he presided during the American Civil War, and by his repeated indulgence in occult seances and the summoning up of evil spirits at Masonic events. Pike concentrated his evil brain on developing practical plans for replicating the slaughter he had generated and witnessed during the Civil War, on the world stage. Experts believe that Pike was actually communicating with evil spirits when he developed these plans; but this Author would go further, suggesting that he was reflecting the intentions of Satan himself. According to his Blueprint, the third and so-called 'decisive' Luciferian conflict was to be fomented by deploying the 'actives' and agentur of the Illuminati to pit the Jews against radicalised Islam, so that these two opposing forces would destroy themselves. Although Pike appears not to have been of Jewish extraction, Giuseppe Mazzini, his partner in global criminality, certainly was: so here we have another extraordinary piece of evidence that a small minority of controlling Jews seem to have 'no problem' when it comes to plans for the partial destruction of members of their own race*.

Today, we can see clearly that much of the residue of Pike's first two calamities, which certainly 'changed' the world beyond recognition, have ostensibly been dismantled - and the dark forces and 'Dark Actors Playing Games' associated with them duly redeployed in preparation for Albert Pike's third, and 'final', intended global cataclysm, through the manipulation and leveraging of the differences between Zionist Jews and that parallel Luciferian invention, Islam. This explains the deliberate exploitation and further mobilisation of Islamic 'terror' and the artificially and instrumentally fomented tensions that are plaguing the world today. Within and behind this framework, the Nazi International intelligence strategists based at Dachau compete or collaborate to leverage their long experience of mobilising the Islamic fanaticism they have evoked, in the interests of long-range Pan-German hegemony strategy, which complements that of the Khazarian Illuminati and may for all practical purposes be at times merged with it.

On 15rd August 1871, Albert Pike informed his revolutionary colleague Giuseppe Mazzini that after the Third World War of global upheaval has ended, those who aspire to undisputed world domination will provoke the greatest social cataclysm that the world has ever known. The letter in which this demonic curse is spelled out is held in the British Museum library, and reads, in part, as follows:

'We shall unleash the Nihilists and Atheists, and we shall provoke a formidable social cataclysm which in all its horror will show clearly to the nations the true effect of absolute atheism, origin of slavery and the most bloody turmoil. Then everywhere, the citizens, obliged to defend themselves against the world minority of revolutionaries, will exterminate those destroyers of civilisation, and the multitude, disillusioned with Christianity (the True manifestation of which cannot be destroyed), whose deistic spirits will be from that moment without compass, anxious for an ideal, but without knowing where to render its adoration, will receive the true light through the universal manifestation of the pure doctrine of Lucifer, brought finally out into public view, a manifestation which will result from the general reactionary movement which will follow the destruction of Christianity and atheism, both conquered and terminated at the same time'. (Note this clear, perverse affirmation that Luciferians are not atheists - Ed.).

*Most Jews would be horrified to know this, and rightly so: but the evidence of this destructive Levitical/ Pharisaical/radical Rabbinical mentality is well documented, albeit kept under wraps. It was most abhorrently summed up by Maurice Samuel in the following ghastly 21 words: "We Jews, the destroyers, will remain the destroyers forever... Nothing that the Gentiles do will meet our needs and demands' ['Maurice Samuel: 'You Gentiles', 1924, cited by Douglas Reed, 'The Controversy of Zion', Veritas Publishing Company Ltd., Western Australia, page 107]. Although this statement directs vituperative hatred towards non-Jews, minds and souls that contain such hatred cannot be relied upon not to vent it upon their own people, as well: which is unfortunately what a significant number of Jewish Nazis did during the barbaric Third Reich period.

A direct link between Lenin and Albert Pike, which proves the Illuminist-Masonic origins of Soviet Communism (evident enough from the multiple Masonic symbolism visible in and around the Kremlin) can now be presented. A passage in Lenin's 'Collected Works', which were of course compiled and published before the First World War, reads as follows: 'The World War (i.e., as it turned out, of 1914-1918 - Ed.) will see the establishment of Communism in Russia; a Second World War will extend its control over Europe; and a Third World War will be necessary to make it worldwide'. The central phase of Lenin's forecast was almost fulfilled by the outcome of the Second World War, after the secretly revolutionary American controllers had deliberately permitted the revolutionary Soviets, originally funded by Khazarian Wall Street money, to extend the frontiers of Communism to the middle of Europe. With the removal of the Berlin Wall and the iron Curtain, and subsequent events, the Leninist strategists took 'one step forward, two steps back', to clear the way for preparations for the third intended conflagration envisaged by both Pike and Lenin - two rats out of the same sack.

One of most encouraging features of the bleak picture painted hitherto is that the flluminati are reliably reported - inter alia by 'Svali' - to be unhappy with their situation. Buried within that finding is the reality that, notwithstanding the brainwashing and Satanic abuse that so many Illuminati cadres have suffered in the past, the mind manipulators appear, on the basis of anecdotal evidence, to have been unable to obliterate the consciences of their victims, however dulled they may be. The Author has had personal, direct experience of one such victim, whose 'MK-ULTRA' personality had been deliberately split so many ways, that one had to be permanently on guard that his 'handler' would not 'trigger' a violent reaction on demand, or that a given word or phrase might have the same consequence. This deeply damaged criminal intelligence operative clearly retained a vivid sense of right and wrong, even though, when triggered or drugged, he would always show signs of intending to pursue the aiminal, evil course[20]. In the same way, the offspring of Illuminati figures often come to understand, at least in part, the error of their parents' ways - and are even, as in the case of Michael Straight, the son of Willard, able to attain a degree of belatedly valuable discernment,

MICHAEL STRAIGHT AND THE CAMBRIDGE 'APOSTLES'

Writing in his autobiography 'After Long Silence'[21], Michael Straight reported that in the autumn of 1936, he was introduced to a secret society calling itself the Cambridge Conversazione Society, whose members were known as The Apostles. Straight reported[22] that this secret society - like Skull and Bones, Scroll and Key et al at Yale (and similar secret societies designed to corrupt youth at other US universities) - had been founded in the nineteenth century. 'Its members included most of the University's great men'. The source of this information (about German flluminati penetration at Cambridge) was an undergraduate contemporary of Straight's called David Champernowne. 'I asked if I might be told the names of some of the members of the society. David pledged me to secrecy, then told me that Keynes was its most influential member. Denis Robertson was a member; so were Sir John Sheppard, the Provost of Kings; G. M. Trevelyan, the historian; the novelist. E. M. Forster; and the philosopher. G. E. Moore. Some of my friends were members, David added: Victor Rothschild, for example, and Guy Burgess and Anthony Blunt'. Burgess and Blunt were of course members of the notorious 'Cambridge Five' ring of moles, hitherto always assumed to have been agents for the Soviets. But as will now be revealed, they had 'other roles', as well - just as, in the later historical context, the STASI has provided deep cover for Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst (DVD).

Michael Straight then revealed that to join 'The Apostles', candidates had to take the equivalent of a blood oath. In Britain's more refined society, the pagan ritual initiation rites associated with Skull and Bones appear either not to have been de rigeur, to have fallen out of use, or never to have been instituted; alternatively, Michael Straight has not revealed the full extent of the necessary occult pagan rites for initiation into The Apostles. But he did confirm that members were bound by a ghastly oath:

'We met in Keynes' rooms. I held up my right hand and repeated a fearful oath, praying that my soul would writhe in unendurable pain for the rest of eternity if I so much as breathed a word about the Society to anyone who was not a member. It seemed a bit harsh, but Sheppard' [WHO WAS PROVOST OF KINGS, REMEMBER - THUS REPLICATING THE PARALLEL DIRECT AND CORRUPT INVOLVEMENT OF THE GOVERNORS OF YALE COLLEGE IN SKULL AND BONES] who carried a cushion with him wherever he went [sic!], patted me with his free hand and told me not to be alarmed. "You see", he explained, "our oath was written at a time when it was thought to be most unlikely that a member of the society would speak to anyone who was not Apostolic"'.

'I asked Sheppard how he would define the term Apostolic. He beamed at me in his childish way, "One must be very brilliant and extremely nice!" he said'[23].

Straight's subsequent prose leaves no doubt that the reader is expected to understand the homosexual overtones prevalent in this milieu - not least given that the occult ceremony took place in the rooms of John Maynard Keynes, a notorious homosexual. So, IN CAMBRIDGE AS AT YALE, a secret society, established in the 19th century, had been engaged for generations in corrupting young men and binding them together for lifetimes of worldly, self-interested communion, on the basis of ghastly, occult oaths (and in the United States, at least, a prolonged series of abominable pagan rituals). Such oath-taking is forbidden by Jesus Christ in explicit terms:

'Again, ye have heard that it hath been said by them of old time, Thou shalt not forswear thyself, but shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths; But I say unto you, swear not at all; neither by heaven; for it is God's throne; Nor by the earth; for it is his footstool; neither by Jerusalem; for it is the city of the great King. Neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black. But let your communication be, yea, yea; Nay, nay; for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil[24].

Michael Straight elaborated that 'one of the Apostles who came back to Cambridge for our meetings was Guy Burgess.... As an undergraduate, Guy had been a member of the Communist cell in Trinity. I did not know that. He had broken with his Communist associates in 1934 in a manner that some of his friends found bizarre. That was also unknown to me. I knew only that he lived in London [and] that he was working for Captain Jack Macnamara, a Right-Wing Member of Parliament who had close ties to the Nazis. In a sidelong phrase, Guy would joke about the homosexual encounters he had taken part in with Macnamara and his Nazi friends. In a moment of elated intoxication, he would hint that he had learned something of importance through the indiscretion of a Nazi diplomat'.

'There was a suggestion that Guy was up to something; but what? He was close to the Rothschilds; were they supporting him? Jews were deeply concerned about the developing ties between Hitler's agents and the Conservative Party. So were others. For those ties were of immense potential significance. If the Conservatives were resolute in resisting German expansion, peace might be prolonged. But if a Conservative Government established secret ties to Hitler...'.

The Anglo-German Link, established by... Admiral Sir Barry Domville, was too disreputable to sponsor an alliance that was in the making. The Anglo-German Fellowship, in contrast, was led by powerful men. The Prince of Wales was known to favor closer ties with Germany. The Cliveden Set shared his views, and it included the hard core of the Conservative Party. Its aims were never discussed in public, but the opposition of students like myself to rearmament stemmed in part from an intuitive sense that the Government was rearming not to resist Hitler's armies but to divert them to the East.... What was Guy really up to? No-one asked him. Most of us were interested in politics; he had to wedge his way to the center of the political stage. Some of us were ambitious; he had to obtain power to satisfy his fantasies. He dreamed of using power for his own, capricious ends'.

'In his guise as Captain Macnamara's secretary, Guy pointed to Fascism as the wave of the future. He voiced no such opinions in the meetings of The Apostles. In any discussion of ideas, he was always ready with an apt quotation, an amusing anecdote, a suggestive analogy, a mocking riposte. If the question before the society was political, he spoke in metaphors that were distant and obscure. If he was challenged to state his own convictions, his bright blue eyes would widen. He would look at the challenger with a beguiling smile, and then speak of other things'[25]. Burgess et al were Nazis.

'CAMBRIDGE FIVE' EXPOSED AS ABWEHR AGENTS

In the autumn of 2005, the Author was informed by a British intelligence contact that elements of MI5 had reached the conclusion that Burgess, Maclean, Blunt and other British traitors, hitherto always believed to have worked for the Soviet Union, were in fact long-term agents of the German Abwehr who had found themselves 'stranded' following Hitler's de facto repudiation of the Molotov-Ribbentrop Pact. According to this interpretation, the British traitors Burgess and Maclean were thrown as a consequence upon the 'mercies' if Lavrentii Beria, Stalin's MVD secret police chief, who has been exposed by British intelligence as a long-term Abwehr mole working at the highest level of the Soviet Government. Beria sought supreme power immediately following the mysterious death of Stalin, but was arrested at Khrushchev's instigation during a risky operation in June 1953. According to a report from the US Embassy in Moscow, on the afternoon of 27th June 1953, 12 armoured personnel carriers, 36 motorcycles, twenty T34 tanks, 23 SU 100 self-propelled guns and 12 maintenance vehicles could be seen moving along Bol'shaia Sadovaia Street'[26]. The reason for this deployment was that Khrushchev and 'the coup plotters, improvising as they went along, were in considerable danger for the next few days, until the Beria forces could be subdued, and any potential challenges resisted. Although they tried to keep the arrest top secret, word was doubtlessly getting around and they could not be sure what the repercussions would be'. Khrushchev could not rely on colleagues in the Praesidium and effectively 'bounced' it into going along with the move against Beria, who may have been shot in June. Accounts of his death vary and have never been clarified, and neither have analysts yet focused upon Beria's long association with the Abwehr - hints of which emerged when the Praesidium of the Soviet

Council of Ministers was shown a document on 2nd June 1953, drafted and signed by Lavrentii Beria, entitled 'Measures to Improve the Political Situation in the GDR' which made the following recommendations to the East German Communist leaders:

'(1) Abandon the policy of forced construction of Socialism; (2) Work for the creation of a united, democratic, peace-loving and independent Germany; (3) Stop forcing the creation of agricultural cooperatives, which have met with great resistance from the peasants; (4) End the policy of eliminating private capital, which is premature, and draw private capital into key areas of the East German economy, including the agricultural sector; (5) Introduce broad steps to improve the financial system; and (6) Take broad measures to ensure individual citizens' rights and put an end to unjust and cruel judicial treatment; review those already in prison'[27]. Implementation of this document would have represented a radical dismantling of overt Communism and therefore a threat to the power structure in the Soviet Union itself, as well as throughout Eastern Europe. In other words, Beria attempted to implement the strategy finally unveiled more than a generation later under the cold eye of Beria's fellow Illuminati Khazarian, Mikhail Gorbachev, believed to have remained in charge of Soviet global intelligence strategy as late as 2005.

Given the Abwehr's penetration of Stalin's structures at the highest level, it would have been extraordinary if similar penetrations had not occurred within the supreme structures of other Great Powers, especially the United States and Britain. In the United States, the Abwehr secured the services of innumerable agents, from the Dulles Brothers and corrupt intelligence officers to the Nazi scientists brought to the United States under 'Operation Paperclip' and in subsequent years. But German influence and penetration of US structures should realistically be traced back at least to the foundation of Skull and Bones at Yale in the early 1830s; while any definitive analysis of it would have to include the activities of the Bush Family and of the academic penetrations by Von Mises, Von Hayek and Leo Strauss, already mentioned.

It would also need to take account of the previously mentioned indications that Dr Henry Kissinger, despite his known Soviet codename BOR, is alleged to be a primary US handler for Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst, Dachau, as well as occupying a high occult Illuminati status - not least as the 'mentor' of George Bush Sr., and the official who 'persuaded' (ordered?) President Ford (Leslie Lynch King Jr.) to remove William Colby as Director of Central Intelligence, and to replace him with George Bush Sr., affirmed by intelligence sources to be nothing less than the head of DVD. This and other sensational findings were reportedly established when a team of operatives attended the Munich Beer Festival in October 2005, aided by a satellite positioned overhead. Their real purpose was to identify visitors and personnel entering and leaving the nearby DVD headquarters.

GERMAN PENETRATION AT HIGHEST LEVEL IN BRITAIN

In mid-October 2005, 'International Currency Review' exposed the late Sir Edward Heath, the British Prime Minister who died on 17th July 2005, as having been a long-term Abwehr agent. The expose revealed that 'within a matter of days of Heath's death on 17th July 2005 at the age of 89, the Editor of this service received two separate confirmations, both from British intelligence sources, that Edward Heath was a long-term agent of German (Nazi) intelligence. In fact Edward Heath betrayed his country for 60 years - the longest penetration in history. To remain undiscovered for 60 years is an achievement without parallel in the sordid history of geopolitical intelligence'.

Balliol College, consisting of himself, Roy Jenkins, Geoffrey Rippon and Arthur (Madron) Seligman, who were together at Oxford University'.

All were recruited through or by a German intelligence agent working inside the College - Arnold Toynbee. Roy ('Woy') Jenkins (subsequently, Lord Jenkins of Hillhead) later became the Chancellor of the Exchequer in Wilson's Labour Government and thereafter the President of the European Commission (EC), while Geoffrey Rippon was the co-signatory together with Edward Heath of the United Kingdom's Treaty of Accession to the European Communities in January 1972, which led to Britain becoming a member of the EEC on 1st January 1973. Notwithstanding this, in February 1972, the Second Reading of the EEC legislation in the House of Commons was approved by a majority of only eight, 'in an atmosphere that degenerated into fisticuffs'.

'Arnold Toynbee's recruitments became the most successful German intelligence penetration operation ever directed at the United Kingdom, with three members of the Oxford Ring playing central roles in forcing Britain, predominantly against its will, into the German-sponsored European political and economic collective', which, as is partially reviewed on pages 567 et seq., is a hotbed of corruption.

'Both Edward Heath and Geoffrey Rippon received secret payments in exchange for their signatures on the accession document, setting the scene for subsequent corrupt payments for similar services rendered by some of their successors. For the odious intergovernmental system of secret, intelligence-managed 'Black Operations' geopolitical 'facility fees' or special corrupt payments, was already well established at the beginning of the 1970s'. According to (he Author's ongoing researches, it has become the norm.

'Edward Heath was a German (Nazi) agent who became Prime Minister of Great Britain. As soon as he was unexpectedly voted into power in 1970, he immediately set about to fulfil his secret instructions to bamboozle the British people and the House of Commons (which he did by perpetrating a number of gross lies that have since been exposed) into pleading for and accepting membership of the secretly German-sponsored political collective. And the initiators and directors of this project were the superior brains at the Madrid-based Nazi International, a.k.a. the German Geopolitical Centre, reviewed below' [see pages 573 et seq.].

'The Author remembers actually standing inside Downing Street, as it was possible to do in those days, and watching the newly elected Prime Minister entering Number 10 in triumph on the day of his election, 18th June 1970, after securing a narrow victory over the Labour Party led by Harold Wilson, having started at a clear disadvantage in the opinion polls. The so-called 'Conservatives' won office with an overall majority of 30 seats'.

'Heath first entered the Westminster Parliament with a tiny majority of 133 votes in the then marginal seat of Bexley, which he held until he belatedly retired from the House of Commons in 2001. According to the obituary published on 18th July 2005 in 'The Daily Telegraph', 'in his maiden speech[29], he attacked the then Labour Government for its very negative response to the Schuman Plan to create a single European market in coal and steel'. When Harold Macmillan became Prime Minister some 13 years earlier in 1957, he celebrated his victory with Edward Heath over a dinner of oysters and champagne at the Turf Club; and in 1960, Macmillan brought Heath into the Cabinet as Lord Privy Seal, responsible for negotiating the United Kingdom's first application to join the European Economic Communities. Harold Macmillan, like Edward Heath, has now been internally exposed by intelligence sources as a secret agent of the German Abwehr (Department of Defence, or military intelligence apparat)'.

'Heath was an agent of the super-secret German DVD - or Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst - the ultra-covert Continuum of Nazi International intelligence developed from the Abwehr and the Gehlen Organisation, one component of which had established itself as the German Geopolitical Centre in Madrid in 1943, when the leading German Nazi officials realised there was at least a 50% chance that Germany might lose the war. The DVD organisation itself was set up by Admiral Canaris in 1944'.

'The DVD is so secret that its finances are hidden (that is, it is financed by 'Black Operations' resources) and there appear to be no traces at all of this service being funded by the German taxpayer, precisely because it is funded clandestinely'.

'And what will cause very great astonishment outside intelligence services around the world is the location where the DVD is based: DACHAU, the town that gave its name to the notorious concentration and Holocaust extermination camp'.

'While ostensibly visiting the Salzburg (music) Festival in 2003, Sir Edward Heath travelled to Munich and Dachau, where he was alerted by the DVD that his life-long service to Germany's covert Nazi intelligence community had been uncovered by British investigators. A UK intelligence source reports that he literally blew a fuse when this warning was delivered - which is to say, he suffered a pulmonary embolism'.

'Plans to interrogate Heath were blocked at Joint Intelligence Committee (JIC) level and by Number 10 Downing Street'. One of the Author's special friends commented: 'No surprises there' - given that MI6 is headed by an operative allegedly considered to be an asset of French and German intelligence'. It has since been established that this also, in mid-2006, applied to the head of MI5. Like most of his post-war predecessors, the Prime Minister, Tony Blair, was alleged to have been compromised on several levels.

'The super-secret covert Black Nazi DVD acts with the approval of the German Government, and 'owns' the German Chancellorship, beginning with the postwar Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, who was an asset of the German Abwehr before its collapse. It follows that the German Government is, at any point in time, actually the instrument of the secret Nazi International Establishment, the main blueprint of which was intercepted by the Allies in the early 1950s'. (It is also a fact that the 'overt' or 'White' German foreign intelligence service, Deutsche Bundesnachrichten Dienst, reports directly to the German Chancellor, as well).

This has all been covered up as a consequence of the extensive penetration of the CIA and, indirectly through the French connection, of MI6, in later years'.

The Author's International Currency Review report elaborated: 'When the members of the Nazi Oxford Ring were recruited, the Master of Balliol College, Oxford (Lindsay) entertained certain nagging suspicions. It is understood that he was initially tipped off by the College's Head Porter; at all events, the Master reported the members of the Ring to MI5, which 'then' maintained a recruiter (for British intelligence) based at Oxford University, and had become well aware of increased German intelligence activity in the Oxford area during the months prior to the Munich Conference, from which the Prime Minister, Mr Joseph Chamberlain, returned from his fatal meeting with Herr Hitler in premature triumph in 1938'.

'The future British Prime Minister was by then already on the Nazi external intelligence payroll. He is reported by one source to have complained about encountering problems in repaying a loan from the Kent Education Committee, even though as indicated he was already on the German payroll and was initially being paid more than £250 annually, which was a very large sum for a pre-war university student'.

'After the war, MI5 arranged for Master Lindsay to travel to the British Occupation Zone in Germany, where he met the British counterintelligence officers working on the so-called De-Nazification Programme, which was aborted when the already penetrated OSS, parent of the American CIA, reversed its policy under intense pressure from the US State Department led by George Kennan, and commenced the process which led to the importation and resettlement of at least 770 prominent Nazi scientists who had all been working on Heinrich Himmler's Black Satanic experiments and operations - including the development of occult psychopolitical personal and mass psycho-manipulation and personality modification techniques, and on rocket science and space travel innovations'.

'One source believes that Lindsay met with Brigadier Lathbridge, a senior British intelligence officer working in the British Zone. Lathbridge is reported to have been unaware of the continuing Nazi International secret intelligence service DVD, although he is also believed to have suspected the existence of a powerful Nazi organisation that was engaged in the protection of high-ranking Nazis and overseas Nazi intelligence assets who had been left in place in 1945'.

'One of these was Edward Heath. Further enquiries were reportedly blocked in London and by assets of the DVD within the Nazi-penetrated OSS, which controlled access to Munich, to which location Edward Heath's Abwehr (German external intelligence) file had been transferred from the German Abwehr headquarters in Berlin'.

'Today, the London Station of the continuing Nazi International's DVD is shared with the overt German intelligence service, BND (Bundesnachrichten Dienst)'.

It is accordingly clear that both Britain and the United States - jointly 'the Main Enemy'- have been continuously targeted by German 'Black' Illuminati intelligence, and that it is Germany/France who are the 'Main Enemy's' dialectical antagonists.

THE MURDER IN NUMBER 11 DOWNING STREET

In the first quarter of 2006, a former Conservative Chancellor of the Exchequer, Tony Barber, also died. Shortly afterwards, the Author was informed by UK intelligence that Barber had also been an Abwehr agent. The outline information provided was as follows:

1. On being voted into power, Edward Heath appointed Ian Macleod, a highly respected colleague, to serve as Chancellor of the Exchequer.

2. Ian Macleod duly reported to the Treasury Building, where he met his Permanent Secretary. The conscientious Whitehall mandarin proceeded to brief him in detail on the unsavoury consequences of the Euro-centric policies which Heath intended to pursue. He showed Macleod, with the aid of statistics and charts, that membership of the European Economic Communities would, over the medium term, prove a disaster for the British economy, and would inter alia lead to the de-industrialisation of the country.

3. Macleod reported back to Mr Heath what he had been told, said that he would be unable to implement the policies that Heath had in mind, and requested fresh instructions.

4. Shortly thereafter, Ian Macleod dined with a certain Dr Foster, whose identity was not unknown to certain sections of the intelligence services.

5. Not long after dining with this Dr Foster, Ian Macleod died suddenly in Number 11 Downing Street. Having provided this information, the sources described this intervention as 'a murder in Number 11 Downing Street'.

Ian Macleod was immediately replaced by Tony Barber, who proceeded to implement Heath's policy of integration into the European Economic Communities with zeal and to the letter. The British intelligence sources then provided the Author with a few details about Tony Barber's background. It transpired that he had flown a Spitfire, equipped with Britain's latest 'spy-in-the-sky' camera, into Germany, where it had been handed over to the German authorities. He was imprisoned but betrayed his fellow prisoners over the famous 'Wooden Horse' episode. The briefing ended with a categorical statement that this former Chancellor of the Exchequer, like Heath was an Abwehr agent.

CORRUPT 'PAYOLA' PAYMENTS 'FACILITATE' E.U. COLLECTIVE TREATIES

It is troublesome, but entirely consistent, apparently, with British practice, that traitors holding, or who have held, high official positions and are subsequently unmasked, are often left unprosecuted, but are exposed after their deaths. The Author believes this practice to be mistaken, since these people have invariably caused immense damage to the nation and society - and none more so than Edward Heath, whose signature (along with that of his colleague Geoffrey Rippon) on Britain's European Accession Treaty, is actually null and void. This state of affairs was now explained in the special analysis and exposure published in 'International Currency Review', as follows:

'The European Union Collective is without any doubt illegal - a point that the Author put to a very senior US intelligence source, intimately familiar with intergovernmental financial corruption, who immediately responded: 'I know'.

The EU is illegal inter alia because:

1. Britain's Accession to the European Economic Communities was procured by fraud: Specifically, the two signatories, Edward Heath and Geoffrey Rippon, were not only paid Abwehr agents but received corrupt payments in exchange for their signatures on the UK accession documents.

2. British agreement to the Maastricht Treaty was allegedly procured through fraud: Specifically, the Prime Minister of the day, John Major, is alleged by intelligence infonnants to have accepted his 'facility payment' or payments. The documents were signed by Douglas (now Lord) Hurd and Angus Maude, who later became a senior figure in the 'Conservative' Party and, like his father, is very 'sympathetic' to Germany.

3. The European Constitution was procured by means of the distribution of corrupt payments, although following the French and the Dutch Referenda, it cannot be ratified. Specifically, $5.0 billion was set aside to procure completion of the European Constitution Treaty, the funds derived from a 'Black Operations' account in Switzerland called the 'SBC Charcol account. It holds or held at least $470 billion, built up originally from Nazi resources and continuing 'Black' financial operations, hidden 'high-yield investment programmes', and probably scams, with the funds made available for disbursement from a Credit Suisse account.

4. Of this $5.0 billion, $2.5 billion was to be distributed on completion of the Inter Governmental Conference (July 2004), and the second tranche of $2.5 billion was to be distributed on ratification.

The funds were payable in Euros, of course, with $100 million equivalent allocated for each of the 25 EU countries in the first tranche. This had to be distributed to the corrupted politicians and officials on completion of the Inter Governmental Conference (IGC) in July 2004. The Author obtained information about three of these sub-tranches:

- The corrupt 'IGC facilitation' funds allegedly remitted to the (former) Italian Prime Minister, Sig. Silvio Berlusconi: Specifically, the Italian ex-Prime Minister was allegedly paid and accepted a total of €75 million. He could 'get away with' this because his political rival, Sig. Romano Prodi, who became Italian Prime Minister after narrowly 'defeating' Berlusconi in the 2006 General Election and who had been President of the European Commission at the relevant time, also allegedly received 'his' 'facilitation paymenf of €75 million. That is how 'business' is routinely transacted in the corrupt German-dominated European Union Collective.

The corrupt 'IGC facilitation' funds allegedly paid to the British Prime Minister, Tony Blair: An equivalent allocation of €75 million was allegedly paid into a bank account with the Prime Minister as ultimate beneficiary in Belize. A sudden jump of $114.81 million in the foreign exchange reserves held by the Central Bank of Belize was noted in March 2005, perhaps signifying that the alleged corrupt payment was taken into the reserves so that the funds were either in the process of being 'laundered' through the Central Bank, or else had been seized. The local Central Bank would have been entitled to do this.

THE 1969 VIENNA CONVENTION ON THE LAW OF TREATIES

Intelligence sources had not, by the closure of this book, seen fit to furnish the Author with outline information about the corrupt payments made over to 'facilitators' for the 23 other EU countries at the conclusion of the Intergovernmental Conference in 2004, but it is understood that the full $2.5 billion was duly paid out in Euros as arranged. Since these funds were 'never actually paid' - for public consumption purposes - they are de facto non-refundable and have been 'lost' to the controlling 'builders of Europe'.

However, in conformity with the European Union's familiar corrupt and deceitful modus operandi, the institutions provided for by the 'Constitution Treaty' were being implemented anyway, notwithstanding that the Constitution Treaty could not be fully ratified due to the negative outcomes of the French and Dutch referenda on this issue in 2005.

Concerning the second $2.5 billion originally derived allegedly from the 'SBC Charcol account via Credit Suisse, the fate of these funds remained unknown outside the intelligence community. Some of the EU countries have rushed to ratify, and in these cases, the second €100 million tranches will have been 'payable', explaining why certain EU countries ratified so quickly. In the cases of France and the Netherlands, the corrupt respective recipients of second tranche 'facilitation' fees were reported to be angry and disappointed that their enrichment had been delayed or scuppered for ever (as they may not be around when the next collective treaty enters the IGC stage). There is also known to be much covert wailing and gnashing of teeth at the fact that large sums have been squandered on a collective document that cannot be collectively ratified, as all 25 EU satrap Member States must ratify for the (illegal) treaty for it to acquire 'legality' -which, as indicated, is an impossibility since some of/all of the earlier treaties and the Constitutional Treaty were procured corruptly and thus illegally.

Under the 1969 Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties, there are two key provisions which authorise a signatory power to abrogate a bilateral or multilateral treaty unilaterally, without giving the stipulated notice:

1. Where corruption has been demonstrated in respect of procuring the treaty in the first place, or in respect of any dimension of its implementation. The European Commission (EC) and all its offshoots permit, and are associated with, proven corruption on a monumental scale, while Britain's Accession Treaty was signed corruptly by two paid Abwehr agents.

2. Where there has been a material change of circumstances. A material change of circumstances has surfaced into the daylight, to begin with, following the death of Sir Edward Heath. It has been revealed that he was an agent for a foreign power, accepted corrupt payments for his services, and lied to the British people - and that he did all this on behalf of a foreign power secretly driven by 'Black' Nazi Continuum intelligence strategists.

An even more disturbing material change of circumstances has arisen as a consequence of the bombing of the London Underground, and of a bus, which took place on 7th July 2005 - and the attempted explosions perpetrated two weeks later. The situation in the weeks immediately following was so serious that the British Civil Contingencies Secretariat had been in the process of drafting, or has drafted, legislation providing for the British Government to abrogate its false international treaty 'obligations' towards the European Union Collective. The subsequent discovery that a fifth bomb was meant to have blown a hole in the Northern Line runnel beneath the River Thames, flooding the Underground and murdering thousands of Londoners, was still being suppressed in mid-2006, but was the subject of extreme unease and anger in certain London circles.

In February 2006, an oil storage depot owned by the French energy corporation Total exploded at Buncefield, in Hertfordshire, outside London. The explosion and resulting fire was the worst conflagration in the United Kingdom since the Second World War. The 'mainstream' media immediately concluded that the catastrophic event was an accident, latching on to disinformation stories to the effect that a smell of petroleum had been noticed by local residents for weeks beforehand. In reality, this explosion was the work of the wholly bogus Al-Qaeda network assisted by the GO-2 British 'Black' intelligence agency resident within MI6 (which it has extensively penetrated), and which 'reports' unofficially to the Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst in Dachau. Although this atrocity was almost immediately hushed up, it hardened the resolve of 'white haf cadres within elements of the British intelligence community which have been fighting German/French penetration of the UK structures, to procure Britain's final exit from the German-sponsored long-range deception operation known as the European Union.

GERMANY'S COVER: HIDING BEHIND THE SOVIETS

Integral with the German-French operation to procure the total submission of the United Kingdom within the European Union Collective - the main purpose of which is to subdue and decapitate Britain, the senior component of the 'Main Enemy', once and for all - is a seamless continuation of the classic deception device whereby the Nazi Continuum hides behind a left-wing mantle. The European Union is a political collective, as Mikhail Gorbachev himself acknowledged during a brief visit to London on 23rd March 2000, when he concurred that the European Union is 'the new European Soviet'. But just as Guy Burgess, Donald Maclean and Anthony Blunt* disguised their German Nazi sympathies and connections behind their supposed Communist fellow-travelling affiliations, and just as STASI operatives such as Marcus Wolf and Eva Teleki (who procured access to colossal funds transferred to her under Powers of Attorney, before allegedly failing to honour any of her obligations under those documents), maintained their STASI labels as their working cover long after the orchestrated 'collapse of Communism', so has German secret manipulation of the European Union been consistently masked by the left-wing, collectivist and manifestly Leninist structure of the EU Collective. Both Marcus Wolf and Eva Teleki were using their STASI backgrounds to hide the alleged reality that they actually work for Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst, in furtherance of the long-range Nazi strategic deception agenda in collaboration with the German-oriented segments of the CIA, including the Nazi-oriented CIA operation based in Frankfurt, with its Gehlen Organisation background.

* Anthony Blunt was believed to have been an illegitimate son of George V, and thus a half-brother of Edward VIII, the Duke of Windsor, whose Nazi predisposition was the underlying rationale for his {'enforced') abdication. Mrs Wallace Simpson was a German-financed operative, maximising the potential of the long-implemented German espionage device, modelled upon Jesuit and Illuminati practice, of positioning a 'psychopolitician' alongside key targeted figures, for subversion and intelligence purposes - earlier examples being Grigori Rasputin and the Abwehr operative Lavrentii Beria himself, who taught these techniques to foreign revolutionaries. Princess Diana was targeted in a similar manner. The slight problem that this Author has with the allegation concerning Anthony Blunt is that the Author's drawing master at Eton was none other than Anthony Blunts older brother, 'Willie' Blunt, who certainly resembled Anthony Blunt physically except that his frame and build were much heavier. Willie' Blunt was a much-loved art teacher and an Eton 'fixture', who taught boys with talent how to paint, and haunted the somewhat remote Art Schools.

As this book was being finalised, the Author discovered that GO-2, the UK 'Black' intelligence agency (which is supposed, like the Nazi Continuum DVD, not to exist) controls two drug cartels in Britain, each of which 'services' the financial requirements of the main political parties, with the Liberal Democrats engulfed in comparable financial disarray surrounding dubious financing sources. The financial scandal surrounding the 'New Labour' Government led by Tony Blair which came to a head in March 2006 concerned loans extended secretly 'below the radar' to the Labour Party by a dozen or more big-headed industrialists, bankers, venture capitalists et al which were allegedly financed by the following mechanism. A self-important figure was cornered by Blair's 'financial gopher', Lord Levy, and persuaded to make funds available (for instance, for the 2005 election) on loan, with an unspoken implication that the 'lucky lender' would become eligible for a life peerage. In 1925, following the scandal over the sale of peerages (real, ongoing ones) by David Lloyd George - also a corrupted supporter of German hegemony plans, it has recently transpired - the Honours (Prevention of Abuses) Act was passed forbidding the practice. Under the legislation, it is an offence to take money as an 'inducement or reward' for procuring an honour for someone else, or even attempting to do so. The definition of 'reward' is not confined to money, but includes any 'valuable consideration' which would appear to cover an interest-free loan or indeed a loan at a commercial rate of interest. It is also an offence for a person who 'buys' an honour to give anyone money or a valuable consideration as an inducement for procuring an honour for him or anyone else. The maximum penalty under the Act is two years in jail*.

Following a formal complaint by Angus MacNeil, a Scottish Nationalist MP, to the Metropolitan Police and the Director of Public Prosecutions in mid-March 2006 about disclosures that several 'wealth/ individuals were nominated for peerages after extending large loans to the Labour Party, the Metropolitan Police announced (on 21st March 2006) that its Specialist Crime Directorate was looking into three complaints of alleged breaches of the 1925 law, associated with the secret loans policy run - according to the 'mainstream' media - out of Number 10 Downing Street. Other extraordinary corruption discoveries concerning the Labour leadership were surfacing in mid-2006.

Such corruption is consistent with the system of unfettered secret 'payola' rewards which is the preferred method developed by the DVD as a means of furthering the European Union agenda. Behind the scenes, the GO-2-controlled drug cartel 'attached to' the Labour Party is or was a primary source of slush funds, in a position to channel funds to offshore accounts held in the names of the assorted big-headed industrialists, brokers, venture capitalists etc, considered to be lusting after a life peerage. Thus, in exchange for extending a loan of, say, £1.0 million 'to help Tony win the election', a deposit of £2.0 million would 'replace' the £1.0 million on loan, in an offshore account -which, if repaid, would net the corrupt lender £2.0 million plus interest. Behind this mechanism, both the main political parties were being financed primarily with criminal funds by such means - the 'agreement' or quid pro quo being that this arrangement would remain in place in exchange for neither main political party adopting a strategy to take Britain out of the corrupt European Union. This of course explains why the 'Eurosceptics' in Britain, who flattened the 'Europhiles' long ago with their arguments (an operation with which this Author is closely associated), were never able to induce even a hint of any change of policy within the compromised and corrupted Conservative Party. Heavy penetration of all the UK political parties by Trilateralists' affiliated with the Trilateral Commission, founded as long ago as 1918 as an instrument of, and front for, German intelligence, also predisposed the main British political parties never to question the treacherous secret German policy of national suicide via EU integration. The UK Independence Party (UKIP), seen as a threat by the penetrated and compromised British Conservatives, was penetrated from the outset by agents serving the strategy of GO-2, and thus of the Dachau-based Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst. The first leader of the embrionic version of this Party, a young man known to the Author who possessed all the best leadership qualities and was a person of great integrity and magnetism, died suddenly and quite unexpectedly for no apparent reason in his early thirties, leaving his young wife devastated. This man was of such a high calibre that he would certainly have threatened the programme of the criminal elements in the intelligence services and elsewhere who were controlling the German integration strategy. The next leader, Alan Sked, narrowly escaped death when he was shot at. The Party was taken over by ineffective leadership, and the leader 'elected' in 2006, who has a German wife (from Berlin), was observed during a meeting giving what looked like a Hitler salute.

* Further, a seller of honours who has received a gift, money or consideration, may be ordered to forfeit it to the Crown. It was under the 1925 Act that a Mr Maundy Gregory was convicted of selling honours in 1933. He was fined £50 and jailed for six months. Gregory, an intelligence officer and friend of Lloyd George, had been ordered to obtain information on an MP called Victor Grayson, who was believed to be a Soviet agent and who was also enquiring about corruption and the honours system. When he found out that he was being watched, Grayson denounced Lloyd George at a public meeting for selling honours. He said: The sale of honours is a national scandal. It can be traced right down to 10 Downing Street, and to a monocled dandy with offices in Whitehall. I know this man and one day I will name him'. The 'monocled dandy' was the intelligence officer, Maundy Gregory. Grayson was subsequently beaten up in the Strand, and then disappeared. It was believed that he had been murdered, although his body was never found. [Source: The Daily Telegraph, 22nd March 2006, page 4].

ANGELA MERKEL 'DOES NOT WANT A THIRD WORLD WAR'

Wholesale review of Britain's EU membership followed the realisation within certain British intelligence and other circles that the 7/7 and subsequent attacks in 2005, and the Buncefield oil depot catastrophe in 2006, amounted to acts of war against the United Kingdom, and that the foreign powers behind this activity are ultimately controlled by the Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst (with collaborating French 'Black' intelligence) from Dachau, the successor organisation to the Abwehr, Nazi Germany's main external intelligence administration. The Nazi regime and its Stalinist dialectical counterpart were both Black Illuminati regimes. The Al-Qaeda operation is an extension of the same Black tradition, and is ultimately controlled, like the ERA (until very recently), by the DVD out of Dachau. In March 2006, a senior UK intelligence source told the Author that Angela Merkel - the German Chancellor - 'does not want a Third World War'. The implication was that this operative, born in Hanover but mysteriously educated in East Germany at the East German Academy of (Leninist) Sciences, is not as enamoured as her predecessors (including Gerhard Schroder, also from East Germany) with the Nazi Continuum and global hegemony strategy directed from Dachau. However this assessment was contradicted by the Buncefield catastrophe, traced subsequently to Al-Qaeda acting as proxy for the DVD. Since that event - again controlled by French 'Black' intelligence which works hand-in-glove with the DVD - was interpreted as an act of war, although hushed up, there seemed, by June 2006, to be no concrete evidence that the arrival in power of Frau Merkel had led to any change of strategy. It is understood that Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst 'informs' the German Chancellor of what it is doing and what operations it may be planning, which strongly implies that it is a power unto itself

- a 'state within the state', like the CIA and its affiliates, not least since DVD is not funded by the taxpayer. It has its own criminalist funding sources, of course. Specifically, it specialises in heroin distribution, while the French and Spanish 'Black' agencies handle cocaine - Spain having become the alleged favoured European outlet for Bush Sr.'s drug operations focused on US/DVD-developed Latin American sources. In the summer of 2006, following exposure by this Author, the Spanish authorities ordered Bush Sr. to leave Spain and allegedly told his people to 'take your dirty money with you'.

Detailed accounts of the European Union's corrupt 'payola' system, and of the recipients of certain corrupt remittances, were published in International Currency Review' in October 2005, in the supplementary service 'Economic Intelligence Review' in December 2005, and again in 'Global Analyst' [2006Q1] [www.worldreports.org]. In addition, a summary of the intelligence concerning the traitor Edward Heath and his British homosexual Abwehr contemporaries, and of the illegality of both Britain's EU membership and of the EU Collective's treaties, has been maintained on the Author's websites' easily accessed permanent Archive. In the December 2005 issue of 'Economic Intelligence Review', a list of all the journalists in the UK 'mainstream' media who ignored the foregoing intelligence was published, in order to highlight the feckless incompetence of the media and that Illuminati financial control of the press and broadcasting is as comprehensive in Britain as has been the case in the United States since J. P. Morgan procured press control almost a century ago.

The reason for mentioning these mundane facts is that not a single denial or refutation of any of the intelligence in question was forthcoming from official or private circles as a consequence if these damning exposures, during this period. On the contrary, British intelligence sources told the Author that no denials have been forthcoming because everything that the Author published is true. Further, given the camaraderie that exists among intelligence officers serving different governments at the professional level, elements of British intelligence have been congratulated, believe it or not, by their German Nazi Continuum (Abwehr-DVD) counterparts on the excellent counterintelligence job performed by 'white hats' in MI5 in establishing and exposing the facts.

Instead of seeking to impose their wayward occult Dluminati will by force, as during the Second World War, the Nazi long-range planners changed their geostrategy and opted for a more gradualist, subtle and corrupt approach, which has basically entailed conquest by open-ended bribery. For what the European Union, planned from 1941 onwards, does is to collect colossal fees from its satrap (bribed) Member States, and to redistribute the proceeds effectively as bribes, in furtherance of its geopolitical objectives.

E.U. DELIBERATELY MODELLED ALONG LENINIST LINES

Since, as we have seen, German long-range strategy deception strategy hides behind left-wing labels when this is considered to be the best cover, the fact that the European Union is modelled along Leninist lines* should not be taken as indicating an incorrect strategic diagnosis on the Author's part. It has already been demonstrated that Communism and Fascism are two controlled ideologies that were deliberately concocted (initially by the 'two Karls') in order to provide the Illuminati manipulators with 'opposing dialectical forces' (Thesis, Antithesis) that could be manipulated in the interests of the self-appointed globalist Illuminati elite to yield their 'Synthesis' of global control. The early Nazi Labour Day emblem shown in Figure 89 on page 551 displays both the Communists' hammer and sickle and the Nazi occultic swastika.

* Governance is duplicated, and decisions are taken collectively, although the weasel word used to mask this is 'cooperation'.

But when we consider this disguise more carefully, it is even more striking. For what has emerged from this study is that throughout the long years of the overt Cold War, and continuing to this day, the long-range strategists within the Dachau-based DVD hid behind the STASI (East German security). This has recently become evident from observation of two key STASI operatives already mentioned - Marcus Wolf, and Eva Teleki (a.k.a. Sturzl). As has been reviewed, Marcus Wolf has been 'advising' the US Department of Homeland Security (although a different version has it that he was being 'debriefed' by them). He has also been seen dining in gentlemen's clubs in London, accompanied by several British intelligence officers. He was suddenly not available in Berlin when he became aware that an intelligence contact of this Author was intending to visit him there, several months after the Author publicised DVD penetration in the information detailed above. As for Ms Teleki, this STASI operative is known to have been working during the 1990s and certainly into the present century in cooperation with US intelligence. She has access to substantial funds repatriatable to the US Government, and was reported to have been resident in London from 2004 onwards, and therefore during the period of the atrocities that took place in July 2005. Intelligence experts on both sides of the Atlantic agree that as noted earlier, Sturzl, like Wolf, is indeed a DVD officer. She has Hungarian connections.

THE GERMAN GEOPOLITICAL CENTRE

To understand the significance of all this, it is necessary to recall that the Nazis established a high-level central planning organisation in Madrid in 1943, called the German Geopolitical Centre (or Deutsche Geozentrale). On 13th December 1944, the Associated Press reported that Heinrich Himmler had initiated plans for the establishment of an underground network at the end of 1943, and that propaganda and related warfare operations were to be carried on 'by some 200,000 Nazi followers in Europe and elsewhere'.

The news report, clearly based on reliable Allied intelligence, asserted that many Nazi Party operatives and members had equipped themselves with double or even triple identities, and that the preplanned Nazi agitprop operations were intended to set the Allies against each other.

The Nazi Geopolitical HQ in Madrid was funded for many years by financial and bullion resources, and doubtless by 'Black Ops' funds, exfiltrated into Spain long before the collapse of the Third Reich[30]. For years it was known that the Nazi headquarters in Madrid operated an international organisation called 'Die Spinne', meaning 'The Spider'.

Related Nazi organisations were and are known by various exotic cover names, such as Edelweiss, Konsul, Scharnhorst, Sechsestirn, Liebwache and Lustiger Bruder, while the covert organisation of the Nazi Elite Guard operated under the name Odessa.

THE 'MADRID CIRCULAR LETTER'

On 29th May 1951, a correspondent for 'The New York Times', Mr C. L. Sulzberger, reported on the existence of an operational group which had 'revived' what he then called the Fascist International, and was functioning in various countries stretching 'from Malmo to Tangier, and from Rome to Buenos Aires'. There were likewise reports in the early 1950s that Hitler's Deputy, Herr Martin Bormann, 'shuttles between Spain and Argentina trying to work for unity and cooperation among Fascist-minded bodies', stated one report[31].

In September 1950, the German Geopolitical Centre in Madrid distributed a secret Memorandum to its many subsidiary centres around the world, including key German covert Nazi continuity circles in Bonn. The document, known as the 'Madrid Circular Letter', which was intercepted by Western intelligence or leaked to an Allied intelligence service, represented a German General Staff plan for a revised German approach to procure the division and conquest of the world.

At the time, UK/US observers realised that the policies outlined in the document coincided remarkably closely with the direction of those being quietly pursued by the Adenauer Government - which was hardly surprising, since before the Second World War, Konrad Adenauer, who became an Abwehr officer, had been Mayor of Cologne and was close to Hitler's favourite German bankers, Jewish gentlemen by the names of Abs and Pferdmenges. Before Adenauer became German Chancellor (and remember, the Chancellorship, we now know, is in the hands of the DVD in Dachau), he told the German Reichstag: 'We must move very cautiously. We ought not to give the impression, either in Germany or in the United States, that we shall collaborate in any way with the Russians' - even though orientation towards Russia was secretly central to German strategy, as had always been the case, beginning with the disruptive operations of the German agent Rasputin in the Tsar's court and the recruitment of Lenin by German intelligence at the beginning of the 20th century when he was living in Munich.

Likewise, Lavrentii Beria, Stalin's odious Interior Ministry police gauleiter, with almost more blood on his hands than Stalin himself, was, as has been discussed, a long-term German Abxvehr agent - a fact reflected not least in his move, immediately following Stalin's curious death, to initiate a settlement with West Germany. As a result, Beria's service to German intelligence was used against him, and he was promptly executed[32] by Stalin's successors who, like Boris Yeltsin and (we understand) also Vladimir Putin, worked hard to exclude or diminish the influence of German intelligence inside Soviet structures. Yet President Chirac was Chairman of a Trilateral Commission', prior to becoming President of France, consisting of France, Germany and Russia - so that any Russian anti-German house-cleaning may have been less than comprehensive.

'FUR UNS IST DER KRIEG NIEMALS VORBEI'

The West failed singularly to penetrate, let alone understand, the clandestine negotiations that proliferated between Bonn and Moscow, even though many statements in the German press suggested that Bonn's ultimate objective, following the establishment of the Adenauer Government in West Germany, was a far-reaching, long-range agreement with Moscow. Two years of secret negotiations between Berlin and Moscow preceded the Rapallo Treaty dated 16th April 1922, which was facilitated by the little understood fact that Lenin was also a German agent, whose original job it was to destabilise Russia in order to relieve the pressure on Germany from the Eastern Front.

The Rapallo Treaty was concluded by a Jewish leader of German 'liberalism', Dr Walter Rathenau. Fifteen years later, when Western statesmen, led by the naive British Prime Minister, imagined that they had purchased 'peace in our time' at Munich, the Germans yet again entered into secret negotiations with the Soviets, culminating in the Molotov-Ribbentrop Pact (Mark I: see page 610 for Mark II) of August 1939.

In 1953, T. H. Tetens, the remarkably prescient author of 'Germany Plots with the Kremlin', elaborated: 'The lightning that flashed throughout the world when Berlin joined hands with Moscow in 1939 is striking again and the ultimate target of the Germans is the USA'[33]. With the destruction of Berlin and the death of Hitler, the West generally assumed that the Nazi threat had ceased to exist - an illusion that arose due to the erroneous identification of the Nazi Party with Hitler, even as the identification of the Iraqi 'enemy' with the image of Saddam Hussein led the Americans to assume, just as erroneously, that the Iraqi Ba'ath Party (modelled along Nazi lines, as it was a direct outgrowth of Nazi anti-British operations in the Middle East), would cease to exist or have any substance with the arrest of Saddam.

But the German Geopolitical Centre saw to it that Nazism and its worldwide idolatry would not merely survive the destruction of Hitler and the loss of the war, but would be strengthened as a consequence of deploying new, much more subtle 'Third Way' psycho-techniques, with additional stress on bribery. The Nazi International further instructed its outlets and cadres that, so far as the Geopolitical Centre was concerned, the war had never ceased, and would continue until complete victory was assured: 'Fur uns ist der Krieg niemals vorbei'. The Geopolitical Centre also boasted that it had successfully duped US policy planners. Thus the 'Madrid Circular Letter' explained:

'Germany has emerged from the Cold War as the chief beneficiary. That is our great asset in the ledger ... since Potsdam. For the first time in the history of nations, it has been proven that clever propaganda, especially when it is camouflaged and directed through other channels, accomplishes far more than the mightiest army or the best diplomatic service of a smoothly functioning state. It is a great mistake to assume that Western Germany recuperated so quickly thanks to America's sympathetic concern for us. We repeatedly encounter, especially as expressed by some politicians in Bonn, the idiotic opinion:

'But the Americans have put us back on our feet, should we therefore not show our gratitude?' To this our answer is as follows: The Americans put us back on our feet, not purely for altruistic reasons but for their selfish interests and on the basis of clever calculations. It must not be our worry, but theirs, if in the last resort their calculations prove to be abysmally stupid. We are not wholly innocent in [respect of] the shift of America's postwar policy[36]'.

'For us the war has never stopped [Fur uns ist der Krieg niemals vorbei'] and, as is well known, in war every ruse is permissible. We cannot repeat too often that Germany has never ceased to carry on the war with political weapons and propaganda, with economic sabotage and other means'.

'In order to protect Germany against total destruction of all its military and economic potentials, as [in due course was] planned at Yalta, we [at the outset of the Second World War] blueprinted a bold plan and created a flexible and smoothly working organisation[35] which, during the first months of the war, provided the pre-condition for all the gains that by necessity emerged for Germany out of the chaos of the postwar period' [compare the Illuminati model of 'Order out of Chaos'].

In other words, the long-range planning undertaken by Nazi planners and perfected by the German Geopolitical Centre in Madrid represented 'Plan B'.

'Today, five years after Potsdam, we can look back with pride on our accomplishments. By no means was the political and military leadership of the Third Reich skidded into the catastrophe [of the Second World War] in an irrational manner, as so many blockheads and ignoramuses often tell us. The various phases and consequences of the so-called 'collapse' (of the 'Zusammenbruch') were thoroughly studied and planned by the most capable experts' ('faehigsten Koepfen'). Nothing occurred by chance; everything was carefully planned. The result of all this planning was that, already a few months after Potsdam, the coalition of the victors went on the rocks'.

In other words, the German long-range planners had judged their enemy correctly, even though they knew that it belonged, at the highest levels, like them, to the Illuminati.

EXPLOITATION OF POSTWAR CHAOS AND THE SOVIET 'MENACE'

The essence of the subtle deception strategy developed by the Nazi planners was to alarm the Americans about the imagined 'Soviet menace' to stability in Europe - seeds of deception that fell on fertile ground because of the scale of the long-term, and recent, penetration, of the US policymaking and intelligence structures by Nazi moles:

'The machinery which we had prepared so carefully in advance, had very consciously brought about conditions and situations after the collapse, which confronted America's leaders with the stark choice of accepting chaos and Bolshevism throughout Germany, or adopting a constructive programme that would save Germany and the whole of Europe. Such a plan and such a bold programme could only be successfully carried out by a political schooling that is now proved to have been of paramount importance'.

It was only necessary to warn of the danger of Communism taking hold in Germany after any collapse by referring to the brief localised experiments with Bolshevism attempted in Germany after its defeat in the First World War. And the central importance of the clandestine Geopolitical Centre in Madrid was now clearly revealed:

'When we take into consideration under what tremendous difficulties and dangers the organisation had to work in an underground manner and directed from abroad without any protection or backing by any state, carefully watched and persecuted by agents of a revengeful enemy, then the successful outcome seems like a miracle'.

The 'Madrid Circular Letter' boasted, therefore, that the Nazi geopolitical apparatus organised Germany's postwar chaos: 'In order to bring the Americans back to reason and away from Potsdam, we organised chaotic conditions in a thorough and systematic manner ('haben wir mit grundlicher Systematik das Chaos organisiert').

'It was', the 'Madrid Circular Letter' continued, 'a very subtle political resistance, seemingly unorganised and seldom visible, but nonetheless having a deadly effect. The peasants were delivering almost next to nothing to the cities; no coal was being brought up from the pits, the wheels of industry were not turning; the people came near to starvation; the monetary system was disintegrating: there remained nothing for the Yankees to do but to give up and scrap the Potsdam program...'.

'Five years after Potsdam, the Yankees are stuck deep in the mud; they are now seeking the advice of our generals whom they formerly called criminals; they come pleading for our help against Russia. That of which we could never convince the world, namely, the injustice of the policy of revenge, was finally accomplished by the Americans themselves who, speculating on German help, have propounded the necessity for a revision of policy towards Germany. They have even convinced the French and the English of this'.

Concerning Germany's geopolitical orientation, this crucial document, which represented a blueprint for covert Nazi policy for years to come, had this to say:

'The policy of orientation towards the West has lost all political meaning or sense. A conscious policy of neutrality, going hand-in-hand with close economic cooperation with the East would, from a long-range point of view, supersede a merely pro-Soviet orientation.... We must not forget that Germany has always considered orientation towards the West as a policy of expediency, or one to be pursued only under pressure of circumstances. Such was the case in Napoleon's time, after 1918, and also after 1945. All our great national leaders have constantly counselled the long-range policy of close cooperation with the East: thus, Frederick the Great, the Count von Stein, Bismarck, von Seeckt, and Brockdorff-Rentzau, and, in over the past 30 years, all our leading geopoliticians...'.

Thus the Nazi experts working out of the German Geopolitical Centre and its offshoots revealed their clear understanding of the Illuminati's dialectical method of creating 'opposing forces' and manipulating them in pursuit of the strategic 'synthesis':

'We must never let ourselves become befogged by Washington's stupid and meaningless slogans about the so-called 'Struggle of Democracy versus Communism'. The so-called American democracy does not deserve the sacrifice of the bones of even a single German soldier. In the age of regimented and militarised economy [sic], the US babbling about democracy and so-called 'free enterprise' is such nonsense that we do not need to squander a single moment in refuting this American propaganda swindle'.

'What Germany needs in the future is not democracy but a system of statecraft similar to that of the Soviet dictatorship which would enable the political and military elite in Germany to organise the industrial capacity of Europe and the military qualities of the German people for the revival of the German race and the re-establishment of Europe as the power centre in the world'.

This statement included a clear indication that German intelligence considers itself to be the power behind the Soviets and Soviet intelligence - a state of affairs that has prevailed since even before the days of Lenin and Rasputin, their agents. German intelligence has been working covertly behind the false Communist red flag, with Britain and the United States always their main targets.

The mentality of this postwar Nazi International blueprint document, and the intentions contained therein, are self-evident. The European Economic Communities [the EEC] were organised covertly by German 'Black' intelligence in accordance with the 'Madrid Circular Letter' blueprint - buttressed in January 1963 by the signing by the Abwehr agent Konrad Adenauer of the Treaty of the Elysee, which is of indefinite duration, with President de Gaulle. That key Treaty provides that Germany and France must 'achieve a common position' in advance of all international conferences, meetings, and consultations and in all international forums, in which they are represented. Specifically, the Treaty lays down in international law that 'the two Governments will consult before any decision on all important questions of foreign policy and, in the first place, on questions of common interest, with a view to reaching as far as possible an analogous position'. Mutual interpenetration of French and German intelligence cadres is sanctioned.

DEER CORRUPTING PENETRATION BY FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE

The ghastly problem faced by both Britain and the United States is that loyalties within their intelligence communities are divided, reflecting deep, long-range foreign penetrations - with competing US intelligence groups fronted by powerful 'barons' owing allegiance, for various penetration, blackmail and other reasons - to foreign powers. The key sources of these tensions are penetrations by German, Soviet, Chinese, Japanese and French intelligence - with the Germans in the driving seat, given their long-established postwar penetration of the CIA. Cadres loyal ultimately to the DVD constantly denigrate the British. The German Geopolitical Centre located in Madrid, with its satellite planning centres in Barcelona and Seville, which developed the postwar covert Nazi blueprints and organised the penetrations of components of the British, French, Canadian and US intelligence communities, operated for years as well-camouflaged commercial enterprises, or alternatively as German relief organisations. According to public domain German press reports[36], the primary Nazi International centres were established in Madrid and also Rome, from which locations control was projected and maintained over an extensive network of intelligence operations in Argentina and elsewhere in Latin America, North America via the CIA, Africa, the Far East, both Germanys, and also the Soviet Bloc. Subsequently a further Nazi International Centre was opened in Cairo, to direct anti-Western activities in the Arab world - resulting in due course in the neo-Nazi regimes established in Baghdad, Damascus and, for a time, Egypt itself.

Egyptian Presidents Nasser and Anwar Sadat were both agents of German intelligence, as the British Prime Minister of the day, Sir Anthony Eden, well understood. But he was himself surrounded by assets of German intelligence, and was double-crossed by General Eisenhower who, given both his military intelligence knowledge and his German origins, must certainly have been aware that Nasser was a key Germany (DVD) asset. It is now more clearly understood that President Eisenhower betrayed Britain and France, prior to the capitulation of General de Gaulle to the Abwehr operative Dr Adenauer in 1963.

Sir Edward Heath, as we have seen, was recruited by the Abwehr, was controlled for six decades by Nazi intelligence (DVD), and was only made to face up to his past in 2003, when he was visiting Salzburg ostensibly for the music festival, but in reality en route to Dachau - where the DVD delivered their warning that British intelligence were about to unmask him (which duly happened internally).

After the end of the Second World War, the US State Department and the British Foreign Office made no serious attempts to smash the vast Nazi geopolitical network, although the US Assistant Secretary of State, Spruille Braden, tried to smoke out these covert Nazi conspirators. But he was blocked at every turn, just as the Joint Intelligence Committee and Number 10 Downing Street prevented the interrogation of Sir Edward Heath, which would have yielded crucial intelligence, not least relevant to the prevailing wave of terrorism attacks. As for the Pentagon, its policy towards Mr Braden's efforts was typically myopic, with General Patton being on record as making the ridiculous - yet Freudian - statement that 'the Nazis are the same as Democrats and Republicans'[37]. Within no more than half a decade, leading pan-German journalists and Nazi officials who had served Dr Joseph Goebbels' propaganda machine, together with experienced Nazi diplomats from von Ribbentrop's Nazi German Foreign Office, were designing Bonn's foreign policy, under guidance from Dachau, in Dr. Adenauer's Government.

NAZI PERSONNEL FAN OUT INTO WEST GERMANY

The main contacts of the German Geopolitical Centre staff in Spain and elsewhere were reportedly with people holding influential positions in West Germany, especially the Bonn Government's Foreign Office. During a debate in the Bonn Parliament on 16th October 1951, the 'former' Abwehr operative, Dr Konrad Adenauer, admitted that 134 'former' Nazi Party officials who had previously served under Ribbentrop in the overt Nazi Foreign Office, now held senior positions in the new Government's foreign service.

Other well-known Nazis and specialist pan-German geopoliticians slid seamlessly into top positions at leading German newspapers, broadcast outlets and magazines. As a consequence, a steady stream of information and instructions flowed between the Madrid Geopolitical Centre and its collaborators in Germany and elsewhere in the world, including inside the CIA, and vice versa.

A careful examination of the entire 'Madrid Circular Letter' reveals an iron determination to achieve realisation of the Nazi Thousand-Year Reich, even if it takes a thousand years to achieve. In the European theatre, the German geopoliticians envisaged the creation of a united Europe under German domination.

In order to achieve this objective, the document elaborated:

'We have placed our confidential agents, observers, and representatives for special assignments in all groups and parties - even among Communist organisations and their fronts. The greater the number of organisations controlled and influenced by us, the more effective will be the results of our work' - code for the massive penetration of Western, including US, organisations, think-tanks, parliaments and intelligence services.

And several of these agents were to become Prime Ministers of Great Britain. For his part, Edward Heath set about immediately to implement the German Geopolitical Centre's plan to neutralise and decapitate British power once and for all. The process had started with the Boer War, when the Germans instigated the Boers to fight the British; and it has been going on ever since, extended subsequently to the United States. Canada has its own problems, with the French DGSE causing endless confusion.

The foregoing statement was accompanied by more boasting about the efficiency of the German Geopolitical Centre in its directing of postwar operations and the worldwide clandestine affairs of the Nazi International:

'Even after the collapse (in 1945), the National Socialist Party continued to work in a camouflaged way ('getarnt') inside dozens of seemingly innocuous societies and groups, in order to keep alive and undiluted the National outlook of the German people. In just the same way as many small brooks go towards making up a mighty stream, the various nationalistic and radical groups in the Zonen-Reich implemented, almost without exception, worthwhile and powerful propaganda. Each of these groups had its special task and had to adjust its work in line with certain situations and circumstances'.

'However, it was of chief importance to direct the underlying trend of the patriotic propaganda towards the identical objective. The more diverse and unconnected that all these groups appeared to be on the surface, the less they were apt to arouse suspicion that they were directed and influenced by a central organisation' - which they were.

THE GERMAN 'MISSION TO LEAD THE WORLD' ['Fuhrermission']

As for the ideological imperative embedded in these instructions from Madrid, it was epitomised by the following ruthless, merciless, hardnosed Nazi assertions, which are identical to the training received, to this day, by special Illuminati cadres, including US intelligence officers whose allegiances diverge from the interests of the American people: 'The future of the world will be decided by the conquering force of political ideology. 'Democracy' is a wishy-washy term.... No German is willing to fight and die for democracy. The German people, well trained and steeled under National Socialist leadership, are dominated by two sovereign ideas: the concept of a German Reich, and Germany's mission in the world ('deutsche Fuhrermission in der Welt'). These two ideas have given our people a powerful driving force for the dynamic execution of their world mission'.

'The mystical element and the religious tradition embodied in the concept of the Reich, sparks our political mission'. Translation:

1. The concept of a German Reich' = The European Union Collective
2. 'Germany's mission in the world' = Projection of global influence and power by clandestine means, as described throughout this book.
3. 'Mystical element' = Interaction with, and impregnation of strategy and behaviour by, the occult, as developed under Himmler, in line with German Illuminati practice.
4. 'Religious tradition' = The orientation of German Catholicism, especially, in the service of continuing German (covert Nazi) strategy, embracing idolatry.

Living comfortably in Spain and working in their plush Madrid offices, the Nazi intellectuals had no day-to-day responsibility for the direction of affairs - just as the underlying covert Communist Party of the Soviet Union (CPSU) now spends 100% of its energies and resources on planning. The Geopolitical Centre likewise devoted all its extensive financial and intellectual resources to planning for the survival and eventual physical realisation of the Thousand-Year Reich - funding its operations by criminal activities. For instance, the paymaster of the 2005 London bombing attacks is believed to have been a 'former' STASI (DVD) operative who moved from the United States to an apartment in London after acquiring access to vast US Government offshore funds.

The 'Madrid Circular Letter' then concluded with the following bombastic flourish, which represented a defiant challenge to the whole world: 'The convulsive effects of the military defeat have not broken the German spirit. The national tradition is carefully fostered among the youth and the veterans. The biological substance of the German people remained unshaken in its foundation'.

'Our people are ready to be called upon for historic decisions.... National training and political schooling have also conditioned the German people as a first-class instrument for the execution of world politics on a grand style. No other people on earth has such political maturity, fanatical faith, such iron-clad willpower and tactical flexibility - not merely to overcome defeat, but also to start again from scratch. German tradition and belief in a world mission uplifts the whole German nation. Everyone senses within his deepest consciousness that the great national task - the struggle for world domination - will ultimately be crowned with victory'.

This makes it clear that the Illuminati's 'project' for global hegemony, which, as has been explained, is directed from Germany, provides deep cover for long-range German global control strategy (Deutschland Uber Alles). Whether the German covert 'Black' Nazi Continuum intelligence establishment at Dachau is 'free-riding' aboard the Illuminati's programme, has hijacked it for its own purposes, or is fully and historically integrated within the Dluminati framework and agenda is, for the time being, a frustratingly unanswered conundrum. Whatever the truth of this vital question, the practical reality is that the United States is plagued by a German-oriented Illuminati Masonic Fifth Column which has spread its poisonous occult influence with ruthless persistence at least since the establishment of Skull and Bones at Yale College in the 1830s - consolidating the geoma-sonic penetration for which it was originally responsible with the very foundation of the Masonic Republic in 1776. This is not a healthy state of affairs; and to begin the arduous process of putting their decaying, corrupted house in order, US patriots could do a lot worse than to initiate a campaign for the removal of the emblem of the Illuminati from the $1.0 bill, together with all the other occult symbols displayed thereon. Such a development would give the Illuminati conspiracy a profound and long overdue shock.

THE SECRET ALLIED 40-YEAR OCCUPATION AGREEMENT

Notwithstanding the decisive differences that indeed opened up within months of victory among the Allies, President Truman's Secretary of State, James Byrnes, suggested that the four occupying powers should enter into an agreement to occupy Germany for 40 years. Secretary Byrnes' proposal bridged the two approaches to the management of postwar Germany - President F D. Roosevelt's assessment that the victors should seize Germany's material assets and should preclude any resurgence of German nationalism and industrialism; and the prospectus advanced by the allies of the pan-German Nazis, led by George Kennan at the US State Department, who peddled the notion that Germany should be converted from a heavily defeated power into an ally of the United States. Of course the people who were pushing this dangerous idea were either Abwehr recruits, or else were beholden later to the secret Nazi intelligence organisation, DVD.

These people became increasingly influential and as a consequence, the rehabilitation of Germany and the mobilisation of its manpower became US policy. When James Byrnes was replaced by General Marshall, with his Plan, and George Kennan then became Chief of the US State Department's Policy Planning Division, the Pentagon's planners, and the political blueprint of the appeasers, achieved hegemony - while the de-Nazification operation was abandoned, and large numbers of Himmler's scientists were transferred to the United States and integrated at once into the US intelligence, scientific and academic communities, and into what Dwight Eisenhower had referred to as the military-industrial complex. All caution was thrown to the winds, and any anxieties surrounding the long-term objectives of the 'surviving' Nazis were abandoned, while the notion that they and their heirs might still be capable of long-term planning, was dismissed out of hand. Moreover the popular impression that the death of Hitler represented the de facto end of Nazism achieved respectability within the US policymaking and, for its own self-interested purposes, the intelligence communities.

Even so, Secretary of State James Byrnes' proposal survived his replacement, and Germany was indeed occupied for a further period of 40 years - which was why the Berlin Wall was pulled down only in 1989 - under the direction of GRU officer, Vladimir Putin, who was bribed and further promised $30 billion of US 'set-aside' funds for his pains. He was pressing for payment of the $30 billion outstanding as late as October 2006, and the Author was instrumental in urging the point that he needed to be paid, given the Bush II Administration's designs on Iran The vengeance of a woman spurned may prudently be assumed to be nothing to that of a Soviet GRU Officer double-crossed by US intelligence.

THE PRINCIPAL TARGET: WASHINGTON

In the 1940s, the pan-German Nazi strategists had calculated that by exploiting the antagonism between Stalin's USSR and the West, the Allies would in the end be left with no choice but to rehabilitate Germany; and their behind-the-scenes campaign to procure this outcome proved brilliantly successful. The entire operation was fronted in Washington by George Kennan, who, like Heath, had been recruited by the Abwehr and/or by Nazi intelligence during his visits to the country before the war. As US News and World Report explained in 1949: 'George Kennan, the No. 1 brain truster in the State Department, has a new [sic!] idea that the US had better put its faith in Germany, rather than in France, as the bulwark against Russia'[38].

In the following month, the secret Nazi Abwehr operative, by now the German Chancellor, Konrad Adenauer, was openly asserting that Germany would regain its military power: 'Konrad Adenauer of Western Germany, is crossing up [sic] high Allied officials in Germany with his open talk about the rebuilding of German military power. That subject was supposed to be kept under cover'[39].

And the German strategists rejoiced in the vast input of finance that the United States was pouring into Germany's rehabilitation. In September 1951, the United States News reported that the United States had transferred $9.0 billion into Western Germany and that 'the Germans took it for granted'[40]. That was exactly as the Nazis intended.

From all this it can be seen that the recruitment by Nazi intelligence of Edward Heath in Britain represented no more than one key penetration - albeit arguably the most sensational intelligence penetration in modern history, if one excludes such penetrations as the KGB's control over the West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, which may have been tied up with the interpenetration of the Soviet and German intelligence communities; or the eastward orientation of Hans-Dietrich Genscher, the long-serving West German Foreign Minister, who shadowed KGB operative Andrei Gromyko (Katz) as Soviet Foreign Minister. Genscher hailed from Hesse, East Germany, which he or his wife visited once a month, even while he served as Foreign Minister.

From the German Geopolitical Centre's perspective, the penetration of US intelligence and its ultimate control by Nazi cadres was a far greater challenge and imperative. Those few, including this Author, who have been suggesting in recent years that 'the Third Reich has installed itself in Washington DC, guided by the pan-German neo-Nazis, with their brutal, occultic Illuminati mentality within the CIA and its subsidiary agencies, have only to re-read the statement by that brilliant American analyst of the early 1950s, T. H. Tetens, to understand that he saw, well over half a century ahead of events, what would happen:

'The Germans intend to build their new world empire on the ruins of what today constitutes the greatness and power of the United States. Whether these professional plotters will help the Soviets destroy America by military means, or whether they will attempt to subjugate us some day through an 'inside job', is of no relevance'.

'The fact that the German planners regard the United States as doomed becomes clearly visible from the writings of the [Nazi] geopoliticians. The schemers in the Madrid Geopolitical Centre have quite openly described how the United States will be thrown onto the rocks. They are dreaming of building up a new Third Power bloc, and they declare that 'this new power combination would plunge the United States down from its dizzy heights', and they boast that it would depend entirely on their "diplomatic and propaganda finesses when and how we would take over an America enfeebled by its foreign and domestic policies"'[41].

THE 'COUP D'ETAT BY INSTALMENTS' MODEL

The heirs of the German Nazi geopoliticians hold such sway in Washington 'as we speak' that a sizeable constituency of observers has concluded that the country is on the verge of slipping into the clutches of a dictatorship. The intention, indeed, is to change the US Constitution and political structures from within. It was on 23rd March 1933 that newly elected members of the German Reichstag met in a Berlin opera house (the Kroll) to review the passage of the 'Ermachtigungsgesetz' (Hitler's Enabling Act), the official title of which was 'Law for Removing the Distress of the People and the Reich'. There were many opponents of this drastic proposed legislation, which those who suspected that Hitler was beyond dangerous, feared would give him the dictatorial powers that he was lusting after - and would remove necessary constitutional protections against tyranny.

The Reichstag members had to meet in the Kroll Opera House because their building had been attacked and set on fire on 28th February 1933 - the Reichstag Fire - which had resulted in Hitler exerting pressure on the rapidly ageing President Hindenburg to suspend Article 48 of the Weimar Constitution - allowing the suspension of constitutional protections and liberties during emergency conditions.

The privacy of postal and electronic communications, the states' rights of self-government, all protections against unlawful searches and seizures, freedom of the press and assembly and property rights, were all suspended, and the so-called 'Enabling Act' was passed shortly afterwards. The staged putsch was part of 'a coup d'etat by instalments'[42] : and many concerned observers see exactly the same pattern unfolding today in both the United States and Britain:

'Only by banning the Communist deputies and by resorting to intimidation and mendacity did Hitler secure on March 23 [1933] the necessary two-thirds vote in the new Reichstag for an Enabling Act that transferred legislative authority to his Cabinet, ostensibly for four years. Waves of Nazi purges followed, as one institution after another was subjugated. Arbitrary rule replaced government by law in what has aptly been termed a 'coup d'etat by instalments'.

'By the summer, all parties except the Nazis had been dissolved, Hugenberg had been forced out of the Cabinet, and Hitler had relegated Papen to insignificance by winning the trust of the President. Even earlier, Goring had wrested from von Papen control over the Government of the largest state, Prussia. Well before the Nazi leader [had] assumed the powers of the Presidency upon the death of Hindenburg in August 1934, he had become the dictator of Germany .

It was Hitler's very close associate Hermann Goring who proclaimed that 'the people can always be brought to the bidding of the leaders. That is easy. All you have to do is tell them they are being attacked and denounce the pacifists for lack of patriotism and exposing the country to danger'[44].

Shortly after the London atrocities on 7th July 2005, the American Congress made haste to proceed with renewal of the USA Patriot Act, minus its crucial sunset clause. Furthermore Congress designed to eliminate or nullify the 22nd Amendment to the US Constitution, which would open the door for President George W. Bush to become permanent President (dictator) of the United States[45]. No bill followed, but it will be recalled that during the run-up to the 2000 General Election, George W Bush Jr. pronounced (or 'quipped'): 'If this were a dictatorship, it would be a heck of a lot easier, just so long as I'm the dictator'. In mitigation, George Bush Jr. was reacting to an unreported and failed attempt to assassinate him.

The former, Chicago School-educated US Attorney General, Mr John Ashcroft, defended the USA Patriot Acts, which perform largely the same functions as Hitler's 1933 Ermachtigungsgesetz, with the following warning: To those who scare peace-loving people with phantoms of lost liberty, my message is this: Your tactics only aid terrorists, for they erode our national unity and diminish our resolve'[46].

THE NEW 9/11 'REICHSTAG FIRE' EVENT

It was demonstrated at the beginning of Chapter 7 that the New York Twin Towers were demolished by means of explosives located below ground level - consistently with the Dark Forces' statement in Protocol 9 of 'The Protocols', cited earlier, that 'the undergrounds, metropolitains, those subterranean corridors which, before the time comes, will be driven under all the capitals and from whence those capitals will be blown into the air...'. Following the Underground explosions in London on 7/7, explosions occurred below ground level in central San Francisco (in August 2005), and elsewhere. On 3rd June 2006, 17 people, mainly of Islamic origin, were arrested in connection with a conspiracy which would supposedly have included attacks and explosions in the Toronto Subway System. That the Twin Towers were demolished from below by explosives has been further corroborated by a former Bush Administration official, Morgan Reynolds, the ex-

Chief Economist at the Department of Labor during President George Bush Jr.'s first term, who has been cited by World Net Daily as stating that 'the official story about the collapse of the Twin Towers is 'bogus' and that it is much more likely that a controlled demolition destroyed them and also the adjacent Building Number 7', which, it will be recalled, suddenly blew up at 5.30pm on the day of the atrocities, for no apparent reason.

The Twin Towers were brought down by an 'inside job' (see Chapter 7 and below), which is why the Author and others are justified in referring to 9/11 as a 'Reichstag Fire' event - intended as the catalyst to kick-start the Illuminan's uncontrolled offensives and open-ended aggression against humanity for the 21st century. This murderous provocation facilitated the passage of the USA Patriot Act at lightning speed, even though Congressmen had had no opportunity to read it. Since it is impossible to generate such a complex and lengthy piece of legislation in a matter of days, the draft text had been prepared long in advance, which provides further evidence of pre-planning.

The original USA Patriot Act authorised (and its sequels permit) US officials and agents to conduct arbitrary searches of private homes and businesses, and to search through personal belongings without informing the target or victim and without a court order, while agents can arrest and detain individuals and hold them indefinitely, without them having to be charged with any crime and with no access at all to an attorney - so that Habeas Corpus is a freedom of the past, and the Fourth Amendment protections against illegal searches and seizures, as in Nazi Germany, have been expunged. As for foreigners visiting the United States, no less than 34 items of information about each passenger are furnished to the Department of Homeland Security in advance of flights, including Credit Card details. With the use of PROMIS-derived or -cloned software, US authorities can accordingly track all foreigners' transactions and can look inside their bank accounts, without any accountability or constraints. All new computers are now preloaded with software containing at least four 'trapdoors', as it is the official secret objective that every computer in the world should 'talk to the Pentagon' in due course. All the relevant software suppliers 'work for' the National Security Agency (NSA), ensuring that the US Government can spy permanently on its own dozens as well as on foreigners.

DAVID L. BOREN, GEORGE TENET: COVERING FOR THE DVD, DACHAU?

In March 2006, the Author discussed key 9/11 issues with a certain impeccable source with special connections, located in the United States. The informant confirmed the main outlines of independent research on 9/11 that has appeared on the Internet and in book format. He referred specifically to the 9/11 operation by its codename of 'Able Danger', and mentioned that key implemented allegedly included the former Democrat Oklahoma Senator (1979-94) David L. Boren, subsequently President of the University of Oklahoma, (who was allegedly forced to resign on 15th November 1994 in the context of a homosexual scandal, although this was not revealed to his constituents or his close associates at his home town, Norman, OK); George Tenet whose mentor was David Boren, who reportedly convinced incoming President George W. Bush Jr. to keep Tenet en poste as Director of Central Intelligence (CIA); and Vice President Richard Cheney, who 'interfaced with Operation 'Able Danger'. Some details of former Senator Boren's background will be helpful before the Author's conversation is related.

Boren graduated from Yale University in 1963, having spent his final year being brainwashed as a member of the occult-esoteric 'crash course' for prospective high-flyers, Skull and Bones. He then followed the usual path of the 'chosen' as a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford University, from which he is said to have graduated in 1965, even though degree courses at Oxford last for three years. He subsequently attended the University of Oklahoma Law School, in his home town of Norman, from which he graduated in 1968, when he was admitted to the Oklahoma Bar. He was elected a member of the Oklahoma House of Representatives in 1967-75, and was Governor of Oklahoma from 1975 to 1977. In the following year he was elected as a Democrat to the US Senate, and was re-elected in 1985 and 1990, resigning four years later, having served as the Chairman of the Select Committee on Intelligence. He became President of the University of Oklahoma in 1994.

According to Professor W. Scott Thompson, of Tufts University, a member of Boren's Rhodes Scholar class at Oxford University, in 'The Price of Achievement' [London, Cassel, 1985], 'I was aware that David [Boren] was gay before I was aware of my own homosexuality, and our scout [Oxford University servant] confirmed it.... His homosexuality was never too far from the surface'. Thompson has also mentioned 'rumours of trouble with page boys at Oklahoma Capitol', during Boren's time as State Legislator, and believes that Mr Boren's surprise resignation in 1994 from his US Senate seat was 'almost surely prompted' by fears of 'a deeper degree of outing'. The same source has also referred in print to 'reasonably well-attested stories of continued gay imbroglios on Capitol Hill'. According to the Norman (OK)-based analyst, Michael Phillip Wright, one of the very best in the business, 'in 1993, 'Queer Nation' activist Michael Petrelis began publicly to accuse Boren of sexually harassing his male staff members. While allegedly concealing this from his constituents in Oklahoma, in 1994 Boren announced his resignation from the US Senate and allegedly leveraged his political influence to have himself appointed President of the University of Oklahoma. A considerable amount of further information on Boren's alleged homosexual predilections exists in the public domain. Michael Wright, who lives in Norman, Boren's home town, implictly linked this orientation to Boren's political affiliations, with which they were complementary, writing as follows in his excellent self-published article entitled 'CIA Support for Bin Laden: Who's Responsible?' [September 2001]:

'The current crisis calls for Americans to investigate the records of all Congress members who approved of any legislation enabling US support for the Afghan rebels during the 1980s. Those who supported this hideous adventure deserve severe judgment' - not least, this Author would like to add, because US intervention hardened the cynical Leninist resolve of the Soviets to prosecute the war in accordance with the Leninist method of proceeding 'by other means'. All of a sudden, Moscow folded its war in Afghanistan, but did so with the clear intention of gaining the upper hand later ('one step forward, two steps back': Lenin). For when the Soviets left, they took with them between 40,000 and 50,000 young Afghani males, many of whom had been seized from their homes at night, and were never seen by their families again - at least, not for many years. It is believed that these youths and boys underwent rigorous 'jihad' indoctrination and training as Islamic terrorists, while being educated in various terrorism training centres all over the USSR and the Communist Bloc, including East Germany, Poland and Hungary; and that the 'graduates' from this pool of rootless young Afghanis surfaced as the radicalised, controlled Islamic maniacs we know and loathe today.

Mr Wright continued: 'As an Oklahoman, I am particularly interested in the record of former Senator David Boren, whose close ties to the CIA are well known. He was appointed to the Intelligence Committee in 1985, and later became its Chairman. Boren' - whom, it will be recalled, served in politics as a Democrat - 'also has close ties to the extreme right. Political Research Associates, a group whose purpose is to expose the threat to democracy presented by right-wing groups, includes Boren as a member of one of the organizations which they have targeted for concern'.

'Boren was co-chairman of the Congressional Division of the National Coalition for Peace through Strength (CPTS), a creature of the American Security Council (ASC). The CPTS believed that the USSR and Communism were the greatest evils in the world'-thus sharing the opinion of Bill Casey on this score, and accordingly tending to downplay or even turning a blind eye to other contemporary evils and abominations. 'Other CPTS members included Ronald Reagan, Phyllis Schlafley, and Jesse Helms. Organizational members have included the American Conservative Union, the American Legion, Citizens for Reagan, Young Americans for Freedom, and Young Republicans. Political Research Associates also says that emigre groups with a history of association with Nazis were included in the CPTS membership'.

'One of the more prominent ASC members was Major General Milnor Roberts, Chairman of the Committee for a Free Afghanistan (CFA). During the 1980s proxy war, the CFA promoted US support for the Islamic militants whose successors are now being accused of the September 11 attack'. Depending upon which dialectical delusion a person entertains, you can therefore take your pick: are today's Islamic terrorists the successors of the militants trained and exploited by the US military and its intelligence aborninators, or are they the Afghan graduates and their successors from the Soviet Bloc terror schools which flourished intensively following the Soviets' exit from Afghanistan, or the thousands of Iraqis transferred to the United States following the First Gulf War? And to what extent are today's terrorists the successors and heirs of the Nazi terror squads and organisations spawned by the German intelligence operation established in the 1920s to destabilise the British in the Middle East, the Muslim Brotherhood?

Welcome to the subterranean world of the Illuminati, whose modern 'refounder', Adam Weishaupt, it will be recalled, decreed that 'there must (a la Jesuite) not a single purpose ever come in sight that is ambiguous, and that may betray our aims against religion and the state. One must speak sometimes one way and sometimes another,... so that, with respect to our true way of thinking, we may be impenetrable'.

DOUBLE-MINDEDNESS, DOUBLE-SPEAK, 'BAIT AND SWITCH'

Double-mindedness and double-speak - replicated in the two-faced, criminalised elements of the intelligence community as 'bait and switch', when 'Mr Nice' abruptly becomes 'Mr Nasty' - is of the essence, spawning the fretting deception methodology of the dialectic, and the practices of speaking out of both sides of one's mouth, supporting opposite causes, working on both sides of any divide, and appearing pleasant and normal during the daytime, but bestial and depraved at night; with a schizophrenic propensity to switch temper suddenly from a pleasant demeanour to, say, hideous, obscene anger. Integrated with this sick mentality and split-personality norm of behaviour is Weishaupt's Jesuitical law that the sect of the Illuminati must always operate under false flags, must always reside within, and piggyback upon, other organisations, and must never allow itself to be 'surfaced' as a 'tangible' organisation (which, however, is exactly what it is). As Weishaupt himself revealed, The Order of the Illuminati appears as an accessory to Free Masonry. It is in the Lodges of Free Masonry that the Minervals are found, and there they are prepared for Illumination. They must have previously obtained the three English [i.e., the 'Blue'] Degrees'[47]. The penetration method is especially relied upon, in accordance with Weishaupt's Jesuit background, to secure control over the levers of power - the preferred method being to place evil personalities and operatives with serious blemishes, who are in bondage to vice and corruption, who have stolen money, whose private life is notoriously a mess and, most of all, who indulge in the vice of paedophilia.

A disturbingly sizeable proportion of legislators, rulers, Prime Ministers, Presidents and other holders of high office are gripped by this heinous Illuminati vice - which is among the very worst that the Evil One has devised. This phenomenon is easily explained in a spiritual context, given that the human body is the temple of the Holy Spirit, and that little children are innocent and by definition unviolated.

Since, as Jesus made explicitly clear, forgiveness is normally unattainable for those who blaspheme against the Holy Spirit, those holders of high office and others who practice paedophilia, perversion and corruption of children are, by definition, beyond forgiveness. Such people, who have almost always themselves been abused in childhood by relatives, but have failed to assert control over their generational vice, are destined for perdition - and probably know it. Their unending despair at their own condition may drive them to ever more heinous behaviour. Given the disproportionately large number of such people holding positions at the highest levels of Government these days, it is hardly surprising that the despairing leaders of the Governments concerned are behaving irrationally and with increasing barbarity, while posing as messengers and implementers of 'democracy' - for instance, in Iraq.

For the Illuminati, 'democracy' and 'freedom' are no more than empty slogans which mask the underlying evil intent that 'democracy' must be controlled (by vote-rigging, electronic voting scams and 'false-flag' political gamesmanship), while 'freedom' is to be provisional, legally delineated, and arbitrarily controlled in accordance with the demands and requirements of the flluminati's elite and their handlers.

GEORGE TENET THANKS 'SPECIAL PERSON' DAVID L BOREN

To revert to the Boren case, the occultically-named 'The Texas Triangle' [14th July 1993, pages 1 and 11] cited a 'Queer Nation activist', Michael Petrelis, who had started publicly to accuse Boren of sexually harassing his male staffers. With a startling lack of ambiguity, W. Scott Thompson wrote that Boren had been referred to implicitly in a book called 'Queer in America' [Random House, New York, 1993, pages 170-182] by a certain Mr Michelangelo Signorile. Michael Wright elaborated in an analysis dated August 2003 that 'with these words, Thompson was allegedly hinting strongly that Boren is guilty of sexually harassing male Senate staff members'.

Wright's analysis elaborated that when George Tenet was sworn in as Director of Central Intelligence in 1967, he used the occasion to thank some very 'special' people, including Boren, whom he described as 'my friend and mentor for whom I have the highest personal regard and affection and without whom I would not be here today' - remarks that were posted on the CIA website. Writing in 'The Washington Post', Dan Balz and Bob Woodward provided a now famous account of the notorious leisurely breakfast that Tenet and Boren were enjoying on the morning of 9/11. Time' likewise reported that Boren and Tenet were having a 'leisurely breakfast' in a Washington Hotel on the morning of the 9/11 attack. Wright added that 'in January 2001, Boren had called Bush and persuaded him to keep Tenet as CIA Director'. 'USA Today' also described Boren as 'Tenet's patron as he rose to the top of the intelligence community'. At the breakfast, Tenet had said to Boren, following news of the first aircraft crash: 'I wonder if it has anything to do with this guy taking pilot training'. But not mentioned by Balz and Woodward was the fact that Massaoui' (the terrorist in question) 'who had been much on Tenet's mind, had spent several months in Boren 's own community at Norman, Oklahoma, where he had attended the Airman Flight School for three months in the spring of 2001'.

In a complex and meticulous analysis, Michael Wright demonstrated that Boren allegedly an operative, allegedly interfaced with, and may have supervised preparations involving, the following 'Jihad' terrorists who spent time in Oklahoma, Boren's State:

Two 9/11 hijackers, Mohammed Atta and Marwana al-Shehhi, who toured the Airman Flight School at the local Westheimer Airport in July 2000. Mohammed Atta and another man thought to be Al-Shehhi met Zacarias Moussaoui (a.k.a. Shaqil, a.k.a. Abu Khalid ad-Sahrawi) in an Oklahoma City motel in August 2001.

Moussaoui, reported by French intelligence to be a high-ranking member of Al-Qaeda, was in Norman, OK, from February to August 2001. He was enrolled in the Airman flight School until May, and lived for part of the time in Oklahoma University housing.

The Wall Street Journal reported that Moussaoui had persuaded the Oklahoma University engineering student Hussein Al-Attas to join the Jihad' in Chechnya, where the Soviets train terrorists clandestinely Al-Attas drove Moussaoui from Norman to Minneapolis to attend another flight school, and Al-Attas subsequently admitted that he was aware of Moussaoui's 'Jihad' activities.

Two 9/11 hijackers listed home addresses in Tulsa, OK. Specifically, Fayez Ahmad gave his home address as the Spartan School of Aeronautics, while Mohammad Al-Ghamdi listed his home address as an apartment complex in Tulsa.

The 9/11 hijacker Nawaf AI-Hamzi visited the Oklahoma Al-Qaeda cell in April 2001 and was cited for speeding on Route 1-40. He also attended an Al-Qaeda meeting held in Malaysia in January 2000.

An unidentified Al-Qaeda member or collaborator bought an airline ticket for one of the 9/11 hijackers on a public computer terminal at the Oklahoma University Library.

Mr Wright's analysis concluded as follows:

'While in Norman, Moussaoui was receiving funds from Ramzi bin Al-Shibh, a key member of the Al-Qaeda cell in Germany' [source: Rohan Gunaratna, 'Inside Al-Qaeda: Global Network of Terror', Columbia, New York]. In September 2001, Wright had written, in an Internet posting, that former Senator David Boren's 'close tie to the CIA is well known. He was appointed to the Intelligence Committee in 1985, and later became its Chairman. Boren also has close ties to the extreme right Political Research Associates (PRA), a group whose purpose is to expose the threat to democracy presented by extreme right-wing groups, includes Boren as a member of one of the organizations which they have targeted for concern'.

'Boren was Co-chairman of the Congressional Division of the [Nazi-sounding] National Coalition for Peace through Strength' (CPTS), a creature of the American Security Council (ASC). The CPTS believed that the USSR and Communism were the greatest evils in the world.... PRA also says that emigre groups with a history of association with Nazis were included in the CPTS membership.... Boren's relationship with former CIA Director Robert Gates [also] deserves critical scrutiny. Robert Gates was essentially allegedly a liar used by Reagan to corrupt the CIA away from its mission of providing the Government with accurate assessments of Soviet strength. Under Gates, the CIA's mission came to be the exaggeration of Soviet strength and expansionist tendencies, while sabotaging the goal of detente. David Boren was an enthusiastic supporter of Gates and helped push through his nomination as CIA Director'.

Hence Boren was the 'mentor' of TWO operatives who became Director of Central Intelligence - Robert Gates and George Tenet. This surely provides ample evidence of Bonesman Boren's exceptional continuing importance - to the German Illuminati Fifth Column operating deep within the corrupted US intelligence structures.

Exaggerating the strength and malevolent intentions of the Soviets was of course merely an extension of that same strategic deception ploy that General Reinhard Gehlen used to deceive the Americans during the years immediately following the Second World War - yet another indication that there has never been any discontinuity of German deception strategy towards the US component of the dual 'Main Enemy'.

'In a speech available online at the CIA website, Gates boasted about CIA success in Afghanistan, where it supported the anti-Soviet Mujahhedin. He admits that the CIA funnelled billions of dollars in supplies and weapons to the Mujahhedin'. Oddly enough, he forgot to mention the notoriously damning fact that that Osama Bin Laden was the CIA's controlled asset and operative whose alias was 'Tim Osman'.

The Author concludes that the 9/11 mass murder cover-up operation was orchestrated in secret collaboration with French and German 'Black' intelligence using DVD-sponsored Al-Qaeda cells, by highly-positioned, blackmailable homosexual Fifth Column Illuminati 'Nazis' buried inside the United States' structures, where their true loyalties were masked by a convincing veneer of 'loyalism' and the 'public service' ethic. This view is also held (independently of this Author's input) by 'white hat' sectors of British intelligence, whose influence has increased markedly since the atrocities committed against British citizens and installations in 2005, were traced promptly to Al-Qaeda cells controlled by French and German 'Black' intelligence. Although, in the circumstances, this came as no surprise to the intelligence investigators concerned, what was new was that certain of their number were finally prepared, out of frustration, to leak such findings to exposure professionals such as the Author of the present work.

'ABLE DANGER' - CODENAME FOR THE REVOLUTIONARY 9/11 PROVOCATION

The informed US source mentioned on page 584 implied that the US authorities were responsible for the murder of around 3,000 people on 9/11. The source independently asserted that the primary figures allegedly implicated were Boren and Tenet:

Author: 'We haven't discussed 9/11'.

Source: 'Able Danger' (codename for the intended provocation and atrocities) knew, and was the 9/11 operation.

Author Who was behind it?

Source: The Department of Defense and the CIA. Boren and Tenet. Moussaoui et al, just like Tim McVeigh, were developed by this operation. They were created by this operation, just like the militias.

Author The militias have disappeared. Why is that?

Source: They have indeed. Absolutely. The rats have gone.

Author: Why is that?

Source: I honestly don't know that they have disappeared. They have just gone off the radar. They are still out there with their guns. [Author: This is correct. Specific anecdotal evidence from several States confirms this. And the following comment confirms the malevolence of the Clinton Administration].... This was part of an operation under Clinton to create foment and discontent with the militias advocating attacking the US Government - which gave [the clandestine US Government cadres] a pretext for Osama Bin Laden and then the 9/11 attack. Osama Bin Laden was a US asset/operative. George Bush Jr. had an asset management company managing part of his family's assets.

Author: So you are saying that the US Government murdered 3,000 people....

Source: Yes, yes. Shear bombs were used and were placed in the Twin Towers. The planes themselves did not crumple the buildings. [They were destroyed by] charges down in the basement. [This is of course consistent with this Author's findings].

Author: We know this must have been the case, because when the buildings collapsed, they fell faster than the speed of gravity plus resistance. [See Chapter 7],

Source: What amazed me when watching the building collapses was that they seemed so implausible.

Author: Building Number 7 suddenly collapsed at 5.30pm far no apparent reason. So is this is a scandal without historical precedent?

Source: The closest thing would be Pearl Harbour itself....

Author Or more appropriately, the Reichstag Fire model...

Hitler embarked upon pre-emptive attacks against peaceful countries, justifying his behaviour on the basis that such attacks would make his country more secure - just as George Bush Jr. has done. Similar developments are evolving in the United Kingdom, where the Metropolitan Police have adopted the Israeli 'shoot to kill' policy and, on 24th July 2005, openly acknowledged that innocent people would die as a consequence, because the danger of mass deaths was greater than the accidental deaths of a few innocents. The press failed to point out that the underlying principle here was enunciated by Weishaupt on behalf of the Illuminati over two centuries ago: The end justifies the means'.

BRITAIN COULD NEVER PARTICIPATE IN EMU ANYWAY

Some Germans have been unable to contain their pleasure at the sight of the enemies of which they have always been so jealous, in the plight that they are in today. This is what a spokesman for the 'New Europe', emailing with foul language from Germany, saw fit to write in September 2004 to a British website specialising in highlighting the destructive and adverse consequences of Britain's failure to understand that 'Fur uns der Krieg ist niemals vorbei' means what it says: 'You seem to be * scared [sic] of German expansion. Unfortunately I have to tell you that expansion cannot be stopped. And soon you British will have to pay with Euros and in a few years English will be abolished and you will be forced to speak Germanic. I will not shed a tear for you lot'. And the senior figure who sent this email signed off with a reference to Churchill: 'With blood, sweat and tears'. The curious feature of this venomous mini-tirade is that Britain cannot, in fact, participate in Economic and Monetary Union (EMU) for many reasons, the most important of which is that the City of London is the seat of the International Petroleum Exchange, which of course trades exclusively in US dollars. This is because the US dollar system is based upon the oil (and drugs) standard which was cemented into place in collaboration with the Saudi Arabian Royal Family in the early 1970s. In any political collective, all dimensions of existence must logically be collectivised, since if areas that are 'uncollectivised' persist, they will challenge and 'degrade' (in the eyes of the controllers of the collective) the overall integrity of the collective itself. It is therefore an 'impossibility' for Britain to be integrated further into the European Union's structures - which means that it has finally been realised, in the Foreign Office and in parts of the intelligence services, that Britain's destiny does not lie with the failing European Union Collective.

One copy of this volume is to be found in the British Library, but the copy reviewed here was found in the Staastbibliothek, Berlin, with the stamp of the Preussische Staatsbibliothek. The chapter headings of this work correspond almost precisely to the primary themes of the Maastricht Treaty and its subsequent updates. Corrupt 'payola' payments were distributed to 'facilitators' of the European Union's Maastricht Treaty, just as was the case with the 'aborted' EU Constitution Treaty. In that case, a corruption amount of $5.0 billion was allocated from a Swiss slush fund, to be paid out in two segments of $2.5 billion, divided into 50 payments equivalent of $100 million each.

It is pathetic that such patchy official understanding has emerged four decades after the United Kingdom was betrayed by Abwehr agents, and that this betrayal was hushed up by the intelligence services themselves - a policy to which the entire Civil Service has consistently adhered. The apparent policy of allowing traitors to do their dirty work and only revealing the proportion of their treachery after their deaths, borders on the treacherous itself. One reason for its application in the case of German long-range strategy is that the Conservative Party has always contained a pro-Germen element, traceable back to the likes of Captain Macnamara. It is this traitor element that has sustained the party's disastrous stance over Britain's participation in the European Union which, as has been shown, is a long-range strategic deception and entrapment operation of the Abwehr and its successor 'Black' intelligence agency, Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst, based at Dachau. The outline plans for this corrupt and corrupting supragov-ernmental edifice were laid out in a Nazi compendium published in Berlin in 1942.

'EUROPAISCHE WIRTSCHAFTSGEMEINSCHAFT'

That the European Union is indeed a long-range DVD deception strategy was exposed by this Author in 1993, in an Occasional Paper published with International Currency Review[48] in which the contents of a compendium of lectures arising from a high-level Nazi seminar held in Berlin in 1941 were examined in relation to the subject-headings of the EU's Maastricht Treaty of 1992 - and were found to be almost identical. The lectures were published by Hauder & Spenersche Verlagsbuchhandlung Max Pashke, Berlin, in 1942 under the title 'Europaische Wirtschaftsgemeinschaft' ('European Economic Community'). Figure 92 on page 591 displays the front page of the copy lodged with the (Preussische) Staatsbibliothek in Berlin. Another copy exists in the British Library, London. The compendium was issued by the Association of Berlin Business People and Industrialists [Der Industrie und Handelskammer zu Berlin] in collaboration with the Berlin School of Economics [Wirtschafts-Hochschule Berlin].

'Europaische Wirtschaftsgemeinschaft' contains a 1942 Nazi Party blueprint of the European Community which is indeed almost identical to the structure of the European Economic Community, now the so-called European Union. This became apparent when the Author translated certain selected passages, and the Index, of this document, having tracked it down in the Reading Room of the British Library. The resulting English translation of the Table of Contents, displayed in Figure 93 on page 593, is given on pages 595-597. It confirms that the Nazis planned the establishment of a European Economic Community - complete with a common agricultural policy, a common exchange rate system and monetary policy, common industrial and trade policies, trans-European networks, and a powerful European Central Bank dominated by Germany. When in 1993, the Author made this straightforward and easily verifiable information widely available, including to the dumkopfs in the London-based media, no-one took any notice. Reasons for this include the fact that both main British political parries rely on 'payola' corruption and on drug-money flows laundered via 'benefactors' through offshore accounts for their survival, in accordance with the standard EU-DVD methodology, while the national newspapers have geopolitical and/or Illuminati axes to grind. For instance, certain newspapers, while ostensibly affecting wall-to-wall British patriotism, have historically belonged to the treacherous wing of the Conservative Party which has German affiliations.

Figure 93: Detail from the first page of the Contents of 'Europaische Wirtschaftsgemeinschaft', the Nazi compendium of presentations by senior Nazi officials and experts giving substance to the German project for a 'unified' Europe under German domination in perpetuity. When the Author published details of this Nazi book in 1993, the brainwashed British media paid no attention - as usual. Yet this work definitively proves that the European Economic Community/European Union project is a long-range strategic operation of the Abwehr. It has been elaborated and directed by the Nazi intelligence Continuum based at Dachau, Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst, which considers the EU operation to be one prong of a dual strategy to achieve hegemony over Germany's arch-enemies, Britain and the United States. The other prong of the strategy is manifested by the Fifth Column serving German interests at the highest levels of the US Federal structures.

ersity, described precisely what the Nazis were preparing. He had deduced that Hitler was organising his conquests into the United States of Europe as early as 1941. The predominantly industrial Reich had been enlarged by the annexation of The Netherlands, Luxembourg, parts of Belgium, Alsace Lorraine, Northern France as far as the Somme, and Western Poland. To feed this industrial heartland, food was to be conveyed from the outer periphery of Europe, which was mainly agricultural. All European production was to be regulated in minute detail from Berlin, from where Soviet-style central planning was to be directed; and all trade was to be controlled by means of a regional multilateral clearing system which Germany had already established among about a dozen states. But the system was fragile, since not all the annexed states were compliant; while its greatest weakness was a lack of raw materials.

At the Congress of Europe held in Rome between 14th and 20th November 1932, the Nazi Alfred Rosenberg had outlined ideas for the economic restructuring of Europe. These ideas were heavily promoted under the Nazis by the newspaper 'Die Deutsche Volkswirtschaft' ['The German People's Economy'], which campaigned for what one of the contributors to the compendium, Professor Dr Heinrich Hunke, called 'the concept of the German economy becoming self-sufficient in a new political sense'. Another influential advocate of a 'New Europe' reorganised economically and politically to meet the 'requirements' of the German Reich, was a German Ambassador, Daitz, whose selected speeches and essays were published in 1938 under the giveaway title Veutschland und die Europaische Grossraumwirtschaft' ['Germany and the Greater European Economy'].

Close attention was also paid by the Nazi leadership and by the Reich's planners to a speech by the prominent leader of the powerful German agricultural community, R. Walther Darre, in the course of a seminar held at Munich in January 1939 on the following subject: 'Market organisation of National Socialist agricultural policy as a pacemaker for a new foreign trade organisation'. So much, then, for the widespread belief that the market-rigging Common Agricultural Policy of today is a 'French ramp'. Paris knows, but conveniently keeps up its sleeve, that the socialist organisation of agriculture in Europe was first proposed by the Nazis.

Addressing the Bertelsmann Forum on 3rd April 1992, former German Chancellor Helmut Kohl confirmed that the German Government was openly promoting the establishment of a United States of Europe. Dr Kohl said: 'At Maastricht we laid the foundation stone for the completion of the European Union. The European Union Treaty introduces a new and decisive stage in the process of European union which within a few years will lead to the creation of what the founding fathers of modern Europe dreamed of following the last war: The United States of Europe'.

Given the behaviour of his country during that war, Dr Kohl was perhaps understandably economical with the truth on that occasion. For it was not the 'founding fathers of modern Europe', meaning the post-war politicians, who developed the scheme and who first attempted to establish a United States of Europe. It was Nazi Germany, and its pan-German predecessors, working behind the deep cover of the German-spawned Illuminati. This is perfectly clear from the Nazi book 'Europaische Wirtschaftsgemeinschaft'.

In order to prove that 'Europaische Wirtschaftsgemeinschaft''contains the precise blueprint of the European Community project as confirmed by the convoluted Maastricht Treaty and its successor variants, it is unfortunately necessary to reproduce some of the Nazi thinking and rhetoric contained in this document. It is no use just taking the Author's word for this: the serious observer needs proof, and this is presented herewith.

CHAPTER HEADINGS OF NAZI 1942 BOOK CORRESPOND TO THE MAIN HEADINGS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION'S MAASTRICHT TREATY

The main Contents Pages of 'Europaische Wirtschaftsgesellschaft', published in 1942 by Haude & Spenersche Verlagsbuchhandlung Max Paschke on behalf of the Association of Berlin Business People and Industrialists and the Berlin School of Economics, containing lectures on the subject of the new European Economic Community given in early 1942, reads as follows, as translated below. There is no doubt at all that this document contained the blueprint for the European Union, which is a long-range Nazi deception strategy. It has been directed all along by the Abwehr's successors, Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst, Dachau.

- Professor Dr Heinrich Hunke, President of the Association of Berlin Business People and Industrialists and of the Institute of the German Economy.

Introduction:
O Economic practice
O Problems facing the Continental European Economic Community.

- Walther Funk, Reich Economy Minister and President of the Reichsbank [Reichswirtschaftsminister und President der Deutschen Reichsbank]:

The Economic Character of the New Europe:
False and genuine economic freedom:
O Continental European cooperation [a.k.a. collectivisation]
O European capacity and how to supplement it
O State direction of the economy and Community work between the Member States
O Payment transactions between States and the European currency
O Securing Europe's living space and economic market
O The will to work for the European Community.

- Dr Horst Jecht, Professor and Nazi economist from the Berlin School of Economics:

The Development of the European Economic Community
O The European Economic Community and the formation of the larger area
O Problems of the European economic market in the late classical period and the Middle Ages
O Recent changes in the issue of the 'European space'
O Creation of states and independent state economies
O Expansion overseas and the consequences for Europe
O The separation of England from the Continent and the creation of the 'free world economy'
O The economic reformation of Europe: a task which must be addressed now
O The collapse of the former world economy [i.e. the 'Anglo-Saxon system']
O Objectives and methodology of the European Economic Community
O Forecast concerning its implementation.

- Dr Emil Woermann, Professor, University of Halle; Nazi agricultural expert:

The European Agricultural Economic Order [= The Common Agricultural Policy]
O Development of farming business methods; fabric of European foodstuffs economies
O The growth of the global economic division of labour in the agricultural sector
O Rising agricultural output in Germany and Italy
O Supply situation under the influence of economic strangulation and transformation
O Consequences in terms of production policy
O Prospects for increasing European production of foodstuffs.

- Dr Anton Reithinger, from I.G. Farben. Berlin:

The European Industrial Economy [= The Common Industrial Policy]
O The development of industry in the 19th century
O Stages in developing a technological economy
O Effects on social policy
O Europe's loss of industrial domination in World War I
O The transition to state direction and planning
O The New Europe and its common aspects
O Differences in regional areas
O Review of the relative industrial strengths of the warring power groups.

- Dr Philipp Beisiegel Director of the Reich Ministry of Labour and author of works on the direction of labour [= forced and slave labour + employment controls]

Employment in Europe
[= The Common Labour Policy, a.k.a. the Social Chapter, a watered-down derivative]
O Density of population and the numbers and structure of people in employment
O People - Europe's wealth
O Exchange of workers on the basis of agreements between Member States
O Principles of worker exchange
O Harmonisation of organisation of employment
O Use of contractors and shifting of orders.

- Gustav Koenigs, a State Secretary:

European Traffic Questions [= Trans-European Networks]
O The Magna Carta of European internal marine traffic
O Motorways and the European traffic community.
O European Community work in the shipping sector
O European Community work in the air transportation sector
[of the common transportation policy].

- Dr Bernhard Benning, Director of the Reichs-Kredit-Gesellschaft AG., Berlin:

European currency issues
[= Economic and Monetary Union as implemented under the Maastricht Treaty]
O The two aspects of currency
O Domestic economic problems of European currencies
O Foreign currency management and reciprocal billing
O Extension of multilateral billing
O The problem of the clearing balances
O Harmonisation of European rates of exchange
O The future form of the European Currency System
O Europe's future currency relations with the other key areas of the world
O What about gold?
O The European Currency Bloc.

- Dr Carl Clodius, Manager of the Foreign Trade Centre in Berlin:

European trading and economic agreements [= The European Single Market]
O The old trading policy
O German economic and trade policy since 1933
O Changes in trading policy brought about by the War
O The transformation of the law of supply and demand
O The question of European employment
O The traffic problem

Section concluded on page 597

O Effects of the English blockade on Europe O Principles of European cooperation
O The European regional principle [forerunner of the current European Regional Policy and the Committee of the Regions - a scheme to break down the constituent nation states and to foster links between the regions and the Euro-centre to render the national centres redundant]
O The economic independence of Europe
O Europe and the world economy
O Internal requirements for the European Economic Community
O Methods of European cooperation [= collective decision-making/collectivisation]

- Professor Dr Heinrich Hunke, President, Association of Berlin Business People and Industrialists and of the Institute of the German Economy, who added a conclusion:

The basic question: Europe - a geographical term or a political reality?
O Transformation of doctrine and thinking [i.e. into the new 'European' way of thinking]
O The starting point for setting tasks for Europe [by Germany, of course]
O The character of the world economy
O Political weakness of the European Continent: prerequisite for British world domination
O The concept of the modern national economy as monopolised by British opinion
O Setting up the European Economic Community. ■

THE MAASTRICHT TREATY: NAZI CONTROL REALISED

The European Union's Maastricht Treaty- procured by means of fraudulent 'facilitation payments' in 1992, following arm-twisting by the British Prime Minister of the day, John Major, and the betrayal of the 'Maastricht Rebels' in the Conservative Party (amid intelligence community hints of 'payola' corruption, as was confirmed in 2005 when the Author exposed the $5.0 billion of 'Black' Nazi Continuum funds set aside in a Swiss slush fund to 'finance' the European Constitution Treaty) - was the most convoluted demonstration of the Illuminati's trick of manufacturing incomprehensible legalese, that could be devised. Even the British Prime Minister's staff described the Treaty text as 'a can of worms' - on the basis of which remark, the Author commissioned the cartoon shown below.

The main headings of the Maastricht Treaty - which has been updated every four years or so since - a cynical Talmudic technique which procures that what was collectively imposed at the preceding Intergovernmental Conference is liable to be superseded at any time - conform precisely with those of the Nazi compendium dating from 1942 entitled 'Europaische Wirtschaftsgemeinschaft', meaning European Economic Community, reviewed in these pages. Notwithstanding this easily accessible evidence that the EU is modelled on the Nazi blueprint, bribery and corruption prevailed. ■

BRITAIN STOOD IN THE WAY

According to Professor Dr Heinrich Hunke, Great Britain and its European economic hegemony stood in the way of the promotion of European economic and political unification. 'The route and extent of European economic unity', he insisted, 'remained problematical, as long as it was possible for the Fuhrer to hope that he might be able to follow the path of peaceful conciliation with England'. And he added triumphantly that, after the events of 193940, this option was finally excluded.

The Nazis understood that the project of 'Europaische Grossraumwirtschaft' would be unattainable while 'the Anglo-Saxon economic system' remained intact. Thus Professor Hunke, one of the Hitler regime's leading economists, writes in the compendium of 1942:

'...Europe may not be... a market [area] in terms of a reduced world economy, in which... the old structural laws of the Anglo-Saxon world economy apply, but [rather] the European Economic Community must be shaped in accordance with the new political categories and will consequently appear different from the economy of the pasf.

As for the meaning of 'Grossraumwirtschaft', this was identical with that of the familiar slogan 'Lebensraum', which Hunke helpfully described in the following passage:

'By its Lebensraum Germany means:

(1) Sufficient space [for Germany] to be able to live and grow in an enclosed settlement in Europe. ['Europaische Grossraumwirtschaft' would not look outwards].

(2) The remodelling of the German economy along centralised state lines.

(3) Acknowledgment of the development of a Continental European Economic Community, permitting both the utilisation of domestic economic powers [and] furthermore ensuring that the economic capacity of friendly neighbouring states is mutually complementary and accessible [by Germany] in time of need; and:

(4) The development of a colonial economic supplementary area, as is customary and possible elsewhere in the world'.

The Nazi treatise is held together by a peroration attributed to the same Professor Dr Heinrich Hunke, Chairman of the German Economic Promotion Council in 1942, who appears to have had the task of summarising the papers. From this section, two passages are worth noting: 'At the turn of the year 1939-40, the main part of Europe was still under the spell of the English concept of economic organisation, whether Europe was aware of this fact or not. But in the course of recent years, this concept has been swept out of the Continental European countries in political, military and economic terms. In political terms [Europe has been reorganised with] every people and every area... living together as neighbours according to the ideals of a new peoples' order. In military terms, the foundation of English economic practice, the doctrine of the balance of power, has been utterly overturned. And in economic terms, as a result of the political and military developments, a revolution has been initiated.... The transformation taking place in our presence must be placed alongside the greatest economic revolutions in history... signifying fundamentally a turning-back by European economies to the time prior to the formation of the English Overseas Europe'.

'Much is owed to the newspaper 'Die Deutsche Volkswirtschaft' for having initially taken up these questions at the Congress of Europe [held] in Rome between 14th and 20th November 1932], for having put the arguments again and again, and for having maintained... with dogged persistence... the concept of the German economy becoming self-sufficient in a new political sense'. So Mazzini's Political Action Centre in the Vatican turns out to have been the guiding hand behind 'Europaische Wirtschaftsgemeinschaft'.

A NAZI EUROPEAN ECONOMIC COMMUNITY

These and innumerable other documented references confirm the direct lineage of the European Union Collective from Nazi Germany. It is nothing less than a classic long-range strategic deception operation - controlled from Dachau. When considered against the background of the contemporaneous deep-cover Nazi Continuum offensive against the United States, we have a classic 'scissors' dual strategic deception.

At the conclusion of 'Europaische Wirtschaftsgemeinschaft', Professor Hunke drew together the themes set out in the book by Reichswirtschaftsminister und President der Deutschen Reichsbank, Walther Funk, who expostulated on 'The economic character of the New Europe'; by Dr Horst Jecht, from the Berlin School of Economics, who anticipated the development of the new 'European Economic Community'; by Dr Emil Woermann, a Professor from the University of Halle, who described 'The New European Agricultural Order'; by Dr Anton Reithinger, from I. G. Farben. Berlin, who spoke about 'The New European Industrial Economy'; by Dr Philipp Beisiegel, Director of the Reich Ministry of Labour, who gave details of 'The New Labour Order', with emphasis on the rigging of labour markets, the movement of workers in accordance with inter-state agreements, and the direction of labour; by Gustav Koenigs, a State Secretary, whose paper discussed 'European Traffic Questions' - the Nazi blueprint for the EU's so-called 'Trans-European Networks'; by Dr Bernhard Benning, the Director of the Reichs-Kredit-Gesellschaft A.G., Berlin, who discussed 'European Currency Questions', including: The harmonisation of European rates of exchange', 'The future form of the European Currency System' ['Die Zukunft des europaishes Wahrungssystems'], and 'The European Currency Bloc' - all collectivist concepts which became familiar in the early 1990s; and by Dr Carl Clodius, the Manager of the Foreign Trade Centre based in Berlin, who described 'European Trading and Economic Agreements', touching upon: 'Principles of European Cooperation', 'The European Regional Principle' (the precursor of the EU's Common Regional Policy), 'Internal requirements of the European Economic Community', and finally 'Methods of European Cooperation'.

With the single exception of the chapter on the Common Labour Policy, with its emphasis on the direction of labour, all of these chapter and section headings would be entirely familiar to followers of European Community intrigue and politics today.

THE NEW EUROPE PLANNED BY THE NAZIS

The Nazi Professor Dr. Hunke philosophised thus: 'The ultimate manifestation of the European Economic Community would be as follows: Initially the utilisation of the productive powers of the peoples will initiate a general change in what is produced in terms of its expansion. No longer will there be only that produced which the world market price permits and offers, but that which the forces of the people and of the area make possible. It might very well be possible to say that freedom of labour replaces freedom of the economy. In practical terms, this then means the end of the national mono-cultures, to the extent that they have been determined by price. There is no sense in putting together all European countries by means of a Customs Union just in order to reconstruct for practical purposes a reduced form of the English world economy with precisely the same faults. Customs Unions are the means of eliminating excessive difficulties between two peoples' economies of the same level, and in such cases are necessary. However, any elimination of all Customs restrictions in present-day Europe overnight would only disturb and endanger unnecessarily the natural growing together of the European peoples' economies' (i.e., this Utopian collectivism cannot actually work).

'Secondly, the aim of future economic cooperation is community of living space, i.e. it should not be the task of the new economic policy to destroy mono-cultures only to replace them by impossible insularities. For example, the German Empire has in recent years redirected its economic focus back towards the state sector by means of a considerable degree of self-sufficiency, because this was the political prerequisite for the economic independence of Europe.... In 1932 [at the Rome Congress] Sering correctly pointed out that the power of the American economy would collapse on the day that high Customs barriers were erected at the borders of each of the 48 States of the North American union, as is the case in Europe. But the European States would run the risk of becoming economically overwhelmed and losing their political independence if trade barriers were removed all at once, unless one day a new organic association were to replace the economic impoverishment of the individual States'.

'In this European Economic Community two phenomena will be fundamentally new: full employment and the coverage of essential goods from within the domestic area'. [Author's Unavoidable Note: Experience, as predicted in articles by this Author, Peter Jay and others, has of course demonstrated that these predictions were 100% incorrect].'There can be no doubt that the experiences of the German people of having reached the stage of full employment from their own resources or on the basis of new economic awareness, will provide the other peoples with the means for better employment, and the execution of European tasks made necessary by the development of large portions of the Continent will at the same time employ resources to an extent imagined by only a few people today. In this way the European peoples will... free themselves from the condition of a proletariat without rights, and will build for themselves a new life'. In the event, the European Union experiment has been associated with sky-high unemployment and economic stagnation - demonstrating that Nazi economics was make-believe, as Third World countries encumbered with the formulae preached by the German Chicago School have discovered.

'Exactly the same economic political imperative will require that goods which are essential must also always be attainable; for what could the true meaning of the term Lebensraum be other than that of access at any time to essential goods.... It is accordingly clear that the European Economic Community will initiate an entirely new epoch for Europe. But it is just as evident that the practical implementation of the new principles will have to overcome many hindrances... [especially] difficulties which lie in the minds of Europeans, and not in the world of goods'.

'For example, I recall the problem of the clearing surpluses. One can understand why today there are still people who regard the clearing surpluses with considerable mistrust... What I have stated here in regard to the problem of the clearing surpluses applies fundamentally as regards all phenomena in the New Europe. The importance of German economic power is the prerequisite for the game which has now commenced, for all housekeeping is a form of compensation. But only that person who has the appropriate facilities can balance the books. Over and above this, reorientation of one's way of thinking, and familiarity with the new world of [European] ideas, is the necessary prerequisite for the further implementation and development of the European Economic Community...'. Making maximum use of the Leninist jargon word common, used by Communists and Nazis alike. Professor Hunke concluded:

'So let us not be diverted from initiating the Lebensraum Community by the small hindrances along the way. And as we progress along the path towards the New Europe, we find that we have reached the following unusual position. Common need enabled us to recognise common European problems. From the Congress of Europe [Rome, 1932], which took place at the invitation of the Italian Academy in November 1932 at Rome, to deal with the issue of the 'European Crisis' and to consider the question of Europe's spiritual unity, the economic division of power and Continental cultural issues, up to the Anti-Comintern Pact held in Berlin in the autumn of last year - what a powerful implementation of the biological resources of Europe in a struggle to maintain our European culture and the European peoples these occasions were! There can be no doubt that ultimately no people on the European Continent will be able permanently to refrain from the decision being fought about today'. Note that the Italian Academy fronted for the Political Action Centre, as sponsor of the little-remembered but crucial Congress of Europe.

'But what is more important is that common need not only permitted the recognition of common problems, but allowed above all like-minded spiritual and political movements to be created in the most different countries of Europe... In the meantime, the most important countries have also given a new image to the State...'.

'Harmony goes so far that today the single-party in contrast to the old multi-party system may be regarded as typical of the new political form in Europe. A similar unity is revealed in the field of economic direction.

Not surprisingly, in this state of collapse, in the common emergency, in pursuing our common defence, we recall also more and more our common past. Thus the common cultural foundation will grow slowly into a new European consciousness'.

'However, the decisive event on the path towards a new future for our old Continent will be common work [a.k.a. a Fascist form of collectivism].... I believe... that... the common future work of the European nations... will like nothing else promote and structure the European Economic Community. Much of what European people once created overseas has been lost, never to be recovered. That which fate has left to us, our homeland, our family and our place of work, we are now defending on the Continent. It is now up to us, whether we again construct a New World from the European spirit and from common European blood and thereby ensure for ourselves a new life and a new prosperity. The outlines of this new world are in front of us within our reach. Whether we succeed in building the New Europe ourselves is up to us; it depends upon our will, our development of resources and our use of resources'.

INTERVIEW WITH AN O.N.I. OPERATIVE IN CANADA

In May 2003, the Author interviewed a US Office of Naval Intelligence (ONI) operative in Canada, at his suggestion, to discuss various dimensions of what the Author had published in 'International Currency Review', Volume 28, Number 4, issued in March 2003[49], in which aspects of the subversion of the United States by corrupt, penetrated US intelligence cadres with their own agendas aligned to foreign powers driven by their Illuminati obsessions, were reviewed. In the course of this interview, the operative confirmed (paraphrased) that factional warfare within the vast intelligence community 'has been going on for a lot longer than I have been alive. It started with Germany, and the penetration by German Nazi intelligence which has been perpetuated by the children of the original Nazis brought to the United States. The main troubles in the world today are caused by these Nazis and their operations. Their activities are directly related to the world's troubles today'. The US operative, moreover, had no qualms in pointing the finger at George Bush Sr, whom he insisted 'IS THE GOVERNMENT'. He is directing strategy. He told and tells Bill and Hillary, George Bush Jr. and Cheney what to do'.

When the Author asked a question to the following effect - 'how far do these peo-ple intend to go with their programme to establish the Thousand-Year Reich on the ruins of the United States?' - the ONI operative told him: 'All the way'.

And he then drew attention to the special trains which were being constructed % move people out of the way who are going to give them a hard time'. At that stage, the Author had only heard about these US 'death trains' from various 'underground' sources and was exercising his journalistic right and duty to be sceptical. Were these trains associated with the network of concentration camps that has been established in North America [seepages 612-613], he asked. The answer was: 'Absolutely'. 'The Author also asked for and obtained, hard confirmation of the revelation that the Amtrak 'repair' facility in Indianapolis, which will 'take out' 26,000 religious and political prisoners arrested under Martial Law every 24 hours, had been converted to a gas extermination depot

According to persistent reports, Amtrak containers with ceiling fittings have been designed to be connected to gas pipes so that a gas comparable to Zyklon-B can be administered to those held in the container trucks, ready for transportation to disposal areas. This was the technique used by the Nazis in Hungary, Latvia and the Soviet Union during the Second World War. Opponents were shot inside a special train, which stopped to pick up victims in the same way that a normal train picks up passengers. The victims were disposed of inside the train trucks and conveyed by the train for disposal - so that, when the death trains moved on, traces of the mass murders were not left at 'liquidation' scenes.

CONFIRMATION OF THE AMTRAK DEATH FACILITY

Al Cuppett, at the Pentagon, is reported to have been among those who have confirmed the existence and purpose of this industrialised death 'facility'. He is stated to have confirmed that 'it is a gassing/crematory facility where large former 'repair barns' can hold four prisoner boxcars at a time, while deadly toxic gas is released into the barn and the boxcars'. Some of these boxcars contain, according to several eyewitness reports, guillotines imported from Japan and China installed in them. They all have shackles installed for the retention of prisoners, as separately confirmed to this Author by the Office of Naval Intelligence source. One type of container, imported from China, is 40 feet long, equipped with shackles and a modern guillotine at the front end. For all practical purposes, the boxcars appear to be 'normal' Chinese trade cargo containers marked HANJIN, COSCO etc that can be piggybacked on train flatbeds or trucks. According to one report, 20,000 of these boxcars were ordered under secret contract from China.

The model for these Amtrak gas containers was described by Gertrude Schneider, who was deported on 6th February 1942 from Vienna, cited by Dr Martin Gilbert in 'The Holocaust: The Jewish Tragedy '[Fontana Press/HarperCollins Publishers, London, 1987].

Dr Gilbert explained that 'the Viennese transport reached Riga on February 10. It was met at the station by Dr Rudolph Lange, one of the Jewish Nazi officials who had been present at the Wannsee Conference' fwhere the definitive arrangements were made for the 'Final Solution' under Adolf Eichmann]. Gertrude Schneider later recalled how Lange told these latest arrivals that those who were 'unwilling or unable' to walk the seven kilometres to the ghetto could make the journey on trucks which had been especially reserved for them. 'In this way', he said, 'those of you who ride can prepare a place for those who walk'. Gertrude Schneider's graphic account continued: "'It was an extremely cold day - forty-two degrees below zero, to be exact - and so the majority of the hapless, unsuspecting Jews from Vienna took his advice and lined up to board the trucks. They did not know that those greyish-blue trucks had been manufactured at the Saurer Works in Austria especially for the implementation of the 'Final Solution'. These trucks were the gas-vans, which were used from time to time despite the fact that the SS did not especially like them because they always had mechanical problems'[50].

The 800+ prison or concentration camps in the United States today are all fully or prospectively operational, and ready to receive prisoners. By late 2005, there were reports of large numbers of (deliberately) displaced Blacks from the New Orleans area being held in prison camps, while the Amtrak Station in the city was still, as late as June 2006, being used as a prison. According to reports, the camps were to be operated by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA, financed initially by Illuminati drug money) and since subsumed within the Department of Homeland Security (a.k.a. the Ministry of State Security) should Martial Law need to be implemented. All that would be necessary would be a Presidential signature on a proclamation, and the US Attorney General's signature on a warrant, to which a list of names would be attached.

Associated or integrated with the US concentration camp and prospective 'death train' infrastructure is the previously mentioned 'Rex-84' program, which uses the name of the highest 'Degree' of the Illuminati (see Figure 78, page 497). The rationale for the establishment of this programme, for public consumption purposes, was reportedly that if a 'mass exodus' of illegal aliens were to cross the Mexican/US border, they would be rounded up and detained in 'Rex-84' detention centres by FEMA. It was under the 'Rex-84' Program that many US domestic military bases were closed down with the so-called 'end of the Cold War' and turned into prisons or concentration camp 'facilities'.

MORE ABOUT THE AMERICAN DEATH CAMP BOXCARS

The US Nazis are certainly 'on top of preparations for the confirmation of the Fourth Reich. The equivalent of the Saurer Works in Nazi Austria is Gunderson Steel Fabrication of Portland, Oregon, which is assisted by other boxcar and associated manufacturing companies around the United States. Gunderson, working with Bethlehem Steel, obtained a contract to build 107,200 full-length railroad boxcars, each with 143 pairs of shackles. A total of 11 contractors were reported in 2005 to be involved in the manufacture of these death boxcars. It was also reported in 2005 that mobile prison units had been seen on train flatbeds in Georgia.

According to Michael Maholy, allegedly a veteran of 20 years in the CIA and the Office of Naval Intelligence, and as confirmed independently by the alleged former CIA assassin, Elaine Knost, the Nazi-Illuminati establishment has a clear idea of who 'the enemy' from their perspective is to be. 'Oh, all of us in the intelligence community know about the concentration camps and their purposes. We all know that they are to terminate the resisters to the New World Order under Martial Law'.

The existence of the concentration camps and death train complex, and their purpose, was separately confirmed to a US intelligence contact of the Author's by General Alexander Haig. And during this Author's interview in May 2003 with the Office of Naval Intelligence operative, the death trains were independently described as providing 'standing room only.... Shackles out of the ceiling... Same principle as Hitler's trains'. The operative referred to a military intelligence officer, known to the Author and colleagues by name, who has 'actually been on the trains'. He added that a train tunnel has already been constructed beneath the Bering Strait, and that prisoners able to work 'will be' exported in such boxcars under the Strait to work in covert Soviet labour camps - joining up the intended American Nazi GULAG with the continuing Soviet GULAG, details of which are given in Appendix 2 to this Chapter [page 614].

It is usually the case that explanations are concocted for public consumption, in order to 'manage' public perceptions and reaction when a strategic intelligence programme surfaces into the public domain, as ALWAYS happens in the end, since 'nothing is hid, that shall not be known'[51]. This routine practice may explain the surfacing of information about the Interhemispheric Bering Strait Tunnel and Railroad Group, reports of which suggest that this is a project for the future - whereas the intelligence operative interviewed by the Author in May 2003 specifically indicated that the tunnel had been completed and was in use; and furthermore, that a veteran known to this Author had actually travelled on the trains and through the tunnel. For public consumption, the Bering Strait Tunnel and Railroad Group is a small, private, non-profit group of individuals from around the world who share the objective of constructing a rail and tunnel line connecting the Western with the Eastern Hemispheres, so that the North American rail system is connected with that of Russia. According to public domain information available in 2003, this was to be done by extending the existing lines, with the construction of about 4,800 miles of additional track, and building a tunnel across the Bering Strait at Wales, Alaska, and connecting at approximately Uelen, in Russia.

'Resisters' to the 'New World Order' - the 'Order' of the Illuminati which is to be imposed by the 'New World'- include Christians who are Bible believers (such as this Author), Constitutionalists, Patriots, US gun-owners who refuse to relinquish their Second Amendment rights, anyone foolish enough to adhere to the notion of national sovereignty and the US Constitution and who rejects the Luciferian ideal and intended reality of World Government, and all unreformed authors, broadcasters, lecturers and clergy (pastors) who are not enamoured of the hell that is thereby intended. Also targeted of course are those who understand that, since this mad 'Permanent Revolution' is born of corruption, the global control apparat cannot fail to manifest itself as the New Underworld Order - characterised by the overflowing of the filthy, stinking underground River Styx from Hades up to the surface, where it is swamping the structures of civilised and orderly governance.

SINISTER ASSOCIATED REPRESSION PROGRAMMES

Two sinister sub-programmes, named Cable Splicer and Garden Plot, will be implemented once the 'Rex-84' Program is initiated for its proper purpose. Cable Splicer provides for the 'orderly' takeover of state and local governments by the Federal Government, while Garden Plot is a programme to control the population, no doubt in part through the unofficial 'privatised' arrangements which were being put in place (as of 2006) such as the new Neighbourhood Watch Association domestic spying system (prop: Marcus Wolf). The concentration and prison camps all have railroad infrastructures as well as roads leading to and from the detention 'facilities', while many also have a local airport nearby -convenient for use by a greatly expanded manifestation of the existing arrangements for the non-stop transportation of prisoners around the country by a fleet of planes operated by J.P.A.T.S. (Justice Prisoner and Alien Transportation System) created under President Clinton in 1995 when the Marshals Service and the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) merged their resources. On average, more than 270,000 prisoner and alien movements are handled annually by J.P.A.T.S., extensively by air, out of Kansas City. The relevant air fleet operations are located in Oklahoma City, Alexandria (LA), Mena (AK), Anchorage (Alaska), and the US Virgin Islands.

The largest of US concentration camp is said to be located just outside Fairbanks, Alaska. This is reported to be a massive, Soviet-style 'mental health' facility, capable of handling approximately two million people. Given realities such as these, the remarks by the just-retired US Supreme Court Judge Sandra Day O'Connor at Georgetown University, reported by National Public Radio, the 'Chicago Daily Law Bulletin', and 'The Guardian' [13th March 2006] to the effect that the United States is edging towards a dictatorship, described as 'forceful', were too mild and came almost too late.

THE AVALANCHE OF PRESIDENTIAL CONTROL ORDERS

A large portfolio of US Presidential Executive Orders, which will have been augmented since the 'census' that follows was taken, has been accumulated, associated with FEMA and a prospective suspension of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. Some of these have been on the US Statute Book for more than 30 years, and could be activated by the stroke of the presidential pen. They include: Executive Orders 10990 (allowing the US Government to take over all modes of transportation); 10995 (allowing the Government to seize and control the communications media); 10997 (allowing the Government to take over all electrical power, gas, petroleum, fuels and minerals operations and resources); 10998 (allowing the US Government to seize all means of transportation, including personal cars, trucks or vehicles of any kind and total control over all highways, seaports and waterways); 10999 (enabling the Government to take over all food resources and farms); 11000 (permitting the Government to mobilise civilians into work brigades under government supervision - that is, Nazi direction of labour); 11001 (allowing the Government to take over all health, education and welfare functions); 11002 (designating the Postmaster General to operate a national registration index of all persons); 11003 (allowing the Government to take over all airports and aircraft, including commercial aircraft); 11004 (allowing the Housing and Finance Authority to relocate communities, build new housing with public funds, designate areas to be abandoned, and establish new locations for populations, exactly as occurred in New Orleans in 2005); 11005 (allowing the Government to take over railroads, inland waterways and public storage facilities); 11051 (specifying the responsibility of the Office of Emergency Planning and giving authorisation to put all Executive Orders into effect at times of increased international tensions and economic or financial crisis); 11310 (granting authority to the Department of Justice to enforce the plans set out in Executive Orders, to institute industrial support, to establish judicial and legislative liaison, to control all aliens, to operate penal and correctional institutions, and to advise and assist the President); 11049 (assigning emergency preparedness functions to Federal Departments and agencies, consolidating 21 operative Executive Orders issued over a 15-year period); and 11921 (allowing the Federal Emergency Preparedness Agency to develop plans to establish control over the mechanisms of production and distribution, of energy sources, wages and salaries, credit and the flow of money in US financial institutions in any undefined national emergency environment. This Executive Order also provides that when a State of Emergency is declared by the President, the Congress cannot review the President's action for six months. The Federal Emergency Management Agency, now buried within the Department of Homeland Security, has broad powers in respect of every dimension of national existence. The Chief of FEMA's Civil Security Division, General Frank Salezo, stated at a conference held in 1983 that he saw FEMA's role as 'a new frontier in the protection of individual and governmental leaders from assassination, and of civil and military installations from sabotage and/or attack, as well as the prevention of dissident groups from gaining access to US opinion, or a global audience in times of crisis'. FEMA's powers were consolidated by President Jimmy Carter to incorporate (a) the National Security Act of 1947, which, in addition to covering official criminal oper-ations under a blanket justification of 'national security', allows for the strategic reloca-tion of industries, services, Government and other essential economic activities, and to rationalise requirements for manpower, resources and production facilities; (b) the Defense Production Act of 1950, which gives the President sweeping powers over all aspects of the economy; (c) an Act of 29th August 1916, which authorises the Secretary of the Army, in time of war, to take possession of any transportation system for transporting troops, materiel, or any other purpose related to the emergency; and finally: (d) the International Emergency Economic Powers Act, which enables the President of the United States to seize the property of a foreign country or national. All these powers were transferred to FEMA in a sweeping consolidation in 1979; but it appears that lines of communication 'broke down' during the New Orleans 'Katrina' crisis, which should have been handled by FEMA, as required by these consolidated Acts. As a consequence of the 'Katrina' crisis, land previously the location of Black housing has been acquired by the authorities for clearance and probably oil sector development. The main levee was breached far below the waterline as a consequence of an explosion, heard by local residents at 4.00 am on the morning of the disaster. The land on which Black housing stood may overlay a large oil reservoir, implying for many analysts that this 'emergency' was contrived - as implied later by Vice President Cheney when he made the cynical comment: 'We are on top of this exercise'.

THE OUTCOME IS NOT INEVITABLE: FAILURE IS A CERTAINTY

In the view of many jaded observers of these developments, the promoters of the New Underworld Order are 'out of the gate' and unstoppable. But there are sound practical reasons for knowing that this resigned attitude is mistaken. In the first place, rival domestic and foreign sectors are competing desperately for control of the New Age of Man - which means that this demented project is certain to fail and collapse: 'A house divided against itself cannot stand'[52]. The furiously competing cadres within the vast US intelligence community are themselves the misguided instruments of European powers which are at loggerheads with each other for the same reason - and for control over the United States. A US intelligence expert adds that 'we underestimate the Japanese in all of this' - an insight with which the Author readily concurs, given the historical links and similarity between the German and Japanese corporate (Fascist) systems.

Secondly, the reality is that 'the Gates of Hell shall not prevail' against the Word of Jesus Christ[53]. These gates are wide open, enticing the unwary in vast numbers to perdition. For that is where they are headed: as Jesus, whose logic was always perfect, warned, 'if the blind lead the blind, BOTH shall fall into the ditch'[54] (an obvious truth). Because they know this, both categories of 'the blind' are riven with hatred against those who refuse to go along with them to keep them company. The 'seething energies of Lucifer' will not leave them alone. 'Enter ye in at the strait gate; for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat; because straight is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it'[55]. If we chose the narrow way, rejecting Lucifer's enticements, we have the comfort of Christ's eternal promise: 'And lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world'[56].

Figure 94: A document which proves that the Iraq War was being prepared long before the 9/11 'Reichstag Fire' event. This was among the large cache of documents released by President George W. Bush's first Treasury Secretary, Paul O'Niell, after he was fired. Note especially that the Bush II Government obtained its economic information on Iraq from the German institution, Deutsche Bank, which is de facto the financial implementer of German (DVD) official secret strategy. Observe also the reference to a 'Political-Military Plan for Post-Saddam Iraq', and that the US State Department was to persist with cynical diversionary 'sanctions talk'.

10. Second Epistle of Paul to the Thessalonians, Chapter 2, verse 7: 'For the mystery of iniquity doth already work: only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way'. This is a most significant verse, which few understand. The 'mystery of iniquity' is clearly a reference to the frequently unfathomable deviousness and subtlety of Satan, his legions of demons working through those he and they control and whom they possess, and his Works of Darkness. It precisely meets our naturally anxious need to grasp what motivates the perpetrators of evil, and why they so often seem to command hegemony. But consider also the second part of Paul's statement: 'only he who now letteth' - Satan who is running wild and 'walking to and for over the earth'* and appears to have little resistance. And look at the words 'already' and 'now' in Paul's statement - meaning, that Satan was 'already', and 'now', since the birth, passion and resurrection of Christ, working overtime with his 'seething energies' to destroy and defeat the Word of the Lord and the reality of the living Christ, who is 'the Way, the Truth and the Life'. So what Paul was actually saying here fully supports what Chaim Rakover told his MVD interrogators, as elaborated so beneficially by Dr Henry Mackow. Paul was telling the Thessalonians (and us) that the ''permanent revolution' spoken of by Rackover was already under way. He concluded his statement by assuring us that he (Satan) will 'be taken out of the way'. That is a promise we must never forget; for if we believe, then of course it is manifestly true (something that no-one who does not yet understand how the living Christ ''works''' in us, cannot understand. (* Job, Chapter 1, verse 7: 'And the Lord said unto Satan, Whence comest thou? Then Satan answered the Lord, and said, 'From going to and for in the earth and from walking up and down in it').
11. Second Epistle to the Thessalonians, Chapter 2, verse 7: 'For the mystery of iniquity doth already work; only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way. And then shall that wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume by the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming; Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders'.

24. Matthew, Chapter 5, verses 33-37. Note in this text, the important and overlooked command that we must not swear by the earth, 'for it is His (God's) footstool'. To the mind of the Author, this provides confirmation of his belief, or rather certainty, that there is no life anywhere in the universe except here on earth, and that it was on earth that the Lord performed his great works. This becomes obvious when one considers this statement more closely: if the earth is 'the Lord's footstool', then by definition Mars, Pluto, Jupiter and numerous moons and planets are NOT his footstool - that is to say, the place where the Lord performed all his great works. The search for life among the planets and in outer space, is a delusion descended from and directly linked to the occult preoccupations of astrologers, magicians, the death-oriented Egyptians, and Babylonian sorcerers.

29. 'Obituary of Sir Edward Heath, the Prime Minister who took Britain into the EEC and presided over constant turmoil at home', The Daily Telegraph', 18th July 2005. This was probably the rudest obituary of a prominent UK statesman ever to have appeared in print. Even so, it omitted any reference to Heath's recruitment by German (Nazi) intelligence. However there were many [coded] references in this obituary, not least the final three telling words: 'He never married', which observers accurately interpret as meaning that he was homosexual, and therefore an obvious recruitment/blackmail target.

30. 'Hitler's Hidden Treasure', 'United Nations World', April 1952, and 'Rebirth of the Nazi International', The Nation', 5th April 1952. The only problem with the second analysis is that there was no strategic discontinuity, so no 'rebirth'.

32. Yuri Nosenko, a KGB operative sent to Washington to neutralise strategic revelations by the Soviet defector Anatoliy Golitsyn, has described the execution of Lavrentii Pavlovich Beria in terms which suggest that he himself was the executioner. Beria was described as begging for his life in floods of tears, to no avail.

33. T. H. Tetens, 'Germany Plots with the Kremlin', op. cit., page 9.

34. This is a reference to the devious means by which the German Nazi geopolitical planners managed to contrive a comprehensive US policy U-turn. While President Roosevelt remained alive, the policy in Washington had been to devastate Germany to such an extent that it would never recover industrially. After Roosevelt's death, however, a group of Germanophiles, just like Edward Heath, who had lived in Germany before the war, found themselves with sufficient influence to procure the reversal of the policy. The group in question was led by George Kennan at the State Department, who exploited the emergence of Stalin's USSR as the 'new' enemy, and promoted the idea of rebuilding Germany as a 'bulwark against the East', a strategy which ignored the secret German policy of orientation towards Russia and the penetration of its intelligence and Party structures by German agents. Kennan influenced President Truman and was also instrumental in procuring the effective abandonment of de-Nazification, thereby facilitating the importation of a cadre of 770 top warfare scientists who had been working for Himmler in connection with occult mind- and personality control and manipulation techniques, rocket science, space travel and other programmes. These high-ranking Nazis penetrated the OSS, which became the Central Intelligence Agency, and have been associated with the promotion and exploitation of the occult and with some of the darkest programmes of US intelligence, such as MK-ULTRA. The Nazis are Illuminati and their central locus is Dachau, a place which is associated for all eternity with their 'Final Solution' mass murder apparatus. It is little surprise that the United States, which is today in grave danger of developing into a Nazi-style dictatorship, has constructed a large number of concentration camps: see Appendix 2 to this Chapter, pages 612-613. The Military Commissions Act of 2006 provided for Congress to strip away the Judiciary's jurisdiction over certain areas of law. The dictatorial legislation made citizen dissidents subject to arrest as enemy combatants (determined solely by secret military tribunal), allowing for their indefinite detention, and removing any Habeas Corpus right to demand that the Government must show cause for holding them as a prisoner. So the concentration camps may soon fill up.

And if a house be divided against itself, that house cannot stand'. The fascinating point here is that the Lord says this in precisely the context we have been considering, namely that followers of the Evil One are always actually or potentially at loggerheads: verse 26: 'And if Satan rise up against himself, and be divided, he cannot stand, but hath an end'.

THE MOLOTOV-RIBBENTROP PACT MARK II

The November 1991 issue of 'Politika', a small Czechoslovak newspaper, exposed details of a secret German-Soviet pact to carve up Europe - a second 'Molotov-Ribbentrop Pact'. A translation of the text of this cynical accord, originally written in German, is given on page 611.

SOUKROMÝ LIST PRO POLITIKU A EKONOMIKU

Důvěrná informace z jednání sovětských a německých expertů o geopolitických problémech střední Evropy-Ženeva, září 1990

- SRN požaduje na SSSR kompenzace za anektované východní Prusko a za prostor východně od Odry - Nisy.
- SRN požaduje odstoupení sovětského vlivu v českomoravském regionu. SSSR nehodlá trpět v blízkosti svých hranic režim ČSFR, který nepřijal gesto SSSR, jímž nechal padnout Husákův režim ČSSR. Vláda ČSFR neustává v agitaci proti SSSR a zlehčuje pozici sovětské vlády a prezidenta. Děje se tak rozdílně od vlád Polska a Maďarska.
- SSSR nebude bránit rozdělení ČSFR pro nedostatek garance politické rovnováhy ve střední Evropě a nedostatek státotvornosti národů Československa.
- Sovětský svaz souhlasí s perspektivním začleněním českomoravského regionu do zájmové ekonomické sféry SRN a s politickým začleněním tohoto regionu do Německa v průběhu 12-15 let.
- SRN vyrovná ekonomické ztráty způsobené tím Sovětskému svazu.
- SRN bude pro možný pokles popularity vedení ČSFR připravovat i pro Sovětský svaz přijatelné garnitury nakloněné Německu, jako alternativu i z levicových stran, bez zjevného zasahování do profilace politických stran.
- Se zřetelem na ochotu Maďarska udržet politickou a ekonomickou stabilitu v podunajském regionu nebudou SSSR a SRN bránit obnovení Maďarska v původních hranicích do trianonské smlouvy. SRN zvýší ekonomickou pomoc Maďarsku, aby se pozvedl standard v Maďarsku nad úroveň Slovenska, aby se tak připojení k Maďarsku stalo pro Slováky přitažlivé.
- SSSR nemá námitek proti zakládání německé university a středních škol v českomoravském regionu a financování těchto škol Německem.
- SSSR nemá námitek proti rozdělení Jugoslávie, a souhlasí s odstoupením Chorvatska a Slovinska do ekonomické sféry SRN.
- Sovětský svaz nemá námitek proti použití prostředků politické destabilizace.
- SRN se nebude angažovat v otázce Ukrajiny, Litvy, Lotyšska a Estonska a nebude je považovat za oblast ekonomického zájmu nad únosnou míru.
- SSSR nebude bránit odtržení Zakarpatské Ukrajiny v případě destabilizující činnosti ukrajinských nacionalistů a její začlenění do Maďarské republiky.
- SSSR nemá námitek proti postupné kolonizaci českých pohraničních oblastí Sověty a Němci.

Zasloužená pocta

Prezidentská zlatá medaile za podporu státu Izrael byla při nedávné návštěvě USA udělena zednářskou lóží B'nai B'rith prezidentu ČSFR Václavu Havlovi. Při této příležitosti přednesl V. Havel projev, ve kterém připomněl slib, že Československo zlikviduje antisemitismus, za což se mu dostalo obrovského aplausu.

A za pozornost jistě stojí i fakt, že na zmíněné zednářské fórum uvedl československého prezidenta filmový režisér Miloš Forman.

VÝZVA

My, ktorí sme sa prihlásili k iniciatíve Za zvrchované Slovensko, obraciame sa na občanov Slovenskej republiky s touto výzvou:

Slovenský národ má vzácnu historickú a neopakovateľnú príležitosť uplatniť demokratickou cestou prirodzené a neodňateľné právo na vlastnú zvrchovanosť. Najnovšie udalosti v strednej a východnej Európe nás utvrdili v presvedčení, že nastal čas rozhodnúť. Už nie je možné odkladať uskutočnenie základného práva na štátnu zvrchovanosť na základe uplatnenia sebaurčovacieho práva národov.

Vyzývame všetkých občanov Slovenskej republiky bez ohľadu na politické názory, vierovyznanie a národnosť, aby podporili myšlienku demokratickej, svetu otvorenej zvrchovanej Slovenskej republiky.

Vyzývame slovenské politické reprezentácie, aby zasadli za stôl národnej dohody.

Vyzývame poslancov SNR, aby si uvedomili vážnosť situácie, aby sa povzniesli nad úzke stranícke záujmy a vyhlásili v čo najkratšom čase zvrchovanosť Slovenska a v nadväznosti na to prijali a vyhlásili Ústavu Slovenskej republiky.

Len takto sa môže Slovensko ako rovnocenný partner zaradiť do spoločenstva európskych štátov.

Iniciatíva ZA ZVRCHOVANÉ SLOVENSKO

Z významnejších osobností slovenského politického života Výzvu podpísali m.j.: J. Budaj, M. Kňažko, J. Markuš, V. Mečiar, V. Ondruš, J. Prokeš, Š. Kvietik a ďalší.

Figure 95; The front page of the Czechoslovak periodical 'Politika' dated 14th-20th November 1991, giving details of a secret German-Russian agreement to carve up Europe (= Molotov-Ribbentrop Pact II). The original document was faxed to the publication's offices and was probably originally written in German, and was therefore certainly by Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst (DVD), Dachau. The main provisions of this secret accord were subsequently implemented to the letter. For instance, Czechoslovakia was divided, and parts of Yugoslavia were taken into the German sphere of influence. See page 611 for this Author's English translation/comment.

The issue of the Czechoslovak newspaper 'Politika' illustrated on page 610, subtitled the 'Private JOURNAL OF Politics AND ECONOMICS' and dated 14th-20th November 1991 contained the 'Heads of Agreement' reached in secret between the Soviet Union and Germany in September 1990, in Geneva. Apart from a summary report by the BBC Monitoring Service dated 25th January 1993, the somnolent UK 'mainstream' media were fast asleep when this carve-up arrangement was exposed. It represented a German-sponsored grab for power and influence undertaken in the context of the Leninist orchestrated 'collapse' of the Soviet Union and financed by 'Black' payments. As will be seen, the main provisions of this cynical accord were implemented shortly afterwards. No-one outside intelligence circles anticipated the break-up of Czechoslovakia, provided for by this accord. Even after the Author published this information in 1993, the British media studiously ignored it.

CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION FROM A MEETING OF SOVIET AND GERMAN EXPERTS ON THE GEOPOLITICAL PROBLEMS OF CENTRAL EUROPE: GENEVA, SEPTEMBER 1990

- The Federal Republic of Germany demands [Nazi language - Author] compensation from the USSR for annexed Eastern Prussia and for the area east of the Oder-Niesse.
- The Federal Republic of Germany demands the withdrawal of Soviet influence in the Bohemian-Moravian region. The USSR has no intention of tolerating in the vicinity of its borders the Czechoslovak Federal regime, which did not accept the Soviet gesture by means of which Husak's Socialist regime was allowed to fall. The Government of the CSFR persists in its anti-Soviet agitation and is making the position of the Soviet Government and President difficult. The Governments of Poland and Hungary, by contrast, behave differently.
- The USSR will not impede the division of the CSFR because of insufficient guarantee of political stability in Central Europe, and insufficient state-formation by the nationalities of Czechoslovakia.
- The Soviet Union agrees to the eventual incorporation of the Bohemian-Moravian region into the German sphere of economic interests and to the political incorporation of this region into Germany over 12-15 years.
- The Federal Republic of Germany will make [due] compensation for the losses this [i.e., such a transfer -Author] causes to the Soviet Union.
- In the event of a drop in the popularity of the leaders of the CSFR, the Federal Republic of Germany will prepare as an alternative political teams predisposed towards Germany that are at the same time acceptable to the USSR. Members of these alternative political teams [to be set up if necessary in Slovakia and the Czech Republic, if 'cooperation' is not forthcoming from the incumbents there - Ed.] will come from left-leaning parties as well [sic]. The Federal Republic of Germany will do this without visibly affecting the image [Czech: 'profilace'] of the political parties concerned [Author: = Intelligence operations].
- With regard to the willingness of Hungary to maintain political and economic stability in the Danube region, the USSR and the Federal Republic of Germany will not impede the re-establishment of a Hungary within the original borders in accordance with the Trianon Treaty. The Federal Republic of Germany will increase its political assistance to Hungary so that the standard of living in Hungary will be raised above that in Slovakia, so that joining Hungary becomes attractive to Slovaks.
- The USSR has no objections to the establishment of a German University and high schools in the Bohemian-Moravian region, or to the funding by Germany of these schools.
- The USSR has no objections to the division of Yugoslavia. It agrees to the shifting of Croatia and Slovenia to the economic sphere of the Federal Republic of Germany.
- The Soviet Union has no objections to the use of vehicles of political destabilisation.
- The Federal Republic of Germany will not involve itself in the questions of the Ukraine, Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, and will not consider these to be areas of economic interest beyond an acceptable level.
- The USSR will not impede the separation of the Transcarpathian Ukraine in the event of destabilising activity on the part of Ukrainian nationalists and their incorporation into the Hungarian Republic.
- The USSR has no objections to the gradual colonisation of the Czech border regions by Soviets and Germans.

This text was faxed to the offices of 'Politika'. Having interviewed the Editor at his house outside Prague, a contact of the Author was certain that this document was indeed simply faxed to the paper, which proceeded at once to reproduce it. A close examination of the structure of the sentences and language by a Czech language expert in Prague revealed that the text is unlikely to have been translated into Czech from the Russian. On the contrary, it was originally written in German. This is apparent not least from the opening German 'demands'. Another reason for this conclusion is the use of the Czech word 'profilace', for which no comparable word, in either Russian or English, exists. However the German word 'profilierung' - image - is appropriate in the context. 'Politika' was, at the time of the article's publicatioa a well-known, controversial, small weekly paper selling several thousand copies, available on central Prague newsstands, and widely read by officials and the intelligentsia. The accord provides further evidence of German hegemony ambitions - directed by Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst from Dachau. ■

APPENDIX 2 TO CHAPTER 8:

THE NORTH AMERICAN ILLUMINATI GULAG CAMP SYSTEM

The following directory of the North American Nazi-style concentration camp system has been compiled from open domain sources, but is based upon 'Humint' observation and is incomplete. Some doubts have been raised about Canadian entries by 'field walkers'. The data are arranged alphabetically/geographically. The total number of US concentration camps is estimated at around 800, possibly excluding the comparable camps in Canada.

ALABAMA: Opelika, Aliceville: World War II German/Italian POW camp. Maxwell Air Force Base, Talladega: Civilian prison camps. ALASKA: Wilderness; Concentration camp with estimated capacity of 500,000. Other camps etc. at Elmendorf Air Force Base, Eielson Air Force Base, Fort Wainright.

ARIZONA: Phoenix:World War II prison camp, capacity 3,500. Davis-Monthan Air Force base: Fully operational with prisoners for many years ARKANSAS: Fort Chaffee: New camp with capacity for 40,000. Pine Bluff Arsenal: Holding location for B-Z nerve agent, which causes sleepiness, dizziness, stupor, for civilian control. Blythville Air Force Base: Closed airbase reconstructed as concentration camp, with guard towers, high fences etc. Many other incarceration installations in this key Illuminati State. CALIFORNIA: Vandenburg Air Force Base: Huge internment centre near ocean. Twentynine Palms Marine Base: New camps under construction/built; Oakdale: Camp with capacity for 20,000+. Fort Irwin: Staffed camp. Manzanar: Old World War II Japanese camp, ready for renovation. McLellan Air Force Base: Capacity for up to 35,000.

CANADA: According to reliable Canadian sources, virtually all Canadian military bases, especially those North of the 50th parallel, contain concentration camps. Among these are: Suffield CFB, North of Medicine Hat, less than 60 miles from USA; Primrose Lake Air Range, 70 miles East of Edmonton; Wainwright CFB, between Medicine Hat and Primrose Lake; Fort Nelson, the northernmost point on the British Columbia railhead; Fort McPherson (extremely cold); NW Territories: Fort Providence, located on the Great Slave Lake; Halifax, Nova Scotia, a Department of National Defence Reserve.

COLORADO: Trinidad: World War II German/Italian internment camp being renovated; Granada; World War II internment camp. FLORIDA: Avon Park: Has an 'on-base' correctional facility which was a World War II internment camp. Eglin Air Force Base: 30 miles long: Very high-capacity facility, already holding prisoners. Pensacola: Federal Prison Camp. Everglades: Camp in the wilds. GEORGIA: Fort Benning: Prisoners brought in via the Lawson Army airfield. Multiple detention camps at Fort McPherson, Fort Gordon, Unadilla, Oglethorpe, Morgan, Camilla, Hawkinsville, McRae, Fort Gillem, Fort Stewart [last two are FEMA-designated detention centres]. IDAHO: Minidoka: World War II Japanese camp under renovation (when this 'inventory' was being prepared), ILLINOIS: Marseilles: Concentration camp with high towers, fences and barbed wire: Capacity for 1,400 prisoners. Pekin: Federal satellite prison camp. Chanute Air Force Base, Rantoul: Likely camp location. Marion: Federal penitentiary and satellite prison camp inside Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge: fully operational. Greenfield: Two Federal 'correctional' satellite prison camps. Shawnee National Forest: heavy traffic with foreign military equipment sighted; camp location thought to be close to Vienna and Shawnee correctional centres. Lincoln, Sheridan, Menard, Pontiac, Galesburg: State prison facilities equipped for massive expansion of incarceration facilities adjacent to highways and railways. Kankakee: Abandoned industrial area designated as FEMA detention centre.

INDIANA: Indianapolis, Marion County: Amtrak railcar facility (closed). Controversial site of a key alleged death detention/processing centre. Has 3 or 4 large gas mains to large furnaces, railheads for prisoners, and helicopter pads. Red/Blue/Green zones for classifying/processing incoming personnel, one-way turnstiles, barracks, towers, high fences, razor wire etc. Located next to a closed refrigeration plant facility. Many other camps etc.

KANSAS: Leavenworth: US Marshal's Federal Holding Facility, US Penitentiary, Federal Prison Camp. McConnell Air Force Base: Federal death penalty 'facility'. Fort Riley; El Dorado: Federal prison converted into a forced labour camp, UNICOR industries. Topeka: 80 acres converted into a temporary holding camp. KENTUCKY: Ashland: Federal prison camp. Louisville: FEMA detention centre, located near a restricted area US naval ordnance plant. Lexington: FEMA detention facility, National Guard base with adjacent airport. Manchester. Federal prison camp inside Dan Boone National Forest. Fort Knox: Detention centre. Other centres suspected. LOUISIANA: Fort Polk: Main training base for New Underworld Order operations. Livingston:World War II German/Italian internment camp being renovated. Oakdale: Two Federal detention centres. MAINE: Houlton: World War II German internment camp. MASSACHUSETTS: Camp Edwards, Otis Air Force Base. Cape Cod: An 'inactive' base undergoing renovation, capacity unknown.

MICHIGAN: Camp Grayling: National Guard base has several confirmed detention camps (high fences, razor wire, well-built guard towers); multiple compounds within larger enclosures; facility deep within forest area. Sawyer Air Force Base; Bay City: Classic concentration camp enclosure with high fence, guard towers, very close to shipping port at Saginaw Bay, which connects to Lake Huron: could be a deportation point via St Lawrence Seaway. Lansing: FEMA detention centres. MINNESOTA: Duluth: Federal prison camp. MISSOURI: Richards-Gebaur Air Force Base, Grandview: A very large internment facility has been constructed on this base: all base personnel are restricted from coming near it. Fort Leonard Wood, inside Mark Twain National Forest. UN and US training centre, may or may not include camp. Warsaw: Unconfirmed report of large concentration camp. MONTANA: Malmstrom Air Force Base: United Nations combat troops, possible detention facility.

NEVADA: Wells, Pershing County, Winnemucca: Camps. NEW JERSEY: Fort Dix/McGuire Air Force Base: Heavy detention compounds, complete and ready for use. NEW MEXICO: Fort Bliss: Huge detention area.

Holloman Air Force Base (Almogordo): Home of the German Luftwaffe in America and major UN base. former USAF buildings torn down by busy and rapidly expanding German military force stationed here. NEW YORK: Fort Drum: Two compounds; Rex 84 detention camp and FEMA detention facility. Albany: FEMA detention facility. Otisville: Federal correctional. Buffalo: FEMA detention centre. NORTH CAROLINA: Camp Lejeune, New River Marine Airfield: Renovated World War II detention compounds. Fort Bragg: Renovated World War II detention centre. Andrews: Federal experiment in placing small town under siege.

NORTH DAKOTA: Minot Air Force base: Home of Air Group. OHIO: Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Lima: FEMA detention facilities. Another detention centre identified inside old stone quarry, with railway access, fences etc. OKLAHOMA: Tinker Air Force Base: All base personnel prohibited from access to heavily guarded civilian detention centre. Will Rogers World Airport: FEMA's main detention centre west of Mississippi. All personnel kept out of security zone. Federal prisoner transfer centre. El Reno: Renovated Federal internment facility with current population of 12,000. McAlester: Former World War II German/Italian POW camp designated for future use. Fort Sill, Lawton: Former World War II detention camps. OREGON: Sheridan: Federal prison satellite camp NW of Salem: World War II internment camp ready for renovation; FEMA detention centre. Umatilla: New prison spotted. OVERSEAS: Guayanabo, Puerto Rico: Federal prison camp, capacity unknown; Guantanamo Bay, Cuba: US Marine Corps Base, used to incarcerate terrorism suspects, but also the home of 30,000 Mariel Cubans and 40,000 Albanians. Total capacity unknown. PENNSYLVANIA: Allenwood: Federal prison camp. Current inmate population of 300, but capacity of 15,000 on 400 acres. Indiantown Gap Military Reservation: World War II POW camp held Mariel Cubans. Camp Hill: State prison with ample capacity. Schuylkill Haven: Federal prison camp. SOUTH CAROLINA: Greenville: Unoccupied youth prison camp. Charleston: Naval Reserve and Air Force base: restricted area on naval base. SOUTH DAKOTA: Yankton: Federal prison camp inside Black Hills National Forest. World War II internment camp being renovated.

TENNESSEE: Fort Campbell: Camp; Millington: Federal prison camp adjacent Memphis Naval Air Station. Nashville:Two identical buildings for prisoners, with high barbed wire fence curving inwards. TEXAS: Austin: Municipal airport has restricted-access area off-limits to all. Fort Hood, Killeen: Newly built concentration camp, with towers, barbed wire etc. Reese Air Force Base, Lubbock: FEMA-designated detention centre: Sheppard Air Force Base, Wichita Falls: FEMA-designated detention centre. Mexia: World War II internment camp may be renovated. Amarillo: FEMA-designated detention facility. Fort Bliss, El Paso: Extensive building renovation; surrounded by razor wire.

Beaumont, Port Arthur: Hundreds of acres of Federal camps constructed in accordance with classic design of a large detention centre, complete with double-rows of chain-link fencing with razor-type concertina wire on top of each row. UTAH: Millard County: World War II Japanese detention camp. Fort Douglas: An 'inactive' military reservation with a 'renovated' World War II concentration camp. Migratory Bird Refuge, west of Brigham City: Covers a World War II internment camp, which may have been renovated. Other facilities suspected.

VERMONT: Lake Francis: Renovated World War II camp. VIRGINIA: Fort A P Hill, Fredericksburg: Rex 84 (Federal Emergency Management (FEMA)) facility. Estimated prisoner capacity: 45,000. Petersburg, south of Richmond: Federal satellite prison camp. WASHINGTON: Seattle, Tacoma: SeaTac Airport. Fully operational Federal transfer centre. Okanogan County, bordering Canada: Site for a massive concentration camp capable of holding hundreds of thousands for slave labour. Thought by observers to be likely to be used to hold core patriots who will be held captive for the rest of their lives. Sand Point Naval Station, Seattle: Federal prison camp used actively during the 1999 WTO protests to classify prisoners. Fort Lewis/McChord Air Force Base, near Tacoma: This is thought to be one of several sites that may be used to ship prisoners overseas (to the 'former' USSR) for slave labour. WEST VIRGINIA: Beckley, Alderson and Lewisburg: Former World War II detention camps now used as Federal prison complexes capable of holding seven times their current populations. WISCONSIN: Fort McCoy- Rex 84 facility with several complete internment compounds. Oxford: Federal prison and satellite camp, and FEMA facility. WYOMING: Heart Mountain, Park County, North of Cody. World War II Japanese internment camp ready for renovation. Laramie: FEMA detention facility. Southwest: Large FEMA detention facility. East Yellowstone: Manned detention facility. Investigating US patriots were apprehended by European troops speaking a language that field walkers and researchers could not recognise. Federal officers took custody of the patriots carrying out this investigation and arranged their release. • List compiled from public domain sources.

CONTINUING GULAGS AROUND THE WORLD

The world appears to be almost wholly indifferent to the existence of GULAGs. There has been considerable international shock at the discovery, following the attack in Iraq in 2003, that the United States has erected a system of Guantanamo-style concentration camps around the world, and that the amoral and cowardly US authorities routinely fly people they arrest without trial, to countries where torture is permitted (formally, it is not legal in the United States, although it does take place). This now notorious CIA abomination is called 'Extraordinary Rendition'.

When the Author published detailed information about the continuing and expanding Soviet GULAG under the fake 'non'-Communist regime of Boris Yeltsin, complete with street addresses of the camps and other identifying data, nobody took the slightest notice - perhaps because it was already known that the 'freedom-promoting' US authorities were contemplating the same practices. But few seem to care about the vast GULAGS in China, Burma, North Korea etc, either. ■

APPENDIX 3 TO CHAPTER 8:
THE CONTINUING SOVIET ILLUMINATI GULAG SYSTEM

LABOUR CAMPS IN RUSSIA, UKRAINE & KAZAKHSTAN

The following GULAG institutions were positively identified by sources in Russia and Ukraine, and separately by a Western intelligence source, as being operative in 1995 and 1996. List reprinted from Soviet Analyst: www.sovietanalyst.com.

1. A forced labour camp containing 1,000-1,500 prisoners in the town of Pyatikhatka, Ukraine, located 10-15km North of the railway station, adjacent to the Dnepropetrovsk metallurgical plant.
2. A large camp, containing an estimated 2,000 prisoners, at Bartas on Lake Balkhash, Kazakhstan. This institution serves as a labour pool for elements of the space dimension of the military-industrial complex located there. A colossal explosion occurred at Bartas in 1989, but the number of prisoners who lost their lives on that occasion remains unknown.
3. In Alma-Ata, capital of Kazakhstan, continuing MVD labour camp Number AK-160, for teenagers, provides forced labour for timber plant workshops. The concentration camp complex is located on Tashkentskaya and Seifullina Street.
4. 'Medical City' is located within the compound of the Institute of Biophysics, Moscow. It is accessed via Tram Number 6, Trolleybuses numbers 12 and 14, and via Buses Numbers 23 and 30. This complex is a special department supervised by the 'successors' of the KGB in which various physical experiments are undertaken on prisoners brought in from camps elsewhere in the 'former' USSR, who have been working in the lethal uranium mines. About 500 prisoners are reported to be undergoing such experiments and evaluations at any one time. The purpose, given further confirmation in Russian military spending estimates, that the elite continues the construction of a colossal bunker complex at 'Evil Mountain' in the Urals, is obvious: to assess the prospects of human survival in high radiation and fallout conditions such as will necessarily prevail following nuclear war.
5. Near the town of Kopiesk, in the Urals, is Camp Balandino, which has 2,000 prisoners. At this long-established concentration camp, the forced labour pool is employed at the Cheliabinsk tractor plant, which also produces tanks.
6. A large camp complex (Cheliabinsk-40, Cheliabinsk-60 and Zlatoust-70) has been identified at the town of Zlatoust in the Ural Mountains, some 190km from Cheliabinsk. This camp sends prisoners for secret tasks in the 'closed cities' of the region. The camp complex is controlled by the General Camp Authority.
7. Similar camps are to be found in the towns of Satka, Kusa, Bakol, Ust-Katai, Miniyar and Asha. In each of these camps, there are reported to be between 500 and 800 prisoners.
8. A forced labour camp for 1,500 children is located in the town of Atalian, not far from Zlatoust and Mias. Forced child labour is employed in an automobile plant.
9. An agricultural camp containing about 1,000 prisoners is to be found in the town of Troitsk.
10. A concentration camp holding 1,200 forced labour worker-prisoners is located at Plast in the Urals. Prisoners work in the gold mines.
11. Camp Number 14 located at at Magnitogorsk, which caters for 1,500-1,600 prisoners, supplies forced labour for a military plant producing tanks.
12. Camp Number 78, also at Magnitogorsk, directs 30% of its prisoners, of whom there are about 1,500 in all, to work in conditions lethal for human health.
13. In the Autonomous Republic of Buriatiya, two large military installations are under construction at the town of Gusinoozersk (at construction site Number 1), at which some 2,000 forced labourers from three separate camps are employed. [Information: mid-1990s].
14. In the region of Chitinskaya oblast, a camp is to be found in the village of Chara. It houses 800 prisoners, who were reported to be controlled by one MVD Colonel Taranskiy. These prisoners were engaged the construction of hidden emplacements/silos for ballistic missiles.
15. At the town of Mogocha, in Chitinskaya oblast, two 'strict regime' camps supply 1,200 prisoners for work on the construction of secret military installations.
16. At the town of Baley, also in Chitinskaya oblast, a 'strict regime' camp provides a forced labour pool to work at a plant producing electrical condensing devices for the continuing Soviet military-industrial complex.

17. At the town of Borzya, Chitinskaya oblast a forced labour camp provides up to 2,000 prisoners for work at a timber goods plant which manufactures wooden buildings for the Soviet military and for the space programme.

18. At the town of Zapocrovka, Chitinskaya oblast, is to be found a 'strict regime' camp for 1,200 prisoners employed in the local uranium mines.

19. At Priargunsk, Chitinskaya oblast, a strict regime camp provides a forced labour pool for hard labour in lead mines and at a refining plant.

20. At Angarsk, Irkutskaya oblast, a camp employs 600 prisoners producing military tents.

21. In Yakutia, a 'special regime' camp located in the village of Svetlii contains prisoners who do not work. This is an especially harsh establishment, designed exclusively for punishment.

22. At Sosva in Sverdlovskaya oblast, there are three forced labour camps. Some 1,500 prisoners are employed at the timber-cutting enterprise 'Lespromkhoz'.

23. A large number of forced labour camps are scattered around the Siberian and Ural taiga, where prisoners are employed in the felling and cutting of wood. The number of prisoners employed in these camps is unknown, not least because some of these camps are moved when the local timber resources have been exhausted. These 'moving camps' are not to be confused with camps, prisons and psychiatric jails the location and addresses of which are moved by the authorities from time to time in order to conceal their existence from the West.

24. At six or seven plants in the city of Kirov, prisoners alone are now employed. So-called 'free workers' are unwilling to work at these locations, given the extremely low wages on offer. The relevant forced labour camps have all been established within the perimeter fences of the plants in question. Between 300 and 350 prisoners work at each plant.

25. In a special secret zone located some 18km from the town of Chernogorsk (Krasnoyarskiy Krai) is a large chemical plant. Since the plant environment is extremely damaging to human health, the plant employs unremunerated forced labour prisoners only. At least 2,000 prisoners are reported to be working there.

26. At Krasnoyarskiy Krai, some 1,200 prisoners and exiled ex-prisoners are also forced to work at a plant in the aluminium town of Sayanogorsk.

27. Concentration camp Number 9, for children, is located in the town of Ust-Abakan, also in Krasnoyarskiy Krai. Between 800 and 1,000 child prisoners were held there when this intelligence was being gathered in 1996. They are employed making wooden formes for use in the aluminium plant at Sayanogorsk.

28. Also located at Ust-Abakan are forced labour camps Numbers 5 and 22. The prisoners at these camps are employed in timber-felling and cutting operations.

29. Concentration camps Numbers 16 and 39 are to be found close to the town of Minusinsk (Krasnoyarskiy Krai). Each contains between 1,200 and 1,500 prisoners - again, all employed in timber-related activities.

30. A prison with the name Butirskaya', located in Moscow, has an average of 200 prisoners in cells originally constructed to house 25 people. The prisoners in this establishment cannot sit down. They take turns to sleep standing up, for three or four hours at a time. Prisoners are reportedly kept in cells like these for up to three years.

INFORMATION ABOUT 'POST'-SOVIET LABOUR CAMPS IN THE RUSSIAN MEDIA

- The authorities do not attempt to hide the existence of the GULAG, and indeed openly display the fact of its continued existence on Russian television. In doing so, they rely, with good reason, upon Western ignorance and complacency, and upon their deep understanding of compromised Western intelligence. Because the existence of the GULAG system, and the nauseat-ingly obscene horrors of life in the prison camps, are so alien to the experience of Western observers, detailed information on the subject is, the Soviet planners recognise, always likely to be rejected in the West - and certainly never talked about in politically correct or polite circles. This is the psychological safeguard on which they rely generally to mask human rights abuses from the West's consciousness. Yet detailed information in our own files concerning the sufferings, since the 'collapse of Communism', of named individuals in Georgia alone who have, since 1992, been tortured and raped, and who have experienced unspeakable abuses - including enforced lack of sleep, being run over by armoured vehicles on purpose, lack of food and water, and electric shock - would necessitate many further pages of analysis.

- A feature film showing the conditions at 'Butirskaya' prison in Moscow, described briefly above, was shown on Russian television in 1995. On 26th March 1996, Russia's TV Channel 25 broadcast a programme about newly constructed GULAG prisons and labour camps. And some years ago, the Russian magazine 'Ogonek' published a series of articles by a certain V. Eremin in which the total number of GULAG prison camps known to exist in the Komi Autonomous Republic was reported to be 250. This total was revised downwards by Soviet Analyst, to 246 camps.
- The late Israeli-Russian GULAG survivor, Avraham Shifrin, reported a total of 36 GULAG camp addresses in Komi A.S.S.R., in a Guidebook, first published in 1980. According to Eremin, 200 of these Komi camps belong to the 'strict regime' category, in which prisoners starve. In some of these camps, prisoners were reported by Eremin to bear tattoos on their cheeks or foreheads carrying inscriptions such as 'Slave of Communism', 'Slave of the KGB', and so forth.

OTHER REFERENCES TO NEW GULAG CAMPS • THE EXPERIENCE OF BRITISH MPS

- In January 1990, Avraham Shifrin reported, in an open letter entitled 'A Performance: Glasnost and Perestroika', that some 2,500 camps were now, under the enlightened President Gorbachev, holding an expanded population of 7 million inmates. In subsequent statements he insisted that many new camps had been constructed throughout the 'former' USSR, in addition to the existing network of GULAG establishments. In 1995, the Russian human rights activist and Duma delegate, Sergei Kovaliov, drew international attention to the existence of what are known as 'filtration camps' in Russia. Mr Kovaliov was supposedly arrested on 27th December 1994 and thrown in the KGB's Lefortovo prison, after visiting KGB Colonel Anatoliy Trofimov to plead for some incarcerated individuals. On 17th January 1995, Trofimov was appointed by Yeltsin's Decree Number 285 to be FSB [KGB] Chief for the City of Moscow and the Moscow region. Given these 'circumstances', it is likely that Kovaliov was a controlled 'human rights activist' whose primary task was to demonstrate the freedom of Russians to protest about such disagreeable matters as prison camps, while also performing the function of deflecting other criticism and reassuring Western observers that there is 'vigorous opposition' to the nefarious camp system. There is, of course, nothing of the kind.
- According to the distinguished German analyst and former Bundestag member, Hans Graf Huyn, Kovaliov said that 'innocent inhabitants of the Chechen Republic are tortured and mistreated in 'filtration camps' [KZs]. We have reason to state that the situation in these camps is more than worrying. People are being beaten and maltreated when arrested, and also throughout their entire time spent in internment'. Graf Huyn further reported that the head of the Institute for Soviet Studies [ISOS] in Frankfurt, Professor Dr. Nikolai Nor-Messek, pointed out in the 7th April 1996 issue of Welt am Sonntag' that in the European segment of Russia alone, there were more than 44 so-called 'filtration camps'.
- A further twelve such camps are located in the North Caucasus region, and this expert's estimate was that these particular camps contained at least 80,000 people. He added: 'How many of those in prison have to date died is not precisely ascertainable. In Moscow human rights circles, however, the talk is already of many hundred deaths, while what is going on is being compared with the establishment of concentration camps in Hitler's Germany. According to the information available, these camps are situated in deep caves in the ground, in former mines, in the operations rooms of Russian partisan bands, and in former silo installations of the Russian rocket forces'. Professor Dr. Nor-Mesek concluded: 'In these places, people taken prisoner are treated like cattle before being transported away to KZs. Many do not get as far as the camps due to exhaustion and starvation. Those arrested are tortured with such methods as electric shock treatment'.
- At the height of 'Gorbymania', when the Western media was prepared to absorb and broadcast any fairytales fed to them by the Information Warfare outlets controlled by international intelligence cadres, a delegation of British MPs travelled to Moscow by invitation to see one or more 'former' Soviet GULAG concentration camps which had been specially emptied for international public consumption purposes. After three days of uncertainty, visits to the Bolshoi Theatre, banquets and similar distractions, they discovered that it had been ordained that no visits were going to take place. One by one, therefore, the party split up and the MPs returned to London, having seen nothing.
- A comparison with the data in Appendix 2 will of course reveal the Luciferian nature of both political regimes.

CONCLUSION

THE SCISSORS STRATEGY

DARK ACTORS PLAYING GAMES AND FACING BOTH WAYS

The hand that slays must lift the fallen, while the lips given to cursing must be taught to pray. The heart that hates must learn the mystery of compassion'[1]. This cynical affirmation of the central characteristic of all who have permitted themselves to become trapped inside the living hell of illuminised (i.e., penetrated by the Illuminati) Freemasonry - two-faced double-mindedness - was written by one of Masonry's most 'illustrious' writers, Manly P. Hall - the author of numerous esoteric and occult Masonic and Rosicrucian works promoting the 'New World Order'[2].

The passage appears on the same page as Manly P. Hall's confirmation that the 'force' with which brainwashed Illuminised Freemasons connect, is demonic. The text, cited before in this work of course, because of its central importance, reads as follows:

'When the Mason learns that the key to the warrior on the block is the proper application of the dynamo of living power, he has learned the mystery of his [witch]Craft. The seething energies of Lucifer are in his hands and before he may step onward and upward, he must prove his ability to properly apply energy'[3].

The most brilliantly explicit contemporary description of how the 'seething energies of Lucifer' have been exploited is to be found in Craig Heimbichner's book 'Blood on the Altar: The Secret History of the World's Most Dangerous Secret Society'[4] - which he identifies as Ordo Templi Orientis (O.T.O.), driven for many years by the British intelligence officer and Satanist, Aleister Crowley, and to which George Bush Sr. is alleged to belong. This would appear to be the 'open' manifestation of Albert Pike's revived occult Palladian Rite. Heimbichner's analysis of how this demonic force has leveraged the 'seething energies of Lucifer' so that the whole world is deceived, is of unparalleled excellence, and it would therefore be invidious for this Author to add to Heimbichner's study. With consummate skill, he shows how the various strands of Gnosticism dating from the very birth of Christ interconnect and relate to each other, and how witchcraft and lies are today being accentuated in part as a consequence of the Luciferian operations of O.T.O., a branch of the llluminati. The present work shows that the llluminati provide deep cover and an unparalleled global network for the never-ending pursuit of German (Nazi) long-range global hegemony deception strategy, encapsulated in the slogan, foolishly thought by the West to be dead and buried: Deutschland Uber Alles.

Whether German long-range intelligence strategists have hijacked the llluminati, or vice versa, remains, on the face of it, impenetrable. Whatever the truth of this matter, if it is ever capable of being disentangled, it is a certainty that the European llluminati powers are 'fighting it out among themselves', like rats in a sack, all over again - with the 'Black Nobility' divided among themselves and far from comfortable, in many cases, with the ruthless German global hegemony agenda.

Citing the malevolent importance of the French con-man Pierre Plantard (1920-2000), Heimbichner shows inter alia how the Illuminati's chief characteristic of duplic-itous double-mindedness is capable of infinite variation, by citing Plantard's cynical contribution to the lies about Jesus Christ disseminated globally, most recently, by the reprobate New Age author Dan Brown, through his devilishly effective publishing phenomenon, 'The Da Vinci Code', ten million copies of which were already in print when Heimbichner's book appeared in 2005. With the publication of 'The Da Vinci Code', the primary feature of the underlying strategy of certain Illuminari cadres has assumed global proportions. What is that strategy?

It is almost impossible to describe what is intended without incredulity at the subtle deviousness of Satan. 'Plantard was the 20th century godfather', writes Craig Heimbichner, 'of the fake Prieure de Sion (Priory of Sion) mythos which claims that certain royal families of Europe are the descendants of an invented sexual union between Jesus Christ and Mary Magdalene'. There is of course absolutely zero scriptural foundation for the 'base lie' itself, let alone for the pyramid of lies which rest upon its foundation. In order for the lie to 'work', Jesus Christ needs to have survived His Crucifixion, to have recovered from His trauma, and to have swerved away from His whole Ministry, which would have been left 'dangling in the wind'. Quite apart from the ludicrous stupidity of this lying invention, anyone who studies the New Testament receives irrevocable confirmation of the accuracy of the Gospels, and of the Holy Spirit's inspiration of all the other New Testament books, which could not have survived had Christ abandoned his unique Ministry as is falsely alleged. Nor could the Epistles of Paul, Peter, John and James have been written against such a background.

THE PURPOSE: TO RESTORE THE DIVINE RIGHT OF KINGS

What is the purpose of such ignorant drivel? It is, of course, to enable the so-called 'Black Nobility' to assert a false 'Divine Right' to rule, by claiming that their 'bloodlines' are descended from the Son of God himself. But as has been discussed in Chapter 7, the 'Black Nobility' are Khazars, of Jewish ancestry and Kabbalistic Judaic background. So here we have the very Jewish descendants of these wandering people - whose ancestors were almost certainly Jewish moneylenders who became so powerful that, in the course of time, they actually seized monarchical power themselves (as in the case of Captain Stradholder, a.k.a. William of Orange) - claiming to be descended from Jesus Christ, even though by definition (unless converted) these people deny Jesus Christ and deny that 'he is the Son of God and is come in the flesh'[5]. Can any more cynical and blasphemous instance of Illuminati double-mindedness be imagined? Heimbichner's analysis thus identifies 'the emergence of an organization that would have an authority so divine [that] it could not be resisted by any believing Christian' (except, the Author insists, by those who actually read Scripture, a minority). 'The lure of this hallucination to occultists seeking to impose totalitarian rule is nearly irresistible. Their modern agent in this regard was Pierre Plantard, the supposed [sic] scion of the ancient Merovingian king, Dagobert II' It may be objected that Jews have always been at the forefront of revolutionary destabilisation operations, as for instance in the context of the Russian Revolution and control of the Soviet and fake 'post'-Soviet Empire thereafter - until, of course, the objector recalls that such dialectical antagonism can have 'no problem' coexisting with the lie that Jesus married Mary Magdalene, el seq., since it simply reflects the fundamental characteristic of all components of the Illuminati: double-mindedness. As for Plantard, his false-front network operated 'within both Conservative Catholic and anti-Jewish (Nazi) circles, while also organising and inspiring (Judaic) Kabbalist and "goddess" affiliates'[6]. In other words, Plantard was an 'illustrious', devious implementer of Illuminati two-faced dialectical strategy, a double-dealing Janus deception operative 'par excellence'.

Explaining in greater detail how this double-minded scam has invaded vulnerable and ignorant minds worldwide, Heimbichner elaborates:

'The macabre irony is that the Priory of Sion, the "order of chivalry" allegedly created in 1099 by the "Crusader Godefroy de Bouillon" has become, via the Catholic Pierre Plantard and the New Age Dan Brown, the transmission mechanism for the revival of the witchcraft cult of Isis, the black magic of the Kabbalah and filthy Talmudic sexual libel against Jesus Christ'.

'Perhaps now the reader is beginning to gain insight into the utility of the O.T.O.'s speciality, what Dr Carl Gustav Jung termed Mysterium Coniunctionis (the synthesis of psychic opposites in alchemy). The O.T.O. does not wish to direct only the Left-wing "progressive" drive for "modernization and reform" and leave the Right-wing opposition in the hands of its enemies'. IT MUST CONTROL BOTH SIDES AT ALL TIMES.

As Heimbichner confirms: 'Rather, the O.T.O. is always and everywhere determined to impose the Kabbalistic paradigm by controlling the opposition'- the essence of Leninism. 'The O.T.O. appeals to elite standards of culture and taste [in the Catholic context] in upholding the classic liturgies, even as Vatican agents inspired by the O.T.O. Zeitgeist outlawed these rites for general use'. And continuing his analysis of one of the primary means whereby the 'smoke of Satan' has further corrupted the fallen Catholic Church, Heimbichner elaborates how the double-minded attack has 'succeeded' (for those who believe that the Catholic Church is the appointed guardian of Christian Truth, a proposition from which, of course, this Author dissents): 'In this limited sense, the conspiracy has been quite successful. Tridentine Mass attendance is nowadays limited to small pockets of Catholics who, as targets of occult infiltration, are more susceptible to penetration than a mass movement consisting of millions of believers would be'.

'Here we are reminded of the ancient alchemical dictum' (alchemy of course being one of the preoccupations, for instance, of Rosicrucian Kabbalists and 'higher' flluminised Freemasons), 'Solve et coagula' ("break down and reform") - the standard Illuminati 'order out of chaos' routine and the cynical approach being applied, for instance, to the British Conservative Party by the revolutionary mind-controlled operative David Cameron in 2006. Break everything up ('chaos out of order') prior ostensibly to creating 'order out of chaos', which is the 'public consumption' motto of the flluminati (the hidden motto being its converse).... 'The hundreds of millions of people devoted to [the Catholic Tridentine Mass] were - with remarkable dispatch - stripped away almost in the twinkling of an eye, with the long-term objective of creating a new, much more circumscribed Tridentine Mass movement rigidly controlled by the occult' (a Christian Kabbalah).

In April 2006, rumours began circulating that the Church of England may be moving towards allowing all forms of worship, without reference to truth, in its churches (the Maoist Illuminati trick of 'let a thousand flowers bloom'). As matters stood at Easter, the Author was unable to find a church conducting a Holy Communion Service according to the revered, accurate Book of Common Prayer, which is certainly sanctified by the Holy Spirit -without driving for many miles into the countryside, where a small, ancient church was found to be conducting its service in accordance with it.

The point of revisiting all this here is to emphasise the DUALITY of Illuminism, in ALL its manifestations and formats. Those who CANNOT GRASP THIS, are condemned to remain forever confused by these evil manipulators. The Soviet literature is full of essays on 'contradictions' in Marxism-Leninism - because double-mindedness, pursuing opposite policies simultaneously, is its essence. That is likewise the case with every variant of The Order, and with the 'profane' who are, wittingly or unwittingly, its duped collaborators.

THE TWO-FACED STANCE BREAKS DOWN AS LUCIFER IS REVEALED

Part of the complex recent history of the process whereby the 'smoke of Satan' has entered the Catholic Church' - a process paralleled by the equally 'successful' degradation of the other 'Christian' churches - was unveiled by Malachi Martin (see pages 369 et seq.). Craig Heimbichner has added extensive fresh analysis to what Malachi published, and to what we know about Satan's constant attacks on organised, man-controlled 'Christianity' from the outset. Craig Heimbichner's special contribution has been to demonstrate the exceptional demonic importance of O.T.O., the Eighth Degree of which describes Jesus Christ's True Church - the tiny minority of authentic Christians, the 'saints' who are 'in the Word' and who are not conditioned by the aberrations of diversionary and semi-paganised 'organised religion' - as comprising the 'foul demons of the Christians'[7]. Satan turns all truth upside down. And Heimbichner confirms that 'in spite of the sophistry and rationalisations of Freemasonry's diabolic orientation, truly initiated Freemasonry - even in a mainstream version such as the Scottish Rite - culminates in an embrace of Lucifer as teacher and the serpent of Genesis as Savior'[8]: the reverse of the Truth.

The Catholic Church in any case dispenses at least 48 'dogmas' which diverge from the truth as explicitly revealed by the Word of God in Scripture. To take just one example here, nowhere is there any scriptural support for the invented concept of 'purgatory' - a device that enables the hierarchy to earn fees by selling gullible Catholics indulgences, and deceiving them into the crass belief that remission from purgatory for a certain number of days can be obtained by saying the (pagan) Rosary a stipulated number of times, or praying to Mary, which is also of course contrary to Jesus' teaching that He alone is the sole intercessor with God the Father. That Man has no 'second chance' (as prescribed by the lie of purgatory) is specifically explained in Jesus' words [Luke, Chapter 13, verse 24 et seq.]:

'Strive to enter in at the strait gate; for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able. When once the master of the house is risen up, and hath shut the door, and ye begin to stand without, and to knock at the door, saying, Lord, Lord, open unto us; and he shall answer and say unto you, I know not whence ye are: then shall ye begin to say, We have eaten and drunk in thy presence, and thou has taught in our streets. But he shall say, I tell you, I know you not whence ye are; depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity. There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth...'.

Although the Lord's parable of the tares[9] applies when considering the duplicity and reprobate behaviour of organised 'Christian' churches, the double-mindedness which characterises all dimensions of the Illuminati networks, including the 'Open Friendly Society', is so conspicuous today as to be recognisable even to brainwashed Catholics themselves. For instance, at Easter 2006, considerable publicity was given to official Catholic pronouncements linked to the so-called '14 Stations of the Cross'. This ritual, being an invention of the hierarchy, promulgates descriptions of events leading up to the Crucifixion which, once again, are not reported in Scripture. For instance, nowhere in the Gospels is it stated that Jesus Christ fell to the ground on the way to His Crucifixion: it is make-believe. But in this ritual, at the Third Station, Jesus falls 'for the first time'. At the Eighth Station, Jesus allegedly 'meets the women of Jerusalem'. He does not, of course, 'meet' them, as though he were out shopping. Luke says simply that 'there followed him a great company of people, and of women, which also bewailed and lamented him. But Jesus turning to them said, Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children'[10]. There is no need whatsoever for any elaboration of Luke's always simple account. The women did not 'meet' Jesus at the 'Eighth Station', but rather followed him, with their men, bewailing the terrible injustice they were witnessing - as we should bewail the Church's duplicity today.

PAPAL PRONOUNCEMENTS DEVOID OF ALL HOPE AND SPIRITUALITY

At all events, it was reported that Pope Benedict and his associates attached public pronouncements to each Station of the Cross, of which the following were examples:

'Society is in the grip of a kind of "anti-Genesis" described as "a diabolical pride aimed at eliminating the family". [The Pope prayed] for society to be cleansed of the "filth" that surrounds it" and for the family to be 'restored to purity and freed from "decadent narcissism". The author of the special prayers for the Stations of the Cross, Archbishop Angelo Comastri, Vicar-General at Vatican City, allocated the following prayer to the Third Station (at which 'Jesus falls for the first time', which is not recorded in the Gospels, as indicated): 'Lord, we have lost our sense of sin. Today a slick campaign of propaganda is spreading an inane apologia of evil, a senseless cult of Satan, a mindless desire for transgression, a dishonest and frivolous freedom, exalting impulsiveness, immorality and selfishness as if they were new heights of sophistication'. Yet these accurate statements of reality are attached to a piece of unscriptural make-believe.

Other 'Stations of the Cross' spelled out an equally bleak, hopeless message, providing a clue concerning the nature of the 'spirit' behind these papal assertions. For instance: 'Lord Jesus, our affluence is making us less human, our entertainment has become a drug, a source of alienation, and our society's incessant, tedious message is an invitation to die of selfishness'; or, when Jesus Christ, 'at the Eighth Station', 'meets the women from Jerusalem': 'Rivers of tears shed by mothers, mothers of the crucified, mothers of murderers, mothers of drug addicts, mothers of terrorists, mothers of rapists, mothers of psychopaths, but mothers all the same'; and finally, implying that the Pope himself is faithless: 'Where is Jesus in the agony of our own time, in the division of our world into belts of prosperity and belts of poverty... in one room they are concerned about obesity, in another, they are begging for charity?' The Pope then added a warning against steps that are being made to 'modify the very grammar of life as planned and willed by God', leading prayers against 'insane, risky and dangerous ventures... to take God's place without being God', a reference to genetic engineering experiments and by implication to the diabolical experimentation in the creation of hybrid beings reported to be taking place at secret locations in the United States[11].

What should have been noticed from these papal pronouncements is their total lack of inspiration, hope and promise of forgiveness, redemption and salvation - the truth of Jesus Christ. Instead of uttering these statements of the glaringly obvious, amounting to affirmations of an apparent acceptance of the triumph of evil, Pope Benedict should have read the following passage from the Apostle Paul, who encapsulated every single point made in these papal pronouncements with the authority unique to him as an Apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ (text repeated here because of its central, eternal importance):

'For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth [to reside in] in unrighteousness.... Because that, when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful; but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened. Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools'[12].

'For this cause God gave them up to vile affections: for even their women did change the natural use into that which is against nature; and likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lust one toward another; men with men working that which is unseemly, and receiving in themselves that recompense of their error which was meet. And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge [i.e, in their education system], God gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not convenient; Being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; whisperers, Backbiters, haters of God, despiteful, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents, Without understanding, covenantbreakers, without natural affection, implacable, unmerciful; Who knowing the judgment of God, that they which commit such things are worthy of death, not only do the same, but have pleasure in them that do them'[13].

SEEING THROUGH THE FACADE OF DOUBLE-MINDEDNESS

The Catholic Church, or the 'Open Friendly Society' (not to mention the almost totally reprobate Church of England) cannot even maintain the facade of its Illuminised double-mindedness, since even its formal 'spiritual' pronouncements, such as those cited here, no longer disguise the fact that it is actually dispensing the hopelessness of Lucifer: where, in those papal Good Friday pronouncements, again, was there any faith and hope in Jesus Christ, the Way, the Truth and the Life? Clearly, at an advanced stage of decay it typically becomes less and less necessary for the cynical two-faced discipline enunciated by Manly P. Hall ('The hand that slays must lift the fallen, while the lips given to cursing must be taught to pray') to be sustained. Satan then truly appears as an angel of light - as the inversion of the truth is no longer hidden, so that the notorious pronouncement of the lying Satanist Albert Pike, in which he predicted our geomason-ic-dominated future in which rulers, Kings and Popes are selected and imposed by the self-appointed Luciferian Illuminati-Masonic synarchical controlling elite, is affirmed:

'The Occult Science of the Ancient Magi was concealed under the shadows of the Ancient Mysteries: it was imperfectly revealed or rather disfigured by the Gnostics: it is guessed at under the obscurities that cover the pretended crimes of the Templars [sic); and it is found enveloped in enigmas that seem impenetrable, in the Rites of the Highest Masonry.... LUCIFER, the Light-bearer! Strange and mysterious name to give to the Spirit of Darkness! Lucifer, the Son of the Morning! Is it he who bears the Light? Doubt it not'... The world will soon come to us for its Sovereigns and Pontiffs. We shall constitute the equilibrium of the Universe, and be rulers over the Masters of the World'[14].

It is manifest that both Albert Pike and Giuseppe Mazzini were Illuminati first and Freemasons second - and that Pike laboured for many years to invent, elaborate and 'illuminate' US Scottish Rite Masonic initiation rituals so that they could be relied upon to propagate the agenda, secrecy, spying preoccupation, perverse occult focus and World Revolution of the Illuminati within the orbit of the Rosicrucian Order of the Quest - and, with the establishment of the Palladian Rite, of which Ordo Templi Orientis is a 'broader' derivation, to prepare for the advent of the 'New Age' of Aquarius in which, so Pike imagined, 'the foul demon of the Christians' (according to the Illuminist Aleister Crowley) will have been 'permanently' exorcised, so that no further impediments to 'Do as Thou Wilt' would survive. Illuminised Freemasonry, as Heimbichner so succinctly explained, 'is a nursery of Luciferianism from which promising candidates are selected, while others are left forever in the dark, content to exploit their old-boy connections, play their charity charade and exchange arcane hand-signals with judges, lawyers and jurors for mutual benefit of the guilty'[16].

This 'in-your-face' temporary 'supremacy' of occult Masonic Illuminism in the United States is replicated many times daily as Americans handle their $1.0 bills, or travel by train past the gargantuan, monstrous Washington Memorial Temple at Alexandria. The image on the $1.0 bill is the insignia of the Illuminati, containing the 'eye in the triangle', the esoteric meaning of which is the Eye of Set-Sothis-Shaitan (Satan) represented astronomically as Sirius and anatomically as the anus. [Heimbichner, op. cit., page 138].

THE DIALECTICAL METHOD INTEGRATED INTO THEIR PSYCHE

The double-mindedness central to the twisted mentality of members of all components of the ffluminati synarchy is related directly to the dialectical methodology developed for modern consumption by Friedrich Engels, applied with particular rigour by the Illuminist Lenin and his associates, heirs and successors, and extensively employed both by the Nazis and by the US authorities. The classic formula of Thesis, controlled Antithesis, Synthesis, is described by the intelligence and New World Order analyst David Icke (not a source often used by this Author) as Problem, Reaction, and Solution. The essence of this standard ffluminati methodology is, as discussed, the control of all opposition; and the central double-minded initiative which has 'worked' so 'well' for the conspirators has been the conflicting work of the 'Two Karls' - Professor Karl Ritter, 'originator' of the mindset that emerged via Nietzsche as the phenomenon of Fascism, and Karl Marx, author of the 'Communist Manifesto'. The launch of these two poisonous 'philosophies' by the Illuminati, allegedly directed by the Rothschild ('Red Shield') family, established the broad dialectical canvas (Thesis versus Antithesis) ready for manipulation in what the Illuminati consider to be our mechanistic world. The Thesis (Lenin's Communism) was developed in parallel with Nazism (Antithesis), which matured two decades or so later. And the same dialectical pattern is now standard in respect of all contemporary issues.

In the terms used by David Icke, the Illuminati strategists develop the Problem, perhaps by funding, training and assembling an 'opposition' group to stimulate turmoil in an established political context - the evolution of which they intend to manipulate -thereby generating a conflict that the ffluminati themselves have manoeuvred into existence. Control of the opposition forces, central to the Leninist methodology, is in fact applied universally by Illuminati cadres. Typically, both within and outside the Soviet context, controlled 'opposition' groups will be identified by the compliant media as 'freedom fighters' or 'liberators' - an example being the criminalist drug-running Kosovo Liberation Army (KLA). Finance for such operations is derived from 'Black' budgets, funded by drug-trafficking or by 'funny money' banking transactions, which take place at the intergovernmental and inter-intelligence sector levels on a gargantuan scale.

'Freedom fighters' are not infrequently assembled from a local criminal element -in the case of the KLA, from Communist-era mafiya clans running drugs through the Balkans. In conformity with standard Machiavellian ffluminati deception 'principles', the same New Underworld Order Illuminati strategists will likewise be involved in arming and advising the leadership of the existing established power as well - with the added prospect of the Illuminati benefiting by lending money, rearming and supplying all sides in any conflict they have generated in pursuit of their Luciferian objectives.

In the course of such typically cynical operations, controlled allies - such as Saddam Hussein, Slobodan Milosevic, Colonel Qadhafy, et al - may be abruptly dumped and converted into an enemy overnight, having been double-crossed by US intelligence, scammed, or targeted for 'taking out' because they have scammed the Americans or their intelligence cadres. In this rat-riddled sewer, former controlled operatives - like 'Tim Osman' - may either change sides in accordance with altered circumstances following some double-cross or other, or else will be ordered by intelligence cadres to switch sides. This was the case with Osama Bin Laden - whose wealthy family's assets, as we have seen, George W. Bush actually managed at one stage of his career.

Switching sides, treating former friends and allies as enemies, speaking out of both sides of one's mouth, playing 'war' and 'peace' simultaneously, using charm on people one moment and dropping fragmentation bombs on their countrymen next, comes naturally to the double-minded geomasonic Illuminised operative instructed by a 'god'.

LAUNCHING THE CONTROLLED CONFLICT ONTO THE WORLD STAGE

The conflict in question will be coaxed onto the world stage by controlled media outlets using pictures and videotape reports of horrific and bloody atrocities suffered by innocent civilians. This elicits the intended 'something has to be done' response, which is the Planned Reaction. The manipulators then provide the preplanned Solution - for example, by sending in United Nations 'peacekeepers' (in Bosnia), or a United Nations 'Coalition Force' (the First Gulf War), or NATO bombers followed by ground troops (Kosovo). The sustained aggression and bombing of Belgrade and parts of Yugoslavia by NATO was a criminal abomination - not least given that in 1990, when this Author complained that the combined effect of bilateral treaties that the USSR was signing with targeted West European countries would be to neutralise NATO, he was told that this could not be the case since NATO was a 'defensive alliance' [see box on page 625].

The underlying purpose of these Illuminati operations is to have New Underworld Order-controlled forces and structures in all key countries or strategic areas where significant indifference or resistance to the New World Order is expected to be encountered. Having used Milosevic as a financial and trading partner, US intelligence then double-crossed and demonised him, when the Illuminati's strategy changed ('bait and switch').

The standard procedure when it has been decided to demonise the leader of an established power, is to describe him as 'another Hitler'. This point was stressed in an Internet posting on this subject updated on 31st December 2005, by Ken Adachi. In April 2006, President George W. Bush was reported in the British press to be in the habit of referring to President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad of Iran as 'another Hitler'. Given this confirmation of the accuracy of his assertion, it is clear that Mr Adachi's underlying analysis in this connection was correct.

Once installed, the 'peacekeepers' never leave (Bosnia, Kosovo, Korea, East Timor), thereby undermining the 'host' state's integrity, in line with the tired dogma that all nation states are to be replaced by supranational governance in the hands of the 'Brotherhood'. Publicity surrounding the operation is often driven by newspaper articles placed by controlled think-tanks or agitprop organisations with an axe to grind, like Human Rights Watch - allegedly an Illuminati front group, as the Author discovered when he visited their messy Washington, DC offices some years ago.

The fundamental rule that the Illuminati manipulators follow, whatever cover they may be using at any given point in time, is, as has been reiterated, always to control both sides of the dialectical tensions that they establish - so that the two 'opposing' 'phanes', or 'forces', can be 'creatively' manipulated in accordance with their global strategic requirements. This basic rule never varies. Observers of current affairs who 'take sides'are themselves victims of the double-minded deception in question. The model for this modus operandi has been described - especially by the veteran Soviet defector, Anatoliy Golitsyn - as the Scissors Strategy. This metaphor is used because it illustrates very precisely how the Illuminati (whether the Soviet strategists, the covert Nazis, or US intelligence) operate.

In accordance with this model, one hand operates the scissors, but the instrument has two blades. These blades can either be moved away from each other, or else moved towards each other until they join - having cut a swathe through everything that stood between the blades. To an outside observer, the blades appear to be separate forces, since the guiding hand cannot be seen (it is behind the curtain). This model can be applied, obviously, to any environment. Once this simple model is understood, it becomes possible for the observer to stand back from the pressure to 'take sides' - enabling, for instance, the idiocy of British and American controlled 'democracy' - or democratism to use its appropriate Soviet description - to be seen for the farces and cynical deceptions they are.

HOW THE BRITISH MINISTRY OF DEFENCE DEALT WITH THE AUTHOR'S ARGUMENT THAT SOVIET BILATERAL TREATIES WITH TARGETED EUROPEAN COUNTRIES INDIVIDUALLY AND COLLECTIVELY UNDERMINED NATO

At the beginning of the 1990s, the Author argued in print that a series of bilateral treaties, all drafted by Soviet Military Intelligence (GRU) and presented to targeted European countries for signature, were all designed to neutralise NATO. Some of these treaties contain 'Molotov-Ribbentrop' clauses, providing that if either party felt threatened by a third party (state or axis), neither party to the bilateral treaty could provide any assistance whatsoever to the third party. This might mean, for instance, that Spain would have to refuse US aircraft access to bases on its territory, as Madrid might fear that Moscow might construe such a development as an actual or potential threat - so that the bases could not be made available to the Americans under the new 'post'-Soviet era Russian-Spanish bilateral treaty. The Ministry of Defence dismissed the Author's arguments inter alia on the ground that they did not apply, since NATO was a defensive organisation. Within a few years, NATO had effectively scrapped its defensive orientation, and embarked upon naked aggression - illustrating that the MOD's response was disingenuous. An excerpt from the official response is shown in below [Figure 96]:

Northern Iraq, both of which were extremely successful. Having taken advice form the Naval staff and the FCO may I provide you with our background thinking on the assumption that the main thrust of Mr Story's argument is that when taken together, the various bilaterals with USSR undermine NATO's raison d'etre.

My first point concerns the general theme of non-aggression pacts and recognition of existing borders. Although the MOD and FCO would not wish to be drawn into commenting on other nations agreements, I differ with Mr Story in believing that the provisions in the bilaterals are fully in line with those in the Helsinki Act - as reaffirmed in last year's Charter of Paris.

My second point concerns the public impression of such agreements. Bilaterals of this nature run parallel to CSCE and NATO in contributing to the political process of improving East-West relations. NATO, which is after all a defensive organisation, has played its part with its positive statements in the 1990 London Declaration and the more recent NAC Communique after the Copenhagen Ministerial.

My final point is that the provisions of such non-aggression agreements do not, in our view, undermine NATO as a political, security and defence agreement. Non-agression treaties are political acts that are effective up until the act of aggression. Thereafter the Washington and Brussels Treaties for NATO and WEU provide for the appropriate military response in self defence. While no one could doubt the political aspirations implicit in a non-aggression pact, history has not been kind to such agreements - NATO can both provide the ultimate reassurance in security terms and, at the same time, contribute politically to the atmosphere that goes with such agreements.

In conclusion, we believe that NATO fits satisfactorily into the present framework of political, security and defence agreements. Further, it is NATO that provides for a collective security that includes USA and Canada in a way that these bilaterals do not.

Figure 96: Excerpt from a Ministry of Defence response to the Author's arguments to the effect that the Gorbachev-Yeltsin bilateral treaty offensive targeting key European countries was designed to neutralise and defang NATO. The MOD said this couldn't be the case because NATO was a strictly defensive organisation. Not when it started serving the Illuminati's purposes by unleashing barbaric bombing offensives against the former Yugoslavia, it wasn't.

GERMAN INTELLIGENCE NO LONGER ABLE TO USE SOVIETS AS COVER

In the US context, so wedded to the 'Founding Fathers' ideology of democracy are the American people, as a consequence of successful indoctrination in the past, that it has become 'necessary' for the controlled dialectical 'opposite forces' to manipulate the outcome of elections by electronic vote-rigging devices (see Addendum 1, page 662) - a cynical ploy since adopted inter alia by the Italians. For the Illuminati, the slogans 'democracy' and 'freedom' are devoid of all content, since their intended democratic arrangements represent controlled dialectical manoeuvres, while the 'freedom' they have in mind is circumscribed by the rules, regulations and circumstances that they intend to control and dictate.

Throughout the Cold War years, the Nazi Continuum and its intelligence community hid behind the cover of the Soviets. In other words, in the intelligence context, the blades of the scissors remained tight shut together (whatever external perceptions prevailed to the contrary). But after the Illuminati's planners, led by President Reagan, had concluded that the Cold War was counterproductive and should be 'closed down', the stage was set for the German Abwehr's deep Soviet intelligence cover to be withdrawn, although this did not become apparent until some years later. Because President Reagan and his controllers decreed that the Cold War must be terminated, US intelligence operatives, using Financial Warfare and bribery techniques and drawing upon colossal 'funny money' resources, cooperated with bribed Soviet intelligence officers such as Mikhail Gorbachev (KGB) and Vladimir Putin (GRU), to activate the phenomenon or illusory provocation of 'collapsible Communism' - orchestrating those successive operations to destabilise the East European countries successively one by one (as TV cameras could not be concentrating on more than one revolution at a time, in the interests of maximum global impact). In 1989-92, US financial operatives orchestrated the largest private placement in history, raising a targeted $27.5 trillion from 200+ international banks, for use by the elite's financial controllers, for the purpose of equilibrating the 'Global Security Environment'. Massive looting of the funds by criminalist cadres within the warring factions inside US intelligence sectors took place during 1989-92 (facilitated thereafter by the orchestrated 'takedown' of the US Financial Warfare operative Leo Wanta) allegedly under the supervision of Dr Alan Greenspan, whose reputation as a 'revered' monetary guru has always reflected only one side of that Illuminist's evidently dark, double-sided nature. The vast financial assets of the 'Global Security' funds, however alienated and dispersed, were believed to aggregate an estimated $70 trillion by the time this book went to press, representing unlimited funds with which those who diverted the giga-funds thought they could continue enriching themselves and set the agenda for global control for the whole of the 21st century.

A separate giga-store of manipulative 'funny money', worth at least $206 trillion, but probably by now, given frantic ongoing 'hidden' financial sector leverage, up to $450 trillion, is, according to financial sector intelligence sources, at the disposal of cadres reporting to George Bush Sr. (alleged DVD). Bribery of officials to keep them quiet after leaving office, or to co-opt their services in pursuit of German Illuminist global hegemony strategy, is accordingly routine. After all, this method 'costs nothing', since the funds used at the intergovernmental level for such purposes have been conjured out of thin air through clever hypothecation and leverage operations exploiting the characteristics of the global fiat money system, and the willingness of the co-opted banks to accommodate such operations. As a consequence, certain institutions have become giants in the space of less than a decade. As this book was being finalised, a red-hot intelligence war was in progress, inter alia over the disposition of these giga-funds, amid a growing danger of open warfare should appropriate settlements fail to be completed.

In other words, ample funding to lubricate the secret German/Illuminati global hegemony project for the whole of the 21st century, has been accumulated. The sums are so large that the mishandling of this situation could destroy the US dollar and in any case might well precipitate the Third World War. The 9/11 atrocity was engineered specifically in order to provide a 'common' and 'lasting' pretext for aggressive intervention operations by the Illuminati's enforcement arm - the United States - for the next 50 years, at least. America's remit, specified on the reverse of the Great Seal of the United States, is for the 'New World' to impose its 'Order' on the whole of humanity - on the instructions of the 'Order', which is controlled by the three groups of 13 'Orders' - the Vatican, the Khazar 'Black Nobility', and Illuminised Communism, all operating behind the smokescreen of, or in an environment obfuscated by, Illuminised Freemasonry and myriad secret societies, which are themselves fractions of The Order. It is recognised that this structure may not adequately describe the full scope and potential of the 'Dark Forces playing Games', but it is a largely accurate even though necessarily an incomplete picture.

The Vatican-based Political Action Centre, established by Giuseppe Mazzini, has either delegated operations to Frankfurt and Berlin, or else has been obliged all along to coexist with them, given the pre-existence of the modern Illuminati sect's proliferation in Europe and into North America via the German Masonic Lodges and the networks consolidated by Adam Weishaupt and his associates. The Pike-Mazzini axis was established almost a century after Weishaupt's activities, both as a consequence of them and in accordance with the methodology and imperatives laid down by Adam Weishaupt. Logically, therefore, the Pike-Mazzini axis, and division of powers, may be considered to be junior to the pre-existing German Illuminati control centres - one of many reasons for the incessant tensions and rivalries between European 'Principalities and Powers' that are in evidence today, just as they have persisted at least since the 17th century.

THE FOUNDER OF MODERN GERMAN AND RUSSIAN INTELLIGENCE

Arguably the most influential 'alumnus' of the 19th century German Illuminati was the father of the modern German secret service - Wilhelm Johann Carl Eduard Stieber, who served Bismarck and developed the intelligence and strategic deception principles and methods that were brought to fruition both by the Nazis and, because Stieber later reorganised the Tsar's secret intelligence services, the Soviets. It was Stieber who prepared elaborately for military invasion by planting agents years beforehand on the intended line of march. He used 'Black' funds to buy up newspapers in France, so that they would spread pacifist ideas, while distributing press information in Prussia promoting militarism (double-mindedness in action). Under Stieber, German espionage was integrated into a special service, for which he prevailed upon the Reichstag to grant huge budgets.

Later Stieber became an agent provocateur among Berlin's many revolutionary clubs (modelled along French Revolution lines and backed or spawned by the Lodges). While secretly in the pay of the police and well known to King Frederick Wilhelm himself, Stieber became one of the most zealous leaders of the Berlin crowds. In 1850, Stieber was appointed Polizeirath, with immediate control over the Sicherheizpolizei (public safety police). After falling from grace when King Frederick Wilhelm descended into imbecility, Stieber obtained employment in St Petersburg, organising the Tsar's secret service.

Stieber evidently first came into contact with Russian officials in Berlin when they employed him to suppress a scandal that had arisen in connection with the wife of one of the Russian employees. His services proved so useful that he appears to have been given a sweeping letter of commission - to seek out Russian counterfeiters and lawbreakers who had sought refuge in Germany, and to identify 'demagogues' and political offenders. He accordingly organised large networks of agents in Berlin and other cities, and police officials throughout Germany were ordered to place themselves at Stieber's disposal in respect of all Russian affairs. It was under these conditions that intimate relations developed between the Russian secret service and the Prussian Government. As one 19th century analyst elaborated, 'one can well imagine that little of interest which Stieber discovered as a Russian agent failed to reach the ears of that other person - Stieber, the Prussian agent'[17].

In 1863, Stieber was introduced to Bismarck, who in due course assigned him the task of preparing for the invasion of Bohemia by supplying Bismarck with comprehensive topographical information. Accordingly, Stieber himself toured the region, disguised as a pedlar selling cheap religious statuary and indecent pictures. During the war against Austria, Stieber accompanied the Prussian military as head of what he called the 'Political Police', which he distinguished from ordinary military police guards. Bismarck subsequently authorised Stieber to extend the scope of the Political Police force's operations. He took action against spies (counterintelligence) and established control over letters and telegrams, while also controlling all printed material and newspaper correspondence from the front (censorship). He also organised the distribution to the Prussian military of information about the enemy. At the end of the Austrian War, Stieber laid plans before Bismarck for setting up a Central Information Bureau, which provided the Government with extensive intelligence and controlled the media. Stieber also deployed his honed intelligence skills to guide the outcome of the subsequent Franco-Prussian War.

Stieber's organisation of both the Prussian and the Russian secret services provides a pragmatic explanation of the close intelligence relations between Russia and Germany that have persisted ever since. Because such operatives alternately fall out and collaborate with each other, given that the Devil is the author of confusion, the apparent severance of relations when the Molotov-Ribbentrop Pact collapsed, represented no intelligence discontinuity. In reality, the presence at the highest level of Stalin's control apparatus of Lavrentii Beria, a long-term agent of the German Abwehr, and the close liaison between Beria and the Nazi General Muller, are among many indications that there was never any discontinuity in the working relationships between the Soviet and German intelligence services, or elements of them. This remains the case.

TWO BLADES OF THE SAME CONTROLLED PAIR OF SCISSORS

The reason for this is that, thanks initially to Stieber, the two intelligence communities were, and remain, the two blades of the common pair of scissors manipulated by the German Illuminati. Why else is it reliably reported by US intelligence contacts of this Author that GRU-President Vladimir Putin, whose wife is on record as having referred to her husband as a 'vampire'[18], allegedly surfaces from time to time in Germany to attend occult ceremonies at Dachau, the seat of the German 'Black' intelligence successors of the Abwehr, Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst (DVD)?

Finally, and most crucially of all, we can see the 'Scissors Strategy' at work with astonishing 'success' in respect of defeated Nazi Germany's long-term revenge against its two 'main enemies', which are considered to be one - Britain and the United States. The Author is certain that the European Union is a long-range strategic deception operation of German 'Black' intelligence (DVD), designed to subjugate the whole of Europe, and especially the primary European target, Britain, within a German sphere of influence and control.

Germany's main ally in this venture is (Vichy) France, the two countries being bound together under the 1963 Treaty of the Elysee, which is of indefinite duration. Under this Treaty, the two Governments are obliged to reach a 'common position' in respect of all international issues and relations that concern them individually, and must present this common stance at all international meetings in which they participate[19]. It is axiomatic, therefore, that intelligence relations, both 'White' and 'Black', between the two countries are always close. At the same time, Germany and France are bound to Russia by interlocking bilateral treaty obligations, and by common membership of a Trilateral Commission consisting of representatives of the three countries, of which President Jacques Chirac was Chairman before being elected as President of France. Britain, which is struggling behind the scenes to extricate itself from the EU Collective, has been caught in this Nazi trap, and defanged - and its military class and military-industrial complex semi-collectivised.

Note: For practical reasons, this book does not address the Chinese and Japanese elements of the long-range strategic offensive against the 'Main Enemy'. Including them would necessitate the placement of Japanese intelligence on the upper blade, and Chinese intelligence on both blades of the scissors. Chinese intelligence works closely with German and French intelligence, and always with the KGB and the Soviet GRU.

Figure 98: Diagram showing the application of the 'Scissors Strategy' that has been pursued with no discontinuity since the Second World War by German intelligence from behind its Soviet and Illuminati covers.

The other blade of the German Illuminati's scissors has cut a swathe since the Second World War through the United States' corrupted institutions, installing a Nazi Fifth Column at the highest levels of Government, within the intelligence services, and in the military. At least 32,000 German agents were known to be operating in the United States even before the 1939-45 War. As the Nazi authors of the 'Madrid Circular Letter' proclaimed to their intended recipients, 'For us the War never ended' ('Fur uns der Krieg ist niemals vorbei') and 'We will build the Thousand-year Reich on the Ruins of the United States'. They have made, and are making, stunning progress.

If we overlook the Illuminati dimension momentarily, we can indeed see clearly that this Scissors Strategy has been crowned with 'success'. But when we restore the invisible hand to the scissors, we make the unpleasant discovery that the Illuminati cadres in both countries (Britain and the United States) are secretly collaborating with their German Illuminati associates in pursuit of the idolatrous objective laid out and rationalised by Adam Weishaupt: unfettered global control. And the pivot pin on which the blades of the scissors move is the alleged DVD agent-strategist, George Bush Sr..

BUT A HOUSE DIVIDED AGAINST ITSELF CANNOT STAND

But before we scare ourselves to death, let us take comfort from the following reality. According to a US source at the highest level of the controlling Illuminati cadres there, the struggle for hegemony is indeed being waged by European powers which are at loggerheads with each other. The Author was told, by proxy, to leave these evil powers to fight it out among themselves, and not to get caught in the cross-hairs.

So we can take comfort from Jesus Christ's logical statement that a house divided against itself cannot stand[20]. For it is clear, from this Author's close observations, that the Illuminati cadres are permanently riven with rivalries and hatreds that can never be reliably repaired. Individuals and cadres among them may imagine that they can reach accords, and that trust can be established; but since all these Dark Actors are Playing Games, by definition, none of them can ever be trusted; and not only do they distrust each other, but they are liable at any moment to be at each others' throats and to resort to threats, blackmail and murder in pursuit of their reprobate 'Quest'.

Temporary accommodations are typically reached among the different competing national and international factions; but the hatreds, rivalries, 'bait and switch' mentality and propensity to double-cross, always gain the upper hand. In accordance with the Jesuit principle, everyone spies on everyone else (a horrifying discovery, when one interacts with these people in the United States), US intelligence operatives threaten each other all the time, and nothing most of them say can ever be believed (providing many with a form of Satanic 'cover'). They are also hampered by the rigorously applied system of compartmentalisation, which precludes serious strategic analysis at all times.

Compartmentalisarion is integral with internal spying. The demonic Jesuitical spy system was installed from the outset in order to assure The Order of control over its membership. The idolatry of control and power was paramount from the outset. The lust for control is what underlies the culture of internal spying characteristic of intelligence communities, 'bait-and-switch', institutionalised lying, and back-stabbing.

This is no basis on which to build a house that can survive. And it can't.

WHY WE SHOULD BE OF GOOD COURAGE

Since both domestically and internationally, interpenetration, double-dealing, turmoil, jealousies, threats, lies, internal spying, hatreds, compartmentalisation, scamming, double crossing and 'bait and switch' trickery characterise the hellish world in which these people live and have their stunted being, it is obvious that, no matter what horrors the warring Illuminati synarchy intelligence and other cadres may be planning and have in store for humanity, they can never consummate their evil objective. This is obvious, if one applies rigorous concluding logic to the situation. Just suppose that the muminati were actually to succeed in establishing their lusted-after global dictatorship - in 'consummating their idolatry'.

How could such an edifice possibly survive, given the turmoil which characterises the hell within which these creatures all operate? Would envy and jealousy suddenly be abolished under cover of their mad utopia? Because they fear that they would not, the idea is to brainwash populations so that the whole world is of one mind, while those who refuse to conform and to be 'brought to reason' will simply be eliminated. General Alexander Haig personally confirmed to a US intelligence contact of the Author's that the concentration camps listed on pages 612-613 do exist and that plans for the 'treatment' of targeted components of the population include the designation of troublesome elements by a colour-coding system: Red, destined for immediate liquidation, for instance in gas vans en route or at the alleged Amtrak Indianapolis gassing facility; Blue, destined for 'rehabilitation' (= 'bringing to reason') in the concentration camps; and Green, destined for milder but unspecified coercive treatment Figure 97 on page 628 shows views of US Rex-84 concentration camps readied for such purposes - awaiting, no doubt, instructions from members of the 'highest' Illuminati Degree of REX. The existence of Rex-84 was confirmed during the Iran-Contra hearings in 1987, being subsequently reported in the Miami Herald on 5th July 1987.

The use of the codename Rex-84 has everything to do with the 'highest Degree' of the IUuminati. To suggest the contrary would be tantamount to suggesting that the 'M' on the late Pope's coffin represented 'Mary'. During the 1980s, Diana Reynolds summarised the official Tine' with regard to Rex-84, in language that immediately contains a clue: the use of the word 'Alpha'. The letters of the Greek alphabet are used by Illuminati cadres, especially the mind-control sectors, to denote stages of operations -with 'omega' triggering liquidations (exterminations). According to Ms. Reynolds:

'The Rex-84 Alpha Explan (Readiness Exercise 1984, Exercise Plan), indicates that FEMA in association with 34 other Federal civil departments and agencies conducted a civil readiness exercise during April 5-13, 1984. It was conducted in coordination and simultaneously with a Joint Chiefs exercise, Night Train 84, and a worldwide military command post exercise (including Continental US Forces or CONUS) based on multi-emergency scenarios operating both abroad and at home'.

'In the combined exercise, Rex-84 Bravo, FEMA and DOD led the other Federal agencies and departments, including the Central Intelligence Agency, the Secret Service, the US Treasury, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and the Veterans Administration through a gaming exercise to test military assistance in civil defense'.

'The exercise anticipated civil disturbances, major demonstrations and strikes that would affect continuity of government and/or resource mobilization. To fight subversive activities, there was authorisation for the military to implement Government-ordered movements of civilian populations at State and regional levels, the arrest of certain unidentified segments of the population, and the imposition of martial rule'[21].

This is the 'pragmatic' explanation for the existence of US concentration camps. But it represents just a statement about past 'precautions', not about what is intended. Contingency planning in the hands of duplicitous operatives is extremely dangerous.

THE INTENDED CLOSURE OF THE BLADES OF THE SCISSORS

For the Rex-84 Program, with Operations Cable Splicer and Garden Plot, anticipate the closure of the blades of the Scissors - representing the triumph of the German Illuminati cadres buried within the US structures, which is to correspond with the final decapitation of British power within the EU. The 'hidden' hand in the scissors is that of the Illuminati, which serves as deep cover for naked German long-range global hegemony strategy encapsulated in the slogan: 'Deutschland uber Alles'. But because the 'hand in the scissors' is, by definition, a collective hand (manipulated by 39 elements), and because the Devil is the author of confusion, the House of the Order of the Illuminati is unavoidably divided against itself. This means that the hand, though violent and ruthless, is also hesitant and afraid....

The aforementioned warning by proxy to the Author from the 'highest' level of the 'Illuminated Ones' in the United States, to the effect that 'the European powers are fighting it out among themselves' rings ominously true. Especially as the veteran person concerned is of German extraction, and is therefore perfectly informed. The geo-masonic source in question further confirmed 'Svali's' revelation' that German is alwavs spoken at the highest levels of the Illuminati. 'What need we any further witness'? [22]

Eyewitness accounts of the abominations of hell

'Beginning on May 10, and continuing every Tuesday and Friday, Jews were brought to Minsk from Germany, Austria and Czechoslovakia, then driven by truck towards Maly Trostenets. The trucks were mobile gas-chambers; when they reached the camp all those inside them were dead'.

'Then the march began. Barbed wire on both sides, in the rear two dozen Ukrainians with rifles. They drew near. Wirth and I found ourselves in front of the death-chambers. Stark naked men, women, children and cripples passed by. A tall SS man in the corner called to the unfortunates in a loud minister's voice: 'Nothing is going to hurt you. Just breath deep and it will strengthen your lungs. It's a way to prevent contagious diseases. It's a good disinfectant!'.

'Piled up in freight cars, unable to bend or to budge, sticking one to the other, breathless, crushed by one's neighbour's every move, this was already hell. During the day, a torrid heat, with a pestilential smell. After several days and several nights, the doors were opened. We arrived worn out dehydrated, with many ill. A newborn baby, snatched from its mother's arms, was thrown against a column. The mother, crazed from pain, began to scream. The SS man struck her violently with the butt end of his weapon over her head. Her eyes haggard, with fearful screams, her beautiful hair became tainted with her own blood. She was truck down by a bullet in the head'.

'The SS seemed to enjoy this bloody escapade. Just then the youngest of the bunch asked his superior if it was all right to catch one of those 'little Jews' on his bayonet as it was coming down [thrown from a window above]. His superior gave him permission, and the young SS butcher rolled up his rifle sleeve and caught the very next infant on his bayonet. The blood of the infant flowed down the knife onto the murderer's arm and into his sleeve. He tried his talent once more, and again he was successful in catching the wailing child on his sharp bayonet He tried a third time but missed and gave up the whole game, complaining it was getting too 'messy''.

'There, in the valley, three large graves were already waiting for them. They had been dug out that same day. The old, the sick, pregnant women and small children, two thousand innocent Jewish souls, were shot and brutally thrown into those graves, one on top of the other. Many of them were still alive! For most of the children, they didn't even waste a bullet They were just thrown in alive. And together with those who were only wounded, finished their lives under the pressure of the human mass.... The larger grave contained a thousand bodies each. We learned of this massacre from the Polish police themselves. They told Moshe Hersh about it in minute detail, because they themselves had taken part in that slaughter. On the following Sunday, they went to church with their families, as if nothing had happened. They suffered no guilt feelings. After all, they were only murdering Jews, with the blessing of their priests, who inflamed them from their pulpits on Sundays'.

FROM 'THE PRICE OF LOYALTY' BY RON SUSKIND*

The account of Paul O'Neill's two years as US Treasury Secretary

Across the room, Ashcroft started playing the piano. [Condoleeza] Rice was ushered over.

"Do you know any hymns?"

"Do I know any hymns", Ashcroft said in stagy surprise, and started pounding out "Amazing Grace". Rice sang - she has a lovely voice. For the next hour they all sang as Ashcroft played.

In the corner, O'Neill sat in a wide leather chair, devouring a pile of documents that George Tenet had passed out in the meeting. It laid out a span of covert activity around the globe, including... assassinations - a plan to neutralise people disposed against the US Government by any means necessary. At its core was the enabling provision that there be virtually no civilian oversight.

"What I was thinking is, 'I hope the President really reads this carefully'" O'Neill recalled. "It's kind of his job. You can't give this much responsibility to unelected individuals. But I was sure he wouldn't". ■

FROM 'THE CONTROVERSY OF ZION' BY DOUGLAS REED*

Virtual identity of Weishaupt's documents and 'The Protocols'

'The resemblance of Weishaupt's documents [to the 'Protocols of the Elders of Zion'] is very strong in the passages which relate to the infiltration of public departments, professions and parties; for instance: 'It is from us that the all-engulfing terror proceeds. We have in our service persons of all opinions, of all doctrines [including] restorating monarchists, demagogues, socialists, Communists and utopian dreamers of every kind. We have harnessed them all to the task: each one of them on his own account is boring away at the last remnants of authority, is striving to overthrow all established form or order. By these acts, all States are in torture; they exhort to tranquillity, are ready to sacrifice everything for peace; but we will not give them peace until they openly acknowledge our international Super-Government and with submissiveness'.

'The allusions to the permeation of universities in particular, and of education in general, also spring directly from Weishaupt, or from whatever earlier source he received them: "We shall emasculate the universities.... their officials and professors will be prepared for their business by detailed secret programmes of action from which they will not with immunity diverge, not by one iota. They will be appointed with especial precaution, and will be so placed as to be wholly dependent upon the Government". This secret permeation of universities (which are centres for the spreading of mental confusion and indoctrination, and - for the 'chosen ones' - for infestation with a demonised mentality of double-mindedness [Skull and Bones at Yale, The Apostles at Cambridge])... was successful in German universities in Weishaupfs day... and was very largely successful in our generation' [actually, several generations earlier, as Chapter 2 of the present work shows]'.

'Republicanism, too, is to be a "cover" for the conspiracy. The Protocols' are especially contemptuous of Republicanism, in which (as also in Liberalism) they see the weapon of self-destruction forged out of "the mob";'... then it was that the era of republics became possible of realisation; and then it was that we replaced the ruler by a caricature of a government by a President taken from the mob*, from the midst of our puppet creatures, our slaves. This was the foundation of the mine which we have laid under the peoples'. *Interesting use of the word 'mob' here: The reader is supposed to believe that what the anonymous conspiratorial 'Protocols' writer meant was the 'crowd', as in the French Revolution. But the American version of the word 'mob' has a double meaning -namely, the organised criminal dasses (mafia). Note that the President is 'taken from the mob'.

'The term "utopian dreamers", used more than once, is applied to Liberals, and its original source probably resides in the Old Testament allusion to "dreamers of dreams" who, with "false prophets", are to be put to death. The end of Liberalism, therefore, would be apparent to the student [provided he reads Scripture! - Ed.] even if 'The Protocols' did not specify it: "When we introduced into the State organism the poison of Liberalism, its whole political complexion underwent a change. States have been seized with a mortal illness, blood-poisoning. All that remains is to await the end of their death-agony.... We shall root out Liberalism from the important strategic posts of our government on which depends the training of subordinates for our State structure".

Disraeli, the 19th century British Prime Minister, was among the very large number of Jews who were (and are today) aware of the Talmudic takeover of Judaism, and that it is a disaster both for Jewry and for the whole world, since the Talmud teaches the opposite of the revelation of the Truth made available to the children of Israel as described in the Torah, thus recommending every abomination under the sun - with special emphasis on paedophilia (which, as this Author states elsewhere, is arguably the worst of all crimes, as little children are innocents and vessels of the Holy Spirit in which the Torah Jews of course also believe). Disraeli warned as follows in his 1846 novel Coningsby.

- That mighty revolution which is at this moment preparing in Germany [NOTE, IN GERMANY] and of which so little is as yet known in England, is developing entirely under the auspices of the Jews'.

And in 1852, Disraeli returned to the subject, telling the House of Commons:

- 'The influence of the Jews may be traced in the last outbreak of the destructive principle in Europe. An insurrection takes place against tradition and aristocracy, against religion and property. The natural equality of men and the abrogation of property are proclaimed by the secret societies who form provisional governments and men of Jewish race are found at the head of every one of them". Author's Postscript

It may be troubling for thinking Americans to have to come to the realisation that their Republic is the instrument of competing European geomasonic Illuminati forces, which are 'fighting it out among themselves'. As mentioned in the main text that this is the situation, was revealed to the Author by an American colleague whose elderly relative is initiated to the highest Illuminati level - and who added: 'Don't get caught in the middle of it'. The source of this advice was not however, a Christian, and so could not see the picture from the perspective of the Author and his US colleague - which is that we have a duty to share what we know about 'the mystery of iniquity' with friends, and to provide, if possible, guidance as to how it may be understood, confronted, and overcome.

The Author has suggested, in passing, that one positive way in which this mystery can begin to be addressed in the US context would be for patriotic and understanding Americans to begin a determined agitation for the removal of the emblem of the Illuminati, and other occult images, from the $1.0 bill. This ought to have happened many decades ago.

Indeed, as an 'honorary American', the Author is surprised that this outrage does not offend ordinary, decent Americans, as it should. Of course, such a campaign would be addressing only a symptom of the Republic's malady, rather than the cause. But it would be most effective, for the following reason. As this study has shown, the Illuminati-Freemasons are obsessed by symbology, using goofy hand signals, esoteric logos and signs as an integral dimension of their secret society system. Their distorted 'truths' are 100% contained within their symbols and emblems.

The placement of the Illuminati's actual emblem on the $1.0 bill represented an arrogant 'in-your-face' assertion by the self-serving synarchical elite that the United States is indeed a revolutionary, 'Illuminised' power, founded by European geomasonic 'Dark Actors Playing Games' to serve their weird, obsessive and idolatrous interests, rather than those of the American people. This is why US Governments are distanced from the people: they are not serving them, but rather the geomasonic Illuminati's crooked agenda. Even to demand the removal of their emblem from the US $1.0 bill would signal to these evil synarchists that 'we, the people' have had enough. For they aren't used to being contradicted, and would be astounded that their standard lies are failing. Their primary fatuous lie, which this study has decisively debunked, is, of course, that there is no such tiling as a conspiracy.

On the one hand, the conspirators have for a century spread the lie that there is no such thing as a conspiracy (even though Lenin specifically, in writing, identified the Revolution as a conspiracy). On the other hand, the Author has been informed by an impeccable source that cadres buried deep within the US Information Warfare bureaucracy specialise in proliferating multiple conspiracy theories in order to procure the following outcomes:

- The escalating discrediting of 'conspiracy theories' and 'conspiracy theorists', so as to maintain the unimpeded 'Right of Way' to which the Master Illuminati Conspiracy arrogantly believes it is entitled on the World Revolution Motorway.
- Realisation of the potential for causing maximum permanent confusion in the minds of researchers so that they follow false, dead-end leads.

So, here we have perhaps the Grandfather of all examples of the Illuminati's routine double-mindedness. There is no such thing as a conspiracy. So they distribute all kinds of false leads, fairytales and fantastic make-believe conspiracies, via the Internet in order to sustain this illusion. The due to discernment is understanding their duality.

Far from being perceived as a threat to the hegemony of the criminalised classes within the official structures, the Internet has been seized upon as an unprecedented, millennial opportunity to confuse all issues, to distort reality, to plant disinformation stories and to manufacture false conspiracy theories in order to pull the wool over the disoriented public's eyes, so that the Illuminati and their agentur can continue with their corrupt geofinancial and geopolitical operations.

Is there a secret community of interests between German Nazi Continuum 'Black' Intelligence, hiding behind the deep cover of the Illuminati, which provides its most comprehensive Fifth Column inside the largest component of the 'main enemy', the United States, and the Talmudic Khazar Jewish interests represented within or served by the three wings of the Illuminati's structures - the Vatican (where Mazzini's Political Action Centre is located), the 'Black Nobility' and the Freemasons: or are these two 'forces' destined ultimately to fall out among themselves? The answer, given that there is reported to be extensive Jewish participation within the Dachau-based Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst, is evidently in the affirmative. This book in any case allows of no other conclusion. ■

ADDENDA NEW UNDERWORLD ORDER INSIGHTS

SELECTED ARTICLES ILLUSTRATING NEW UNDERWORLD ORDER DIMENSIONS

The features on pages 662-738 illustrate dimensions of the New Underworld Order in greater depth than the space allocated for them in the main text. The features are of course historical, of an older vintage than the main Chapters of this book. For instance, Addendum 6 elaborates on the ongoing (covert) Soviet criminalism offensive, which US intelligence competes and collaborates with - a Black strategy which is wrong and unwise in principle, and prone to yield catastrophic consequences in practice. The United States, being a key revolutionary power, conducts Financial and Economic Warfare against its enemies, even while, for public consumption, calling them 'friends'. By collaborating with the Soviet criminalists, US intelligence has maximised opportunities for Soviet blackmail, which is the technique that Soviet Military Intelligence (GRU) and the KGB Continuum routinely deploy against their high-level US and Western targets. For in parallel with the unchanged deception strategy of the Dachau-based German 'Black' intelligence apparat, the Soviet blade of the scissors admits of no discontinuity either.

SUMMARY OF THE APPENDED ARTICLES AND FEATURES IN THIS FINAL SECTION

The following briefs summarise the content and purpose of each of these appended articles / features: 1: The Stolen Election of 2004: Explains how electronic voting machines and software were fiddled in order to ensure a continuation of the Republicans' (dialectical) 'turn' in power. Discusses other means whereby the election was rigged, and shows that for demographic reasons the Republicans can never win an election legitimately again. This in itself is extremely dangerous for the Republic, making an outright abandonment of democracy (which is in fact 'democratism') and the Constitution likely. 2: The Death Education Agenda: Exposes the teaching of death-related subjects in our schools, a dimension of the Illuminati's operations to accustom the population to their speciality - death. 3: Cerberus Capital Management: Exposes one 'hedge fund' operation and the active role of George Bush Sr.'s Vice President Dan Quayle, as he circles the globe seeking out opportunities for 'investment' of the flows of funds that such hedge funds manage. No mention of source of funds. 4: Bush on the Couch: A comprehensive precis of 'Bush on the Couch: Inside the Mind of the President' by the leading US agnostic psychologist, Dr Justin Frank. MD, Regan Books, HarperCollins Publishers, Inc., New York. Dr Frank subjected President Bush Jr. to analysis using standard procedures. 5: Corruption at Harvard: Outlines the lawsuit brought against allegedly corrupt Harvard Professors who saw opportunities for personal enrichment attached to a misguided programme of 'educational' initiatives for the 'former' USSR sponsored by USAID on Congressional instructions. 6: Covert Soviet Financial Scams: This essay is included in order to ensure that it remains well understood that the Soviets have been conducting 'blowback' Financial and Economic Warfare through criminalism aimed at destabilising and maximising financial flows from Western economies, and realising the full potential of their global drug-trafficking operations and drug offensive against the West. 7: US Criminalism Exposed: This report gives outline details of an astonishing lawsuit brought by a Russian intelligence corporation against CIA operatives including the Director of Operations himself. 8. Exposure Document: Soviet Criminalism: The Norex Case: A US Court document that exposes how the Soviet criminalist intelligence underworld functions, and some of its US assets. 9 & 10: Presentations on the widespread use of Satanic hand signals and of geomasonic handshakes. The hand signals are used openly to signal the presence of Satan: the handshakes are secret signals. It is said that 'pictures speak louder than words'. These tell-tale Illuminati pictures are deafening. ■

ADDENDUM ONE: International Currency Review 30, 2/3: February 2005

THE STOLEN ELECTION OF 2004

THE ILLEGITIMACY OF GOVERNMENT

Democratic legitimacy, however decadent, depends upon the perception that the decision of the electorate, however ill-informed (as it usually is), is both valid and sovereign. Likewise, the legitimacy of a currency depends upon the perception that the Government and structures that underlie it are legitimate, and have not usurped power fraudulently.

The dollar has been in free-fall, for reasons which include the serial corruption and frenetic movement of giga-funds implicit in the details exposed in 'International Currency Review'. Other reasons for the US dollar's extreme crisis, and for the concomitant safe-haven escalation of the price of gold, include the accurate perception that the 're-election' of President Bush Jr., followed by so many pending resignations that officials were (we were reliably informed) told not to leave all at once, implies that this Administration's known disregard for fiscal prudence, and its free-spending habits, will continue indefinitely.

On 16th February 2004, a senior US official was reported in 'The Times' (London) to have observed: 'I've never seen any Administration spend money like this... The money is flying out the door.... They give away money on phone calls. No documents, no budget'. In other words, coming from a common intelligence community background where the pipeline of 'Black money[7] is in such plentiful supply that hedge fund-like entities managed or advised by senior intelligence operatives have had to be mobilised to launder and place it, Administration officials from the President down treat the formal Federal Budget in the same profligate manner as they may have been accustomed to do for so long in respect of the vast avalanche of financial resources controlled off-off budget by the free-wheeling US intelligence community. Indeed, knowledge of this non-stop high-yield off-balance sheet financing has made US officials cynical and careless about their stewardsnip of the Federal Government's finances.

And yet another reason for the US dollar's crisis, is that the Rest of the World does not regard the second Bush Jr. Administration to be unequivocally legitimate.

Reasons for this scepticism have proliferated in the underground media ever since, and prior to, President G. W. Bush's signature of the Help America Vote Act [HAVA] on 29th October 2002. This paved the way for the widespread adoption of electronic voting equipment and other mechanisms which, as has proved to be the case, are wide open to surreptitious manipulation.

U.S. MEDIA TOLD TO SHUT UP

The American 'mainstream' media were universally instructed not to cover the many recounts which took place across the United States following the General Election on 2nd November 2004, although some instances - such as the odd announcement very late on 24th November that a Republican Governor of Washington State had been 'elected' after a recount with just 42 votes! - could not be suppressed: your correspondent saw this report on ABC News, rebroadcast in Britain on BBC News 24 in the middle of the night, ahead of Thanksgiving. [A condensed advance report on the dangers of electronic voting was published in International Currency Review Volume 29, Number 2].

It was argued there that HAVA was subliminally or actually predicated upon the pretext provided by the Horida 'chad' fiasco in December 2000, which we and others consider to have been a controlled provocation, organised by intelligence operatives, to provide precisely the pretext needed to persuade the US Congress to approve voting 'reform' legislation, of which HAVA was a subsequent component.

Even so, it was clear, at least from an Op-Ed piece in The New York Times on the eve of the Presidential Election, that the media knew perfectly well that the voting was to be rigged. This was obvious from information the newspaper revealed on 1st November about the pre-election measures that had been taken to preclude large numbers of Americans from being able to vote. As the newspaper explained: 'That people are dying by the tens of thousands in a war that did not have to be fought- a war that was launched by the United States - is mind-boggling'.

'Also mind-boggling is the attempt by Republican Party elements to return the United States to the wretched days of the mid-20th century when many Black Americans faced harassment, intimidation and worse for daring to exercise their fundamental right to vote. A flier circulating extensively in Black neighbourhoods in Wisconsin carried the heading "MILWAUKEE BLACK VOTERS' LEAGUE". It asserted that people are not eligible to vote if they have voted in any previous election this year; if they have ever been found guilty of anything, even a traffic violation; or if anyone in their family has ever been found guilty of anything'.

"'If you violate any of these laws" [details of course unspecified], the flier says, you can get ten years in prison and your children will get taken away from you'".

The New York Times' Op-Ed article added:

'In Philadelphia, where a large vote of Blacks is essential to a Kerry victory in the crucial state of Pennsylvania, the Republican speaker of the Pennsylvania House, John Perzel, is hard at work challenging all Democratic voters. He makes no bones about his intent, telling 'U.S. News & World Report': "The John Kerry campaign needs to come out with humungous voter numbers here in Philadelphia. It's important for me to keep that number down"'.

'That's called voter suppression, folks, and the G.O.P. [the Republican Party] concentrates its voter-suppression efforts in the precincts where there are large numbers of Afro-Americans. And that's called racism'. Given the gratuitous murder of large numbers of Iraqis and Afghanis, and the globally publicised US atrocities at Abu Ghraib and elsewhere, the newspaper concluded that 'these are days of shame for the United States'.

VOTE STOLEN IN ADVANCE

For those with eyes to see, there were indeed plenty of indications of prior intent by the US Administration that, one way or another, the national vote on 2nd November 2004 was always required to yield the 'intended' result. After all, George Bush Sr. had, probably by prior design, 'allowed' his co-members of the 'Box Gang' [intelligence operatives working dialectically together], led by Bill Clinton, allegedly the son of Winthrop Rockefeller, to 'win' the Presidency in 2002. Since Clinton remained in office for two terms, there was never any doubt that the Bush Jr. regime would be 'allowed' two terms by its competing-cooperating 'Box Gang' associates, as well.

But officials nad also put in place a number of initiatives which suggested to many that one or more alternative scenarios existed which were intended to ensure that 'Box Gang fairness' would indeed be forthcoming. Specifically:

The frequency and intensity of official references to and hints of one or more terrorist outrages ahead of or during the General Election (scareism): For instance, five weeks ahead of the election, counterterrorism officials were said to be 'obsessed with reports from multiple sources that terrorists hoped to disrupt the election campaign'.

The perverse intensity of official warnings and the constant references to the prospect of heightened terror alerts put sceptical observers on guard that the authorities were trying to leverage 'scareism' for electoral purposes. A top terrorism official even told Time magazine [of 26th September 2004] that 'nobody can give you a date, time or place, but everyone is absolutely convinced we're going to get hit'. Incredible, isn't it? Of course, given that the United States was not 'hit', nothing has been heard of any of these 'warnings' since.

Earlier, the then Homeland Security Secretary, Tom Ridge, had openly stated that plans did exist for cancelling the election. On 11th July, Newsweek reported that the US Administration was actively investigating the possibility of cancelling the Presidential Election. Specifically, 'Ridge's department last week asked the Justice Department's Office of Legal Counsel to analyse wnat measures would be needed to permit the postponement of the election were an attack to take place. Justice was specifically asked to review a recent letter to Mr Ridge from DeForest B. Soaries [see below], Chairman of the newly created US Election Assistance Commission. Soaries noted that, while a primary election in New York on September 11th, 2001, was quickly suspended by that State's Board of Elections after the attacks that morning, 'the Federal Government has no agency that has the statutory authority to cancel and reschedule a Federal election'.

- A parallel Congressional Research Service (of the Library of Congress) report to Congress dated 14th July 2004, entitled Executive Branch Power to Postpone Elections, which concluded:

'Traditionally, all voting - whether Federal, State or local - occurs in local precinct polling places, and State or local authorities have a significant role in regulating such voting. Congress, however, also has power to regulate elections, and that authority may vary depending upon whether the election is for the Presidency, the House, the Senate, or for State or local offices. While the Executive Branch has significant delegated authority regarding some aspects of election law, this authority does not currently extend to setting or changing the times of elections... Under a variety of possible scenarios that could arise as a result of terrorist attack before or during an election, either the Congress or the States might pass legislation which would affect the timing of these elections'.

'The suggestion has been made, however, that the Executive Branch might have some role in determining whether an election is to occur or whether it can be cancelled. While the Executive Branch does not currently have this power, it does appear that the Congress may be able to delegate this power to the Executive Branch by enacting a statute'.

• Heavy hints that in certain circumstances, the US election might be cancelled or postponed: For instance, Associated Press (which is so close to the intelligence services that it has to be considered their instrument: viz., all enquiries to AP concerning the details surrounding the 9/11 atrocities must be directed to its Washington, DC, bureaucracy), reported on 1st July 2004 that Mr DeForest B. Soaries, appointed by President Bush in 2003 to head the Federal Electoral Assistance Commission, which turned out to be so starved of funds that it could do nothing had pleaded with senior Administration officials for Government guidelines on cancelling or rescheduling elections 'if terrorists strike the United States again'. He said he had written to the then National Security Adviser, Dr Condoleeza Rice, and to the Homeland Security Secretary, Tom Ridge about this matter and 1 am still awaiting their response. Thus far we have not begun any meaningful discussion'. In other words, whether to postpone or cancel the elections was hardly an issue that this minor cosmetic official was allowed to be concerned with, since any such decision would be taken at the highest level on the spur of the moment, depending on the circumstances. But Mr Soaries added the aforementioned interesting fact - that 11th September 2001 was a local election day in New York City (as well, we add, as being the anniversary of (a) the birth of the notorious founder of Lenin's Cheka and (b) precisely the 30th anniversary of the day when the first work started on building the Twin Towers on 11th September 1971).

ELECTION REMAINED 'UP IN THE AIR'

From all of which the following facts were apparent prior to 2nd November 2004:

1. Whether the election would actually be held or not remained 'up in the air' until almost the last moment, since it will have depended upon a high-level Executive Branch decision which, in turn, will have depended upon assessments oi whether measures to ensure 'Box Gang fairness' were going to prove successful, or not.

2. The United States has no unified electoral legislation, and election arrangements vary between the myriad layers of governance and between States and geographical areas. This chaotic state of affairs, which may well be unique among developed political economies, may have been judged highly advantageous from the perspective of would-be election manipulators, as the detailed information provided below would appear to indicate.

What is not widely known is that, in certain circumstances, key political figures featuring in the 2004 General Election may have been targeted for Soviet-style liquidation, depending on the circumstances at the time. For instance, John Edwards, John Kerry's non-Masonic running mate for Vice President, was scheduled to speak in Dubuque, Iowa, in October, when an operative working for the Office of Naval Intelligence was present in the vicinity. This operative may have been, as he claimed to an intermediary, tracking five terrorists at the time; but his handler could have altered the implanted psycho-manipulative 'trigger' message to procure his cooperation in respect of a different outcome. We do not necessarily believe this to have been the intention, but it is an interpretation heard from certain sources. Equally poorly reported was the fact that Vice President Dick Cheney visited the crucial State of Iowa many times during the run-up to the election. Finally, an Israeli-linked source has stated as fact that John Kerry received a substantial allocation of gold in exchange for conceding the election, which he appears to have done prematurely, judging by news from Ohio and Florida. In all probability, Mr Kerry may have been encouraged to concede the election all along knowing that voting tallies would have been 'switched to opposite columns' in accordance with the pre-arranged requirement that 'Box Gang fairness' must prevail. By this we mean that the Republican dialectical component of the intelligence-controlled elements supposedly 'competing' for power and the Democratic elements pre-agree in advance which component is to be in charge for the next four-year period. [The Bush and Clinton cadres work together 'in opposition' and are collectively referred to as 'the Box Gang'].

CYNICISM ABOUT VOTING ABUSES

It stands to reason that with such information and allegations rife preceding, during and following the 2004 US Presidential Election, something must be radically wrong about the management of the US electoral process. At the very least, large swathes of the US population have adopted a cynical approach to the system, with cynicism about vote-rigging and manipulation now commonplace.

The identical phenomenon is developing in the United Kingdom, where, for instance, it is believed that Robert Kilroy-Silk, who has disrupted the UK Independence Party (UKIP), using Communist-style wrecking tactics, may be an intelligence officer, operating on the basis of instructions that UKIP is never to be allowed to gain genuine electoral traction, which it has threatened to do following its remarkable success in the European Parliament elections held in June 2004. Any such intervention by MI5 would be consistent with deep UK intelligence policy, given German (DVD) penetration.

On 4th November 2004, Dick Morris, the former adviser to President Bill Clinton, and a seasoned authority on elections, explained in the influential Capitol Hill journal 'The Hill' why he suspected that the Presidential Election had indeed been rigged. Specifically, he observed:

'By now it is well-known and a part of the 2004 election lore how the exit polls by the major TV networks were wrong.... Exit polls are almost never wrong. They eliminate the two major potential fallacies in survey research by correctly separating actual voters from those who pretend they will cast ballots but never do, and by substituting actual observation for guesswork in judging the relative turnout of different parts of the State. So reliable are the surveys that actually tap voters as they leave the voting places that they are used as guides to the relative honesty of elections in Third World countries'.

'When I worked on Vincente Fox's campaign in Mexico, for example, I was so fearful that the governing PRI would steal the election that I had the campaign commission two US firms to conduct exit polls to be released immediately after the polls closed, to foreclose the possibility of finagling with the returns. When the polls announced a seven-point Fox victory, mobs thronged through the streets in a joyous celebration within minutes, making fraud in the actual counting impossible'.

'But this Tuesday [2nd November 2004], the networks did get the exit polls wrong. Not just some of them. They got all of the Bush states wrong. So, according to ABC-TV's exit polls, for example Kerry was slated to carry Florida, Ohio, New Mexico, Colorado, Nevada and Iowa, all of which Bush carried. The only swing State the network had going to Mr Bush Jr. was West Virginia, which the President won by 10 points'.

'To screw up one exit poll is unheard of. To miss six of them is incredible. It boggles the imagination how pollsters could be that incompetent and invites speculation that more than honest error was at play here. The mistaken exit polls infiltrated all three networks and the cable news outlets and had a chilling effect on the coverage of election night. While all anchors refrained from announcing the exit-poll results, it was clear from the context of their comments that they expected Kerry to win and wondered if Bush could hold any key state.

'The exit pollsters plead that they oversampled women and that this led to their mistakes. But the very first thing a pollster does is weight or quota for gender. Once the female vote reaches 52% of the sample, one either refuses additional female respondents or weights down the ones one subsequently counted. This, dear Watson, is elementary.... so the possibility of biased exit polling, deliberately manipulated in order to try to chill the Bush turnout, must seriously be considered'.

'At the very least, the exit pollsters should have to explain, in public, how they were so wrong. Since their polls, if biased or cooked, represented an attempt to use the public airwaves to reduce the voter turnout, they should have to explain their errors in a very public and perhaps official forum. This was no mere mistake. Exit polls cannot be as wrong right across the board as they were on election night I suspect foul play'.

It is important to bear in mind that Dick Morris, though a key Clinton election engineer, subsequently distanced himself from the Democrats and effectively switched political allegiances. This makes his early post-election protestations all the more credible, which of course they are anyway, given his recognised professional expertise in this area

KERRY WIN EXPECTED ON ELECTION NIGHT

Your correspondent himself went to bed on Election Night in New York convinced, from anecdotal information and broadcast reports, that President Bush Jr. would not be re-elected. So he was astonished when, at not long after 10.00 am on 3rd November, the opposite outcome was being taken for granted. It should be added, in case it might be thought that Mr Dick Morris is biased, that he is the author of 'Rewriting History', a pointed rebuttal of Senator Hillary Clinton's memoir. He also cited, in his article for "The Hill', 'the forged documents that sent CBS on a jihad against Bush's National Guard service, and the planned '60 Minutes' ambush over the so-called missing explosives two days before the polls opened - thereby indicating that he really was reporting objectively for the benefit of Congress, drawing from his deep experience as a manager of election campaigns and as a formidable nit-picking expert and stickler of absolute electoral process integrity.

Mr Morris will surely not have been aware, when he wrote his article for 'The Hill', that John Kerry allegedly instructed his attorney to destroy all evidence of electoral fraud. This information was fed to highly respectable, genuine election integrity actives known to this service, on or about 24th November 2004, by a high-level US intelligence officer, indicating that elements of the US intelligence community are actually themselves outraged by the degradation, manipulation and defrauding of the US democratic process by 'Box Gang' intelligence operatives.

Open reports implying that the Presidential Election outcome on 2nd November 2004 was fraudulent, surfaced briefly but subsequently 'died' - given the edict to the media (enforced by the intelligence cells resident in or attached to every US press room). Not that we ourselves would have been in any way amused by a Kerry victory, you understand: please do not shoot the messenger.

We are talking here about the integrity of the US electoral process and concerning whether the outcome was fraudulent - which is what, on 24th November 2004, the outgoing US Secretary of State, Colin Powell, accused Ukraine of perpetrating. Seen in the broader perspective of the harsh reality that the United States operates its own form of fake 'democratism' akin to the Soviet model, none of this is, of course, in the slightest surprising: but the wall-to-wall fudging and abuse of 'democracy' that is now the norm, needs to be much better understood.

In the United States, as in the 'former' (i.e. currently covert) Soviet Union, it is neither here nor there who wins elections, as the intelligence services always win. In the covert Soviet context, the intelligence services are interchangeable with and indistinguishable from the Party apparat, following the interpenetration of the Party and the intelligence services which was reconfirmed in 1959-61, when the Soviet long-range 'decommissioning strategy' was being finalised

Therefore, in the covert Soviet context, the statement above can be rephrased as follows: it is neither here nor there who wins any election, as the Communists always win. To remind us all of this permanent fact, of which US intelligence cadres themselves may have only recently become aware, The New York Post carried a report on the post election meeting in Chile between George Bush Jr and President Putin - a top Soviet military Intelligence (GRU) operative, who was paid $1.0 billion by US intelligence in exchange for his 'services rendered' in facilitating the orchestrated 'collapses' of the overt Communist regimes in Central and Eastern Europe.

According to the US newspaper, 'in a lengthy exchange with Bush, Putin explained that his goal is 'the creation of a democratic style consistent with Russian history', the official said. We have of course italicised the word style, which is what this is all about, here. Need we further explain that the covert policy is to perpetuate the long-established KGB-Party deception of 'democratism', a Stalin-era word which, translated, means 'the creation and maintenance of the illusion of democracy'?

BRAZEN U.S. HYPOCRISY OVER UKRAINE

We wrote much about 'democratism' throughout the 1990s: here, thanks to 'The New York Post', is final corroboration that this Leninist device to ensure the institutionalisarion of false 'democratic legitimacy' is unsurprisingly being implemented, as in the past, by George Bush's 'friend', the sinister GRU officer and murderer Vladimir Putin. ('I love him, actually', is what the US President said of Putin after he had left Crawford, Texas, during the first Bush Jr. term). It must have amused this hands-on, cynical Leninist GRU operative no end, to have to explain to George W Bush Jr. - who as discussed in this analysis, had just himself stolen his second General Election - that, yes, in the covert Soviet Union, too, 'we steal elections: we know what it feels like'.

Likewise, the corridors of the Kremlin will have echoed on 24th November 2004 with the loud, cynical, hollow laughter, like the sound of brass, of KGB-GRU operatives marvelling at the brazen cheek of the outgoing US Secretary of State, Colin Powell, pontificating to the world about the 'unac-ceptability' of the election 'outcome' in Ukraine - not least because the supporters of the 'legitimate' winner, the intelligence operative posing as 'democratist', Viktor Yushchenko, were filmed waving red banners displaying the standard portrait of Che Guevara.

It is indeed difficult to imagine how much more ridiculous the American State Department could have made itself appear before the international community. No wonder US press rooms were, as revealed above, instructed not to report the disgraceful findings of US election fraud-watchers, such as the information provided in this analysis below.

DISENFRANCHISEMENT OF U.S. VOTERS

On 22nd September, Reuters reported that 'millions of US citizens, including a disproportionate number of black voters, will be blocked from voting in the November 2 Presidential Election because of legal barriers, faulty procedures or dirty tricks. The largest category of those disenfranchised consists of almost five million former felons who have served prison sentences and have been deprived of the right to vote under laws that have roots in the post-Civil War 19th century and were aimed at preventing Black Americans from voting. But millions of other votes in the 2000 Presidential Election were lost due to clerical and administrative errors, while civil rights organisations have catalogued numerous tactics aimed at suppressing Black voter turnout. Polls consistently find that Black Americans overwhelmingly vote for Democrats'.

According to the US Commission on Human Rights, 'there are individuals and officials who are actively trying to stop people from voting who they think will vote against their party, and that nearly always means stopping Black people from voting Democratic'. A field officer for People for the American Way, Vicky Beasley, told Reuters that 'in elections in Baltimore in 2002 and in Georgia last year, Black voters were sent fliers saying anyone who hadn't paid utility bills or who had any outstanding parking tickets or were behind on their rent would be arrested at polling stations. It happens in every election cycle'. In other words, of course, US election fraud is nothing new. But what appears to be new is that it is being directed from the highest level. In the course of a mayoral election in Philadelphia in 2003, people pretending to be plainclothes police officers stood outside some polling stations asking people to identify themselves. There were also reports of mysterious people videotaping voters waiting in line to cast their votes in black neighbourhoods. Mr Spencer Overton, who teaches legal studies at George Washington University, informed Reuters that minority voters might be deterred from voting simply by election officials demanding to see driving licences before handing them a ballot paper, despite the fact that the Federal Government does not require people to produce a photo ID unless they are first-time voters who registered by mail.

Mr Overton added: 'African Americans are four to five times less likely than Whites to have a photo ID'. Mr Courtenay Strickland, for the American Civil Liberties Union, testified to the US Commission on Human Rights in September 2004 that at a primary election in Florida held in August, many people were wrongly turned away when they could not produce identification. In a report published earlier in 2004, the Commission observed that in Florida, where President Bush won the bitterly disputed provocation-election in 2000 by 537 votes, Black voters had been ten times more likely than non-Black voters to have their ballots rejected, and were often prevented from voting because their names were erroneously purged from registration lists.

Florida is also one of 14 US States that prohibit ex-felons from voting. A total of seven percent of the electorate but 16% of Black voters in Florida are disenfranchised. In other swing States, 4.6% of voters in Iowa, but 25% of Blacks, were disenfranchised in 2000 as ex-felons. In Nevada, the numbers were 4.8% of all voters but 17% of Blacks; and in New Mexico, 6.2% of all voters by 25% of all Blacks.

The Commission on Civil Rights added that 13% of all Black men in the United States are disenfranchised due to a felony conviction.

These details raise another issue of immense importance for the future of what remains of the battered American Republic. Digging around for further such evidence, we have found a report by the Advancement Project, which seeks to ensure 'fair multiracial elections'.

This lobby organisation recently confirmed that registrars across the United States 'often claimed not to have received voter registration forms, or else rejected them for technical reasons that could have been corrected easily before voting day if the applicant had known that there was a problem'. Large numbers of voters who had registered comparatively late in 'swing States' reportedly found that their names were not shown on the electoral rolls when they showed up to vote.

REPUBLICANS CAN NEVER WIN LEGITIMATELY AGAIN: THAT'S THE PROBLEM

The underlying theme here is clear to anyone who has not already fallen asleep, given all this detail. The combination of open-ended immigration from Third World countries (a Marxist ploy to mix the races, on the theory that, eventually, all national loyalties become so confused that the nation state becomes redundant: that is the Illuminati's intention), and the much higher birth rates among such immigrants and their communities, implies that the United States now has a permanent majority of voters who, if allowed to vote and the elections were not rigged, would ensure that the left-wing party (of the political dialectic) would invariably win elections for the indefinite future.

The clear prospect, accordingly, is that permanent US election-manipulation is 'the wave of the future' - assuming that it is not replaced by an overt dictatorship. Even in a deceptive 'democratic' environment where manipulation of the results may be taken for granted among the cynical, jaded political establishment, the post-manipulation voting data have to be kept looking 'reasonable', so as to minimise post-election protests and disturbances. But by 2008, the proportion of 'left-wing' Democrats will be much higher than is the case today, so that only three courses will remain open to the 'right-wing' dimension of the political dialectic:

(1) To face medium-term political annihilation, en route to an actual one-party state by that route (which, as previously elaborated, already exists de facto, although few Americans yet realise it);

(2) To ratchet up the wholesale institutionalisation of 'covert election fraud across the board; or:

(3) To impose a de facto dictatorship, presupposing the abandonment of the US Constitution, and to 'refashion' 'democracy' in accordance with the globalist 'New World Order' model.

From these basic considerations, the outlines of a US political community of interests with the 'former' Soviet Union - separate from the well-known US economic greed and envy for access to Soviet energy supplies - begins to emerge clearly into view.

The United States cannot hope to remain a 'democracy' in which there will be any place at all for the Republican Party, which can only hope to survive by institutionalising electoral fraud - a course which, over the medium term, will enlarge the disenfranchised segment of society to such an extent that the consequence (especially given the brutalised, fissiparous tendentiousness of US 'street' culture) will lead to revolutionary upheavals in the streets.

These in turn will be repressed by the burgeoning powers and forces of US repression, which Yevgeniy Primakov and his colleagues are helping the Department of Homeland Security (a.k.a. the developing US Ministry of State Security) to devise and implement.

For its part, the covert Soviet Union has no intention of ever embracing democracy, even as fraudulently defined today by the US State Department - preferring instead the standard Leninist 'style' of democracy as revealed by Putin. This is of course the classical, unaltered Leninist deception methodology, exposed by the genuine Soviet defector Anatoliy Golitsyn, of 'controlled democracy', or 'democratism'. Which just happens to be the stage arrived at by the United States, while most people sleep.

GRADUALIST PATH PROBABLY IMPRACTICAL

It is not the intention of the present pro-active US Republican intelligence-leadership to follow the 'gradualist' path outlined - that is, option (2) above. Waiting for demographic pressures for US electoral fairness to become more and more intense, would be only an interim solution to the Republicans' problem. [It being you understand, a dilemma for those who still do not seem to understand that controlled 'democratism' is just a classical form of the Hegelian dialectic (Thesis: Republican, or 'right'-wing'-label control; Antithesis: Democratic, or 'left-wing'-label control; Synthesis: it being neither here nor there which controlled party is in control, because the same (devious intelligence) forces always win. For, even within their 'Box', the players in this cynical game of 'democratism' really do hate their dialectical enemies' guts (just as rival mafiosi, though often collaborating likewise hate and liquidate their rivals when threatened)].

Hence, we predict that the Bush Jr. II Administration will have been tempted to choose option (3) - namely, the final abandonment of the Constitution and the imposition of a de facto dictatorship control mechanism, either via the ongoing coup d'etat by instalments, or else by means of a further atrocity-provocation, or 'Reichstag Fire' event, representing a 'Great Leap Forward' facilitating the putsch.

THE SURVIVAL LOGIC OF THE COUP D'ETAT

It is easy to see the logic behind this cynical intention, of which so many clues have emerged into view (including the finalisation of the North American GULAG camp system, details of which were published in Volume 29, Number 2 of International Currency Review [see updated list in Appendix 2 to Chapter 8 of this volume]. If our demographic-oriented analysis is correct, this is the last Republican Administration to have gained power by means which it purports to represent as having been 'normal' (and we have already seen just how abnormal George W. Bush's 're-election' has been).

It is already extraordinary enough, both among thinking Americans and to the Rest of the World, that the US is represented to have re-elected a man whose words routinely emerge in mangled format from his lips, as though he's either brain-damaged or else possessed as the result of a Satanic event (as some well-informed Americans insist), or, as his remote psychoanalyst asserts, is chronically dyslexic [see page 681].

If policy is being formulated on the basis of staccato instructions from Mr Bush that confuse even the names of nation states, such as the following verbiage spouted by the President on 13th March 2001, long before 9/11, the world is in for a period of extreme darkness:

'But the true threats to stability and peace are these nations that are not very transparent, that hide behind the - that don't let people in to take a look and see what they're up to. They're very kind of authoritarian regimes. The true threat is whether or not one of these people decide, peak of anger, try to hold us hostage, ourselves; the Israelis, for example, to whom we'll defend, offer our defenses; the South Koreans'.

On the same morning that Gulf War II was launched, George Bush Jr. was caught on the internal White House video feed, punching his clenched fists into the air and pronouncing: 'Feels good, feels good' - a delighted smirk on his face. So, one factor that the financial markets must now be prepared for is that this man may become progressively more irrational and unrestrained (which may be one reason why so many of his top officials were leaving in late 2004, along with numerous leading CIA operatives who were rightly fearful of the anger of the new leadership of the Agency ('peak of anger').

In other words, the sad observation of a female operative, vouchsafed to a US friend of ours in July 2004, makes perfect sense to us. 'Enjoy the Fourth of July: it will be the last' (it wasn't). Considering that General Tommy Franks, the 'victor' of the invasion component of the latest Iraq War, knows a thing or two about the way the holders of power today in Washington think, his notorious warning published in an issue of the surprisingly influential journal 'Cigar Afficionado' in 2003, also makes perfect sense. The General wrote that in the event of a further catastrophic attack or event in the United States, the Government will abolish the US Constitution and will have no choice but to impose a military government.

Now given the scale of the corruption revealed, for instance [in successive issues of International Currency Review] it may be wondered whether the Republic does not actually need a dictatorship in order for the giga-corruption to be addressed. A moment's thought will tell us that any such development will inevitably be associated with the opposite effect, since the power derived from control over off-balance sheet trading is so vast, that financial patronage (bribery) comes with high office; and, in any case, key US military personnel are all 'high' Masons.

Nevertheless, there are those who, having long since understood that the corruption (now including electoral, as well as financial, corruption, of course) has gone too far to be reversed, do take the view that the only solution to this truly millennial crisis of the Republic may be for the military to arrest the primary perpetrators en masse overnight, to impose military discipline for the time being on the nation, and to preside over the process of 'bringing these people to justice', as George Bush Jr. typically says of Al-Qaeda terrorists, for instance. Will this happen? The answer is, probably not - since success in the military is usually dependent, in part, upon Masonic 'justification'; and all Masons serve the 'Brotherhood' (themselves), under cover of serving 'The Brotherhood of Man'. Even so, the gravity of the situation is such that, even within their Masonic number, there may be plenty of generals (as there are of senior officials) who have had 'enough'. [Note: This was written in 2004].

CARELESS TELL-TALE MISTAKES

In preparing to steal the 2004 General Election, the perpetrators slipped up many times. For instance, in mid-October, Associated Press (dubbed 'Associated Propaganda' by one visceral Internet analyst), released a report to the effect that President Bush Jr. had won the November election. When this revealing error was picked up, Associated Press concocted the interestingly ludicrous line that the story had been released as a 'test'.

On 7th November, Mr Thorn Hartmann, a syndicated columnist reported as follows:

'Election night, I'd been doing live election coverage for WDEV, one of the radio stations that carries my syndicated show and, just after midnight, during the 12.20 am Associated Press Radio news feed, I was startled to hear the reporter detail how Karen Hughes (the President's aide) had earlier sat George W. Bush down to inform him that he'd lost the election. The exit polls were clear: Kerry was winning in a landslide. "Bush took the news stoically", noted the A.P. report'.

Why did Mr Bush take this 'bad news' without reacting? Because he knew that the real results were in the process of being manipulated in his favour. How interesting, isn't it, that not even Karen Hughes knew about this scam. Yet, notwithstanding the instruction to the 'mainstream' media not to report the serial electoral fraud which actually occurred, the authorities have been unable to hide altogether the extent to which the General Election was stolen, once again, as in 2000.

For instance, a UC Berkeley campus research team has reported that irregularities associated with electronic voting machines may have awarded between 130,000 and 260,000 or more excess votes to President George W Bush Jr. in Horida in the November 2004 election. Their detailed study revealed an unexplained discrepancy between the votes for President G. W. Bush in counties where the new electronic voting machines were used, versus counties using the traditional voting methods. The research team, led by Professor Michael Hout, stressed that discrepancies this large or larger, rarely emerge by chance, the probability being less than 0.1%.

In the Horida counties which continued to use optically scanned paper ballots, fed into a central tabulator PC and thus vulnerable to hacking, the results contained such extreme anomalies that they lacked all credibility. For instance, in Baker County, which had 12,887 registered voters, 69.3% of them Democrats and 24.3% of them Republicans, the vote was only 2,180 for Kerry and 7,738 for Bush - the very opposite of what was seen everywhere else in the country, where registered Democrats voted for Kerry. On a tour of the United States earlier in the year, a prominent US voting procedure activist and analyst, reported privately that he had observed anecdotal evidence that if the voting was not rigged, there would be a landslide for Kerry.

Yet in locations like Dixie County, Horida, with 4,988 registered voters, 77.5% of them Democrats and just 15% registered as Republicans, only 1,959 people voted for Kerry and 4,433 voted for Bush. In other words, the total number of votes cast for the two main candidates was 6,392, which meant that 1,404 dead people or phantoms cast their votes. It appears that in Horida, the main voting scams took place in counties where the optical scanning process was used. Thus in Franklin County, where 77.3% voters were registered as Democrats, 58.5% of the votes cast were for Mr Bush. In Holmes County, where 72.7% of the voters were formally registered as Democrats, 77.25% of the votes cast were for Mr Bush. This fraudulence is qualitatively indistinguishable from the practice in Shevardnadze's Georgia, where, time and again, ballot boxes were brought, ready pre-stuffed with the pro-Shevardnadze ballot papers, to the polling stations, which were themselves guarded by heavily armed militia.

The prominent voting practices activist, Bev Harris, the Seattle-based grandmother, probably with intelligence connections, appeared on a CNBC television programme nosted by Howard Dean several months before the election. With deliberate care, she 'walked' Howard Dean through a simple procedure in which she proved that the results of a test election using the GEMS software supplied with Diebold touch-screen voting equipment could be reversed using the central (but normal) Windows PC desktop. After demonstrating how computer-based election fraudulence could be achieved, she sat up straight and told the live TV show [check the clip on www.votergate.tv]: 'We just edited an election, and it took us 90 seconds'. Beverly Harris added that the manipulation had left no tracks whatsoever. It would be nearly impossible for the election software, or a County election official, to know that the vote database had been altered.

This brings us back to the article by Dick Morris in 'The Hill', which is read by every political junkie in Washington. His theory, as discussed, was that the exit polls 'were sabotage' so as to induce people in the Western States not to bother voting for Bush (exploiting the time difference), since the networks would 'call' the election based on the exit polls for Kerry. In reality, the TV networks, having had their fingers badly burned in 2000, did not do this, and never intended to do so.

According to Jeff Fisher, a Democratic candidate for the US House of Representatives from Florida's 16th District, who told the FBI on the 6th November that he had evidence that the Florida election was 'hacked'- and of who hacked it, and how - it makes much more sense that the exit polls were right (they weren't done on Diebold PCs), and that it was the vote itself that was 'hacked'. Moreover, Mr Fisher alleged that not only was the Republican Presidential candidate favoured, but that this phenomenon adversely affected him (namely, Mr Fisher himself) and almost every other Democratic candidate for national office in the most-hacked swing states.

It has already been asserted here that the 'mainstream' media were instructed to 'cool if by their in-house intelligence cells. By 6th November 2004, the only 'mainstream' outlet to have come at all close to reporting the truth was a TV show featuring Keith Olbermann, who noted on the evening of Friday 5th November that it was curious that all the voting machine irregularities so far uncovered seemed to favour Mr Bush. As for the other media, one commentator wrapped up as follows: 'In the meantime, 'The Washington Post' and the other media are now going through single-bullet-theory-like contortions to explain how the exit polls had failed'.

The significance of all this is that election fraud on such a colossal scale implies the failure of the Republic, which is why this development is of such millennial importance to the international financial markets. Before elaborating this point, for the elimination of all doubt, let us first reveal the extent to which US elections are manipulated (see pages 671 et seq.), thus further highlighting the extreme hypocrisy of US intelligence 'democracy' intermeddling abroad, under the fashionable guise of displaying an impartial interest in 'helping civil society'.

Everyone knows of course that innumerable elections in the 'former' Soviet Union have been manipulated to an extent which reversed the result - early cases being the successive fiascos in Georgia, Boris Yeltsin's constitutional referendum in 1993 and his re-election in 1996, not to mention the 'festivals' of nepotism in grim places like Azerbaijan. But, as we have seen, the United States is no better than these 'post' -Soviet states - which its intelligence services are engaged, under the current Phase Two of the 'bringing down' of the USSR strategy, in trying to pull decisively into its geopolitical orbit.

We now predict that the continuation of this dangerous, reckless strategy under this headstrong Bush Jr. Administration will lead the world towards the Third World War - which, as noted on page 40 of the preceding issue of 'International Currency Review', a senior Iranian official said in May 2004 'has already begun' in Iraq. The Vice President of the National Iranian Oil Company (NIOC), Mr Ali Samsam Bakhtiari, told the Berlin 'Peak Oil' conference in May:

'The crisis is very, very near. World War III has started. It has already affected every citizen of the Middle East. Soon it will spill over to affect every single citizen of the world. Syria's oil production is in terminal decline. Yemen is following. Major Middle East producers, including Saudi Arabia, will peak soon, or have already peaked'. [Note: peakoil.com is a 'controlled' intel site].

Interviewed after his peroration, Mr Bakhtiari repeated: 'The present war cannot be confined to the Middle East. It will shortly spill over to the rest of the world'. That is perfectly accurate, not least since the Iraq insurgency has been and continues to be directed by cells of Soviet Military Intelligence (GRU), and DVD. It should be recalled that we published this observation in August 2004 - and that in November 2004, a very senior US official specifically confirmed to us that this is 'accurate'.

THE ILLUMINATI'S VIEW OF DEMOCRACY

For the Illuminati, 'democracy' is a means of collectivising decision-making - replacing the rule of autocratic monarchs (in the 18th century), whom they found hard to manipulate. 'Democracy' has the immense advantage from the Illuminati's perspective that control can be exercised 'invisibly' by targeting and recruiting the implementers of democracy - which is what the Bilderberg Group's meetings are all about. At such gatherings, prospective Illuminati implementers and their servants are vetted and selected for high office - or rejected, as the case may be. Elections are reduced, therefore, to personnel changes. ■

THE EPISODE OF THE FLORIDA GARBAGE BINS

We must now tell you what Bev Harris and her colleagues found in some Florida garbage bins. This is a verbatim account filed to the Author under the headline: 'STINKING EVIDENCE OF POSSIBLE ELECTION FRAUD FOUND IN FLORIDA' by the investigator Thorn Hartmann, dated Thursday 18 November 2004:

'There was something odd about the poll tapes. A "poll tape" is the phrase used to describe a printout from an optical scan voting machine made the evening of an election, after the machine has read all the ballots and crunched the numbers on its internal computer. It shows the total results of the election in that location. The printout is signed by the polling officials present in that precinct/location, and then submitted to the county elections office as the official record of how the people in that particular precinct had voted. (Usually each location has only one single optical scanner/reader, so that it thus produces only one poll tape)'.

Bev Harris of www.blackboxvoting.org [another 'controlled' intelligence site: see page 512], the investigator of electronic voting machines, along with people from Florida Fair Elections, showed up at Florida's Volusia County Elections Office on the afternoon of Tuesday, November 16, 2004, and asked to see, under a public records request, each of the poll tapes for the 100+ optical scanners in the precincts in that county. The elections workers - having been notified in advance of her request -handed her a set of printouts, oddly dated November 15th, and lacking [the requisite] signatures'.

'Bev pointed out that the printouts given to her were not the original poll tapes and had no signatures, and therefore were not what she'd requested. Obligingly, they told her that the originals were held in another location, viz. the Elections Office's Warehouse, and that since it was the end of the day they should meet Bev there the following morning to show them to her'.

'Bev showed up bright and early the morning of Wednesday the 17th - well before the scheduled meeting - and discovered three of the election officials in the Elections Warehouse standing over a table covered with what looked very like poll tapes. When they saw Bev and her friends, Bev told me in a telephone interview less than an hour later, "they immediately shoved us out and slammed the door"'.

'In a way, that was a blessing, because it led to the stinking evidence [herewith revealed]. 'On the porch was a garbage bag', Bev said, 'and so I looked in it and, and lo and behold, there were public record tapes [inside]. Thrown away. Discarded. Waiting to be hauled off'.

'"It was technically stinking, in fact"', Bev added, "because what they had done was to throw some of their polling tapes, which are the official records of the election, into the garbage. These were the ones signed by the poll workers. These are something we had done an official public records request for"'.

'When the elections officials inside realized that the people outside were going through the trash, they called the police and one [of them] came out to challenge Beverly Harris'.

'Ms Kathleen Wynne, a www.blackboxvoting.org investigator, was there. "We caught the whole thing on videotape", she said. "I don't think you'll ever see anything like this - Bev Harris having a tug of war with an election worker over a bag of garbage, and he held onto it and she pulled on it, and it split right open, spilling out those poll tapes. They were throwing away our democracy, and Bev wasn't going to let them do if".

'As I was interviewing Bev just moments after the tussle, she had to get off the phone, because "two police cars just showed up"'.

'She told me later in the day, in an on-air interview, that when the police arrived, "we all had a vigorous debate on the merits of my public records request". The outcome of that debate was that they all went from the Elections Warehouse back to the Elections Office, to compare the original, November 2 dated-and-signed poll tapes with the November 15 printouts [that] the Elections Office had submitted to the Secretary of State. A television camera crew from www.votergate.tv met them there, as well'.

'And then things got even odder. "We were sitting there comparing the real [signed, original] tape with the [later printout] ones that were given to us", Bev said, "and finding things missing and finding things not matching, when one of the elections employees took a bin full of things that looked like garbage - that looked like polling tapes, actually - and passed by and disappeared out the back of the building"'.

''This provoked the investigator Ellen Brodsky to walk outside and check the garbage of the Elections Office itself. Sure enough - more original, signed poll tapes, freshly trashed'.

'"And I must tell you", Bev said, "that whatever they had taken out [of the back door] just came right back in the front door and we said: 'What are these polling place tapes doing in your dumpster?'"

'A call on November 18th to the Volusia County Elections Office established that Elections Supervisor Deanie Lowe was unavailable and nobody was willing to speak on the record with an out-of-state reporter. However, 'The Daytona Beach News' (based in Volusia County), in a November 17th article by staff writer Christine Girardin, noted that 'Harris went to the Department of Elections' Warehouse on State Road 44 in DeLand on Tuesday, to inspect certain original November 2 polling place tapes, after being given a set of reprints dated November 15. While there, Harris saw November 2 polling place tapes in a garbage bag, heightening her concern about the integrity of voting records'.

"The Daytona Beach News' further noted that '[the Elections Supervisor] Lowe confirmed on Wednesday [that] some backup copies of tapes from the November 2 election were destined for the shredder, but pointed out that, according to Lowe, that was simply because there were two sets of tapes produced on election night, each signed. 'One tape is delivered in one car along with the ballots and a memory card', the 'Nexus' reported. 'The backup tape is delivered to the elections office in a second car'.

Suggesting that duplicates don't need to be kept, Lowe claims that Harris didn't want to hear an explanation of why some signed poll tapes would be in the garbage. "She's not wanting to listen to an explanation", Lowe told the 'News', speaking of Mrs Harris. "She has her own ideas"'.

'But the action in two locations on two days was only half of the surprise that awaited Bev and her associates. When they compared the discarded, signed, original tapes with the recent printouts submitted to the State and used to tabulate the Florida election winners, Mrs Harris says [that] a disturbing pattern emerged:

"The difference was hundreds of votes in each of the different places we examined", said Bev, "and most of those were in minority areas"'.

'When I asked Bev if the errors they were finding in precinct after precinct were random, as one would expect from technical, clerical, or computer errors, she replied: "You have to understand that we are non-partisan", she said. "We're not trying to change the outcome of an election, just to find out if there was any voting fraud". That said, Beverly Harris added: "The pattern was very clear. The anomalies favored George W Bush. Every single time"'.

'As Bev told me on her cell phone while driving toward their next destination, "We just put Volusia County and their lawyers on notice that they need to continue to keep a number of documents under seal, including all of the memory cards to the ballot boxes, and all of the signed poll tapes"'.

'Why? 'Simple', Mrs Harris concluded. "Because we found anomalies indicative of fraud"'.

DOUBLE STANDARDS

The British press is saying with good reason, that Americans appear to care nothing about the pain they inflict on others, but only about the pain they suffer themselves. Generalisations are odious, but the hideous events in Iraq bear out the reasonableness of this observation. The British press has not so far added that the United States is quite content to pontificate about the need for 'post'-Soviet states to 'accept democracy', while drawing a dark veil over the reality that its own elections are rigged, just like 'post-Soviet' ones. This is one of the multiple reasons why the serial voting fraud surrounding the 2004 General Election in the United States is being covered up by the 'mainstream media', on instructions from the intelligence community.

It is the identical syndrome as applies to human rights abuses: the United States, which maintains a vicious and barbaric prison system (or GULAG), publishes, via the US State Department, the invaluable compendium entitled 'Country Reports on Human Rights Practices', of which we hold a complete set going back to 1977. The only territory (with a few exceptions) not covered by this gigantic document is of course the United States itself. Yet there are 6.1 million people languishing in custody in America.

A huge number of these people work for organisations with close US intelligence community connections, producing a wide range of products needed by the American military-industrial complex, exactly as in the 'former' USSR and China. The vast population of this GULAG is maintained by arrests and incarceration of street drug abusers and traffickers, whose products are supplied inter alia, by cut-outs working for the Central Intelligence Agency and its criminalist Illuminati cadres.

ELECTIONS AND THE 'MECHANISTIC VIEW'

We now, finally, revisit the primary disguised issue which emerges from the finding that both the 2000 and 2004 US Presidential and General Elections were rigged and fraudulent. Power is shared between the controlled dialectical 'opposites', or 'phanes', of the US political firmament. As in the covert Soviet space, it is theoretically and in practice neither here nor there which party wins, since the intelligence services always win.

That is the theory - based upon the old Hegelian dialectical method, which is itself the poisoned fruit of the occult Freemasonic fantasy of the 'orphic egg'. When broken open, out 'fly' three 'forces', or 'phanes' - the (at this stage) undefined overarching presence, the so-called force of Evil and the so-called force of Good. However as the Masonic dupe 'ascends' (i.e., for the Christian, descends) the stages of Masonic initiation, which is an invention of the Devil (unlike the Christian, who needs no initiation of course, since the gift of Grace is Free), he is progressively impregnated with ever more corrupt perceptions, or 'lines', so that he comes to believe, through the progressive brain-washing to which he so foolishly allows himself to succumb, that he has joined or is about to join the elite whose privilege it is to 're-order' the world for the good of 'the Brotherhood of Man', which is a lie since it really means 'the Brotherhood' of the Masonic adepts. It is impossible to begin to understand what is happening without being aware that Freemasonry, then, is a deliberately slow-motion induction into the 'ancient mysteries' and the worship of Lucifer - 'the great dragon... that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world'.

Because we know and must teach this, to those who have eyes to read and ears to hear, the forces of darkness hate us: but we speak the truth. The fact that the ultimate object of worship is demonic is extensively revealed in many geomasonic writings, but one quotation, often cited, is of special importance. It is from 'The Lost Keys of Freemasonry', by the 33rd degree Mason Manly P. Hall [1923], page 48:

'When the Mason learns that the key to the warrior on the block is the proper application of the dynamo of living power, he has learned the mystery of his Craft ['craff of course being shorthand for 'witchcraff - Ed.]. The seething energies of Lucifer are in his hands and before he may step onward and upward, he must prove his ability to properly apply [Luciferian] energy'.

The fact that this open acknowledgement is surrounded by language implying the need for compassion etc., is irrelevant: the core intention, as is very evident from Masonic Rosicrucian documents containing instructions on how to summon up the Devil himself, is Luciferian.

One dimension of this slow-motion 'coup d'etat by instalments' of the soul is 'the transmutation of personal affection into impersonal compassion' [on page 51 of the above-mentioned Masonic work], which of course induces the misguided adept into denying the God-given miracles of his personality, the very characteristics which should make him lovable and different from every other human being alive and who has ever been born.

After serial initiations, the Masonic adept becomes remote and - if perfectly possessed - completely devoid of any indication of emotion altogether. He becomes spiritually dead while still alive.

The reason for including what may appear to be this diversion here, is to prepare the ground for a reiteration of the basic explanation for the always amoral behaviour of these people which was explained in 'International Currency Review', Volume 28, Number 4, and which explains why they could not care less about the serial scams they perpetrate, believing that they are 'protected'. We refer now to the way this Luciferian elite perceives the world. Dan Quayle, the former Bush Sr. Vice-President, has been touring the United States explaining to selected audiences of financiers and investors how the Luciferian elite intends to re-order the global financial sector, driven by hedge funds. What are these, and where do their open-ended pipelines of money come from? Source of funds is never stated.

The point is that this Luciferian elite, about which more and more is becoming known today, believes (is brainwashed into believing) that its membership of adepts has the unique privilege of re-ordering the whole world. Of Tony Blair and his Fabian associates and the Islington set, it is rightly said that these people have 'solutions for every problem in the world'. They know how to solve every problem. This is why the British Prime Minister was forever coming up with mad hare-brained schemes to solve this or that intractable social problem that has been exacerbated by the negligence, the ignorance of, and the wrong-headed legislation promulgated by, the House of Commons over the years - schemes which squander taxpayers' money and come to nothing.

For instance, four years ago, the British Fabians poured money into a Strategic Rail Authority, paying colossal salaries to largely useless, unproductive employees, in the naive belief that the Authority would be empowered somehow to convert Britain's Third World railway system into a modern integrated transportation network. Now the Authority is to be abolished and replaced by a sub-department within the British Department of Transport: yet another Downing Street Plan which has gone pear-shaped, because the inept 'Useful Idiots' in charge of policymaking sought to 'do something' about an intractable problem, for short-term gain.

The directors of the New Underworld Order elite likewise believe that they are privileged and duty-bound to re-order the whole world in accordance with their own interests. And the world, according to their demonic and therefore inaccurate, misguided perception, is a wholly mechanistic world, since Man is in charge. Man is god: the ancient delusion of the serpent. Lucifer, the author of this delusion, 'allows' this lie to prosper in the hands of the deluded and misguided adept. The 'forces' which these people seek to manipulate are therefore mechanistic forces. Over 100,000 people have died in Iraq, according to 'The Lancet' (the leading British medical journal) [as of the date of this article - Ed.].

Human life, for these evil people, is expendable. They are indifferent to deaths thousands of miles away, given the success of Tavistock Institute mass programming. So, they say that the United States is inflicting pain around the world? They hurt us first and who cares.

Within this mindset there lurks the following related extrapolation. The number of Americans voting Democrat exceeds the number of Americans willing to vote for the Republican Party (GOP), by an ever-growing order of magnitude. A growing population is necessary for economic growth (reversal of the Nazi racial purity 'ethic'). How can the voting bias of immigrants be offset?

'SCRAP THE CONSTITUTION'

One answer has already been provided: dispense permanently with US 'democracy', even the rigged and manipulated decadent version thereof that is currently in place. Organise another 'Reichstag Fire', and scrap the Constitution. Activate the GULAG concentration camps that have been prepared specially for the purpose. Stick two fingers up to the Rest of the World. In other words, the Nazi component of the intelligence community shall prevail. And let's start with the equivalent of 'Die Verordnung des Reichspraesidenten zum Schutz von Volk und Staat' [The Ordnance of the President of the Reich for the Defence of the People and the State] which followed the actual Reichstag Fire set by Goring, and for which the convenient Dutch Communist, Marinus van der Lubbe, was hanged (false witness).

In a most revealing comment, the (compromised) would-be Presidential candidate, Hillary Clinton, said some time before the November 2004 election that 'you'll be freer with us'. What she meant, of course, was that if the country were to elect a Democratic Administration, there would be less need for American freedoms to be destroyed and replaced by a dictatorship. She must certainly have known that George Bush Jr.'s fellow Skull and Bones operative, Senator John Kerry, was selected so that he would deliver 'Box Gang fairness', i.e. a second term for George Bush Jr., following the two terms 'served' by the CIA operative William Jefferson Clinton.

Nor may she have been aware of the terms of the deal which, according to a sensitive source, allegedly included, as indicated earlier, the delivery of a sizeable quantity of gold bullion to accounts in favour of the Kerry family.

And, as we have also revealed, another, high-level intelligence source, alarmed and disgusted by the de facto institutionalisation of election-stealing in the United States, has revealed that Senator Kerry allegedly instructed his attorney and legal staff to destroy all evidence of electoral fraud.

Finally, when a contact spoke, earlier in the election campaign, to John Kerry in person about the prospect of such fraud taking place, the candidate appeared in no way 'phased' by the suggestion - as though he knew that the US Presidential election of 2004 would be thrown, all along.

REPUBLIC IN ITS TERMINAL PHASE?

The message for the international community in general is sombre. It must factor in the likelihood that the Republic is on its last legs and that the second Bush Jr. Administration may be preparing to scrap the American Constitution. How they plan to manage the transition from false, decayed, decadent democracy to the dictatorship they have planned, is hard to discern. But desperate men resort to desperate deeds, and these people - who are driven not merely by the demographic considerations reviewed above, but also by the imperative (from their perspective) that the serial corruption we have explored must 'never come out', as one US operative put it, are desperate indeed. ■

• On 1st December 2004, 'The Guardian' filled in for the controlled US 'mainstream' media with a report headlined 'VOTERS TO CHALLENGE US ELECTION'. The report confirmed Internet postings to the effect that voters in Ohio, dissatisfied with the curious decision by Senator Kerry to concede the overall election by agreeing that George Bush had a margin of 136,000 votes, were engaged in challenges to the outcome. Despite (the more than justified) claims of technical glitches, Mr Kerry decided that the acknowledged voting errors were not substantial enough to affect the result conceding the election on 3rd November.

But the lawyer representing voters challenging the Ohio result, Cliff Arnebeck, claimed that new analyses of various anomalies claimed that the election was rigged. It should be noted that our foregoing analysis was prepared before 'The Guardian's' report appeared on 1st December 2004, and before the recount was duly confirmed on 3rd.

'We'll be calling for a reversal of the result based on evidence developed in the course of litigation', Mr Arnebeck told 'The Guardian' on the 30th November. 'Exit polling and substantial irregularities excluded votes that should have been counted. There is evidence that votes cast for one candidate were moved to the column of the other candidate'.

Mr Arnebeck, representing a group calling itself the Alliance for Democracy, said that the 'contest of election' lawsuit was to be presented to a judge from the Ohio Supreme Court on behalf of dissatisfied voters, and that other voters and organisations were expected to join the case. The Ohio Secretary of State, Kenneth Blackwell, had not certified the result, which had to be completed by 6th December 2004, although his spokesman, Carlo LoParo, told the Associated Press that 'there are no signs of widespread irregularities' - which, translated into the vernacular, meant that 'there are clear signs of irregularities'. Clearly, with the recount ordered to be proceeded with, the authorities had to eat their words. The US lawyer told 'The Guardian' that hearings held in several Ohio cities had brought to light new evidence of malpractice. He said that one operative belonging to a pro-Republican group who had been caught in the act of destroying Democratic registration documents in Nevada before the election, had also been operating in Ohio.

An electronic voting machine in Ohio had been found to have been credited with 3,893 extra votes in a suburb of Columbus where only 638 people had voted, although State officials had said that those votes would not be included in the final certified totals. So the actual outcome of the election in Ohio had not been certified (i.e., finalised) by early December, raising a huge question mark over the sudden decision by Mr Kerry to concede the election. Did Mr Kerry allegedly fancy that he would be a fool to walk away from such a large consignment of gold?

John Kerry, allegedly a 'former' Office of Naval Intelligence agent, and a fellow initiate of the Yale-based occult Skull and Bones secret society with George W. Bush Jr, whose father is the high patriarch of Skull and Bones, is also allegedly a former Vietnam Phoenix Program (genocide) operative - as were/are the former chief of the CIA's Far Eastern Division and later Director of Central Intelligence, William Colby, who 'drowned' mysteriously in the Potomac River while out canoeing, William Casey (who later became DCI and, according to an impeccable intelligence source, committed suicide in hospital 'to protect President Reagan', contrary to the received 'line' that he died of a mysterious brain haemorrhage), Tom Ridge (the head of the Department of Homeland Security, who confirmed his resignation from that post on 30th November 2004), and the Iran-Contra figure Oliver North.

Hence, Senator Kerry was an insider's insider, so that assessments that he allegedly collaborated for reward with the Bush camp to ensure that the election was delivered into their hands, cannot be dismissed as in any way fanciful. On the contrary, such an outcome would be entirely consistent with the controlled dialectical modus operandi of the Illuminati. There are other deep connections in this context that confirm the likely accuracy of this interpretation.

'The Guardian' report elaborated that 'there have also been complaints focused on punch card ballots, of the type which caused chaos in Florida in 2000. In the 68 Ohio counties where these ballots were used in November, vote counters were unable to determine a vote for the President, but registered votes for other offices'. By Christmas, the websites covering the vote scam had been closed down. ■

ADDENDUM TWO: Global Analyst 2,2: March 2005

THE DEATH EDUCATION AGENDA

THE 'SEETHING ENERGIES OF LUCIFER'

'The Craft', as Freemasons call their abomination is short for 'witchcraft' - which, being the invention of the Devil whose 'end-product' is exclusively death, is all about death (both spiritual and corporeal). A primary sub-strategy of the Illuminati who celebrate their hegemony so openly today, is to teach children about witchcraft and death.

Death is the central preoccupation of key members of the Illuminati, whose emblem is the all-seeing eye, to be found in the truncated upper component of the pyramid on the $1.0 bill, symbol of the geo-Masonic origins and entire basis of the United States of America - a political experiment organised the European Illuminati and driven by the Political Administration Centre, established by Giuseppe Mazz-ini in Rome, which is the central locus of Illuminism, with delegations to Germany. It is perfectly evident that, whatever diversionary explanation may be fashionable at any point in time, the single all-seeing eye is the symbol of Lucifer, the god whom Masons are progressively indoctrinated into worshipping.

Because of the lies (of course) surrounding Freemasonry it is appropriate to be reminded of the accuracy of this statement. G. Mazzini's co-occultist and geomasonic conspirator was The Sovereign Grand Commander of the Scottish Rite, Albert Pike, the 'Patriarch' of modern US Freemasonry, who operated from Charleston, South Carolina - which remains of course the central locus of the US 'Scottish Rite' line of Freemasonry and of Pike's own creation, the phallus-oriented Palladian Rite, which links very senior self-selected Freemasons for occultic purposes. Charleston is on the 33rd parallel.

On 14th July 1889, Albert Pike circulated the 23 Supreme Councils of the Illuminati, established by Professor Adam Weishaupt, a renegade Jesuit cleric, pursuant to a contract placed by the Rothschilds in 1770. Albert Pike's letter contained the following passage: To you, Sovereign Instructors of Grade 33, we tell you: you have to repeat to the brothers of the inferior grades that we worship only one god to whom we pray without superstition. It is we, Initiated in the Supreme Grade, that are to keep the real Masonic religion preserving the pure Lucifer doctrine'.

Writing in 'The Lost keys of Freemasonry'[1], the late 33rd degree US Mason and Rosicrucian occultist, Manly P. Hall, explained to Masonic adepts that they are to embrace the 'seething energies of Lucifer'

- the 'energies' which drive the misguided men who have been unleashing mass murder upon defenceless populations, as in Iraq, where the real death toll may be approaching 300,000+. To repeat: 'When the Mason learns that the key to the warrior on the block is the proper application of the dynamo of living power, he has learned the mystery of his Craft (= witchcraft). The seething energies of Lucifer are in his hands and before he may step onward and upward (that is, downward), he must prove his ability to properly apply (demonic) energy'.

TEACHING CHILDREN ABOUT DEATH

Teaching children about death, human atrocities, witchcraft and abominations, is a central preoccupation of the Illuminati and their indoctrinated disciples and cadres, such as those who have taken over the British and American educational structures. Since these people are all influenced or driven by the 'seething powers of Lucifer', it is only to be expected that they are focused on teaching our children all about their specialist subject: death. Since, as indicated, their end-product is death, they no longer, given their view that Satan has been well and truly unleashed, bother to hide their curriculum.

The lovely teenage daughter of a US friend of the Author reports that her child was acting in a play about the Holocaust. What a perfect subject, from the 'Black' perspective of the relevant US State's clearly perverted educational bureaucracy, for a school play.

Acting is of course a highly efficient, and preferred, pathway for introctrination. The friend has reported that her daughter now has a full grasp of the horror of the Holocaust, and that her brain is, as a consequence, chock full of statistics about how many Jews and others were gassed and murdered by other means, in Auschwitz, Belsen, Sachsenhausen and all the other Nazi chambers of hell. Do these schools teach the children scripture? Sorry we asked. No Christian teaching is permitted in American public schools, and the school boards' standard line is that such teaching is 'a matter for parents'. But the real reason is that, as discussed elsewhere, the god of the United States, from its foundation, has always been the Freemasons' god, by their own admission, namely Lucifer.

Some months earlier, this conscientious USparent had protested when her daughter was being asked by the same school to act in a play called The Black Cat, adapted from a work by that dark American author Edgar Allen Poe.

The characters in this play are: Pluto (= the God of the Underworld of course, wearing black tights, leotard, ballet shoes, and a half-mask covering the eyes; A Fiend (wearing a turtleneck shirt, tight pants, socks, jazz shoes, all in greys, black and touches (of course) of red, reflecting himself as the companion of the Demon); Demon (murky red turtleneck shirt; black, tight-fitting (of course) pants; red socks; black shoes; medium length black cape lined in red); Perverseness, a sly destructive spirit (turtleneck top; tights; a flowing skirt; ballet shoes; all in greys, black and touches of red, reflecting herself as the evil companion of the Demon and countering the Fiend); and Black Cat (black tights; ballet shoes; half-mask covering eyes and black leotard with white front).

The stage set was to consist of five black music stands, five black sound scripts, greyness, blackened lighting for gallows with a hanging noose ('gallows with hanging may be a gobo or else an actually constructed set piece'). The play is all about murder, cutting the corpse into pieces, and disposing of the body. The State in which this play was being taught in schools is Iowa.

When American and British children go home, they play video games. Almost without exception, these are all devoted to the works of Satan - witches, wizards, witchcraft, necromancy, divination, vampires, magic arts and spells, murder, warfare, intergalactic garbage (elaborating on the Luciferian lie that there is life on other planets), and other abominations out of the same Satanic sewer.

When we discussed this issue recently with a politically active parent in Britain, she knew all about the current standardisation of the death theme in British schools. She reported that when parents protested locally about a poetry competition on the Holocaust given to pupils in one school, the teacher changed the subject of the poetry class to 'bullying'.

Not to anything pleasant, harmonious, constructive, creative or beautiful: but always to another manifestation of evil. It appears, therefore, that the mentality and souls of elements the public teaching profession in both countries have been systematically invaded by Satanic themes, which is to say effectively by demons, instructing them to teach the culture of death. And no-one who is in authority (in the United Kingdom) cares a damn - or is doing anything whatsoever to staunch this flood of Satanic filth which is demonising our children.

On 25th January 2005, there was a ripple of consternation in London when a UK police document revealed that 25% of boys in the United Kingdom aged between 14 and 17 years had a criminal record - which is to say, 1.7 million youths. This finding was based upon the results of an extensive survey in which teenaged boys were asked inter alia whether they had committed up to six crimes within the preceding year: evidently some 25% of the youths interviewed said that they had, even though many of their crimes were minor. These are not children of God, as used to be the case when the society was at least nominally Christian in the sense that parents feared God, but are called kids - of the goat. A goat's head is one of the symbolic images and worship objects for sodomites, Satanists and Templars - and all witchcraft practitioners.

NO KNOWLEDGE OF GOD

These children have, moreover, been brought up without any clear understanding of the difference between right and wrong, and with minimal, if any, knowledge of God and Jesus Christ. The United States is a paganist, geomasonic foundation, in which the teaching of Christianity in public schools is strictly forbidden - as befits a 'kingdom' founded by disciples of Lucifer. But the United Kingdom is not supposed to be a nation without any spiritual guidance, given that HM The Queen is head of the Church of England - albeit a Church that was founded in sin and now sinking in its own self-generated sewer of filth and decadence.

But instead of being taught about Jesus Christ, and to read Scripture - as we were in our youth, being required to 'search the scriptures', every Saturday evening at school, ready for a test on Sunday morning - British 'kids' are brought up on on Satanic videos and their natural corollary, the witchcraft books of J. K. Rowling, who, as a consequence of her extended supping with the Devil, delivered via her [Tavistock Institute-spawned] Harry Potter books, is reputed to be a billionairess[2]. This figures, indeed: Satan can make life extremely comfortable for those who obey him. By contrast, as one of our dearest US-based friends is in the habit of saying, there is no money in truth.

The deliberate orientation of school teaching, and of materials for 'kids' towards the works of darkness is - like bearing false witness - among the most heinous of all spiritual crimes, and one which the Lord condemns in wholly uncompromising language; which He also used, to teach us all to be humble and of a contrite and tender heart, like the little child he held in his arms as he spoke to His disciples: 'And Jesus called a little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them; And said, verily, verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is the greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven And whoso shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me'.

'But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged around his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea'.

'Woe unto the world because of offences [such as corrupting little ones]! For it must needs be that offences come; but woe to that man by whom the offence cometh!... Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones... It is not the will of your Father which is in Heaven, that one of these little ones should perish'[3].

AN UNFORGIVABLE OFFENCE

The appropriate fate of those who pollute and corrupt the minds and souls of children with Satanic teachings, death-oriented indoctrination, occult video games, the Goth culture and other related abominations, is the product in which they deal so expertly and with such callous ruthlessness: spiritual and corporeal death. Their spiritual death has of course already occurred.

Jesus prescribed that they should all suffer the fate of being thrown over a cliff into the sea, with a millstone hung around their neck, and drowned, like the herd of swine into which he released those Gadarene demons.

For Jesus Christ to have uttered such an uncompromising statement reveals to us that the sins all these people are committing against our little ones are abominations against the Holy Spirit, worthy of no forgiveness. For the Lord specifically warned us that blasphemy against the Holy Spirit is unforgivable. These evil educational bureaucracies and those elements of the 'teaching' (read: Satanic indoctrination) profession committing and orchestrating these abominations, are eligible for no forgiveness. Obviously, their consciences have long since been 'seared with a hot iron'.

Their guiding principle is clearly that children should be introduced to the works of darkness at the earliest possible age, the objective being that impressionable young people's souls should be seared from the outset by the handiwork of Satan. Thus, they fervently and eagerly anticipate, succeeding generations will be all the more steeped in the occult - hastening the day when the true objective of the Illuminati, and indeed the main purpose of 'One World Governance', will have been achieved: namely, the hegemony of the 'ancient mysteries' of Lucifer, all the works of darkness, the summoning up of evil spirits, spiritism, divination, sorcery, necromancy, and every manner of pagan abomination.

For the perpetrators of all these evils know that they are themselves lost and en route to perdition. They are not atheists: they believe in Lucifer and his angels. Because of this spiritual awareness, their own knowledge of the horrible end that they will be suffering motivates them to try to corral the rest of humanity towards the same destiny of perdition - the crude calculation being, believe it or not, that they will be 'less lonely'. Among the Illuminati, those who practice witchcraft, and the Freemasons, an even more ludicrous delusion prevails: the idiotic lie of reincarnation. This is one of the Evil One's most egregious and fantastic deceptions - the idea that when we die, we are sure to return as someone else, later. The supposedly illuminated ones (who are guided by the false 'light' of the Prince of Darkness), and who specialise in lies for consumption by their 'brethren', actually believe this Satanic lie themselves.

In the meantime, their cadres are hyperactively seeking to corrupt our children, both to enlarge the population of occultists and the numbers of young ones available for molestation, and the overall scope of the kingdom of darkness - and to alleviate the dull, perpetual discomfort they feel as they waste their own lives in the byways of darkness, seeking by all means known to their masters, to destabilise and wreck the lives of the next generation.

In addition to which, the population of the United States alone is estimated to be some 50 million less than would be the case if abortion had not been legalised: in which case, open-ended immigration and the mixing up of the races on today's scale there, would never have become 'economically necessary'.

This Author belonged to the generation - probably the last generation - to have been taught, in his earliest years, from childhood books that rejoiced in beautiful things, both physical and spiritual, one of which contained the following little poem, read to us by our beloved Australian child minder:

'If Jesus came to my house
And knocked upon the door
I'm sure I'd be more happy than
I've ever been before'.

This reflects the words of Jesus: 'Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me'[4].

How can our little ones open the door the Him, and enjoy 'the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him'[5], when their false, deceitful teachers feed them the spiritual food of Lucifer?

Given this abomination of desolation, it is amazing how many of our beautiful children somehow emerge relatively unscathed from the Satanic onslaughts to which they are subjected nowadays from such a tender age, as a consequence of the temporary hegemony of these hate merchants. ■

DR ALBERT HOFMANN, THE 'FATHER OF LSD'

When Richard Cheney, the US Vice-President, needed to check into a hospital in Colorado, on 24th June 2005, he reportedly gave his name as Dr Hofmann. This was no accident: Cheney was allegedly in charge of the CIA's MK-ULTRA mind- and personality-control and behaviour modification program and/or its successor(s) at one stage of his long intelligence career. So his choice of name for hospital check-in purposes was significant as all these high-level operatives are 'Dark Actors Playing Games', and this would have been considered a dark joke, as well as having another connotation - which might have been that the Vice-President was not ill at all, but that 'Red Alert' conditions suddenly necessitated that he check into hospital. This is an old intelligence community trick: when in danger, you check yourself into a hospital (although the Author would have thought that given the reputation of certain US hospitals for not curing, but deliberately worsening, the physical condition of targeted personnel, this might not always be a sensible move).

The real Dr Hofmann was 37 years old when, on 16th April 1943, in the laboratories of Sandoz in Basle, he was conducting research into the properties of rye fungus, in a search for a cure for migraine. In the afternoon, he began to feel peculiar, and went home to lie down. 'With eyes closed', he wrote, 'I perceived an uninterrupted stream of fantastic pictures, extraordinary shapes with intense, kaleidoscopic play of colours'. Unwittingly, Dr Hofmann had taken the first-ever acid trip - having synthesised lysergic acid diethylamide (LSD) from the fungus, and had absorbed the drug through his fingertips. Cheney's choice of the name of the scientist who discovered this hallucinogen reveals that his hospital visit was an illusion. It was arranged in order to provide a venue for certain top-level secret discussions, given the presence of key intelligence cadres in Colorado. ■

CERBERUS CAPITAL MANAGEMENT

A HEDGE FUND NAMED AFTER THE GUARD-DOG OF HADES

The Editor/Author was happily perusing his favourite newspaper, 'Nihon Keizai Shimbun' [12th July 2004] when his eye alighted upon an interview with Dan Quayle, the former Bush I era Vice President. What was the man who notoriously spelled 'potato' with an 'e' doing featured in this respected organ of Japanese business? The answer surprised us (momentarily), and may surprise you, too.

Dan Quayle, it transpires, is the 'shill' (front man) for yet another US international investment entity calling itself Cerberus Global Investments LLC. According to Mr Quayle, as cited by the Japanese paper, Cerberus has invested $7.0 billion in the Japanese economy over the past seven years, and has 'a long-term commitment to Japan'. The former Vice President added: 'People were sceptical several years ago when I said that. Now they firmly believe it. Because we are still here and we are going to continue to be here'. Leaving aside the implication that such investment firms 'come and go', it further transpires that Cerberus had acquired a 61% stake in the Aozora Bank, presided over by Hirokazu Mizukami, who was formerly with the Sumitomo Trust and Banking Corporation. At a shareholders' meeting held in Tokyo on 29th June 2004, several new directors were appointed, as a result of which Americans and other non-Japanese executives gained a majority of the seats on the Board. Among these are Lawrence Lindsay, President Bush It's former Chief Economic Adviser (who left the White House in tandem, more or less, with the former US Treasury Secretary, Paul O'Neill, whose experiences and sceptical observations were the subject of a biography by Ron Suskind: see Figure 94 page 607). 'We have six official Board Meetings a year - five in Tokyo and one in New York', added Mr Quayle helpfully. So these board meetings are his 'cover' for frequent visits to Japan.

Mr Quayle, the 44th US Vice President, comes from Indiana, having graduated from Huntington High School in 1965, after which he attended the obscure DePauw University. In July 1971, Dan Quayle became an investigator for the Consumer Protection Division of the Indiana Attorney General's Office. But his time beating the streets didn't last long: within months, he was an administrative assistant to the Indiana Governor du jour, Edgar Whitcomb. In 1973-74, he was the Director of the Inheritance Tax Division of the Indiana Department of Revenue. He also served in the Indiana National Guard, during which time he earned a law degree at Indiana University. After receiving his degree in 1974, Mr Quayle worked as an associate publisher of his family's local newspaper, The Huntington Herald-Press', and practiced law with his wife in Huntington. It is interesting to note that this city was, at the time, and has reportedly remained, a notorious centre of occult activity and Satanism.

In 1976, Dan Quayle was elected for the Fourth Congressional District of Indiana to the US Congress. He won re-election in 1978 by the largest percentage margin ever achieved to that date in that district. In 1980, aged just 33, Mr Quayle became the youngest person ever elected to the US Senate from the State of Indiana. He was re-elected in 1986. At the Republican National Convention in New Orleans (August 1988), George H. W Bush (Sr.) called upon Mr Quayle to become his Vice Presidential candidate. It is believed that his electoral success, record and photogenic popularity helped Mr Bush Sr. to win the election, having at the time of the Convention been trailing 15 points behind the Democrats, according to opinion polls taken prior to the Convention.

Throughout his time as Vice President, Mr Quayle was widely ridiculed by the media and some of the general public as a mental lightweight who was prone to verbal gaffes (as was and are George Bush Sr. and Jr.), reflecting (we suspect) the fact that such operatives reach high status only after MK-Ultra-type mind-manipulation. The most notorious of these gaffes was Mr Quayle's correction of a pupil's spelling of potato, to read potatoe, at an elementary school spelling lesson in Trenton, NJ, on 15tn June 1992. When this story is related, it is usually omitted that Mr Quayle was relying upon a spelling card on which the word had been (deliberately?) misspelled by the semi-literate teacher. Another remark that has been attributed to the former Veep is that, when he heard that he was required to travel to Latin America, he exclaimed: 'I knew I should have boned up on my Latin'.

Dan Quayle is styled an 'adviser' to Cerberus Capital Management, according to biographies, whereas the Japanese paper and other sources refer to the company as Cerberus Global Investments LLC (as indicated). 'The Nation', of 3rd April 2003, described Cerberus Capital Management as 'a US investment fund that has spent more than $2.0 billion snatching up bankrupt Asian enterprises, and [that] recently opened a Washington office to invest in homeland security companies'.

Cerberus has been variously described as a 'vulture fund' which specialises in acquiring near-bankrupt companies, and the 12th-largest hedge-fund management firm in the United States, with $9.0 billion worth of assets. It employs Quayle & Associates, based in Scottsdale, AZ, through which the former US Vice President provides his advisory services. According to Craig Whitney, Executive Vice President of Quayle & Associates, Mr Quayle provides strategic advice to Cerberus 'and has the title of Chairman of Cerberus Global Investments' ['Detroit Free Press', 23rd June 2004].

On 19th July 2004, the 'Sacramento Business Journal' reported that GenCorp Inc., of Rancho Cordova, was selling its automobile parts business, GDX Automotive, to Cerberus Capital Management LP for $147 million in cash. The publication asserted that 'Cerberus is a hedge fund that has made or explored investments in a very wide variety of industries, from airlines and media to mobile homes and financial services. A 'Business Week' report last week called it the 12th-largest hedge fund and put its value at $9 billion' which we believe to be a gross underestimate. 'Some have characterised the fund as a "vulture capitalist" for its penchant for swooping down upon distressed companies as investment opportunities. A judge overseeing the bankruptcy case of Air Canada has approved a plan for a unit of Cerberus to buy a 9% stake in the airline for $189 million, pending the approval of creditors. Cerberus is also one of a cluster of investment groups said to be eyeing United Airlines'. The newspaper report continued: 'Cerberus is rumoured to be the investment company with which Lord (Conrad) Black is negotiating over the fate of Hollinger Inc., the Toronto-based newspaper company in which he owns a controlling interest'. ['Business Week' further reported that] 'Cerberus has been among the most active hedge funds in lobbying against new proposals to regulate the industry, including moves that would allow the Securities and Exchange Commission to review their investment strategies and check on whether they are following securities laws'.

Cerberus was reported have hired the politically connected law firm of Patton Boggs LLP to lobby for it in Washington. 'Sacramento Business Journal' added that 'Patton Boggs reportedly arranged a meeting held on 10th June between the Chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission [SEC], William Donaldson, and former Vice President Dan Quayle, who is the chairman of the hedge fund's private-equity arm, Cerberus Global Investment'.

A separate 'Business Week' report [of 19th July 2004] stated that 'Cerberus, with the help of Patton Boggs, even attempted to persuade the House Appropriations Committee to tie William Donaldson's hands completely' - a reference to the new rules which would require the SEC to review all hedge funds' investment strategies and to evaluate their compliance with the SEC's regulations.

It transpired that in June, Cerberus sought to have a restriction attached to the SEC's fiscal 2005 budget that would prevent the SEC from using tax dollars to enforce the intended new rules on hedge funds. The report noted that the US Senate Banking Committee Chairman, Richard C Shelby, had received $133,000 from hedge funds and their law firms 'in the current electoral cycle', at least $79,500 of it from Cerberus officials and their spouses. The report added that in mid-June, the House Financial Services Committee Chairman, Michael G. Oxley, whose committee oversees the SEC, 'got wind of the manoeuver and fired off a letter to the appropriations panel arguing that it was not right to bypass him on such an important matter. The restriction was never formally proposed, but hedge funds may still try to block Donaldson when the Senate acts on the Commission's budget. Cerberus officials and Patton Boggs did not return repeated telephone calls asking for comment'. So what has been going on?

PLACEMENT, AND NO QUESTIONS ASKED

No-one ever asks what the original sources of these hedge funds' financial streams are. The question should always be asked: What is the source of funds? You will have noticed that any proposed 'regulation' of the funds that has been mooted would not ask that question, either. All the SEC appears to be concerned about is whether investors in these funds use acceptable strategies, and whether SEC rules are adhered to. Even so, it might be most uncomfortable to have US officials crawling all over the books. Suppose the sources of investment flows-of-funds may, shall we say, be of an 'unsavoury nature'. If that were so, then the main consideration governing their management would be placement, not the rate of return. Hence the quality of a given asset would matter less than the 'investment opportunity' itself. The problem facing controllers, e.g., of drug proceeds, is always how to launder the cash as fast as possible.

If we were talking about the placement of underworld flows, then Cerberus would be the perfect name for a conduit suitable for such a purpose. For Cerberus was the monstrous watch-dog with 50 heads and a voice of bronze (that is to say, a voice like one who is possessed with devils) who guarded the hideous gate of the Kingdom of Hades, in Greek mythology. Sometimes Cerberus had only three heads. Sometimes he bristled with serpents and his evil mouth dribbled black venom. Once a visitor had passed Hades' guard-dog, he could never re-emerge. Now why, do you imagine, any sane person would name a hedge fund after such a notoriously hellish underworld monster? Mark Neporent, the Chief Operating Officer at Cerberus, did not respond to questions put to him by 'Detroit Free Press'. ■

BUSH ON THE COUCH

THE CONTROVERSY SURROUNDING BUSH JR.

The truly unprecedented uncertainty into which the whole world has been thrown by developments in the United States, and by the conversion of Britain and America into disturbers of the global peace in stark contrast to the previously received international perception of these two leading nations as paragons of 'democratic virtue', is further exacerbated by controversy surrounding the character of the President of the United States himself.

Since your correspondent has the highest regard for the intuitive capabilities of certain women, it is appropriate here to record that when George W. Bush Jr. was first 'elected', a married female American friend of the Editor expressed extreme dismay and concern, notwithstanding her Republican and Texan roots, indicating her fear that Mr Bush may turn out to be dangerous, or worse. Your correspondent had earlier been impressed by Laura Bush's statement in a pre-election interview in which she had been asked about her husband's 'religion', that 'in 1988 a friend gave him a 'One-Year Bible' (viz., a Bible in which the readings are divided into 365 sessions, one for each day of the year) 'and he has been reading it ever since'. Given the gross, pagan debauchery characteristic of the Clinton period, this seemed to your correspondent to represent a considerable improvement. However it appears that the Editor's friend was much more perceptive.

Work on George W. Bush's personality and psychological make-up has been carried out remotely by an American psychoanalyst and psychotherapist, Dr Justin A. Frank, and presented in his book, published many months prior to the 2004 Presidential Election, 'Bush on the Couch: Inside the Mind of the President' [Regan Books, New York, NY 2004]. Dr Frank's careful and candid analysis of the President's mind concludes that this man displays and has exerted an innate ability and tendency 'to exert his destructive power on the world', and that he may turn out to be extremely dangerous.

THE PRESIDENT'S ALLEGED INTERNAL CONFLICTS

Dr Frank interprets Bush's mentality by reference to an endless internal battle that he perceives the President endures trying to cope with his anxieties. The author is not a Christian: in fact it is clear that he is, as one might expect, an atheist. He therefore excludes altogether any reference to possible occult influences in this President's life - a serious omission, given that open reports indicate that they may permeate the family from which he sprang.

The gravity of this omission is all the more serious given allegations that George W. Bush Jr. was allegedly present at an occultic event years ago at which a number of the participants lost their lives. Nor is there any reference in this work to voluminous evidence of alleged criminal wrongdoing by members of this powerful family, let alone to widely alleged paedophilia and homosexuality.

Among the characteristics of this nevertheless engaging President's background and psychological make-up which Dr Frank highlights, are these:

- The influence of the privileged, secretive family into which he was born, and its decisive impact on his view of the world, including a very simplistic Ariosophist division of the world into good and evil.
- The lasting influence that early fantasies and hurt feelings may have had on his precepts.
- The prevalence of aggressive tendencies, and the sometimes sadistic ways they are unfortunately expressed in his behaviour.
- His attempts to seek escape from his internal turmoil through substance abuse (mainly alcohol in the past), exercise and pre-packaged 'religion'.
- His relationships with authority figures, both individual and institutional.
- Impaired abilities to mourn, to admit responsibility and to know himself, all of which Dr Frank says are necessary for psychological growth.
- His unwillingness to be, let alone to admit to being wrong, or to consider divergent perspectives.
- Inconsistencies between his words and actions.
- Inconsistencies between his words and truth.

President Bush seems to recognise that he is an oddity, as he is on record as having remarked: 'Don't spend a lot of time trying to figure me out... I'm just not into psychobabble'. Much the most commendable characteristic of Dr Frank's book, however, is the clarity of the plain English in which it is written, and thus the absence of psychobabble, which makes it instantly accessible.

THE EARLY BEREAVEMENT

Indicative of George W. Bush's impaired psychological background is what happened after George, who was the eldest child, discovered retrospectively that his little sister, Robin, who had been diagnosed with leukaemia in the spring of 1953, had died. Unaware that Robin was ill, he was simply ordered not to play with the sister to whom he had become close, on her occasional visits home from long, unexplained absences. After Robin had died in New York in October 1953, her parents spent the next day golfing in Rye, and then returned to Houston. There was never any 'closure' for George Bush.

Mrs Barbara Bush has evidently written revealingly about her experiences as both a mother and a child, so that Dr Frank possessed ample information about her history. Referred to by her offspring as 'the Enforcer', Barbara Bush has by her own admission always been the family disciplinarian. Called "the one who instills fear" by a close family friend, she would boldly break up fights between her sons, "bust them up and slap them around", according to a brother-in-law. In later years, Mrs Bush has not lost her willingness to display her own aggressive tendencies before the whole world. For instance, many observers, including Dr Frank, were stunned when she told viewers during an interview in 2004 on the prime-time US TV show 'Larry King Live' that 'you can criticise me, but don't criticise my children and don't criticise my daughters-in-law and don't criticise my husband, or you're dead'.

Sensitive US observers whom we respect most, and your correspondent himself, did not believe this outburst to be a mere figure of speech. In Britain, it is a criminal offence to utter threats. Apparently this is not the case in the United States - a fact which illustrates a telling distinction between the two civilisations. (We all thought she really meant it). The author reveals that Mrs Bush was herself treated harshly by her 'striking beauty' of a mother, who paid little attention to the normal aspects of maternal life associated with traditional nurturing. The impression gained is that of distance between mother and daughter, a condition that Mrs Bush clearly passed on in her own family. (There is evidence that Barbara Bush may be the illegitimate daughter of Aleister Crowley, as not only is her physical resemblance to Crowley striking, but her wayward mother is known to have strayed from the family home and stayed with that ogre in France. This would explain the "cold blood" in her veins).

A LOT TO LIKE ABOUT GEORGE W. BUSH

Dr Frank relieves all the initial gloom by observing that 'there's a lot to like about George W. Bush. Even his detractors during the 2000 campaign praised his humour, humility and general affability. His playful friendliness and informality have often disarmed his many critics and charmed the media; he winks and kids around, jokes with reporters on the campaign trail, and peppers his unprepared remarks with great humour'. The psychoanalyst's own researches suggest that children who lose a sibling may react by taking it upon themselves to cheer up their grieving mother, whose hair turned white during the years after the loss of Robin, and whose pain at the child's loss, Dr Frank believes, was conveyed in spades to George through a stern, restricting facial expression.

George Bush Jr. was known as 'Bushtail', always on the go - a condition that today would arouse suspicions of hyperactivity. This may have reflected, in part, the child's need to externalise his own unintegrated anxieties. 'Complex thinking cannot take place if the child is unable to regulate his feelings. The child [who is] consumed by negative feelings, or distracted by the enormous effort required to handle them with merely primitive psychological tools, can't get beyond his desperate need to manage his unmanageable anxiety; thus overwhelmed, the child may experience any external input as excessive. The premium placed on internal order may thus leave no room for growth'.

Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) ranks today as the most common neurobehavioural childhood disorder, according to the American Academy of Paediatrics. Dr Frank noted 'that much of what we know of the adult Bush's work habits and mental practices conforms to various indicators of ADHD. The two worst problems for adults with this condition are impulsiveness and craving.

'Impulsive behaviour is often mistaken for decisiveness, but in reality the quick decision is often made because the individual is too impatient to sustain his attention long enough to read all the information, or else too uncomfortable at the prospect of complex thought to weigh things sufficiently. A 'U.S. News and World Report' mentioned Mr Bush's aides during his first term as saying that he 'never agonises over decisions, preferring to gather information, make a decision, and move on'.

The psychoanalyst notes that the President 'is known for keeping a strictly regimented daily routine, in which short, heavily scheduled workdays with brief meetings are punctuated by regular breaks for exercise. Some would praise this as evidence of a disciplined mind, but it points equally to a desire to minimise the impact of a short attention span, and to avoid the impulsive behavior that can otherwise result. As the commentators Eric Alterman and Mark Green have both reported, Mr Bush's 'advisors have admitted that the staff usually limits him to just three or four 30- to 45-minute 'policy time' sessions per week, about what Bill Clinton engaged in per day. Then, more often than not, the President sloughs off responsibility with the admonishment, "You guys decide it"'.

STICKING OUT HIS TONGUE

The book has a mass of revealing information about Bush's impulsive behaviour. As Governor of Texas, having summoned a Forestry Service official to the podium to talk about forest fires by shouting 'Tree man, get up here!', Bush looked round at the journalists while he talked, 'stuck out his tongue and made a funny face by puffing up his cheeks like a blowfish'. The author points out that such impulsive, hair-trigger responses to real and perceived threats are common with people with ADHD, who often act before determining whether the threat they perceive is in fact genuine.

They also tend to do the opposite - responding to feeling threatened by choosing to hide or to escape. Thus Bush dabbled in many things before arriving at Harvard Business School, by which time he 'had a taste of many different jobs but none of them ever seemed to fit'.

In his examination of the President's personality, the author stresses that his behaviour is highly relevant because of the political ramifications - which, we would add, the whole world is about to see. 'His defensive measures not only reflect conflicts within his character; they can also cause serious problems that can have a severe impact on the quality of his leadership - and on the quality of our lives'.

People who have known Mr Bush in the past have often said that while he appeared to be affable, in fact his affability hides a distance. 'As an intelligent person whose access to his intelligence was hampered by disabilities, Bush compensated for his flaws by developing other talents, such as his sense of humor and his uncanny ability to memorize names and faces. People with untreated ADHD can have difficulty functioning as members of a social group, because they find it hard to follow substantive discussion and social interaction', as Mr Bush's first Treasury Secretary, Paul O'Neill, discovered whenever he appeared for his weekly briefings with the President. Mr O'Neill noticed at once that Mr Bush was not in the slightest interested in anything he had to say, and that he suffered from EGO (Eyes Glaze Over) throughout their meetings.

Thanks to the diligence of Dr Frank, we now know that Mr O'Neill's experiences with the President reflected Mr Bush's short attention-span associated with his ADHD. The author elaborates: 'Finding it too hard to grasp thoughts coming from multiple directions', ADHD sufferers 'often resort to telling jokes and disrupting the proceedings; they content themselves with being one of a group of fun-loving people, and avoid more serious interaction'. So, as a consequence, Paul ONiell was asked in December 2002 to 'activate' the presigned resignation letter which every high office-holder in the United States is required to sign as a condition of his appointment.

An ambitious child with ADHD has to be a leader in order to be a group member, otherwise he can't be heard, since in a subordinate position no-one would take his outbursts seriously. And indeed, with this man, they need to. Sometimes, it appears that it is not George W. Bush, but something else that is speaking. For instance, on 11th May 2001, he pronounced in Washington that 'there's no question that the minute I got elected, the storm clouds on the horizon were getting nearly directly overhead'. The Author would agree. And on 13th August 2002, speaking at Waco, Texas, Mr George Bush Jr. remarked:'

T firmly believe the death tax is good for people from all walks of life throughout our society'.

Reverting to the child-rearing dimension of nis studies, Dr Frank speaks of the importance of the breaking and repairing of bonds, which is an essential and normal component of child rearing.

'In healthy relationships, a pattern is established where the mother understands the pain and shame she has caused, helping the child to regulate his own feelings over time. But hyperactivity can get in the way of this process. Bush's attitudes suggests that his childhood involved little experience of breaking and repairing; his inability to express contrition, or admit wrongdoing, bespeaks a profound need to deny the possibility of his shame'.

The basic rhythm of 'breaking and repairing' also teaches the child that a negative experience can be followed by something positive; in the process, the child learns to tolerate the bad without having to react violently. But, says Dr Frank ominously, 'this also seems to be missing from Mr Bush's repertoire. When a child doesn't experience relief from his distress, he frequently reacts by defiantly denying outside help or influence, developing a false, grandiose sense of independence'.

GRANDIOSITY AND CARDBOARD FIGURES

Enter the condition of grandiosity which, along with shame, Dr Frank says are symptoms of the learning-disabled person's inability to construct an internal world that reflects the complexities of life. 'Such a child's inner world must be simple, because complexity causes anxiety; when shame is unresolved, compensatory grandiose self-images are allowed to thrive, and magical thinking spawns unrealistic notions that flourish unchallenged'. Accordingly the material world is simplified to conform to the person's internal worldview.

This oversimplified grasp of reality implies that the President's world is populated by cardboard figures who are either enemies or friends ('doing a good job'). Bush's notorious references to GRU-President Putin - a ruthless military intelligence officer - have been alarming. Specifically, the President said that he had seen into Putin's soul when looking into his eyes, as a result of which experience his impression of Putin was positive. However anyone looking into Putin's soul had better beware; and looking into his eyes would probably be ill-advised, as well.

Bush wrapped up this assessment by asserting that Putin was 'willing to wear a cross', the implication being that this covert Leninist liar must be a 'good man' if he's wearing a cross. In fact, wearing crosses is one of the more grotesque mini-deceptions perpetrated by the covert Soviet Leninists who have been masquerading as 'reformed' characters these past 15 years. Thus the late Raisa Gorbachev wore a very large cross, even though she and her husband were professed agnostics, and Gorbachev is a Jew with a family name of Orbach or Korbach. Stalin II, as MVD Eduard Shevardnadze, the Soviet gauleiter of Georgia, was referred to, had himself christened 'St George', for some reason no-one could ever fathom. The false churchman doing the 'christening' was the Catholicos-Patriarch Ilya II of Georgia, who has been a prominent KGB operative since 1962.

An alarming corollary to Mr Bush's habit of gross oversimplification when judging between 'enemies' and 'friends' is that this characteristic was integral with the Ariosophical outlook which formed a key component of the psychological environment within which Nazism took root and thrived. Hitler's early years in Vienna were disturbed by his dislike of the chaotic polyglot capital city of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, where so many minorities and Jews cohabited. The antithesis to that thesis was the 'pure Aryan' Germany across the border.

President George W. Bush has demonised the Iranian Islamic regime, which is [as was the case at the time] controlled by an Azerbaijani (President Khatami), masquerading as an Iranian, just as Tehran has demonised the United States as 'the great Satan'. Hundreds of thousands, if not millions, may die as a consequence of these dangerous oversimplifications.

THE FORMER ALCOHOLIC

Dr Frank next tackles the question of Bush's 'former' alcoholism, beginning with the question: is he still drinking? The author is uncertain about this, noting a number of occasions when the President's speech has sounded slow and excessively deliberate, in the way that certain secret drinkers sometimes talk to hide their inebriation. Just before the start of the Iraq War, Tom Shales wrote in The Washington Post', astonishingly, that 'the President may have been ever so slightly inebriated'. On other occasions, the President appears to have made up stuff (confabulation); and examples are mentioned. Confabulation 'is a common phenomenon among drinkers, as is perseveration, which is evident in Bush's tendency to repeat key words and phrases, as if the repetition helps him to keep calm and stay on track'.

On balance, however, Dr Frank comes to the conclusion that President Bush is what is known in his trade as a 'dry drunk' - someone whose alcoholism has not been treated, but has been supplanted by another addiction. Dr Frank asserts that in President Bush's case the 'replacemenf addiction is 'religion', which Mr Bush 'got' after a walk with the 'Rev' Billy Graham (allegedly a 33rd Degree Mason!) on the beach at Kennebunkport in 1985.

Whether this 'conversion' has any basis in reality we strongly question. Evangelism is ngt the way to find Christ. The Billy Graham way of suddenly committing oneself to Jesus Christ has been found to be almost wholly useless: apparently less than 5% of those who 'choose for Chrisf at Billy Graham-type sessions, remain committed in their new faith. True commitment comes though Faith, leading to Grace, which in turn leads to the reading of Scripture and thence changes in attitude and way of life.

In Mr Bush's case, it is much more likely that the 'born-again' religion that he supposedly clings to represents the replacement addiction for his alcoholism. The fact that as Governor he presided over more executions than any other Governor in US history is entirely inconsistent with True Christianity, even though Texans often justify this behaviour as being authorised by the Old Testament. But in reality, the Old Testament was torn up when the veil of the Temple was rent in twain, and was replaced by the New Testament, or Will - which no more sanctions the taking of human life than do the Ten Commandments. Under any circumstances.

On the other hand, there is nothing inherently unnatural about Mr Bush's reported reliance on his faith for 'protection'. According to the atheist Dr Frank, 'the faith that comes from identification with an omnipotent figure restores a sense of inner peace, protecting the believer from feelings of helplessness or powerlessness'.

This cynical observation is included here merely because it forms part of Dr Frank's diagnosis: as an atheist, he has, of course, no knowledge of 'the peace of God which passeth all understanding' [Philipp-ians Chapter 4, verse 7]. In this crucial respect, his analysis fails to encapsulate or to reveal the full truth about George W Bush and his background. Thus, Dr Frank's refusal to take account of the spiritual dimension ensures that he overlooks the crucial influence of Skull and Bones upon the mentality and inner makeup of all the key Bush males. Given that the Senior Year for 'Bonesmen' consists primarily of a crash course of indoctrination into Luciferianism, risking infestation or possession, this is a serious omission.

TERRORISM - THE REVOLUTIONARY ALIBI

The world of invisible terrorist threats, from a cynical, bogus international intelligence fabrication called Al-Qaeda, lends itself to the kind of grotesque mental oversimplification which Dr Frank diagnoses as characteristic of the President's mentality. It doesn't matter who the enemy is - the 'former' CIA operative 'Tim Osman' morphed into Osama Bin Laden, the spooky scourge of humanity posing in a bathrobe and a beard whose appearance in planted videos made, it is alleged, in Las Vegas, is reiterated whenever the scareism propaganda needs to be ratcheted up to mask a particular nasty incident associated with the global gang warfare called the intensified intelligence war; or Saddam Hussein; or terrorists in general. No matter, Mr Bush Jr. is enabled by his faith to see himself as the force of light against darkness. The problem with this chronic delusion is that the President presides over a regime of pitch darkness, elements of which are re-exposed in this presentation.

No-one who has been exposed to the swirling lies, evasions, barrages of diversionary "lines" and disinformation surrounding 9/11 and the 'war on terrorism' - which was being 'waged' internationally three decades and more ago, after the Soviets relaunched the global terrorism dimension of the World Revolution - believes a word that the US authorities have ever said about Osama Bin Laden.

The President no longer mentions him, of course, because, as Michael Ruppert, a US police and intelligence investigator and author, says, in his book 'Crossing the Rubicon: The Decline of the American Empire and the End of the Age of Oil' [New Society Publishers, Gavriola Islands, BC, Canada, 2004, ISBN 0-86571-540-8], 'Bin Laden was, and remains, a CIA/US Government/Wall Street asset. That would explain why he has never been caught. There are still wars to fight'.

'He can't be caught for a variety of other reasons, including his family's enormous and diverse financial connections to the same elites that control the United States' financial system, and his close interrelationship with a Saudi ruling class that could pull the plug on the US economy.... Osama Bin Laden also knows way too much, and without him, the Bush Administration would have had no excuse for any of what it has done over the last four years. From a strategic point of view, Osama is Dick Cheney's best friend'.

Some 40,000 people did not turn up for work at the World Trade Center on 11th September 2001, unless far more people lost their lives (were sacrificed) than we have been told. Your correspondent discovered in late October 2001 that the smell of rotting flesh was nauseating even as far away as our Midtown Manhattan offices, so there remains a suspicion in his mind that the numbers actually murdered were far larger than reported. Our attempts to obtain a list of the tenants of the Twin Towers from their owners, Silverstein Properties, were unproductive. And did you know that the damage inflicted internally at the World Trade Center in 1993, when the first 'Reichstag Fire' operation at the huge office complex was attempted, was never repaired? On the contrary, the damaged basement area was left unattended, placed out of bounds by a police cordon. Someone had evidently decided that it would be a waste of money to repair the area.

We wonder why. It is extraordinary (though typical of all US political scandals) that the perpetrators of this 'Reichstag Fire' event have succeeded, with impunity, in orchestrating the presentation of events so confusingly, and despite so many 'smoking gun' clues that there was inside official complicity.

NEW LIES FOR OLD: SCIONS OF THE LAW WHO THINK THEY TRANSCEND IT

So far. We need not reiterate here the wealth of open information about the large Bush family's allegedly 'dodgy' background. Dr Frank covers this point well in a single sentence (although he does nave much more to say on this subject): 'Bush was bom into a family that was simultaneously of the law and above it, steadily accruing power to legislate even as its actions moved further from the law'. And the family's true attitude to opposition was encapsulated in the threat uttered by Mrs Barbara Bush during that notorious televised interview on 'Larry King Live'.

Innumerable works have been published which explore the Bush 'crime' family's background. But the US historian Kevin Phillips has summarised all this in his book 'American Dynasty', described by Dr Frank as 'a damning and invaluable historical look at the familial influences on our President's psyche'. 'Four generations of building towards dynasty', Mr Phillips observes, 'have infused the Bush family's hunger for power and practices of crony capitalism with a moral arrogance and backstage disregard for the democratic and republican traditions of the US Government'. Well, of course: if one's primary preoccupation as an alleged hyperactive serial criminalist, apart from the further accumulation of wealth, may be to guarantee one's own protection against arrest, indictment and disgrace, who cares about the United States' traditions or the Constitution?

Several authors have concentrated on this President's inability to distinguish fact from fiction, i.e. his propensity to lie, which has been reviewed in a number of recent books. David Corn (who may be an intelligence operative, representing here an anti-Bush faction), the author of one of them, 'The Lies of George W. Bush', writes thus: 'So constant is [Mr Bush's] fibbing, that a history of his lies offers a close approximation of the history of his Presidential tenure'. Mr Corn says that the President's tendency to be 'economical with the truth' is or was masked by the 'honest-man routine' which characterised his election campaign in 2000: but 'a candidate who rises to power by denouncing the lies of others, warrants more attention when he himself engages in dishonest behavior'.

[Author This is 'rich', coming from an alleged intelligence operative whose own background in US intelligence will have been dominated by the culture of lying which is at the root of all the United States' myriad problems. Moreover all CIA operatives know perfectly well that occupants of the highest positions are controlled operatives, with intelligence handlers who tell them what to do, and what lies to disseminate, and when. President Bush Jr has been observed listening to his handler speaking into a hidden micro-microphone, or reading prompt cards prepared by his handlers].

When Dr Frank looks into this dimension of the President's behaviour, we discover something else disturbing; that he evidently doesn't care -just as he doesn't care about the [now 650,000] Iraqi dead, the untold numbers of dead Afghanis, and the 150+ Texans for whose executions he is responsible.

'The ease and frequency with which Bush misrepresents the truth', writes Dr Frank, 'gain new resonance when seen in the context of a personality that considers itself exempt from the laws that govern others. Why doesn't he tell the truth? Because he doesn't have to. Mr Bush gets away with lying not because he is good at it - he's not - but because in his formulation there's nothing to get away with: the laws of accuracy mean little or nothing to him'.

In this respect, there is of course little to choose in this respect between the lying former President Clinton - his fellow 'Box Gang' operative - and George Jr.

But it gets worse: 'In this light, his simplified worldview is especially important. His capacity to identify and convey the truth relies upon a mental apparatus so primitive and misguided that he may well be unable to recognize his limitations and mistakes. Though there's no way of knowing for sure - even for him - we have seen enough of his personality to suspect that he may actually believe many of his own dubious claims; encumbered by a self-serving, underdeveloped way of seeing the world, he simply lacks the tools to differentiate telling lies from speaking the truth'.

Or, in other words, he 'can't help it'.

The analysis then considers some of the large litany of instances in which President Bush has defied the authority of truth. The author cited the instance of his military service and his profitable sale of Harken Energy stock in 1990, allegedly with the benefit of insider information. 'He compounded his dishonesty by offering conflicting explanations and ultimately misrepresenting the conclusion of his run-in with authority, claiming to have been exonerated in correspondence from the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) that specifically said this was not the case'.

The technique of offering a large number of conflicting explanations to explain an act of wrongdoing appears to have been learned from his own father, George Bush Sr. According to analysts, Mr Bush Sr. used this device following the 'October Surprise' operation, under which the Iranians accepted $35 million in bribes (after some $27 million of the CIA's bribery cash had been stolen by US actives engaged in the scam) in exchange for their agreement not to release the 52 American hostages captured in Tehran on 4th November 1979 until after the US Presidential Election scheduled for exactly one year later (4th November 1980) - in order to guarantee the humiliation and defeat of the then-Democratic President Jimmy Carter, and the victory of Ronald Reagan and George Bush Sr.

The analysts say that Bush Sr. had, by August 2003, offered as many as seven different and conflicting explanations as to where he was during a 'missing' 18-hour period, when he was flown to Paris for the negotiations and returned by supersonic aircraft to the United States before his absence could be noticed (which, however, it was).

INFLICTING PAIN WITHOUT FLINCHING

In a terrifying chapter called 'The Smirk', Dr Frank exposes the President's sadism. 'Long before he led our nation into war, George W. Bush exhibited an appetite for destruction. As a child, Bush inserted firecrackers into the bodies of frogs, lighting the fuses and blowing the creatures up. As President of his fraternity at Yale, he used a branding iron to maim young pledges'. This was, in fact, a reference to the fact that initiates of the occult secret society Skull and Bones at Yale are branded in the small of the back with the letter 'D', which stands inter alia for the Greek occultist Demosthenes, who committed suicide at an altar there in 322 BC (322 being of course the occult kabbalistic number of Skull and Bones - as well as (significantly) the area code for Brussels, the financial seat of the Illuminati, and the home of its invention, the European Union Collective, controlled by the German Nazi Continuum -Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst, Dachau. The Author holds financial several transaction documentary records for the Illuminati which are distinguished by codes that include the numerals 322.

Bush Jr. characterised the hazing operation of 'branding each initiate just above and in between the buttocks [sic] with the red-hot tip of a wire coathanger' as equivalent to 'only a cigarette burn'.

Dr Frank's findings on this score can be summarised as follows: 'As the Governor of Texas, he was observed smirking over the executions of death-row inmates, many of whom were later found to have received inadequate legal protection'.

'Bush's tendencies toward sadism now play out on a bigger stage, with more resounding results. He orders bombings in Baghdad and proudly shows off the horrifying photographs of the bodies of Saddam's sons - almost daring the world to look away. He gets an even larger audience for the video footage of Saddam Hussein's humiliation in captivity, and then demonstrates a very personal sense of triumph at his capture, and glee at the prospect of his execution'.

The US President's trademark smirk, writes Dr Frank, 'makes his sadism easy to spot. In the Presidential debate of 2000, he displayed pleasure at the prospect of three Texas criminals being put to death: 'Guess what? The three men who murdered James Byrd, guess what's going to happen to them? They're going to be put to death'.

This odious public remark, made without flinching, further illuminates Mrs Barbara Bush's threat to Larry King, doesn't it? At once arrogant and cowardly, that comment, accompanied by the smirk, put the whole world on notice that the act of inflicting pain - and the 'good' fortune of having a job that allowed him to do so within the laws of the State - brought Governor Bush a certain pleasure that he was unable to prevent himself from expressing.

Why then, has there been such surprise at the heinous atrocities perpetrated by CIA operatives and Agency contractors in Abu Ghraib (and in innumerable other locations in Afghanistan, Jordan and on the British territory of Diego Garcia), at the 650,000 deaths in Iraq [updated figure: as of October 2006, according to The Lancet] and at the craven, boastful brutality and barbarism of US forces, as they work overtime to make America more 'feared' around the world? The United States is led by a man who, like all Luciferians, is able to 'inflict pain without flinching', a man of fire and 'peak of anger'.

Dr Frank's verdict is damning indeed:

The Bush smirk conveys both the pleasure he derives from inflicting pain, and the defense he mounts against the discovery of that pleasure - a disclosure of the sadistic impulse, and an attempt to deny the destructive self he cannot bear to acknowledge'.

Dr Frank is fearful, and so is the Author, that this man could lead the world into the Third World War. He will, the psychoanalyst asserts, engage 'the nation both as agent and victim in a perilous psy-chodrama that rages far beyond his control'.

THE MEANING OF HIS 'BUSHISMS': AN OEDIPUS WRECK

As for Bush's 'Bushisms' - his convoluted misuse of language, his malapropisms - they can be and have been extensively mined for laughs: one can buy calendars with a Bushism a day for a few dollars. But Dr Frank says that his verbal gaffes and blunders are 'symptomatic of a patient in dire need of help'. Yet, as noted earlier, some of these verbal faux-pas seem to convey what the President actually means, as in: 'Security is the essential roadblock to achieving the road map to peace'; or: 'There's no doubt in my mind that we should allow the world's worst leaders to hold America hostage, to threaten our peace, to threaten our friends and allies with the world's worst weapons'; or: 'We need an energy bill mat encourages consumption'.

To these Freudian slips the President adds other familiar verbal distortions - the bland repetition of phrases (as noted), techniques to deflect questions, evasive answers, the loss of coherence in tangential speech. Closer inspection 'reveals that Bush doesn't just struggle with language; he perverts it, in ways that reveal a capacity for indifference and contempt that reverberates far beyond the written word'.

And he is not afraid of contradicting himself. On 13th September 2001, the President pronounced: 'The most important thing is for us to find Osama Bin Laden. If s our number one priority and we will not rest until we find him'. But six months later, on 13th March 2002, after rather too many exposures leading to the general knowledge that Osama Bin Laden is none other than a 'former' CIA asset code-named 'Tim Osman', Mr Bush said: 'I don't know where he is. I have no idea and I really don't care. If s not that important. If s not our priority'

Turning to the Presidenf s fraught and dangerous relationship with his father in a chapter headed 'Oedipus Wrecks', Dr Frank identified fear of Bush Sr. and his 'deep rivalrous and aggressive feelings towards his father' which are manifest in bullying, often with sarcasm. Without going into the details of this relationship here, the factor which we find by far the most alarming in this context is the younger Bush's competitiveness - his drive to win at any cost, and his eagerness to be centre stage (similarly to his equally dark accomplice, Tony Blair).

The traditional oedipal dynamic involves the boy's desire to surpass his father in the eyes of his mother. Yet 'a man like George W Bush seeks his father's approval just as much as his defeat'. Elaborating this analysis, Dr Justin Frank reaches the following alarming conclusion:

'George W.'s oedipal aggression toward his father is heightened by a defensive hostility, rooted in his fear of being humiliated for needing his father's love and approval, that he directs elsewhere -often at the weak and needy, who remind him unconsciously of his own unacceptable needs [sic]. The result is an individual who is driven to impress, emulate, and outperform the father he unconsciously holds responsible for his own past and potential future humiliation. At the same time, he is highly motivated to unleash his very considerable destructive resources upon symbolic reminders of his father's strength and his own weakness'. Reports of a rift between Sr. and Jr., evident from the sacking of ancien regime holdovers, bear this out (and have been corroborated since).

NON-ACCEPTANCE OF RESPONSIBILITY

The President told the (CIA-favoured) investigative author Mr Bob Woodward that the US Presidency means that he is no longer accountable to anyone for his actions. No-one tells him what to do. He tells others what to do. Dr Frank attaches importance to the President's first speech to a joint session of Congress after 9/11, which began: 'Why do they hate us?', asking: 'Who is Bush really talking about when he says 'they hate us'? The Professor comes up with a disturbing response to his own question:

'Given what we know about the inattentiveness of his parents - who the young 'Bushtail' understood to have rejected him - if s easy to see how this indifference could have been transposed in his mind into hatred, projecting his unrequited longing onto other targets'. In that first post-9/11 speech, too, Mr Bush spoke of 'sacrifice' - which meant not only the human sacrifice perpetrated on 9/11, and the sacrificing of so many young American lives that the funeral corteges into Arlington Cemetery continue from morning to night, with the newly dug graves now spreading out far beyond the area originally intended for them - but also sacrificing free speech: you're either with us or against us. This attitude reminds us of two young Americans we know who, before the second Iraq war, proclaimed, perfectly seriously, and with great anger, that 'all Iraqis should be killed. Period'.

The President's psychological makeup includes an inability to accept responsibility for his failures - his disregard of the law now, on a global, tragic scale, for example; and its twin, an inability to make reparation for his gross mistakes. His reliance on binary thinking and his consequently limited view of the world impedes his ability to recognise the humanity of others, which in turn makes it easier to project negative attitudes onto them.

This leads to a self-perpetuating cycle: once they are perceived as having negative attributes, it becomes even harder to feel sympathy for them; and so on. Accompanying this grim syndrome is the President's tendency to blame others for the damage he has done. He denies there is any damage for him to take responsibility for. He declared the war ended while the death toll continued mounting, and has since reached ghastly proportions.

And listen to this:

'Unable to accept responsibility for his actions, he can neither learn from his mistakes nor avoid repeating them. Unable to repair, he can only break and deny'.

Even more alarmingly, since the second Iraq war may be considered by the President to have been a form of revenge for the damage done to his family's reputation by the CIA operative William Clinton in 1992, Mr Bush may believe that revenge equates to reparation, even though the avenger's satisfactions are only temporary. But 'revenge is mine, saith the Lord': if the President were a Christian, he would know that policy and behaviour should never, ever be motivated by revenge. 'Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath; for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord' [Romans, Chapter 12, verse 19].

ALARMING DATA FROM MEDICAL RECORDS

The President's medical records, reviewed by Dr Frank, also contain alarming signals. In the report on the President's summer physical in August 2003, a number of spider angiomas were reported to have been removed from his nose. Dr Frank elaborated that, even though there was no indication of liver damage, these are a legitimate source of concern since, while they can appear without any apparent cause, they are most often seen either in pregnancy or in chronic liver damage from excessive alcohol abuse.

A second finding which troubled him is the President's low pulse rate of 35 to 45, which Dr Frank fears may be associated with a suppressed level of arousal to various visual stimuli. 'Hypoarousal is typical of antisocial personalities; unable to perceive accurately the world around them, whenever challenged or attacked, such people tend to overreact in violent ways. They [may] ignore facial and behavioral warning signs - and then exhibit rage reactions out of proportion to the particular insult', whether real or imagined.

When we discussed the President's low pulse rate with a medically qualified expert, she replied, with considerable emphasis, that such a low pulse rate is 'extremely abnormal' and should indeed be a source of grave concern. A third physical characteristic that Dr Justin Frank takes seriously was described by Mr Bush Jr. himself in his autobiography 'A Charge to Keep': 'Laura stays in her own space; I've always invaded other people's spaces, leaning into them, touching, hugging, getting close... I am in perpetual motion, I provoke people, confront them in a teasing way. I pick at a problem'.

Commenting on this, Dr Frank writes:

'In a standard physical exam that serves as part of a proper psychodynamic formulation, such behavior would automatically raise the possibility of a neurological connection. Such impulsive discharges of energy can be seen as symptomatic of Tourette's Syndrome; the line between a mild case of Tourette's and ADHD can be a fine one, or the two may coexist. Most adults with Tourette's who present at clinics for treatment do so because of temper outbursts' - the kind of event with which the President's staffers, like [the former White House Chief of Staff] Andrew Card, are believed to be familiar.

The President's extraordinary lack of curiosity may partly explain some of his 'economies with the truth'. He said after 9/11 that he 'never saw any intelligence that indicated there was going to be an attack on America'. However the CIA were engaged in ten simulations of aircraft crashing into very tall buildings on the very day of the atrocities (raising the likelihood that the simulations were intended as one of the multiple covers for the resulting 'Reichstag Fire' event). At the same time, it is quite possible, according to Dr Frank, that Bush saw plenty of such intelligence, but that it made no impression on him whatsoever. The other possibility, of course, is that he knew what the controlling intelligence services were planning.

Paranoia is another characteristic identified in this President. His strict insistence on absolute loyalty, a demand described by Mr Paul O'Neill among others, suggests that his paranoia runs deep. 'President Bush's continued habit of seeing the world as peopled with threats... is so consistent and unmistakable that it can safely be described as paranoid'.

And the disengagement that Bush so frequently exhibits is the typical escape of the paranoid individual. Bush's behaviour is what psychoanalysts call egosyntonic, which means that his actions -'the lies he tells and the hurt he inflicts on others - don't appear to cause him much anxiety'. Dr Frank also thinks that Mr Bush has spent his life in absolute denial of the many sources of his anxiety, and of his haunting fear of retribution.

HIDING INSIDE THE PRESIDENCY, WITH THE PROTECTION OF THE SECRET SERVICE

For Mr Bush, the Presidency is the perfect refuge: as President he [thinks he - Ed.] is in control of everything and [is] surrounded by people who will protect him' (unless a decision is taken by those who are really in control, to dispense with his services). He is like many CEOs - functioning megalomaniacs who are typically driven to satisfy their grandiose needs through a string of business risks that eventually guarantee failure.

In sum, this man is considered to be extremely dangerous, as Dr Frank's final words indicate:

'Our sole treatment option - for his benefit and for ours - is to remove President Bush from office. It's up to all of us - Congress, the media, and voters - to do so, before it is too late'.

So, it's too late. The damage over which this man is liable to preside could range from the degradation of the dollar arising in the context of perceptions of his Administration's reckless excess spending, to a truly catastrophic series of miscalculations over Iran, Syria and the 'former' Soviet Union.

Don't forget mat President Bush has long since misjudged GRU-President Vladimir Putin, who controls him, according to a senior intelligence officer with whom the Editor held an extensive discussion in May 2004. After Mr Putin had left the President's ranch at Crawford, Texas, on one occasion, Mr Bush suddenly exclaimed: 'I love him, actually'. Your correspondent formed the view that what Mr Bush Jr. actually meant by this was that he is absolutely terrified of GRU-President Vladimir Putin, but that what came out of his mouth was an inversion of this fear.

What Putin really thinks of Bush Jr. is occasionally revealed in off-the-cuff comments - which are always Leninist in character and always contain meanings of relevance to those whom Lenin called 'the interested'. A Reuters report dated 3rd December 2004 quoted Putin, speaking in New Delhi, as having accused the United States of pursuing a dictatorial foreign policy. 'Even if dictatorship is packaged in beautiful pseudo-democratic phraseology, it will not be able to solve systemic problems. It may even make them worse', said the GRU operative, with maximum cynicism, as pointedly as possible. As mentioned, only a few weeks earlier, Putin had told George W Bush in Chile that "his (Putin's) goal is the creation [at home] of a democratic style consistent with Russian history' [The New York Post', 21st November, page 9]. In both comments, Mr Putin was cunningly making it clear to Mr Bush that he knew that both powers cynically promoted not democracy but 'democratism', but that he is scornful of Mr Bash's constant references to how he is bringing democracy' to the Iraqis (that is, to those who have not yet been killed).

At all events, the key point is that George W. Bush has misjudged Putin, so that he may misjudge responses to an intended attack on Iran, Syria, or both, in accordance with the next steps outlined by that that manic geopolitician, Dr Zbigniew Brzezinski in his book 'The Grand Chessboard: America's Primacy and its Geostrategic Imperatives' [1997, Basic Books, New York], wherein it was catastroph-ically recommended that the United States should unilaterally redraw the map of the Middle East and Central Asia to suit its geopolitical and geo-energy interests.

CONCLUSION

If the President is insensitive to the consequences of his actions, this Administration will not only proliferate dangerous military adventures, but will overspend in every component of the budget, especially domestic 'security' and preparations for repression at home. One reason for this endemic free-spending attitude is that since senior officials are aware of the existence of colossal offshore-based financial resources controlled and accessible by the intelligence community, there is an official mindset which pays little attention to the formal budgetary numbers.

The danger of this manifestation of arrogance is that the international financial markets, being in this respect less well informed than key US officials, will continue to adopt a different view. Obviously, with policy in the hands of a man diagnosed by one of the United States' most accomplished psychoanalysts as being as paranoid, unpredictable and dangerous as described, it will be quite futile for analysts to expect that appropriate US financial housekeeping will occur during this troubling Presidency. In addition, all the signs are that the Constitution may be abandoned. The outlook for the US dollar, therefore, could not possibly be bleaker, on the basis of the information elaborated in this section alone. The last time a crisis of these proportions overwhelmed a great nation was in January 1933. ■

CORRUPTION AT HARVARD

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff, Vs.
The President and Fellows of Harvard College, Andrei Shleifer, Jonathan Hay, Nancy Zimmerman, and Elizabeth Hebert.

On 26th September 2000, the US Department of Justice filed a civil Complaint against the President and Fellows of Harvard University, and against Professor Andrei Shleifer, his wife Nancy Zimmerman, the University's Russian project manager Jonathan Hay, and Hay's girlfriend-turned wife, Elizabeth Hebert. The suit sought damages of at least $40 million which the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) paid to Harvard University in connection with a (misguided) USAID-funded project in Russia. The comparatively modest size of this claim (when compared with the colossal proportions of the off-balance sheet transactions and the billions stolen by other US operatives and intermediaries,) does not make this case a minor one: on the contrary, the fact that the United States alleged that the President and Fellows of Harvard University, as well as the named Professor and individuals, were culpable, shows that there were no 'free-for-all' limits for the US and 'ex'-Soviet intelligence criminalist operatives alike. All Westerners who become involved with KGB and GRU officers trained to masquerade as as 'biznesmen' are vulnerable to being compromised.

In this case, the President and Fellows of one of the world's most famous universities stand accused by the US Government of stealing a large sum of public money due to their involvement in a misguided US official project designed to 'help the Russians' become integrated into the world community. Pathetically, none of the main 'players' in this fiasco, led by the US Government itself, has yet understood that such projects were always going to be a waste of time - since 'the General Staff of the Revolution', of which the KGB and GRU officers concerned are members, have an entirely different agenda which is hidden from the eyes of the West because it fell for the lies perpetrated during 1989-91. But even the remote chance that the Harvard project might achieve some degree of 'transformation' in Russia was cancelled out from the start by the fact that the 'experts' employed by Harvard for this purpose saw their involvement not as a chance to wean the 'former' Soviets from the path of corruption, but rather as a series of corruptly lucrative opportunities to enrich themselves personally, with all expenses being borne by the US Government.

In 1992 and 1995, USATD and Harvard entered into two Cooperative Agreements which required the University to provide impartial and unbiased advice with respect to a USAID-funded project in Russia. The so-called Harvard Institute for International Development, now defunct, was used to implement Harvard's USATD project. The Civil Action (Number 00CV11977DPW) filed in the US District Court, District of Massachusetts, noted that the project included the provision of economic and legal advice concerning the privatisation of Russia's national assets, and the creation of laws and institutions necessary for the functioning of open markets in Russia. Thus the US Government asked Harvard to undertake a task which was fundamentally impossible to achieve, since as noted the KGB and GRU officers into whose hands the assets of the revolutionary state were to be 'privatised' were working to a different remit - namely, to go through the motions of privatisation and establishing Western-style institutions and the rule of law, all for the purposes of international public consumption - while in practice presiding over a system of 'state-controlled capitalism' in accordance with Lenin's model. Underlying this stance was the objective everyone in the West seems to have missed, which is as follows.

The 'former' Soviet Union is not engaged in 'convergence' towards the West. On the contrary, Leninist 'convergence' means that the West must 'converge' towards the East, and that the Easf s convergence towards the West is cosmetic only. In other words, the continuing Soviets are 'marking time' -until the West 'converges' with the East, on the Easf s terms. In the European context, this means waiting impatiently for the European Union Collective - which Gorbachev himself called 'the new European Sovief during a visit to London in March 2000 - to 'converge' and expand Eastwards. The covert Soviets collaborate at the intelligence level with the Nazi Strategic Continuum based at Dachau.

There has been a complete failure to understand this revolutionary reality. And the biggest brains in the West, epitomised by Professors at Harvard University, have failed to analyse the situation objectively in the light of the history and objectives of Leninism. As a result, they fell prey to grandiose illusions about how Russia could be 'changed' in accordance with their academic preferences; while the blind US Government, basking in the glow of its illusory 'Cold War victory', supported these wishful-thinkers in the elaboration of their illusions - at the US taxpayers' expense.

The US Civil Complaint against Harvard pointed out that 'to ensure that the advice provided by Harvard University was impartial and unbiased, the Cooperative Agreements prohibited Harvard employees working on the project from making any investments in Russia'. However a US Congressional investigation into Harvard's activities had to be reassigned to the criminal section of the Boston US Attorney's office, after the staffers turned up disturbing evidence that the University and its staff had been in glaring breach of these requirements. Although the action finally announced was a civil one, the Complaint seems to imply criminal activity on the part of the defendants, noting that 'despite the clear terms of the agreements, Andrei Shleifer, a tenured Professor in Harvard's Economics Department and Jonathan Hay, the University's Moscow-based Representative in charge of the USAID project, were making prohibited investments in Russia in the areas in which they were providing advice'. The complaint further alleged that Shleifer and Hay were using their positions, inside information and influence, as well as USAID-funded resources, to advance their own personal business interests and investments and those of their wives and friends' (the Complaint mentions 'girlfriends').

Commenting on the case, US Attorney Donald K. Stern said that 'the United States paid Harvard for impartial and unbiased economic advice.... Despite clear prohibitions against investing in Russia, Harvard advisors abused their positions and attempted to tip the playing field to their own private financial advantage. We hope that today's complaint will make clear that those who abuse the resources of the United States will be held accountable'.

And that includes the President and Fellows of Harvard University, and their employees, who presided over gross abuses of the trust that the US Government had placed in them - thereby compounding the folly of the US Government itself, in rashly embarking upon this misguided project.

THE DETAIL OF THE COMPLAINT

The US Complaint alleged that while they were acting on behalf of USAID, Shleifer, Hay, Zimmerman and Herbert engaged in various prohibited investments and businesses:

- Shleifer and his wife Zimmerman invested and reinvested $200,000 through Renova-Invest, a US-Russian investment entity, in various Russian companies (all of which, given the system of 'state-controlled capitalism', were in fact in the hands of specially trained intelligence officers), including an aluminium company for which Hay and others funded by USAID provided legal services. Shleifer and Zimmerman also invested $60,000 through Renova-Invest, in Russian Government debt (GKOs).
- Shleifer, Zimmerman and Hay bought several hundred thousand dollars' worth of shares in Russian oil companies (also in the hands of specially trained intelligence officers), and concealed the ownership of those shares by having them registered in the name of Shleifer's father-in-law.
- All four of the named Harvard personnel and their wives (girlfriends) participated in the launching of Russia's first licensed mutual fund, which was started by a company named Pallada, founded and managed by Hay's then girlfriend (now wife) - and/or Russia's first licensed mutual fund depository, the First Russian Specialised Depository (FRSD), started by Hebert's Russian business 'partner', Julia Zagachin.

- Hay and Hebert participated in the creation of a real estate advisory/property management firm to work with Hebert in establishing a real estate mutual fund, and to lease and manage properties for a project to which Hay was a key USAID adviser.
- Jonathan Hay assisted Nancy Zimmerman in her attempts to trade short-term Russian Government bonds (GKOs) and other Government debt, and to repatriate the profits from such trades without paying the required Russian repatriation tax, and used USAID funded staff and offices to set up and operate a Russian trading company to implement this scheme.

The ease with which these Harvard officers were corrupted almost the moment they set foot in Russia, must have caused immense satisfaction and amusement in the bowels of the branch of the Soviet intelligence services tasked with corrupting Western officials and others who had rushed to the 'former' Soviet Union on the basis of their mistaken belief that the 'changes' which had taken place in 1989-91 were genuine.

All in all, Harvard and its employees were alleged to have 'defrauded the United States out of at least $40 million paid to Harvard' by USAID. The Complaint alleged that 'Shleifer and Hay abused their positions as high-level and trusted advisors to and on behalf of the United States in Russia, and misused resources funded by the United States for their own personal benefit and for the personal benefit of their wives, girlfriends and/or business associates'. The action was for the diversion of public money paid under a US Federal grant programme, and included claims for false claims, fraud, and breaches of fiduciary duty. The primary Harvard Representative, Shleifer, was the Principal Investigator and Project Director for USAID-funded agreements with Harvard for work on economic and legal reforms in Russia.

Nancy Zimmerman, married to Shleifer, was operating an investment fund management company entitled 'Farallon Fixed Income Associates' in Cambridge, Massachusetts. Both individually and through this entity, Zimmerman was alleged to have been involved in a number of investments and financial transactions in Russia; and she allegedly used the USAID-funded staff and resources of the Harvard project, to assist her with these investments.

The Complaint stated that 'after the Soviet Union dissolved in December 1991 [sic], the United States began providing limited assistance to support reform. In October 1992, the Congress enacted the Freedom for Russia and the Emerging Eurasian Democracies [sic] and Open Market Support Act of 1992. This Act authorized a program, to be implemented primarily by USAID, to help the states of the former Soviet Union carry out political and economic reform in support of open markets, including "establishment of transparency in regulatory and other governmental decision-making"'.

USAID sought to accomplish this task, in part, through the two cooperative agreements reached with Harvard University. The irony is that the USSR 'succumbed' to US Financial Warfare/bribery.

ASSETS IN THE HANDS OF THE FEW

The mentioned highly critical General Accounting Office report noted that 'Russia's transition path has been made harder by the concentration of power and income in the hands of a few, a process that had begun prior to the transition and that was accelerated by the privatization of the most valuable sectors of Russian enterprise in 1994 and 1995'.

But neither the General Accounting Office nor any other Western investigating agency appears to have asked the most obvious related question: why were the assets of the state 'privatised' into the hands of 'a few', and who were those 'few' - notwithstanding the abundance of evidence that all of the so-called 'oligarchs', without exception, are intelligence officers (note that we omit the usual mealy-mouthed adjective 'former'). One observer, however, appears to have had her suspicions. According to Janine Wedel, the author of 'Collision and Collusion: The Strange Case of Western Aid to Eastern Europe, 1989-98', the 'entire episode' of Harvard University's alleged corruption in Russia should prompt a critical examination of US policy towards Russia over the past decade: 'We need to look at how foreign policy in this very key area of Russian economic development was essentially privatized into the hands of a very small group of players on both sides with very little accountability'.

Well, yes, no doubt the United States' policymakers need to review their entire misplaced pro-Moscow strategy, in all its confused and complex dimensions, as a matter of urgency. But first, they need, along with their counterparts in the West generally, to recognise the reality of the phenomenon we call criminalism. What is criminalism for? Its purposes are as follows:

- To maximise the potential of criminal activity (especially with regard to exploiting Gramscian opportunities for eroding morality, penetration of institutions and blackmail arising from the avalanche of drug-derived proceeds) as an instrument for the advancement of the Revolution by undermining the capitalist system and its institutions, especially the banks.
- To destabilise capitalism generally through the enlargement of the underground economy and by popularising criminal activity, eroding standards, thus undermining governance generally.

- To discredit capitalism by equating it with organised crime, while disguising the revolutionary source of criminalism as a key instrument of Leninist (and German DVD) subversion strategy.

These objectives conflict with familiar Western illusions.

Actually, Professor Andrei Shleifer recently co-authored an article, would you believe, entitled 'Corruption', with a University of Chicago Professor, Robert W. Vishny, in 'The Quarterly Journal of Economics', which began with the following statement:

'We define government corruption as the sale by government officials of government property for personal gain. For example, government officials often collect bribes for providing permits and licenses, for giving passage through customs, or for prohibiting the entry of competitors. In these cases, they charge personally for goods that the state officially owns.... Corruption is both pervasive and significant around the world'. And the authors cited past studies on corruption which 'examine ways of motivating the (economic) agent to be honest'. In response to the US Government's action against Shleifer in the present case, Earl Nemser, who represented Professor Shleifer and his wife, argued when the case was first publicised in September 2000 that the couple had no restrictions on their investment opportunities in Russia because Shleifer was only a consultant to the project.

CYNICAL DISREGARD OF SPECIFIC U.S. GOVERNMENT CONTRACT TERMS

But USAID's Cooperative Agreements, which Harvard had signed, had laid down that Harvard 'must develop the complete confidence and trust of the host government' (an absurd proposition, given the Leninist untrustworthiness of the host Government itself) and that 'a completely neutral third party, void of any vested interest in the contracting process, is required'. The Agreements provided that 'no employee of the grantee (Harvard) shall engage directly or indirectly, either in the individual's own name or in the name or through an agency of another person, in any business, profession, or occupation in the foreign countries in which the individual is assigned, nor shall the individual make loans or investments to or in any business, profession or occupation in the foreign countries to which the individual is assigned'.

'The recipient shall maintain a code of standards of conduct that shall govern the performance of its officers, employees or agents in the awarding or administering of contracts using USAID funds. Conflict of interest situations involving employees, officers or agents or their immediate families shall be avoided.... Harvard Institute for International Development employees and members of their families may engage in no financial transactions or investments within the Project Country.... Such transactions or investments include maintenance of savings accounts or the purchase of savings certificates, holding of debt instruments, maintaining any interest whatsoever in any local business, or making investments of any kind in the Project Country'.

In addition, illustrating how arrogant these high-level advisers who thought they had a sacred mission to establish free enterprise in 'post-Soviet' Russia had become, Shleifer was a member of Harvard University's Faculty of Arts and Sciences, which maintains a conflict of interest policy requiring the disclosure of potential conflicts of interest, including any relationship 'that might enable a member to influence Harvard's dealings with an outside organization in any way leading to personal gain or to improper advantage for anyone'. The University itself even included a Conflict of Interest Statement in its submission to USAID, stating that 'as a non-profit, academic institution, Harvard is committed to maintaining an objective and unbiased role'.

Shleifer and his wife, the US Government alleged, basically ignored these restrictions. They bought stocks through Renova-Invest in many of the Russian entities which were purportedly being privatised under detailed plans for which Shleifer was a key adviser, including Rostelcom, Gazprom, Irkaz, Sayansk, Bratsk, Vladimir Tractor and Chernogorneft - all of which were privatised into the hands of specially trained KGB and GRU officers masquerading as 'biznesmen'. In 1995, $60,000 was allegedly invested by Andrei Shleifer, while the Professor, financed by USAID, was involved in advising the Russian Government on debt policy and the negotiations with the International Monetary Fund concerning further extensions of credit to the Russian Government. Later, Renova-Invest employed Jonathan Hay and other USAID-funded staff to work on merger documents, including documents for an aluminium company, Irkaz, one of the entities in which Shleifer held stock purchased by Renova-Invest. The time spent by Hay and other USAID lawyers working on this 'private' KGB-controlled merger, which had nothing to do with USAID's project, was allegedly charged to USAID.

In July 1994, Shleifer and Farallon Capital agreed to buy oil stocks in Russia, and Shleifer arranged for his investment in these stocks, which were almost all to be bought on the advice of one Igor Tsukanov, a KGB operative, to be held in the name of another - initially Zimmerman, but the shares were later registered in the name of Zimmerman's father. In a Memo dated 28th July 1994, cited in the official Complaint, initial investment was 'anticipated to be $2.0 million, with an increase to $5.0 million if sufficient investment opportunities are available. Andrei will invest 10% of his own capital, with shares to be registered to Nancy Zimmerman'.

Farallon Capital and Shleifer undertook three groups of purchases of oil stocks through an entity called CentreInvest in 1994. On 11th August 1994, Shleifer wired $165,000 from his joint bank account with Nancy Zimmerman to a Channel Islands bank for the purchase of 30,000 shares in the Russian oil entity Purneftegaz, controlled by Soviet intelligence officers.

On 31st August 1994, Mr Shleifer sent a cheque for $99,000 from his own money market account to his father-in-law, who in turn wired $165,000 to a Channel Islands bank account for the purchase of 5,000 shares in the Russian oil entity Yugraneftegaz, stolen and controlled by Soviet intelligence officers [see pages 705 et seq.]. On 20th September 1994, Shleifer deposited a cheque for $66,000 made out by Jonathan Hay to Professor Shleifer into his own individual bank account. On 4th November 1994, Shleifer wired $19,000 from this account to a Channel Islands account for the purchase of 1,000 shares of stock in the Russian oil entity Varieganneftegaz, controlled by Soviet intelligence officers. The Complaint asserted that within this total, about $10,000 of Jonathan Hay's funds were used.

In late 1995 or early in 1996, the defendants and the USAID-financed Russian Harvard employee Julia Zagachin, put together, promoted and/or financed a plan to launch the first Russian mutual fund management company (Pallada) and the First Russian Specialised Depository. These businesses were expected to be quite profitable, and both required licenses from the Russian Securities Commission, an entity that Harvard University, Professor Shleifer and Jonathan Hay had helped to establish, and to which Shleifer and Hay were the advisers.

Both Pallada and the Russian Specialised Depository received the first operating licenses of their kind ever issued by the Russian Securities Commission. Jonathan Hay then actively solicited investments in Pallada and the depository institution from Zimmerman, the Farallon companies and others. He also travelled to Boston for meetings with representative of at least one potential investor.

In March 1996, Elizabeth Hebert separately sent a business plan to an affiliate of the above potential investor, entitled Commonwealth Property Investors, for the establishment of a Russian domestic fund management company to launch one of the first mutual funds in Russia. The Business Plan (for what was to become Pallada and the First Russian Specialised Depository) sought investors to contribute $3.5 million, in exchange for 30% of the proposed companies' equity. The Plan predicted that the company or companies would generate $28 million annually in pretax profits in the first five years of operations.

It stated that the management team would 'consist of a Chief Executive Officer, Elizabeth Hebert, and a Chief Operating Officer, Julia Zagachin'. The Complaint states that 'at the time Zagachin was being paid as a full-time employee of Harvard on the USAID-funded project under Hay's supervision, while in fact working on starting this private mutual fund and/or depository business with Hebert'.

Note throughout all this that the Harvard academics blithely assumed not only that a true free enterprise environment was being constructed in Russia, and that they were among the leading builders thereof, but that massive profits lay in store for lucky investors able to exploit the assets which belong ultimately to the Party-State. The lure of bonanza profits was so great, and the Harvard employees' estimation of their own brilliance so inflated, that they ignored the restrictions set out in their contracts - or else assumed, as US criminalist operatives are apt to do, that the US authorities would never notice, given pervasive self-reinforcing US and Soviet corruption, in a corrupt, 'free-for-all' environment.

For Hebert and Zagachin planned to exploit their close relationship with the Russian Securities Commission, to which Jonathan Hay was a key adviser, to gain a competitive advantage over other funds. The Business Plan stated that 'the timing is critical to ensure the Fund is able to benefit from expected barriers to entry the first of which is an untested licensing procedure for the fund management company. It is expected that the fact that the team is well known to and trusted by the regulators suggests that it will be able to facilitate the issuance of licenses and clear other regulatory hurdles which are expected to be a hindrance to competitors'.

Manifestly, the Jewish Harvard academics/officials saw their deployment to and involvement with the US-promoted 'post'-Soviet privatisation offensive as a golden opportunity for self-enrichment, in blatant disregard for the terms of their contracts and for any ethical considerations. The dangers were anticipated in their contracts, which proved ineffective.

INSTITUTE FOR LAW-BASED ECONOMY

Adding to the ironies surrounding the Harvard team's behaviour, Hebert indicated in the Business Plan that she and Zagachin intended to use the services of the Institute for Law-Based Economy, a Russian affiliate of the Harvard project under the direction of Jonathan Hay and largely funded by USAID. The Plan stated that 'it will also be important to develop solutions in close cooperation with the Federal Commission which intends to carefully regulate these functions. To ensure full compliance, the Institute for Law-Based Economy (the Russian non-profit unit that drafted the Regulations) has already been retained to provide advice in the consideration of various options and to facilitate the development of those options where regulatory assistance is required'.

Working in an environment which they must have recognised to be absolutely corrupt, but which they were being employed to clean up, these Harvard officers threw all caution to the winds, making a mockery of the grandiose pretensions of their University, and of USAID and the US Government itself. In a solicitation Memorandum, Jonathan Hay stated that 'we' are seeking an investment of $1.2 million in the FRSD. The regulations governing mutual funds 'were drafted by the Russian legal team that I manage'. Hay boasted of the probable success of the investment as being attributable to its close relationship with the [corrupt] Russian Securities Commission, stating that 'we are likely to get a license before anyone else, which will give us a significant first mover advantage'. The Memorandum added that 'we are not interested in your investment in the Specialised Depository unless this is helpful to raise the funds needed to start the fund management company' (being created by Hay's girlfriend, Hebert) 'because, among other things, we frankly want to start both of these things at the same time and are tying our futures to this strategy'. In due course, Hay and his father invested the required minimum capitalisation of $400,000 to purchase the FRSD. 'At the same time', the Complaint noted, 'Hay continued to supervise regulations relating to FRSD, and to direct technical assistance funded under separate contracts by both USAID and the World Bank to the benefit of the FRSD'.

Separately, in the spring of 1996, while employed on the USAID-funded Harvard project, Jonathan Hay collaborated with Elizabeth Hebert and with certain USAID and World Bank-funded employees under his direction to start a real estate development and property management business, which was to collaborate with some of the other named entities to create a real estate mutual fund and to develop and manage real properties in Russia. Under a 'Draft Terms of Agreement', Hay stated that the company, named Korona, 'would have the goal of purchasing, developing and managing real estate projects in Russia's regions'.

A senior Harvard employee repeatedly objected to these abuses, writing to Shleifer:

'I can't imagine that you will do anything about this, but I believe that it is not right all round and does not show good faith on anyone's part'.

She also wrote that Harvard would 'rue the day' when USAID found out. Which it belatedly did. ■

COVERT SOVIET FINANCIAL SCAMS

SOVIET FINANCIAL CRIMINALIST-INTELUGENCE-ILLUMINATI OPERATIONS The integration of organised criminal operations with Soviet and false 'post'-Soviet financial sector practice will help to explain how the Soviet structures could seamlessly accommodate the US intelligence 'Financial Warfare' offensive - in pursuit of the fulfilment of the Soviet long-range Leninist deception strategy promulgated at the 22nd CPSU Congress held at the newly constructed, modernistic Moscow Palace of Congresses in October 1961, and ratified at the 81-Party Congress held in Moscow on 6th December that year[1]. The following study will show that the Soviet and post-Soviet financial system is infested with criminal practice, one corollary of which, of course, is that all Western financial institutions and businesses operating in the 'former' USSR need to understand that it is still the case that no 'legal' agreement has any underlying validity, since the concept of 'legality' is still, under covert as under overt Communism, what happens to enter into the heads of apparatchiks or KGB-GRU supremos at any point in time.

Contrary to popular belief, the 1998 Soviet debt default was not the result of 'market reform' - the facile assumption made by the Western financial media. It was a corollary of the criminalised foreign trade system that had prevailed under overt Communism and which Western operatives exploited. This system had been used, certainly since the 1950s, to funnel foreign currency out of the country, for parking in Soviet banks abroad, and in accounts held at innumerable Western banks.

In addition, as explained in 'Red Cocaine: The Drugging of America and the West', by Dr Joseph Douglass Jr. [see: www.edwardharle.org] the Soviets had carefully selected the Western institutions and bankers whom they identified as being the most corruptible, with whom to cooperate in ensuring the successful laundering and placement of the anticipated vast financial accruals they would be generating from the launch of their intensive penetration and consolidation of their own drug-trafficking operations, in the second half of the 1960s. This operation, planned on a global scale, was initially modelled upon the Chinese Communists' early drug-trafficking and distributing operations, which Mao Tse-Tung's cadres had used first against the Chinese population and then, after 1949, had expanded regionally to corrupt regimes and populations in the Far East.

Clearly, the Western institutions selected by the Soviets for drug money-laundering purposes were also used to park and handle foreign currency derived from other activities out of the USSR, for safekeeping. These banks have since been used to handle Western drug money flows, as well.

In parallel with the sizeable flow-of-funds associated with Soviet-supervised and -controlled drug operations - Fidel Castro fell out with Mikhail Gorbachev in the 1980s over Cuba's cut, which he wanted raised to 30%, from a much lower level - the ongoing Soviet-era financial system was heavily skewed towards the illicit sale of domestic raw materials (oil, gas, and metals).

It was accordingly 'no problem' for experienced, expert US 'Financial Warfare' and other operatives to become involved in parallel transactions with experienced Soviet intelligence counterparties using the specially created US Title 18 Section 6 intelligence corporations, mainly based offshore and equipped with offshore bank accounts all over the world. Unfortunately, corrupt US intelligence operatives nave joined with Soviet criminalists in global scamming and corrupt banking practices.

The 'pure' criminalist Soviet method was to dump domestically-produced commodities at below world market prices with 'friendly' foreign, likewise mainly offshore, companies. Some (probably all) of these 'foreign' corporations, like Plantronik GmbH, 'were' (are) in fact controlled by Soviet operatives. Others were controlled by intelligence officers, either employed by the US Treasury's special 'Financial Warfare' cadres, or else working for other components of the vast US intelligence community.

Clearly, when the US counterparty was (is) a 'privatised' entity working under the US Presidential Executive Order 12333 regime, then the scope for embezzlement by the operators of such corporations, was/is prospectively open-ended. A number of US intelligence officers and fake 'lawyers' fell into temptation, but the most distinguished of their number, Leo E Wanta, the senior Presidential intelligence aide, was not among them: so he was deliberately 'taken down' so that the giga-funds could be exploited.

THE OVERT SOVIET CORRUPTION MODEL

In the 'pure' corrupted Soviet model, domestically produced raw materials go through a 'cut-out' chain of offshore intermediaries, with the superprofits generated by such resale operations winding up in offshore bank accounts abroad. It is alleged by some analysts that under overt Communism, these superprofits were redeployed to serve the needs and expenses of the World Communist movement, and in the 'fight against world capitalism', whereas today the superprofits are used for 'other purposes'.

This was the 'view' publicised by the 'financial analyst', Andrei Sotnik, in Moscow News [13-19th August 2003]; however, since 'Moscow News' is an outlet for regime disinformation, one must be on the lookout for lies; and this is one of them.

Since there has never been any true discontinuity of classical Soviet Leninist strategy, the superprofits continue to be required for use by the World Revolution, as before - a fact of life demonstrated by the widely publicised events surrounding Mikhail Khodorkhovsky, the Soviet intelligence-crook and erstwhile Gorbachev-era Minister, into whose hands certain vast assets of the Soviet Party-state were temporarily 'privatised'. True to long-established routine, dating back to Stalin's time, the apparat demands its assets/funds back with compound interest - at a time of its own choosing

No doubt, as is the case with the 'privatised' US operational intelligence cadres and groups, vast amounts of funds have been, and continue to be, stolen and siphoned off into private bank accounts which 'oligarchs' (in fact, Soviet intelligence operatives) may hope cannot be traced by the directors of the World Revolution in Moscow. However the Soviets possess and use cloned PROMIS and PROMIS-derived software, so that belief, if held, would not be soundly based. Fearful that the ongoing Soviet authorities are now indeed capable of tracing their foreign bank accounts, some 'oligarchs' - Messrs. Abramovich and Poltanin, for instance - have resorted to laundering their allegedly ill-gotten funds into the coffers of impecunious but world-famous British soccer clubs.

The money disappears of course from the state budget for good. The network of offshore 'foreign' but controlled companies established by the overt and covert Soviet Communists in and since the 1990s interrelates, mimics and interacts with the parallel Title 18 Section 6 USG corporations, and with similar companies organised by other intelligence communities, and has been a primary focus of foreign exchange operations undertaken by the covert ruling Moscow establishment, and by the 'big business' sector that has emerged since the 'changes' of 1990-92. This sector is controlled by the state, using a rather more sophisticated variant of Lenin's concept of 'state capitalism' which we call 'state-controlled capitalism'.

This 'new firm' of 'state-controlled capitalism' was formally inaugurated in 1990, when the Politburo of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union (CPSU) adopted a resolution 'empowering' the Communist apparatchiks (officials) and of course intelligence officers to set up corporations abroad using assets that belonged to the Party-State. Please note that this resolution was adopted by the CPSU Central Committee, presided over by President Mikhail Gorbachev, and not by President Boris Yeltsin's parallel RSFSR structures. The resolution precisely matched the effect of President Reagan's Executive Order 12333 of January 1981.

CAPITAL FLIGHT FROM THE USSR

Post-war capital flight from the USSR, however, began in the 1950s - although as has been noted, it was always endemic among the Communist Party elite, from the earliest days of the supremacy of this criminal organisation. However it was only apparently in the 1950s that Western intelligence services began reporting the opening of secret numbered accounts at Swiss banks and at banks in some other countries, by holders of Soviet passports.

From the moment that Mikhail Gorbachev was appointed General Secretary of the CPSU, capital flight accelerated sharply. According to French intelligence sources alone, the CPSU controlled 84 external companies, held more than 7,000 bank accounts (as reported in our associated intelligence service, Soviet Analyst, in the early 1990s), and maintained at least $25 billion in offshore deposits and in offshore-based investments. By today's standards, this is minuscule.

Many years ago, in the early 1970s, this service hinted, in an article on Soviet finances, that the Soviets could not necessarily ever be relied upon to meet their formal financial obligations. For this outrageous observation, we were resoundingly reprimanded by Moscow Narodny Bank, an institution that allegedly acted as a primary money-laundering outlet, and which is actually a British-registered institution, located in the City of London. We were belatedly proved right in 1990, when all the assets held in the client accounts of the Soviet Bank for Foreign Economic Activity, known as Vneshekon-ombank (a.k.a. VEB), all of a sudden mysteriously disappeared.

The clients of this Soviet institution (of course many were state entities) were informed that they would not get their money back. Simultaneously, however, Gosbank (the Soviet central bank, under the former head of Moscow Narodny Bank, Viktor Gerashchenko) exploited Vneshekonombank to funnel about $6.0 billion to the Russian banks abroad, ostensibly to enable those institutions to bail out the foreign clients who had lost all their money. As indicated, the funds provided were ostensibly, for foreign public consumption, intended to pay off foreign creditors; yet in practice, these funds were reclassified as resources made available to finance Gosbank shareholdings in, and capital for, Soviet bank affiliates abroad.

In other words, the Soviet bank's creditors never received a single groat - all the money having of course disappeared through a network of offshore companies. All Russian banks operating abroad, just like Vneshekonombank, have a diversified network of dependent foreign structures, consisting of banks, financial and consulting companies, trading houses, production enterprises, and so forth: so the terms Vneshekonombank, or VEB or else 'Russian banks abroad', are essentially interchangeable here, and can be taken as referring to the entire sub-network of affiliated structures.

We will first pursue, in a little more detail, such information as is available about what happened next - before inserting a rather obvious suggestion of our own. It happened that Vneshekonombank received a number of foreign credits through the aforementioned Soviet institutions abroad, without processing them through the country's national budgetary procedures. For instance, during 1990, the Persian Gulf countries actually provided the Soviet Union with a loan worth $1.75 billion. This loan was extended shortly ahead of the Operation Desert Storm. According in fact to Western media reports, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and also the United Arab Emirates made this sum available to Moscow by way of recompensing the Soviets ostensibly for not vetoing an anti-Saddam Hussein resolution at the United Nations Security Council. By the way, such 'bribery' is common practice at the United Nations, often involving liberal remittances of US 'Black Operations' money, as well.

These funds were remitted through the Paris-based Soviet institution, Eurobank (full title: Banque Commerciale pour l'Europe du Nord) and its many affiliates. The money was never reported or included among the revenues or credits recorded in either the Soviet or the Russian state budgets.

A proportion of this credit was remitted through Eurobank to the Jersey-based offshore company, Financial Management Co. (or FIMACO), which featured prominently in the lurid accounts of the Russian financial scandals of 1998-99, reported in earlier issues of 'International Currency Review'. Why only a proportion? Because, in addition to the Gulf funds remitted to Fimaco, components of the Gulf countries' loan money were paid out by Eurobank to affiliated Soviet companies, including Eurogrefi (Paris), RTD France (Paris), and also Evrofinance (Moscow). In practical terms, what this meant was that a loan which subsequently became part of the Soviet (and then, for the time being, the Russian) foreign debt, was remitted to foreign Soviet-controlled offshore corporations, and was then used for 'confidential' purposes (namely, stolen, diverted or otherwise compromised).

Of course, the corporations concerned were set up by the Soviet intelligence community, just like Section 18, Title 6 US Government proprietary corporations.

But what of the funds that disappeared suddenly from Vneshekonombank? All enquiries on this score should be addressed, it is suggested, to the 'Financial Warfare' apparatus of the US Treasury and/or to its 'privatised' operatives and cadres.

THE FAKE BANKRUPTCY TECHNIQUE

False bankruptcy 'was' a method also favoured by the overt Communists in past years, and it further remains a preferred scamming method exploited by their covert Communist successors nowadays, for encouraging stolen funds to 'vanish' (the same method as is used by the CIA, which specialises in the raping and folding of targeted banks and trading corporations, such as Enron). For instance, in April 1989, Banca del Gottardo (Lugano) arranged for an enterprise calling itself Interplastika to receive a loan worth $100 million, underwritten by Vneshekonombank, on the ostensible basis that the loan recipient was in fact the Soviet foreign trade association, Tekhnoimport. An operative called Behgjet Paccoli transferred 25% of the bank loan proceeds, which had been made available in 1990, to Tekhnoimport. Interplastika then promptly went bust, and all the rest of the money was 'lost'.

Sounds familiar?

In early 2000, Russia suddenly recognised the Vneshekonombank's financial obligations to Banca del Gottardo, incorporating the amount into its foreign state debt; and this book 'adjustment was implemented without pressure from any known international financial investigation.

What happened to the 75% of the funds made available in 1990? We don't know. But this is what happened next. In November 1994, the Banca del Gottardo granted a loan worth - wait for it - $100 million, to a South African corporation, employing precious metals and gems as collateral: five metric tons of gold coins issued in the years 1928-72 were made available to the South African company by the Russian Federation Committee for Precious Metals and Precious Stones.

The proceeds of the odd loan were used to pay amounts due to a company called Mabatex, the Chief Executive Officer of which at the time was Behgjet Paccoli, from various offshore-based subcontractors for the 'renovation work taking place on of parts of the Kremlin'. Then, the final 'surprise': the South African company itself disappeared without repaying the loan. Hence, the model of crminalism using offshore companies devised and applied for years by the CPSU Central Committee, continued to function perfectly. Moreover the method of making funds 'vanish' - causing the relevant company to go bankrupt - is a standard and fool-proof criminalist-intelligence modus operandi,

THE STATE OBLIGATIONS DEBT FIASCO

According to the 'objective'-sounding Russian Audit Chamber, the Russian Finance Ministry's obligations towards the State Bank of the Russian Federation had risen by 156 times, compared with the amounts outstanding to the bank on 1st January 1993. One factor underlying this fantastic increase was that the issuance of state debt obligations - that is, those obligations known as GKO short-term state bonds - proliferated between 1993 and 1998.

However the GKO financial pyramid or Ponzi Game would have been impossible to invent had it not been for the officially sanctioned offshore company-based financial criminalist rip-off model outlined above. Western clients bought GKOs only if the Russian authorities guaranteed them with matching deposits at their foreign banks. The Western clients were what Lenin would have called 'Useful Idiots' - always very useful to the Revolutioa and idiotically stupid in naively imagining that the precautionary arrangements of the foreign bank deposits could be relied upon, or that the Leninist deceivers they were dealing with could ever be trusted. When Russia duly defaulted on its external debts in 1998, the funds in the precautionary deposit accounts disappeared.

In July 1993, the Russian Central Bank signed an agreement with FIMACO - the main shareholder in which was the Soviet-owned, Paris-based Eurobank, which was about 80% owned by the Russian Central Bank itself- concerning the transfer to FIMACO of financial assets for fiduciary management purposes. The assets in question represented Russia's official foreign exchange reserves (a proportion of them), Interior Ministry credits, and Russian Finance Ministry Securities.

Thanks to its exotic arrangements with the Jersey-based FIMACO (the operations of which were in practice conducted in Paris by Eurobank, albeit being booked through FIMACO), the Russian Central Bank found that it was able to secure substantial profits from the placement of state foreign exchange reserves on the foreign financial markets. FIMACO (managed by Eurobank) was now directed to convert those assets, first, into first class bank deposits within the European Union, and then into GKO-Federal loan bonds (OFZs). Thus in 1996, Eurobank, which had set up Fimaco, received from the Russian Central Bank a total of $855 million, which was employed to create back-up deposits at Eurobank, 'guaranteeing' the repayment of funds invested by Eurobank in Russian GKOs.

LAUNDERING TECHNIQUES IDENTICAL TO THOSE USED BY U.S. CRIMINAL INTELLIGENCE

According to the Russian Federation Prosecutor General's Office, amounts of $37.3 billion, DM9.98 billion, ¥379.9 billion, Ffr11.98 billion and £662.6 million of foreign exchange reserves that belonged to the Russian state were steadily 'transferred' over a five-year period. By the way, 'transfers' is a Soviet weasel word widely used in this underworld to denote scams, transactions, swaps, exchanges, deals and all categories of exotic financial and commodity transactions, without the need for specifics.

FIMACO and Eurobank both held between them a majority holding in the AKB Evrofinance joint-stock commercial bank (Moscow), evidently one of the leading 'players' (i.e. institutional gamblers) on the domestic futures market, accounting for between 10% and 15% of the total volume of trades on the Moscow Interbank Currency Exchange, a mechanism that was ideal for money-laundering on a grand scale. Accordingly, a perception in certain Moscow quarters, and in certain international financial circles, that FIMACO was employed to pump money into the Russian Central Bank's own win-win GKO pyramid Ponzi scheme, plus cream-offs, is quite plausible.

INTERACTION WITH U.S. SERIAL INTELLIGENCE CRIMINALISTS

However, other scenarios can easily be imagined - including collaboration with ongoing US 'Financial Warfare' mopping-up operations. Special mention should also be made of the apparently co-related 'French connection' to the 1998 Moscow meltdown. The US hedge fund, High-Risk Opportunities Hub Fund, filed a lawsuit claiming $1.0 billion against the big French banks, Credit Lyonnais and Societe Generale, charging them with failing to honour their obligations in respect of forward foreign exchange contracts on the Russian foreign exchange market. One could consider this as providing indirect evidence of participation of French banks - in addition to the Paris-based Soviet Eurobank and Evrofinance - on the GKO market.

Evidently, by May 1998, GKOs accounted for as much as 50% of the portfolio held by High-Risk Opportunities Hub Fund. Now consider these facts, concerning Soviet/Russian equivalents of US Title 18, Section 6 intelligence corporations authorised by Reagan's Executive Order 12333.

The following Russian criminalist-intelligence companies involved in the export of Russian raw materials (at below world market prices: see above) 'had' (may still have) accounts at Swiss affiliates of the French banks, Indosuez[2] and Credit Agricole:

- Balcar International Inc., and VAEKO Europe Ltd. (implicated in oil transactions of Balcar Trading a company of considerable notoriety in Russia).
- CROCO Company, of Panama, involved in the misappropriation of receipts from export operations of Kimineft, under the Komilux Finance project.
- Norwood Properties Inc., involved in petroleum shipments to Russian space launch centres.
- Andava and Forus (the Aeroflot affair).
- Kazakhstan: Altay Inc., Orel Capital Ltd., Berkut Holding Ltd., and other companies linked to President Nursultan Nazarbayev of Kazakhstan, a Moscow (Leninist) stooge.

The following very dubious Soviet/Russian intelligence corporations involved in the exportation of Russian raw materials (at well below world market prices: see above) 'had' (may still have) accounts at the Swiss affiliate of Paribas:

- Vitol SA, Geneva, Chechen oil exports.
- Danton Trading, Dublin, Ireland: Purchase of grain in Kazakhstan by way of barter payments towards Russian oil shipments.
- Itera International Energy, Georgia.
- Energo Handels AG, Zug (a special 'inner' tax haven), Switzerland: The diversion of receipts from the exportation of Russian gas outside Russia.
- Firms controlled by the Israeli-Russian citizen, Arkady Gaidamak: The shipment of weaponry to Angola in exchange for oil, in fulfilment of World Revolution strategic tasks.

These details, of course, reflect just the tip of a colossal iceberg of ongoing covert Soviet offshore company operations using Western banks - just like the activities of the American intelligence Title 18, Section 6 firms. In other words, elements of the deeply criminalised intelligence services of the covert Soviet Union and of the United States use the same basic criminalist methodology, and are 'in bed together'. As the 'takedown' of Leo Emil Wanta demonstrated, there is therefore no place for uncorrupt intelligence operatives in this milieu. No doubt it is routinely rationalised in US intelligence circles that Western intelligence has had no choice but to 'get down in the gutter' with the proficient and experienced Soviet offshore criminalists, on the pretext that this is the only way the West can keep 'up to speed' with what the Soviets are doing to disrupt the capitalist system.

This would, indeed, be a comforting thought - if it provided the sole rationale for this corrosive activity. But it doesn't. At least since the promulgation of President Ronald Reagan's Executive Order 12333, certain of the most powerful US intelligence-linked cadres, groups and operatives have succumbed to the obvious temptation to help themselves to vast accruals of funds, just like their Soviet counterparts.

Only the Americans concerned have been doing this on a far larger scale than the Soviets. That's one of the factors that is so alarming. According to several sources, the late veteran US presswoman Sarah McLendon was told by former President George Bush Sr., whom she interviewed in 1992:

'If the public were to find out what we have done, they would chase us down the streets and lynch us'[3]. Another version of this has George Bush Sr saying that 'if the American people were to find out what we've done, they would string us all up from lamp posts'. That in turn gave rise to this Author's quip that we might all do worse than buy shares in street furniture manufacturers. ■

Notes:

1. The US and Western perception that 'we won the Cold War' is completely false. With the benefit of the findings of our recent research, it is clear that this arrogant attitude was adopted by the United States and the United Kingdom, especially, because these two financial powers (the largest in the world) believed that what they perceived to be their 'successful' 'Financial Warfare' operations against the Soviet Union, brought the Soviet Union and its empire to its knees. Documentary evidence in reality shows that 'Financial Warfare' operations were being conducted against the USSR as early as 1988, and that they continued relentlessly to the end of 1991 - and that subsequently such US 'Black Operations' have continued, as though there had indeed never been any actual discontinuity and as though the covert USSR remains 'the enemy', which is actually the case. It should be observed that the United States and other predatory powers regard 'Financial Warfare' as just one element in a whole armoury of means of waging war: 'Financial Warfare' is officially considered unequivocally to be a standard method of conducting warfare - indeed, in many ways a more efficient means than the methods normally representative of modern warfare techniques. Equipped with this mentality, the United States and other Western financial powers (especially the United Kingdom) jumped to the conclusion that the successful 'takedowns' of the Soviet rouble, the Soviet gold reserves, and of other crucial Soviet resources, were directly responsible for the 'collapse' of the USSR.

While this was true, the Western financial powers were creatively double-crossed by the expert Leninist Soviet strategists, who nevertheless collaborated extensively (and continue to collaborate, as do their Chinese Communist counterparts), with Western 'Financial Warfare' intelligence operatives, by accepting their bribes, undertaking transactions with them, and entering willingly and extensively into operations, in which they had for decades been past-masters, knowing every variant of underworld scams invented by reprobate mankind.

Being somewhat unversed in Leninist thinking, the Americans may have failed to realise that the Soviets were in fact just 'going along' with their (US) 'Financial Warfare' projects, as they assisted and accelerated the long-prepared and deliberate pursuit of Moscow's 'collapsible Communism' strategy. It is virtually impossible to assist some American intelligence specialists to understand that they were duped, because they have been so convinced of their own intelligence superiority for so long, that they cannot bring themselves to recognise that they were outsmarted. In other words, they fell victim to the classic trap identified by the ancient Chinese strategist, Sun-Tzu, explained in his treatise The Art of War': 'Make your enemy arrogant'. What is more, US intelligence fell into this trap, notwithstanding the fact that, as in the Soviet Bloc's armed forces, and in the fake 'post'-Soviet military, US intelligence operatives are required to study The Art of War'. Obviously, some of them failed to understood or applied what they were required to read.

2. Indosuez London was a correspondent bank working with Status-Credit Bank Moscow on transactions for a Status-Credit Bank's client which was a Title 18, Section 6 US Government intelligence corporation.

3. Another extraordinary admission - this time by President George W. Bush Jr. - appears in the President's autobiography, entitled 'A Charge to Keep' [William Morrow and Company, New York, 2000], page 47. It reads as follows: 'My senior year [at Yale University] I joined Skull and Bones, a secret society, so secret I can't say anything more, ft was a chance to make fourteen new friends'.

- This admission reminds us, of course, that the President followed his father (year of 1968) as a member of this occult, acquisitive and disgusting, German-originating, Rose Croix-linked network, membership of which is incompatible with the Christianity that President George W. Bush professes. We add this point here to illustrate the curious habit that the Bushes seem to have of suddenly admitting things that, in more sober moments, they would not acknowledge. This habit appears to represent some kind of psychological response to the strain of keeping dark secrets all one's life, which these Illuminati, by their own choice - and because they lack the strength to extricate themselves from the horrors of their existence - have to endure. ■

U.S. CRIMINALISM EXPOSED

U.S. 'PRIVATISED' INTELLIGENCE CRIMINALISM REVEALED IN COURT DOCUMENTS

On 5th September 2002, the Colorado US District Judge entered a judgment for $58,394,603, with a post-judgment interest of 1.8% from the date of judgment, against a Defendant calling himself Paul K. Bryan who, the judgment stated, conspired with unknown US Government officials to misappropriate investors' funds and financial instruments, and to convert the services of transaction intermediaries, including Bryan's CIA subordinates. The Plaintiff, a Moscow-based 'enterprise', Vizantia-Exclusive Ltd, alleged that Mr Bryan had promoted himself as a 'Commitment Holder' for the US Government and 18 foreign governments, as a banker and supplier of refined gold to the US Treasury, and as a manager of $335 billion worth of private funds. This information is taken from the website of Parad Law Offices, PC, based in Skokie, Illinois [information gathered on 15th November 2003]. Heini Demmer, et al v. Paul K Bryan, Special Air Operations Group, Inc., et al.

Note: The following analysis contains absolutely shocking, fully documented intelligence.

Via this case, which was adjudicated in the context of RICO (The Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organization Act, 18. U.S.,C. Sec. 1961, et sea.), it emerged that Paul K. Bryan (alternatively known as Lyle Edward Goeringer) 'was' the Director of Operations at the Central Intelligence Agency - one of the highest and most hands-on positions in the organisation. Attempts have been made to intimidate observers who have sought to draw attention to this case, with one 'whistleblower' recently receiving a direct death threat in the event that any further coverage of this material were to surface. However the outline details, in sanitised form, are available on the lawyer's website, and the text of the 'Second Amended Complaint' filed by the lawyer on behalf of Vizantia-Exclusive Ltd, has both been posted on the Internet and is available for inspection under case Number 00-71800 at a Court in another state - the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan, Southern Division. The lawyer's website report states: 'The seven-day Michigan Federal jury trial (which ended on 15th May 2002) resulted in the award of $8,100,000 to the Plaintiff. The verdict amount is 27 times the Plaintiff's $300,000, which was stolen by Bryan's racketeering enterprise'. The suit alleged that CIA operatives defrauded investors in worldwide racketeering schemes under a pretext of investment in secret, high-yielding trading programs'. Vizantia-Exclusive, Ltd. v. Kristar, Inc., Eyeland Traders, Ltd, et al.

'Vizantia-Exclusive was a Russian import/export gold mine and real estate development company which claimed to be a growing company. It invested $300,000 in a scheme promoted by Defendants Christenson and Bryan who claimed to have access to a secret, high-yield medium-term note-trading program. Defendants were able to convince the Plaintiff of their alleged high-level CIA positions by revealing to the Plaintiff its own background secrets, that only a few (Russian) Government officials would have known. [In other words, Vizantia-Exclusive was itself a Russian criminalist-intelligence corporation, engaged, like its criminalist US counterparts, in shady deals worldwide]. The Defendant Bryan allegedly convinced other victims of his company, Special Air Operations Group, of their affiliation with the US Government. Bryan misappropriated $2,000,000 (which resulted in the $58,394,604 judgment rendered by the Colorado Federal Court) from an Austrian investor, $3,124,000 from an Arizona company, financial instruments such as North Korea's Foreign Trade Bank Guarantees (valued at $4,645 billion), Bulgarian Bills of Exchange (about $108 billion) and so on Defendant Bryan produced a copy of correspondence and a Contract for the Sale of 320 trillion Iranian Rials (about $106 billion) to him, stipulated that he received about $6,000,000 in cash and admitted that he paid no income taxes from 1980 to the present'.

Vizantia-Exclusive [the Soviet-Russian criminalist-intelligence corporation] alleged violations of the RICO Act, fraud and conspiracy. It claimed that the company collapsed following the $300,000 loss because of its contracts and expected income from the Defendants' scheme; [and] it asked the jury for tens of millions of dollars because of the shocking and sensitive nature of the claims'. [Sic: In other words, the Soviet-Russian intelligence-criminal company represented to the jury that it was 'shocked' by the claims (that its secrets were revealed to it by the Defendants), and the jury 'boughf this fairytale, no doubt appalled by the detailed information concerning CIA 'Financial Warfare' operations and provocations worldwide, revealed in the Courtroom].

The lawyer's website posting concluded as follows: 'Defendants admitted that they took the money. Bryan argued that the scheme was orchestrated by Christenson and that the portion of Plaintiff's money that Bryan received, $200,000, was payment to him from Christenson for bringing investment programs to Christenson for his investors. Christenson claimed Bryan was to blame'. In other words the two main US CIA operatives just blamed each other.

THE SECOND AMENDED COMPLAINT

The substantive information contained in this Court-filed document [Case Number 00-71800] filed for hearing before Judge Bernard A. Friedman in the Michigan Federal Court provides an eye-opening glimpse into the nature of the provocative, open-ended and relentless 'Financial Warfare' operations conducted internationally by American and other intelligence communities. Informed observers say that this kind of activity is directed 'only against enemies' of the United States. It can only be 'justified', if at all, on the cynical basis of the familiar pretext - namely, that other countries' criminalised intelligence services are also behaving in an equally neinous and irresponsible manner against sovereign governments and countries they consider to be enemies, including the United States.

But even if such a pretext were to be capable of withstanding detailed scrutiny, the kind of nefarious behaviour described in the brief summaries that follow, must invariably exacerbate underlying tensions between national governments, while negating continuing diplomatic attempts to cement relations between the affected countries. In the present case, we have an extraordinary example of a US Court case throwing light upon dark activities involving US and ongoing covert Soviet intelligence.

THE DEFENDANTS

Vizanna-Exclusive Ltd, a Russian company with its office in Moscow, sued the following parties:

- Kristar Inc, Michigan; Eyeland Traders Ltd, foreign; Special Air Operations, Inc., Colorado; David B Christenson, individually and as President of Eyeland Traders Ltd [note the cynical Illuminati use of the word 'Eye' in this title, for the All-Seeing Eye of Set] and Kristar, Inc., and Financial Director of Special Air Operations Group, Inc.; Paul K Bryan, individually, and as President and CEO of Eyeland Traders, Ltd and Special Air Operations Group, Inc.; and Gordon Neil Freese, individually and as CFO of Eyeland Traders, Ltd., and Special Air Operations Group, Inc.

In the Complaint, Paul K Bryan was identified as Lyle Edward Goeringer, associated with Rapid Air Emergency Response, Inc [called REAR], a defunct Colorado Corporation, as well as with Special Air Operations Group (also a defunct Colorado Corporation), called SOAG; Eyeland Traders, Ltd, an offshore company registered in Antigua, the West Indies [ETL]; Bryan Bank International, an offshore bank, also registered in Antigua, an important British Overseas Territory; and a Texas sole proprietorship, Bryan Group International. He resided in Dallas, Texas [the home State of the Bush Family].

The Second Amended Complaint alleged that 'defendant ETL under the Directorship of Bryan, became a Commitment Holder for 18 Governments, purchaser of gold for the US Treasury, and a manager of $160 to $211 billion of private funds, according to Exhibit A filed with the Complaint, an Eyeland Traders summary dated 15th October 1997.

Point 9 under the heading 'Parties' in the Complaint, reads as follows (the phrase 'who personally knows three US Presidents' being almost identical to a phrase used on behalf of Leo E. Wanta in papers made available to observers in the context of his own complaints against the US Government):

'9. Defendants Bryan, the CIA Director of Operations who personally knows three US Presidents, and his subordinate Christenson, worked for the CIA and the Presidential Committee (comprising past US Presidents and Government officials) at all times pertinent hereto'.

This sentence contains some extremely important information, namely:

(1). Confirmation of the existence of the Presidential Committee, which performs the same functions as the Leninist 'Security Council' or the 'Presiden'ts Council' - supragovernmental entities operating above the official structures of all Soviet-style Communist/Leninist Governments.

(2). Confirmation of the ongoing character of such US intelligence operations, of which former Presidents will necessarily have detailed working knowledge.

(3). Confirmation that intelligence (and therefore criminalist financial) operations occupy prominence, if not hegemony, over Government preoccupations at the Presidential level (an exact match with the pattern prevailing in Moscow).

The Complaint also noted that Kristar, Inc, is a 'defunct Michigan corporation', once controlled by David B Christenson, of Dexter, Michigan; and that Freese (Gordon Neil) had been associated with First Berkeley Capital Corporation (a Texas firm) and with Consolidated Trade and Commerce Ltd, registered in Panama City. It stated that 'Unknown US Government officials [who were] associated with Bryan's enterprise promoted him, put him in charge of global financial operations, confirmed Mr Bryan's affiliation with the CIA in response to background inquiries [sic], blocked victims' complaints about Bryan's illegal actions, concealed his felony convictions and psychiatric records, shared the profits with him, and otherwise conspired with Bryan's enterprise in executing its fraudulent racketeering schemes by providing it with logistical, technical, financial, legal, personal, official and geopolitical support'. Which is a 'tactful' way of confirming that the CIA was (is) engaged in global criminal operations [as confirmed in this Author's publications].

SUMMARY OF GLOBAL BLACK OPERATIONS

The Michigan Federal Court Complaint contained the following allegations against Bryan, the CIA Director of Operations, et al, all of which were of course facilitated by the 'privatisation' provisions of Executive Order 12333 [see page 20 of the present work for details]:

1. Fiduciary and common fraud:

Representing to Vizantia-Exclusive Ltd that they were in a position to generate colossal returns on funds, persuading them around 26th September 1996 to sign a one-year 'Agreement for Asset Management Program'. Accordingly, Vizantia SWIFT wired $300,000 into ETL's account with European Union Bank*, St John's Antigua, which had been opened on 17th September 1996. Bryan received the money and 'spent it as he deemed fit'. The defendants then made oral and written representations to Vizantia-Exclusive Ltd, that its funds were leveraged and profitably employed in Bryan's managed transactions involving:

- The repatriation of 1928-1934 Series US Federal Reserve Notes from Southeast Asia.
- The sale of 320,000,000,000,000 Iranian Rials at the rate of 4,200 IRR per US$1.0 held in Bryan's account with Bangkok Bank, Thailand, pursuant to a 50/50 splitting agreement signed by Bryan with the Thai Royal Family.
- R$50,000,000,000 held in Banco do Brazil, Sao Paolo exchanged for USD in Bank One, TX.
- Redemption of 212 million 1982/88 Series Argentine pesos for $180,200,000.

However the Soviet/Russian corporation 'could not verify the veracity of the Defendant's reports, because the Defendants stated that the Government-level transactions and high-yield programs were shrouded in secrecy, and no public records would be available to Plaintiff for confirmation thereof (an absolutely accurate statement).

The Michigan Complaint added that the Plaintiff misrepresented that Vizantia would receive funds after one year as stated in the agreement, lied that banking statements would be provided, induced Vizantia to surrender funds for exclusive control and use by them, failed to set up a trust account for Vizantia, converted the Plaintiff's funds for their own purposes, and deliberately defrauded them. In other words, the CIA ripped off a KGB entity.

2. Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organization Act accusations and death threats:

- Victims of fraud schemes concocted by the defendants were 'intimidated by death threats and invoking their CIA-based authority' - preventing enquiries 'as to actual transactions by shrouding them in secrecy, hurting the inquirers and forcing the victims to abandon their claim to commission or service compensation, or investment in the high-yielding trading programs'. Count 17 asserts as follows, confirming the 100% accuracy of our analysis that the CIA, exactly like the KGB, is a partly criminalised organisation using 'privatised' companies to conduct financial scams and provocations on a global scale:
- The enterprise ringleader. Defendant Bryan, the Director of Operations of the CIA reporting to the CIA Director, set up a series of teams seeking investment [sic] opportunities worldwide and working on a commission basis or pursuant to their CIA assignments'. This is the most important piece of information that the Author has been able to extract from US Court records, indicating that the Central Intelligence Agency wages Financial Warfare against targets all over the world, probably continuously.
- The scamming of North Korea: Messrs Bryan and Christenson boasted of and promised extremely high-yield returns on investments in their secret US Government programs to Dr Helmut Otto Schramm, CEO of the humanitarian organization 'UNIMO GmbH, of Dresden, (east) Germany, who acted as an intermediary for the North Korean Government's humanitarian programs backed by the (North Korean Government's) Bank Guarantees'. Here, Schramm, an East German intelligence (ongoing STASI?) officer [i.e., DVD] posing as a do-gooder, who somehow had contacts with opposite numbers in North Korea, acted as the CIA's cutout. The Count continues: 'Pursuant to... Agreements signed by Bryan, Schramm and North Korean Government officials turned over on January 24, 1996, the eight (8) original Bank Guarantees issued and honored by the Foreign Trade Bank of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (the DPRK) to Volkskas Bank, Johannesburg, South Africa, which gave a Safekeeping Receipt to Christenson (SOAG)'.

The eight Bank Guarantees, having a market value of $4,645,000,000 and the Safekeeping Receipt 'came under the exclusive control of Bryan for obtaining cash credit lines by pledging the Bank Guarantees as a collateral, using the funds in trading programs and otherwise profiting from these financial assets'. Interestingly, Christenson then fell out with Mr Bryan - as happens in this 'Thieves' World', which probably explains why this case was allowed to proceed, or 'slipped through the net'. Normally what happens is that the US Presidential Committee intervenes, exerts pressure on the judge concerned, and procures that the case is buried, with suitable payoffs as required. Alternatively, this 'falling out' was a feint, to induce paralysis in case of litigation. At all events, the Court document states that 'Christenson advised Schramm by fax that Bryan under false pretenses stole the Safekeeping Receipt and repeated the story given to Plaintiff that Christenson cannot help the victim because Bryan is responsible for the asset theft'.

- The scamming of Bulgaria: Messrs Bryan and Christenson 'made false promises of high-yield returns on investments in secret Government trading programs to the Bulgarian Government'. In response, the ELMAZ 24 Consortium, the hinder of an asset management scheme supposedly benefiting the Bulgarian Government, transferred by mail Bills of Exchange having a face value of $100 million to Christenson for deposit in an account for Bryan's firm SOAG with Colorado National Bank. 'Bryan received these financial instruments issued by the Slavyeny Bank, Sofia, Bulgaria, plus at least $30,000 extracted from the Bulgarians under false promises.... Bryan converted and never returned these Bills of Exchange and money to the Bulgarian company in spite of their requests'. The Bulgarian entity was of course likewise an intelligence-linked enterprise. Therefore, Bulgaria, supposedly 'no longer an enemy' under the terms of the Joint Declaration of 22 States signed with pomp and circumstance by the NATO and Warsaw Pact powers on 19th November 1990, was relieved of $100 million by US criminalist-intelligence operatives under the direction of the CIA Director of Operations [the American-german named Goeringer] - evidently six years after that accord was signed.
- The scamming of a French party: Bryan-SOAG 'asserting to be Commitment Holder, Buyer and Seller of precious metals, financial instruments and corporate debentures, entered into a Joint Venture Agreement with Jean-Louis Vidalo, of France, who relying on Bryan's false promises, gave Bryan his Power of Attorney to employ three Certificates of Deposit for $30 million as a collateral to obtain cash credit lines and subsequent investment in trading programs. Vidalo wire-transferred these CDs issued by the Novacredi Bank, Brazil, for Makarska s.a., a Uruguayan mining company, which deposited $30 million in that bank for a four-year period and signed its rights to the CDs to Vidalo. Bryan converted these financial instruments obtained under false promises through his associates and used the CDs for obtaining cash credit lines or otherwise for his own and his US Government co-conspirators' benefit. [But] Bryan never returned the CDs and paid nothing to the CD owner'.
- The scamming of Iran: Using intermediaries in Thailand, 'Bryan and Christenson with their US Government co-conspirators diverted three Iraqi ships from their course and stole 320 trillion Iranian Rials ($106 billion). 'The Iranian Rials initially stored at the US Navy base in Thailand were deposited into Bryan's SAOG account at Bangkok Bank, Thailand. The Defendant Bryan became the legal owner or the IRR currency, entered into a 50/50 profit-sharing contract with the Thailand Royal Family and similar contracts with the Government of Free Vietnam and China, and sold the IRR as his own' [1996]. The Iranian cash notes were embezzled/misappropriated.
- Prince Hadji of North Borneo: In March 1997, 'Bryan requested Prince Hadji of North Borneo to give his 16 Argentine Peso cash notes to Bryan under a false promise of 'sample evaluation' and payment within four days or the return of the notes, if the exchange was not consummated'. The face value of the 1982-88 series Argentine Notes was 12 million Argentine pesos. Despite the Prince's numerous requests for the Notes' return, they were misappropriated.

According to Bryan's ex-wife Ramona Lee Bryan, who, the document asserted, suffered 'a Bryan-attempted murder in 1980', 'Bryan told Ramona that his boss is George Tenet, the CIA Director'. The fact that Bryan/Goeringer was specifically identified in this Court document as the CIA's Director of Operations - arguably the most powerful and critical of all CIA posts, since this official directs the Agency's world-wide operations - and that he conducted transactions through the European Union Bank* [sic] based in the British Overseas Territory of Antigua is, finally, of exceptional importance and interest. US House of Representatives Banking and Financial Services Committee report described this bank, established in Antigua by Mikhail Khodorkovsky [KGB] as a 'KGB money-laundering operation with stolen funds that were passed through Khodorkovsky of Menatep Bank as a KGB-controlled front firm'. Khodorkovsky, a KGB operative and a minor Government Minister under President Gorbachev was, according to 'Pravda' [18th November 2003] acting all along on KGB instructions. In fact Menatep Bank, which he directed from 1992 to 1998, was the primary channel for the laundering of monies derived from multiple intelligence scams out of Russia, frequently via Citibank in New York, and which provided 'financial services' to KGB-controlled mafiya 'families' and to Bulgarian and Hungarian intelligence. Khodorkovsky was selected by GRU-President Putin to act as the 'example' he needed, to persuade the other KGB-GRU 'oligarchs' to disgorge stolen state assets.

ADDENDUM EIGHT: International Currency Review 29,3/4: March 2004

SOVIET CRIMINALISM: THE NOREX CASE

From the text of the incredible US Court case that follows in conclusion, the intricacies of a KGB-directed operation to seize Russian oil assets and to cream off vast profits into offshore accounts, are exposed. It focuses inter alia upon Simon (Semen) Kukes - an Academician of the Soviet Academy of (Leninist) Sciences, the reputed author of a sizeable number of technical papers on energy issues, who emigrated to the United States at the time of the 'changes', became a prominent US oil man having married an American, and soon, of course, acquired US citizenship - subsequently resurfacing in Russia as a key oil magnate, taking over responsibility for running YUKOS from the imprisoned KGB operative Mikhail Khodorkovsky. In press interviews, Mr Kukes naturally played down his role in the massive nexus of fraud described in this Complaint.

This case provides detailed intelligence on the Soviet dimension of the criminalist intelligence underworld and how it has been interacting with corrupt Western offshore-based Illuminati intelligence structures. It provides a case study on the modus operandi of New Underworld Order cadres.

Here we have a blow-by-blow account of the way oil assets are or have been acquired by controlled operatives in the 'former' Soviet Union. The veil is drawn away from ongoing Soviet criminalist methodology - complete with private armies of thugs who perform 'enforcement' services for their criminalised intelligence 'barons'. And we find that about the only difference between the 'former' USSR and the United States in this context, is that the US intelligence cadres are encumbered by the 'rule of law', which is of course non-existent in the 'former' USSR.

But this case leads us even deeper into the chaos of the New Underworld Order. For a close reading of this Complaint will reveal that it is not just Semen Kukes, of dubious repute, who suddenly 'became' an American citizen.

Other named Russians, resident in the United States, are known KGB operatives who have been performing 'oligarch' services for the covert continuing Soviet strategy collective. So what, exactly, is going on here? It appears that the determined, relentless Western offensive to capture foreign oil resources - whether directly, as in Iraq, or indirectly - has been penetrated. Here we nave arguably the most sophisticated pre-emptive operation that any intelligence community could have devised. Anticipating the global 'grabitisation' free-for-all which is pulling the whole world towards the jungle, the Soviets took steps ahead of the game to position selected KGB/GRU operatives on the ground in the West, from where they have appeared to collaborate closely with Western oil interests in plans to develop Soviet petroleum and gas resources.

But what the Moscow strategists had in mind diverged from the intentions of Western oil interests and their compliant intelligence services (mainly British and American oil interests, which are rampaging around the world in pursuit of 'grabitisation' opportunities and in close cooperation). By inserting their own controlled operatives into the Western energy structures engaged in acquiring practical, management or actual control over Soviet energy assets, the KGB/GRU have ensured that they remain 100% in the driving seat - while the West imagines that, on the contrary, it is in full control.

PLAINTIFF NOREX PETROLEUM ["NOREX"] COMPLAINS, AS FOLLOWS:

INTRODUCTION

1. The instant case concerns injuries to the business and property of Norex as a result of a massive racketeering and money-laundering scheme beginning in the 1990's operated and directed by American citizens, residents and companies, including Access Industries, Inc., Renova, Inc., Leonard Blavatnik, and Victor Vekselberg in conspiracy with American citizens Simon Kukes, Joseph Bakaleynik, and Elliot Spitz of the "Alfa Group Consortium" (the "Illegal Scheme") to take over a substantial portion of the Russian oil industry through their control and use of the Tyumen Oil Company and its subsidiaries and affiliates ("TNK") based on an overall criminal structure which is set forth In Exhibit A. [Figure 99, page 711].

2. The Illegal Scheme included the illegal takeover (the "The Illegal Takeover") of Yugraneft, another Russian oil company of which Norex was majority shareholder, which was effected by TNK in the "old fashioned way" - through fraudulent representation, sheer physical force of armed thugs, and corruption of the local government, legal system and law enforcement, which refused to intervene and protect Norex's rights.

3. Immediately following the Illegal Takeover of Yugraneft, TNK seized its assets, including over $40 million which were held as dollar and rouble cash deposits and savings certificates and in excess of $500 million worth of oil production facilities, reserves, and receivables due from companies controlled by TNK.

4. The Illegal Scheme has been masterminded, operated and directed by Access Renova, Blavatnik, Vekselberg, Kukes, and Bakaleynik, through offices in New York City, and Spitz, through offices in London and New York, and via mail and wire communications originating from and sent to the United States, and travel between foreign jurisdictions and the United States.

5. In furtherance of the Illegal Scheme, Blavatnik, Vekselberg, Kukes, Bakaleynik, and Spitz, through their allies and companies which they control, directly or indirectly, in conspiracy with Alfa Group, committed or attempted to commit numerous criminal acts, including, but not limited to, bribery, extortion, mail and wire fraud, money-laundering, illegal transactions in monetary instruments, violation of the Travel Act, and tax fraud in furtherance of the Illegal Scheme.

6. The Illegal Scheme included, upon information and belief, bribes paid to Russian Government officials in order to enable Access/Renova and Alfa to take and maintain control of TNK during its privatization in 1997 and 1999, and bribes in order to enable TNK to take and maintain control of Yugraneft.

7. The Illegal Scheme included corruption related to the insolvency and eventual bankruptcy and reorganization of Nizhnevartovsk Nefte Gaz ("NNG"), corruption of Russian bankruptcy proceedings of Kondpetroleum and Chemogorneft, which were subsidiaries of the Russian oil company, Sidanco, and legal proceedings related to Yugraneft.

8. During these corrupted bankruptcies, certain Defendants arranged for the sale of oil to TNK and export of oil to Alfa-owned "Crown Group" at well below market prices and then effected rigged auctions of the assets of the bankrupt companies in order to obtain their petroleum reserves, to the detriment of Sidanco and its shareholders, including BP-Amoco and the Harvard University Endowment Fund; as well as Norex, a creditor of both Chernogorneft and Nizhnevartovsk Nefte Gaz.

9. These proceedings were so brazenly corrupted that Madeleine Albright, Secretary of State during the Administration of President Clinton, instructed the United States Export-Import Bank in 2000 not to guarantee loans for the sale of American manufactured equipment to TNK - a restriction only rescinded when TNK agreed to return some of the illegally stripped assets to the beneficial ownership of Sidanco.

10. In addition, in 2001, as reported by The Financial Times, the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development, placed the Alfa Group-owned Alfa Bank* on its "black list" on the basis of its business practices, making it no longer eligible for loans. [*This KGB bank is now the height of respectability. Its 'head of Strategy' in Moscow is a Mr Chris Weafer].

11. The Illegal Scheme included the agreed-upon diversion of profits from TNK to some Defendants, in part through the issuance of invoices for fabricated services by secretly related offshore shell companies, in order to fraudulently avoid sharing such profits with TNK's other shareholders, including the Russian Government and American interests, and in violation of Russian and English tax law.

12. The various offshore shell companies which were secretly controlled by some Defendants, and operated in part by Astons Corporate Management, and received such funds, include LT Enterprise Limited, Sandwell Enterprises Limited, and Eastmount Properties Limited.

13. Tens of millions of dollars were wired through banks in the United States from the Crown Group to these offshore shell companies to pay invoices for fabricated services in order to create a slush fund, as evidenced by the invoices from Isle of Man based Sandwell and Bahamas based LT Enterprises attached as Exhibit B [not shown here].

14. These funds were then either kicked back to certain Defendants or, upon information and belief, used to bribe Russian Government officials.

15. The Illegal Scheme included a massive tax fraud by which monies laundered through the slush funds were paid to the offshore accounts, i.e. "o/s" of American and UK citizens, who concealed such payments from taxation in violation of American and English tax law, as evidenced by the email attached hereto as Exhibit C. [Revealing document was appended].

16. In addition, some Defendants arranged a scheme by which the Crown Group submitted false invoices to TNK in order to further divert its profits to the Crown Group and then to offshore slush fund companies, as evidenced by the email attached hereto.

17. Russian President Vladimir Putin stated in his 2001 annual address that "We practically are standing before a dangerous boundary, when a judge or other law enforcer can at will choose a rule, which seems to him the most appropriate. As a result, along with the 'shadow economy' we already have a kind of 'a shadow justice' taking shape".

18. President Putin also noted in 2001 that while corruption is the "misfortune of many countries... in Russia, this has reached such a magnitude that the government has no right to ignore it". [In other words, the monster created by the KGB itself, is out of control, as is the CIA in the United States].

19. As a result of the Illegal Scheme and Illegal Takeover, Norex has lost its interest in Yugraneft, which has an estimated value in excess of $500 million.

20. As compensation for its loss, Norex seeks compensatory and treble damages in excess of $1.5 billion for violation of RICO, 18 U.S.C. §1961 et seq., costs, and attorneys' fees.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

21. Jurisdiction lies in this Court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1331 and 1337(a), 18 U.S.C. §1964(c) because this case arises under the laws of the United States, based on claims under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act ("RICO"), 18 U.S.C §1961 et sec..

22. Venue is proper in this District under 18 U.S.C. §1965 and 28 U.S.C §1391 because events and transactions have taken place in this District.

STATEMENT OF PATTERN OF RACKETEERING ACTIVITIES

23. At relevant times from 1997 to date, Defendants conspired with one another to defraud Norex and others and to obtain the property of Norex and others through illegal conduct including extortion, bribery and threatened acts of violence.

24. The complex scheme to defraud and racketeering activities through which the Defendants succeeded in taking illegally the property of Norex and others, consisted of an intricate pattern of individual transactions and group transactions.

25. In carrying out the scheme to defraud Norex and other victims, Defendants engaged, inter alia, in conduct in violation of criminal statutes including mail and wire fraud, 18 U.S.C. §1341 and §1343; interference with commerce by threats and violence, 18 U.S.C. §1951; interstate and foreign travel in aid of racketeering enterprises, 18 U.S.C §1952; laundering of monetary instruments, 18 U.S.C §1956; and money-laundering, 18 U.S.C. §1957.

26. The activities of the Defendants in the formation and execution of the scheme and artifice to defraud, acts of extortion, bribery and threatened violence, caused and con-tinue to cause pervasive and substantial harm to persons engaged in interstate and for-eign commerce, including harm to persons and businesses engaged in the petroleum industry worldwide, including the loss in value of the holdings of numerous Amer-icans who have invested in various companiesadversely affected by Defendants, including J.I.V., LLC, the owner of Norex, BP-Amoco and its American shareholders, the American shareholders of OAO Chernogorneft and numerous American companies which will not do business in Russia because of the conduct of the Defendants.

27. Further, some Defendants apparently corruptly influenced the courts and certain governmental bureaus of the Russian Federation, which, upon information and belief, were manipulated illegally through bribery to achieve the Defendants' ends.

28. During the relevant times, and in furtherance of and for the purpose of executing the scheme and artifice to defraud, Defendants on numerous occasions used and caused to be used interstate and foreign wire facilities as a means to obtain money and property by means of false pretenses, constituting the offense of wire fraud, in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1343.

29. During the relevant times, and in furtherance of and for the purpose of executing the scheme and artifice to defraud, Defendants conspired to, attempted to or did obstruct, delay or affect commerce by extortion as defined in, and in violation, of 18 U.S.C. §1951 (b)(1) and(2).

30. During the relevant times, and in furtherance of and for the purpose of executing the scheme and artifice to defraud, Defendants travelled in interstate and foreign commerce and used the mail, and caused others to do so, with the intent to commit acts of violence in furtherance of unlawful activity and to promote, manage, establish, carry on and facilitate the promotion, management, establishment and carrying on of unlawful activity, in violation of 18 U.S.C §1952.

31. During the relevant times, Defendants knowingly and intentionally transported, transmitted and transferred, and attempted to do so, monetary instruments and funds from inside the United States to or through a place outside the United States, and to a place in the United States from or through a place outside the United States, with the intent to promote the carrying on of specified unlawful activity, in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1956.

38. Defendant Victor Vekselberg ("Vekselberg") is a permanent resident of the United States and owns and controls, directly or indirectly, Renova.

39. Access and Renova ("Access/Renova") own and control, directly or indirectly, approximately 50% of the Tyumen Oil Company.

THE ALFA-CROWN DEFENDANTS

40. Defendant Alfa Group Consortium ("Alfa Group") is an unincorporated association of various affiliated companies set forth below.

41. The Alfa Group consists of Crown Finance Foundation; CTF Holdings Ltd.; Alfa Finance Holdings, SA; Crown Luxembourg Holdings SA; OAO Alfa Bank; Alfa Capital Markets (USA), Inc.; Crown Commodities Ltd.; Crown Trade and Finance Limited; Crown Resources, AG; Crown Resources (USA), Inc.; OOO Alfa-Eco*; and various other related companies whose identities are yet to be determined.

*OOO stands for a limited liability company in Russian.

42. Defendant Crown Finance Foundation ("CFF") is a "foundation" (similar to a business trust) organized under the laws of Liechtenstein, a country known for its bank secrecy law.

43. Upon information and belief, the beneficial owners of CFF are Russian oligarch Mikhail Fridman ("Fridman"), Alexey Kuzmichev ("Kuzmichev"), and German Khan ("Khan").

44. Defendant CTF Holdings Ltd. ("CTF Holdings") is a company organized under the laws of Gibraltar.

45. CTF Holdings is owned and controlled by CFF.

46. Defendant Alfa Finance Holdings, SA ("Alfa Finance") is a company organized under the laws of Luxembourg and shall include any predecessor company.

47. Alfa Finance is owned and controlled by CTF Holdings.

48. Alfa Finance is the holding company which owns the banking, financial and industrial divisions of the Alfa Group.

49. Defendant Crown Luxembourg Holdings, S.A. ("Crown Luxembourg") is a company organized under the laws of Luxembourg and shall include any predecessor company.

50. Crown Luxembourg is owned and controlled, directly or indirectly by CTF Holdings.

51. Crown Luxembourg is the holding company owning the trading division of Alfa Group.

The Alfa Banking and Financial Division

52. The banking and financial division of the Alfa Group consists of Alfa Bank, Alfa Capital Markets (USA), Inc. and other companies.

53. OAO Alfa Bank  ("Alfa Bank") is a [KGB - Ed.] bank organized under the laws of the Russian Federation and a member of the Alfa Group. "OAO" stands for Open Stock Company, a corporate format that provides for the company to have more than 50 shareholders.

54. Alfa Capital Markets (USA), Inc. ("Alfa Capital Markets") is a corporation organized under the laws of the United States, maintains an office in New York City, and is a member of the Alfa Group.

55. Upon information and belief, Alfa Capital Markets is used to structure the laundering of the proceeds of the Slush Fund for investment in the United States, such as the recent acquisition of Golden Telecom, Inc., a publicly held American company, by the Alfa Group [i.e., the KGB had bought a US telecommunications/ technology firm].

56. Alfa Bank and Alfa Capital Markets are owned and controlled, directly or indirectly, by Alfa Finance.

The Crown Trading Division

57. The commodities trading division consists of the "Crown Group" of companies which is owned and controlled, directly or indirectly, by Crown Luxembourg.

58. Crown Commodities Ltd.. ("Crown Commodities") is a company organized under the laws of England and Wales and a member of the Crown Group.

59. Crown Trade and Finance Limited ("CTF Ltd.") is a company organized under the laws of Gibraltar and a member of the Crown Group.

60. Crown Resources AG ("Crown AG") is a company organized under the laws of Switzerland and a member of the Crown Group.

61. Crown Resources (USA) Inc. ("Crown Resources") is a corporation organized under the laws of the United States and maintains a place of business in New York City and a member of the Crown Group.

62. The Crown Group trades oil and other commodities.

63. Defendant Elliot Spitz ("Spitz") is a citizen of the United States who managed and operated the Crown Group.

64. OOO Alfa-Eco ("Alfa-Eco") is a company organized under the laws of the Russian Federation which was used by the Alfa Group for trading purposes, and is a member of the Alfa Group.

The Industrial Division

65. The Industrial Division consists of various companies which own and control, directly or indirectly, industrial companies.

66. Alfa Finance owns and controls, directly or indirectly, approximately fifty percent of the Tyumen Oil Company.

THE TNK DEFENDANTS

67. Defendant OAO Tyumen Oil Company ("TNK") is a company organized under the laws of the Russian Federation and does business in the United States.

68. Defendant Simon Kukes ("Kukes") is a citizen of the United States and is the President and Chief Executive Officer of TNK.

69. Defendant Joseph Bakaleynik ("Bakaleynik") is a citizen of the United States and is the First Vice President of TNK.

70. German Khan ("Khan") is the First Vice President and Executive Director of TNK.

71. Igor Nam ("Nam") is an officer of TNK.

72. Alexander Berman was an officer of an affiliate of TNK who was illegally instated as the General Director of Yugraneft as part of the seizure.

73. OAO TNK-Nyagan ("TNK-NG") is a company organized under the laws of the Russian Federation which is wholly owned by TNK and was used as TNK's vehicle in the corrupt bankruptcy of Kondpetroleum.

74. OAO TNK-Nizhnevartovsk ("TNK-NV") is a company organized under the laws of the Russian Federation which is managed and controlled by TNK and was used as TNK's vehicle to strip assets from Chernogorneft in the corrupt bankruptcy of Chernogorneft.

75. TNK is operated and managed by Americans [sic!] Simon Kukes and Joseph Bakaleynik and owned, directly or indirectly, approximately 50% by Access/Renova and approximately 50% by Alfa Groups.

76. During all relevant times, the Chairman of the Board of TNK was the Governor of the Tyumen Oblast, first Leonid Roketsky and then Sergey Sobyanin.

A Soviet Academician-operative who 'emigrated' to the United States in the early 1990s, married an American woman, became a top oil executive and then resurfaced in Russia in control of key 'US-managed' oil assets.

THE "SLUSH FUND" COMPANIES*

77. Defendant LT Enterprise Limited ("LT") is a company organized under the laws of The Bahamas and is controlled, directly or indirectly, by Spitz and Kuzmichev.

78. Defendant Sandwell Enterprises Limited ("Sandwell") is a company organized under the laws of the Isle of Man and is controlled, directly or indirectly, by Spitz and Kuzmichev.

79. Defendant Eastmount Properties Limited ("Eastmount") is a company organized under the laws of the Isle of Man and is controlled, directly or indirectly, by Spitz and Kuzmichev.

80. LT, Sandwell, and Eastmount (collectively, the "Slush Fund Companies") are some of the companies operated by the Alfa Group which submitted invoices for fabricated services to the Crown Group and in turn received over $100 million wired through banks in the United States during the period of the Illegal Scheme.

... Redhill Properties Limited, Wasdale Limited, Watford Limited, Beechville Trading Limited, and Banstead Enterprises Limited.

89. Astons Corporate Management created many of these companies for employees of Access/Renova and/or Crown so that they could open bank accounts at the National Westminster Bank located on the Isle of Man in order to receive secret salary and bonus payments which were concealed from taxation authorities in the United States, United Kingdom and Russia.

90. Astons, through its employees and officers, such as G. Caine, also sent invoices and statements of account for millions of dollars of fabricated services to Crown, as evidenced by Exhibit B.

91. Based on its involvement in creating and operating the Slush Fund Companies and their bank accounts, Astons knew that it was participating in the Illegal Scheme by directly effecting various illegal activities, including money-laundering and tax fraud, so that Access/Renova and the Alfa Group could effect the Illegal Scheme.

92. Each Defendant is a "person" within the meaning of 18 U.S.C. §1961(3) and 1964(c).

*Note: This was the phrase used in the Complaint itself. This information is in the public domain because it is the text of a legal Complaint, reflecting the obvious hazards of criminalism. The 'Dark Actors Playing Games' have a perennial problem living with exposures revealed in Court documents.

Figure 99: Detailed diagram of the Access/Alfa money-laundering scheme included with the Complaint filed by Norex Petroleum in the US Southern District Court of New York on 25th February 2002. This lawsuit not only throws light on certain precise mechanisms developed for laundering assets by Soviet criminal intelligence, but also describes how Yugraneft once an oil subsidiary of Norex, was stolen by means of fraud, physical violence and local corruption. Above all, it illustrates the criminalism in which the KGB-GRU, like the CIA, specialises. The case illustrates the point that intelligence criminalism, which operates beyond the rule of law (in the sewer) runs the constant risk of ending in recrimination and litigation, which is the one outcome that all parties seek to avoid, because dark secrets leak from the Courts into the public domain. Hence this exposure of Illuminati behaviour.

RUSSIAN VICTIMS OF THE ILLEGAL SCHEME

93. ZAO Yugraneft Corporation* ("Yugraneft") is a company organized under the laws of the Russian Federation, which was illegally seized using fraudulent documents and armed thugs as part of the Illegal Scheme, as detailed here. *"ZAO" stands for Closed Stock Company, which is authorized to have no more than 50 shareholders.

94. OAO Siberian Far Eastern Oil Co. ("Sidanco") is a company organized under the laws of the Russian Federation, which owned the majority interests of its subsidiaries, Kondpetroleum and Chernogorneft, and was harmed by the corrupt bankruptcies of these subsidiaries.

95. OAO Kondpetroleum ("Kondpetroleum") is a company organized under the laws of the Russian Federation, which was stripped of its assets as the result of a corrupt bankruptcy proceeding, which were part of the Illegal Scheme, as described herein.

96. OAO Chernogorneft ("Chernogorneft") is a company organized under the laws of the Russian Federation, which was stripped of its assets, including its shares in Yugraneft, as the result of a corrupt bankruptcy proceeding, which were part of the Illegal Scheme, as described herein.

97. OAO Nizhnevartovsk Nefte Gaz ("NNG") is a company organized under the laws of the Russian Federation, of which 38% was owned by TNK, and over which TNK obtained full control through corrupt proceedings, as described herein.

AMERICAN INTERESTS HARMED BY THE ILLEGAL SCHEME

98. Numerous American interests have been harmed by the Illegal Scheme, including those set forth below.

99. BP plc, formerly known as BP-Amoco ("BP-Amoco"), is a corporation with various subsidiaries and many shareholders in the United States.

100. BP-Amoco was a shareholder of Sidanco at all relevant times.

101. The Harvard University Endowment Fund ("Harvard") is an unincorporated fund owned by Harvard University.

102. Harvard was a shareholder in Kantupan Holdings Co. Ltd.. ("Kantupan"), an investment vehicle which, directly or indirectly, owned 40% of Sidanco, at all relevant times.

103. BP-Amoco and Harvard were harmed by the false bankruptcies of Kondpetroleum and Chernogorneft by which the assets of these companies were stripped as part of the Illegal Scheme, destroying the value of Sidanco's interests therein, as described herein.

104. Upon information and belief, citizens of the United States were shareholders of American Depository Receipts ("ADR's") of Chernogorneft (collectively, the "Chernogorneft American Investors"), which were managed by the Bank of New York in New York City.

105. The Chernogorneft American Investors were harmed by the corrupt Chernogorneft bankruptcy, the illegal diversion of profits from Chernogorneft to TNK and Crown Group and the Slush Fund Companies as part of the Illegal Scheme, as described herein.

106. Upon information and belief, citizens of the United States were shareholders of TNK subsidiaries (collectively, the "TNK American Investors").

107. The TNK American Investors were harmed by the illegal diversion of profits from TNK to the Crown Group and then to the Slush Fund Companies as part of the Illegal Scheme, as described herein.

BACKGROUND

108. Unlike countries with long developed free-market systems, the economic system that emerged in Russia following the dissolution of the Soviet Union in 1992 [sic! - Ed.) was largely unchecked by government laws or agency regulations.

109. As a result of privatization of the petroleum, banking, and other industries, there emerged a group of wealthy and politically influential individuals commonly known in Russia as "oligarchs". [These people are ALL KGB/GRU officers - Ed.].

110. These oligarchs often have direct connections with Russian organized criminal enterprises which they use to extort other businessmen and exert their influence over the Russian legal and bureaucratic mechanisms, which provide special favours to them.

111. In the absence of effective government regulation and law enforcement these oligarchs use their wealth to influence local regional and national officials, including judges, to issue decisions favorable to businesses operated or controlled by the oligarchs.

112. According to the Harvard University's Belfer Center for Science and International Affairs acting in cooperation with the Strengthening Democratic Institutions Project (SDI), "Russia's oligarchic groups exert considerable control over the country's economic policies, politics in general and the media: politics can be said to have been somewhat privatized during the nation's economic privatization".

113. On September 21,1999, Arnaud De Borchgrave, Director of the Global Organized Crime Project Center for Strategic and International Studies, gave sworn testimony before the United States House of Representatives Committee on Banking and Financial Aid Services on the status of economic crime within the Russian Federation.

114. De Borchgrave testified that according to research conducted by the Russian Organized Crime Taskforce, as published in the Russian Organized Crime Report, Russia's Court system is ineffective, does not consistently enforce established contract and commercial rights, has limited enforcement powers, and has become a de facto adjudicator for companies operated by economic criminals.

115. The report further points out that corruption pervades every level of Russia's bureaucracy and has infiltrated the Russian banking system and financial markets.

116. The report cautioned that "the lack of a formal legal infrastructure which is applied uniformly and publicly to all citizens, foreigners and companies operating in Russia, allows criminal groups to escape due process of the law and legitimate business and citizens to be victimized". [This is what is intended globally, come The New Underworld Order].

117. According to testimony before the Congress of the United States of America, the Russian Government's anti-corruption program has been unsuccessful due to a lack of resources and the fact that salaries of government officials are so near the poverty level, that it is virtually impossible to eliminate corruption at the local levels.

THE ILLEGAL SCHEME

118. As described below, Defendants engaged in an illegal scheme and artifice (the "Illegal Scheme") which is open-ended and which was intended to defraud Norex and other persons.

119. Defendants have conspired together and acted in concert to commit numerous acts of fraud, violence, and other illegal activity in furtherance of the Illegal Scheme.

120. The Illegal Scheme has been used to defraud multiple victims and poses a substantial societal harm, in particular by defrauding persons in the United States.

THE CORRUPT 1997 TNK PRIVATIZATION

121. After the collapse of the Soviet Union in 1992 [sic], the Russian Federation began to privatize the Russian oil industry.

122. In the industry, vertically integrated holding companies were established, each of which included a number of subsidiaries - oil production units, refineries, and marketing units.

123. In 1997, TNK was partially privatized, with a 40% controlling stake purchased by Access/Ren-ova and the Alfa Group [i.e., by the KGB/GRU - Ed.], through joint venture investment vehicle known as ZAO Novy Holding.

124. The 1997 privatization of TNK was corrupt and scandalous, even by Russian standards.

125. Rather than providing for the sale of 40% of TNK's shares in a fair auction, the State Property Committee, headed by Alfred Koch ("Koch"), required any bidder to also own a certain refining unit, a controlling share of a company developing submersible oil pumps, and certain patents.

126. Not surprisingly, the companies which owned the refining unit, the controlling share of the submersible oil pump company, and certain patents were controlled by Access/Renova and Alfa Group.

127. A successful bidder was then required to purchase these three assets at a price in excess of $90 million, which was far in excess of their worth, and, further assume the risk that Access/Renova and Alfa, might resist such a sale.

128. In essence, this rigged structure guaranteed that Access/Renova and Alfa would be the winner of the auction at the minimum bid - which included a requirement to invest certain funds in TNK -which was set hundreds of millions of dollars below the true value of such an interest in TNK.

ROUTINE USE OF CRIMINAL BEHAVIOUR AT INTERGOVERNMENTAL LEVEL

Detailed information about criminalist intelligence operations appears quite frequently in Court documents. This is one of the primary ironies of the life led by 'Dark Actors Playing Games'. On the one hand, they operate in a hidden jungle where the Rule of Law does not apply. On the other hand, when they have been double-crossed, scammed or otherwise defrauded, they rely with ruthless determination upon the judicial system and the Rule of Law in defence of their interests. This is of course a manifestation of the double-mind-edness of Illuminati cadres, referred to extensively in the main text. In the context revealed by this Complaint, an additional layer of irony arises from the reality that 'socialist legality' in both the Soviet and fake 'post'-Soviet contexts equates to whatever dominant apparatchiks may arbitrarily decide can be applicable. ■

129. For example, a special investigation by the General Accounting Chamber of Russia determined that the 1997 privatization violated numerous aspects of Russian law and plainly was concluded to favour the successful bidder.

130. Among the sixteen counts of violations of Russian laws and regulations listed by the General Accounting Chamber, was that the State Property Committee responsible for privatization failed to verify the legality of the source of funds used by Novy Holding to purchase its interest in TNK

131. Access/Renova and Alfa remitted bribes by means of the wiring of funds through banks in the United States to Koch and other Russian Government officials in order to obtain their support for the corrupt privatization of TNK in 1997.

132. Such allegation is based on common knowledge that Russian government officials were routinely bribed during privatization of state industries.

133. Such allegation is based on the lack of any other credible explanation for the requirement that the three assets be owned by the successful bidder and, further by the failure of the State Property Committee to compel the fulfilment of all investment conditions - even in violation of an edict by then President Boris Yeltsin that prohibited the transfer of title to the shares in TNK until all investment conditions were fulfilled.

THE CORRUPT 1999 TNK PRIVATIZATION

134. Ultimately, in 1999, TNK was fully privatized, with the remaining portion of its shares sold to Access/Renova and the Alfa Group, this time through ZAO Noviye Prioritety.

135. The 1999 final privatization of TNK was equally corrupt.

136. Once again, the terms of the privatization were set by the State Property Committee in a fashion unduly favorable to Access/Renova and Alfa.

137. The minimum price set for the 1999 auction was so low (and so obviously corrupted) that the Russian Duma even passed a resolution urging the cancellation of the sale.

138. Nonetheless, despite the Duma's resolution, the 1999 auction resulted in Access/Renova and Alfa acquiring the remaining shares.

RUSSIAN BANKRUPTCIES

139. Unfortunately, because of corruption in the Russian judiciary, which is "influenced" by powerful Russian business [KGB] interests, such as Access/Renova, Alfa, and TNK, the Russian bankruptcy process is used as an aggressive weapon by corporate predators to acquire victim companies or their assets.

140. The typical blueprint for "bankruptcy theft" in Russia by a corporate predator is managed in the following manner*:

(a). Arrange for the filing of a petition, placing the corporate victim into involuntary bankruptcy, often through connections with the local Federal or Regional Government, even if the victim is solvent and able to pay its debts;

(b). Arrange for the appointment of a "friendly" external manager (similar to a trustee under American bankruptcy law) of the victim through the corrupt Russian Court system and, thus, take control of the victim from its management and shareholders;

(c). Direct the external manager to cancel contracts for the sale of the victim's product with the existing trading partners and replace them with contracts with the predator's affiliated companies, often at prices well below market, thus diverting profits from the victim to the predator; (d). Obtain control of the creditors' committee, which decides various issues during the bankruptcy either by forcing other claimants to sell their claims to the predator, arranging for the external manager to create sham claims in favour of the predator, or arrangement for the preferential payment of creditors unfriendly to the predator (and thus eliminating them from voting);

(e). Once the profits are stripped from the victim, have the external manager declare that it cannot exist as a continuing entity and then liquidate its assets through a rigged judicial auction by which the predator acquires the assets for a pittance of their real worth.

141. As stated by the Head of the Russian Federal Service for Financial Recovery, Tatiana Trefilova, bankruptcy "is a weapon used against economic and political rivals".

142. According to the Russian Duma Speaker, Gennadiy Seleznev, "bankruptcy has become an instrument for redistribution of property" [back into the hands of KGB-GRU ops].

143. Access/Renova and Alfa followed the above blueprint to the letter in regard to NNG, Kondpetroleum, and Chernogorneft.

*Note: The abuse of bankruptcy arrangements by predatory intelligence entities with access to limitless corrupt sources of funds is not unknown in other contexts and parts of the world. However the practice of forcing targeted victims into bankruptcy when they are solvent is a particular speciality of Soviet criminalists.

Inset:* Page 50 of the original Court Complaint document obtained by the Author from the United States Eastern District Court of New York, using the Court's photocopying facilities.

Figure 100: The cover sheet of the Complaint lodged by Norex Petroleum in the US Southern District Court of New York on 25th February 2002. From this case, the Author was able to verify dimensions of the intelligence warfare which rages behind the scenes as the intelligence services of the covert Soviets and the United States and Britain wrestle ferociously, both internally and externally, for control over energy assets in the 'former' USSR. Mr Simon (Semen) Kukes, who emerged as the Chief Executive of YUKOS, following the arrest and incarceration of Mikhail Khodorkovsky, a KGB operative and a former minor Minister in Gorbachev's Government was a Soviet Academician (KGB) who managed to metamorphose into a leading US oil executive (Conoco-Phillips) and was then 'translated' to be CEO of TNK (the Tyumen Oil Company).

THE CORRUPT NIZHNEVARTOVSK NEFTEGAZ PROCEEDINGS

144. Nizhnevartovsk Nefte Gaz ("NNG") is an oil company located in the Khanty-Man-siysky Autonomous District of Russia, which is part of the Tyumen Oblast (Region).

145. In 1997, after acquiring 40% of TNK, Access/Renova and Alfa Group arranged through corrupted governmental officials to divert flow of oil from NNG to TNK.

146. As a result, TNK was able to take over NNG and force it into bankruptcy proceedings which resulted in the stripping of assets of NNG and their transfer to other TNK controlled companies.

147. Norex's interests were thus directly and adversely affected by the corrupt NNG Bankruptcy and Reorganization and stripping of assets, because, Yugraneft, in which Norex was the majority shareholder, did not receive the oil owed to it by NNG.

THE CORRUPT KONDPETROLEUM BANKRUPTCY

148. Kondpetroleum, a subsidiary of Sidanco at all relevant times, is located in the Khanty-Mansiysky Autonomous District of Russia, which is part of the Tyumen Oblast.

149. During tne time of the bankruptcy, the governor of the Tyumen Oblast was Leonid Roketsky, who also was the chairman of TNK's Board of Directors.

150. In September 1998, the Kondpetroleum bankruptcy was initiated.

151. During the bankruptcy, TNK arranged for the appointment of its handpicked candidate, Boris Nuriev ("Nuriev") as Kondpetroleum's external manager.

152. Nuriev immediately cancelled most of the oil sale contracts with Sidanco, and, not surprisingly, replaced them with contracts with TNK controlled entities eventually diverting the oil flows to Crown Group.

153. These sales of oil were at drastically reduced prices, resulting in the diversion of millions of dollars of profit to Crown Group.

154. As a result of these diverted profits, the external manager "found" that Kondpetroleum was insolvent and proposed sale of assets, which was approved by the corrupt Court on December 7, 1998.

155. Bidders other than TNK were wrongfully obstructed from bidding in the auction.

156. As a result, on October 21, 1999, the assets of Kondpetroleum were auctioned to a TNK affiliate created for the purposes of this bankruptcy, at approximately one-third of their appraised value.

THE CORRUPT CHERNOGORNEFT BANKRUPTCY

157. Chernogorneft is also located in the Khanty-Mansiysky Autonomous District of Russia which is part of the Tyumen Oblast.

158. In October 1998, the bankruptcy of Chernogorneft was initiated.

159. During the bankruptcy, TNK arranged for the appointment of its handpicked candidate, Vasily Bikin, as the external manager on May 27, 1999.

160. Shortly thereafter, Bikin was replaced with another TNK ally, Alexander Gorshkov ("Gorshkov") as the external manager on August 3, 1999.

161. In order to acquire control of the creditors' committee of Chernogorneft, TNK arranged for Alfa Bank to lend Chernogorneft $15 million in order to settle a debt owed to the United States Export-Import Bank ("Ex-Im Bank"), providing an illegal preference to the Ex-Im Bank over Chernogorneft's other creditors.

162. Additionally, in order to take control of the creditor's committee of Chernogorneft, TNK arranged for the illegal reduction of the $35 million debt to the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development ("EBRD") to $26 million, providing an illegal preference to the EBRD over Chernogorneft's other creditors.

163. The purpose of this was to remove the Ex-Im Bank and EBRD as creditors, thus strengthening TNK's control over the creditors' committee.

164. At the direction of TNK, Bikin and Gorshkov arranged for the sale of Chernogorneft oil through TNK-controlled entities, which, in turn, directed the oil flows to the Crown Group, at below market prices in order to divert the revenues and profits of Chernogorneft to the Crown Group.

165. Gorshkov later stopped the export of oil in order to cause Chernogorneft to be unable to pay its debts.

166. Following the diversion of profits from Chernogorneft to the Crown Groups, Gorshkov made the determination that Chernogorneft was insolvent and that its assets needed to be sold at auction as soon as possible.

167. The conduct of Gorshkov was so blatantly illegal that his license was revoked by the Federal Service of Russia for Insolvency Proceedings in October 1999.

168. Even though Gorshkov's license was revoked at that time, in October 1999, he presided over the TNK-controlled creditors' committee which approved the terms of the sale of Chernogorneff s assets at a bankruptcy auction.

169. Not surprisingly, the terms of the auction were designed to discourage any persons other than TNK from participating and, in fact, only two bidders attended the auction:

TNK and TNK-NV

170. Furthermore, Gorshkov's actions in preparing the auction essentially precluded other companies from participating in it.

171. For example, despite Sidanco's request for a list of assets to be auctioned, Gorshkov refused to provide such, alleging he did not have enough paper on which to print the list.

172. In fact, no requested documents were provided to Sidanco prior to the rigged auction.

173. Ultimately, the auction was held despite several decisions of Russian Courts prohibiting the sale, and the assets of Chernogorneft were transferred to TNK-NV at below market prices, including its shares in, Yugraneft which violated Norex's right of first refusal set forth in the Yugraneft shareholders agreement.

174. Norex's interests were, thus, directly and adversely affected by the corrupt Chernogorneft bankruptcy because its right of first refusal for Chernogorneft's shares in Yugraneft was violated, and, further, Yugraneft, in which Norex was majority shareholder, did not receive the oil owed to it by Chernogorneft.

SECRETARY OF STATE MADELEINE ALBRIGHT'S INTERVENTION ON BEHALF OF THE AMERICAN INTERESTS TO BLOCK EX-IM BANK'S GUARANTEE OF LOANS TO TNK

175. As a result of the theft of the assets and profits of Kondpetroleum and Chernogorneft through the corrupt bankruptcies, American investors in Sidanco took legal action.

176. An action was filed in the Supreme Court of New York against instant Defendants Blavatnik, Access/Renova, and TNK by an investment fund owned, in part, by Harvard.

177. In addition, BP-Amoco initiated a major campaign in Washington, DC to block Export-Import Bank guarantees of loans to TNK for the purchase of equipment from US manufacturers.

178. Ultimately, by letter dated December 21, 1999, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit E [see Figure 101, page 731] Secretary of State Madeleine Albright directed that it would be in the national interest and clearly and importantly advance United States policy if the Ex-Im Bank did not approve the loan guarantee in response to BP-Amoco's complaint about the transparently corrupt nature of the Kondpetroleum and Chernogorneft bankruptcies.

179. As a result of this, BP-Amoco and aligned interests settled their dispute with Access, Renova and Alfa, which resulted in the return of assets purloined from Chernogorneft to Sidanco, although such action did not remedy the harm to Norex and Yugraneft.

YUGRANEFT'S DISPUTE WITH TNK

180. In October 1991, Yugraneft was formed*.

181. As of 1999, Norex owned 60% of the shares of Yugraneft and Chernogorneft owned 40% of the shares. [Note: Under covert Soviet 'State-Controlled Capitalism', the shares were systematically and by design manipulated into the hands of KGB/GRU operatives ('oligarchs')].

182. In 1999, an audit of the books and records of Yugraneft determined that Chernogorneft had not contributed the full amount of capital to Yugraneft for its 40% share.

183. Ultimately, Chernogorneff s interest in Yugraneft was reduced, based on the determination of the firm's auditors, and, as a result, Norex's interest in Yugraneft increased to 97.3%.

184. During all relevant times, Yugraneft maintained a corporate headquarters in Nizh-Nevartovsk, operating and oil production facilities in the Nizhnevartovsk region, and a representative office in Moscow.

*Note: The timing of this corporation's formation makes it clear that the primary geofinancial/commercial factor driving the 'collapse' of the Soviet Union was energy and the need to upgrade the Soviet oil sector.

THE DISPUTE OVER THE 70,000 TONS

185. In December 1993, Yugraneft lent 300,000 metric tons of oil to Chernogorneft.

186. As of November 1998, the balance of oil owed to Yugraneft was 70,000 tonnes of oil.

187. In October 1998, the corrupt bankruptcy was initiated against Chernogorneft and by May 1999, an external manager of Chernogorneft controlled by TNK had been appointed.

188. Throughout the bankruptcy proceedings, Yugraneft, while controlled by Norex, attempted to enforce its rights for the return of the oil.

189. Such efforts were unsuccessful.

THE DISPUTE OVER THE 102,000 TONS

190. In May 1996. Yugraneft loaned 290,000 metric tons of oil to Nizhnevartovsk Nefte Gaz ("NNG"), and owned 38% by TNK (which was yet to be privatized).

191. As of mid-1997, the NNG owed a balance of approximately 102,000 metric tons.

192. In the fall of 1997, corruption proceedings were initiated against NNG in order to remove its then management in order to facilitate the corrupt privatization of TNK and establish full control over NNG.

193. In January 1998, Yugraneft and NNG executed a verification act confirming the amount of oil owed shortly before TNK obtained effective control of NNG, to be about 20,000 tonnes.

194. Subsequently, a person controlled by TNK was appointed to be the external manager of Nizhnevartovsk Nefte Gaz.

195. During the ensuing two years, Yugraneft attempted to enforce its rights for the return of the oil.

196. Such efforts were unsuccessful.

197. Ultimately, after the illegal seizure of Yugraneft by TNK, this debt was settled for a song.

THE CONVERSATION BETWEEN KHAN AND ROTZANG

198. Alexander Rotzang ("Rotzang"), the Chairman of the Board of Norex, the majority shareholder of Yugraneft, spoke with Khan while in San Francisco, CA in November 1999.

199. Khan demanded that Yugraneft forget about repayment of the oil owed to it and threatened that if Yugraneft did not forget that, TNK "would run over Yugraneft like a steamroller" and that "we eliminate those who go against us".

THE AUGUST 2000 MEETING WITH KHAN

200. In August 2000, Lyudmilla Kondrashina ("Kondrashina"), the General Director of Yugraneft, met with German Khan ("Khan"), an officer of TNK.

201. At that meeting Khan told Kondrashina that Yugraneft should accept 30% of the value of the 70,000 and 102,000 tons of oil as settlement.

202. Khan threatened Kondrashina that if Yugraneft did not accept its offer, then Yugraneft would get nothing because TNK has its "own people at all levels of government".

203. Yugraneft refused and continued unsuccessfully to try to collect the 70,000/102,000-ton debts.

THE JANUARY 2001 MEETING WITH KHAN

204. In January 2001, Kondrashina met again with Khan.

205. Khan warned Kondrashina that unless Yugraneft accepted the offer on the debts of oil that in a few months TNK would take over Yugraneft.

206. Khan also stated that it would be fruitless to pursue litigation because TNK "controlled" Russia's Supreme Arbitration Court where commercial disputes were ultimately decided.

207. In retrospect it is clear that at this point, Access/Renova and Alfa had agreed upon a plan, which was directed by the Alfa Group on the one hand and Access/Renova, including Blavatnik and Vekselberg in their offices in New York on the other, to take over Yugraneft through corrupted Court proceedings and the use of pure physical force.

THE SCHEDULING OF THE YUGRANEFT SHAREHOLDERS' MEETING

208. In May 2001, TNK, through its subsidiary TNK-NV which had purportedly obtained ownership of the shares of Yugraneft from Chernogorneft as a result of the rigged bankruptcy auction, demanded that Yugraneft hold a shareholders' meeting.

209. At the time when the TNK-NV's demand was made, neither TNK nor TNK-NV were registered shareholders of Yugraneft.

210. Norex submitted a demand to Yugraneft to hold a shareholders' meeting.

211. The meeting was then scheduled for June 28, 2001.

THE JUNE 2001 MEETING WITH KHAN

212. In June 2001, Kondrashina met Khan again.
213. Khan bluntly asked Kondrashina to betray the shareholders of Yugraneft.
214. Khan directly asked her how much money she needed to betray Yugraneft.
215. Kondrashina refused the bribe opportunity.
216. Khan then warned her to "stay in the shadows" during the TNK's fight for Yugraneft.

THE ILLEGAL TAKEOVER OF YUGRANEFT: The Ex Parte Court Action

217. Just a few days prior to the scheduled Yugraneft shareholders meeting, on June 25, 2001, TNK, through its subsidiary TNK-NV, filed a complaint in the Russian Courts and petitioned to seize a major portion of the shares of Yugraneft held by Norex.

218. TNK-NV falsely represented that it had obtained legal ownership of shares in Yugraneft from the auction of Chernogorneft's assets - even though the shareholders agreement between Chernogorneft and Norex provided Norex with the right of first refusal to purchase any shares of Yugraneft offered for sale by Chernogorneft.

210. TNK-NV also falsely represented that Norex had been served with the complaint which was required to be filed prior to or with the petition seeking to arrest its shares.

220. On June, 26, 2001, the Russian Court enjoined Norex from voting a major portion of its Yugraneft shares and prohibited Yugraneft from counting a major portion of Norex's shares at any shareholders meeting, even though Norex was never served or notified of the hearing and TNK-NV was not listed as a shareholder of Yugraneft.

221. Upon information and belief, the proceedings were designed to control illegally the shareholders meeting of Yugraneft of June 28, 2001.

THE SHAREHOLDERS' MEETING

222. On June 28, 2001, a Yugraneft shareholders' meeting was held at its offices in Moscow.

223. A representative of Norex attended the meeting.

224. No representatives of Chernogorneft, the registered owner of the remaining shares of Yugraneft, attended the meeting, although it had been duly notified.

225. Norex voted its shares which had not been arrested in favour of re-electing Kondrashina as the general director of Yugraneft.

226. No votes were cast against her re-election.

THE FRAUDULENT TAKEOVER OF YUGRANEFT BY BRUTE FORCE

227. On June 29, 2001, TNK took over the offices of Yugraneft in Nizhnevartovsk.

228. Alexander Berman, an officer of a TNK affiliate, accompanied by six TNK attorneys and at least 16 thugs wearing military-style fatigues and armed with machine guns, invaded Yugraneft's office in Nizhnevartovsk.

229. Their legal authority was a purported shareholders meeting of Yugraneft on June 28 at which Berman was allegedly elected as General Director of Yugraneft, allegedly attended by Norex Petroleum.

230. Such a meeting never took place.

231. On the same day, TNK sent security guards to inspect Yugraneft's field operations and, a few days later, on July 6, 2001, TNK security guards armed with handguns and machine guns took over the oil field and field office.

232. The TNK thugs cut off phone and Internet service in order to prevent the Yugraneft employees from communicating with the outside world.

233. On July 17 2001, Simon Kukes the (American-Soviet Academy of Sciences intelligence operative-turned US oil executive) President of TNK, came to Yugraneft's field operations and informed the employees that Yugraneft had been taken over by TNK.

234. He informed them that they were required either to sign employee agreements with TNK, or leave.

235. Amazingly, after the seizure of Yugraneft, Khan admitted in a media interview that TNK decided to take over Yugraneft because it was unwilling to accept the 30% offer for the return of oil owed to Yugraneft.

THE THREATS BY TNK

236. In July 2001, a Russian Court issued an order enjoining Berman from acting as the General Director of Yugraneft.

237. On or about August 1, 2001, Kondrashina, Alexander Radov, an attorney for Yugraneft (pre-takeover), together with attorney Alexey Timoshkin, came to the offices of Yugraneft with a Marshal in order to enforce the order.

238. When Radov arrived at the Yugraneft office, one of the leaders of TNK's security stated: "We know who you are and where you live. Why do you need problems?"

239. Shortly thereafter, Nam, along with TNK armed thugs, came to Yugraneff s offices.

240. Nam called the local Chief Marshal, who then came to Yugraneft's office, and, instead of enforcing the order, based on the false minutes of the non-existent shareholders' meeting, instructed Kondrashina and the others to leave.

241. During this encounter, Nam picked up the telephone and instructed someone to give orders to J. Paznikov, the chief judge of the Nizhnevartovsk Regional Court to dismiss the Order [verified manipulation of the 'socialist legality judicial' system].

242. Such an order was entered by J. Paznikov the next day.

243. During this encounter Nam told Kondrashina that she should stop fighting TNK, that TNK controlled the local government and that if she came over to their side that she would be offered the position of Deputy Mayor of Nizhnevartovsk.

244. During the initial part of this encounter, Timoshkin arranged for videotaping of the effort to enforce the order.

245. When Nam arrived, security guards of TNK prevented further videotaping.

246. Later, Mr. Sidorov, the head of TNK's local Security Department, demanded that Timoshkin turn over the videotape.

247. A representative of TNK then offered Timoshkin $ 100,000 for the videotape.

248. When Timoshkin refused the offer, the TNK representative stated, "Do you have life insurance? You might need it because anything can happen. It might happen that some drunk will meet you near your house and nobody will be able to trace it to anything".

249. This was an obvious attempt to threaten Timoshkin.

250. Also, after the meeting, Mr. Belevtsov, the chief of a TNK Legal Department, asked Radov to "step outside".

251. Belevtsov then stated, "Why do you need these problems? Let's talk about your working for TNK".

252. This was an obvious attempt to threaten and bribe Radov.

THE STRIPPING OF YUGRANEFT ASSETS

253. Following the Illegal Takeover, TNK stripped Yugraneft of its assets including rouble denominated bank deposits, dollar denominated bank deposits, rouble denominated savings certificates (known as "veksels" in Russia), and dollar denominated savings certificates.

254. The stripped assets included the transfer of $40 million (including $24 million in dollar denominated accounts) to accounts at Alfa Bank for no apparent consideration.

255. The net result was to strip the cash from Yugraneft and transfer it to Alfa Bank for use by the Defendants.

THE FORGED YUGRANEFT CORPORATE DOCUMENTS

256. As part of its justification for the Illegal Takeover of Yugraneft, TNK-NV produced "minutes" of a shareholders meeting which allegedly took place on June 28, 2001 which was allegedly attended by Norex and TNK-NV at which the shareholders allegedly voted to re-place Kondrashina with Berman as Yugraneft's General Director.

257. The attendance of Norex was critical for such meeting because without Norex's attendance a quorum would not have been present.

258. Such "minutes" were fabricated: Norex never attended such a meeting at which Kondrashina was replaced by Berman as Yugraneft's General Director.

THE USE OF ARRANGED CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

259. In order to deter Norex and the legally elected officers of Yugraneft from opposing the Illegal Takeover of Yugraneft, the Defendants arranged for false criminal proceedings to be brought against Rotzang, the chairman of Norex, and Kondrashina, the General Director of Yugraneft.

260. The use of false criminal proceedings is a typical tool used by corrupt business persons in Russia to wipe out adversaries and is possible because of the generally corrupt nature of Russian Government, particularly at local levels.

261. The false criminal proceedings include an investigation of Kondrashina who was alleged by TNK to be embezzling certain Sberbank Savings Certificates, which were in her possession because she was the legitimate General Director of Yugraneft.

262. The purpose of this "investigation" was both to intimidate Kondrashina and to use the criminal proceedings for TNK to gain control over the bonds.

263. The false criminal proceedings included the investigation of Rotzang for using savings certificates to pay legitimate debts of Yugraneft.

264. The purpose of this "investigation" was to both intimidate Rotzang and to use the criminal proceedings for TNK to gain control over the certificates.

265. The false criminal proceedings were instigated by TNK and were designed to intimidate persons from cooperating with Norex and Kondrashina, the legitimate General Director of Yugraneft.

THE ROLE OF TNK AND THE CROWN GROUP IN REGARD TO THE SALE OF YUGRANEFT OIL AFTER THE ILLEGAL TAKEOVER

266. Subsequent to the Illegal Takeover of Yugraneft, oil from Yugraneft has been converted and sold by TNK and the Crown Group.

267. Yugraneft oil for the Russian market has been converted and sold through TNK.

268. Yugraneft oil for the foreign markets has been converted and sold through TNK and the Crown Group and substantial revenues [has been] received by them via wires through banks in the United States.

THE SLUSH FUND AND MASSIVE TAX FRAUDS

269. After its takeover of TNK, the Alfa and Access/Renova sides arranged for all petroleum exported by TNK to be sold through Crown Enterprise.

270. The trading between TNK and the Alfa/Crown affiliates was designed for TNK to sell product at a greatly lowered price in order to transfer the profits from Russia to offshore structures controlled by Access/Renova Groups and Alfa.

271. This resulted in a massive tax fraud on the Russian Government and the improper diversion of profits from TNK to Alfa/Crown, to the detriment of TNK's other shareholders, including the Russian Government from 1997 through 1999.

272. In order to effect this aspect of the Illegal Scheme, Access/Renova and Alfa/Crown, through Astons, established offshore companies which were purportedly independent from TNK but which Access/Renova and Alfa secretly controlled.

273. These companies included the Slush Fund Companies.

274. The Slush Fund Companies would send invoices for fabricated services to Crown Group companies.

275. In return, the Crown Group companies wired tens of millions of dollars to the Slush Fund Companies through banks in the United States.

276. One effect of the Slush Fund was to hide the fact that profits were diverted from TNK to the Crown Group.

277. A second effect of the Slush Fund was to create a fund which was used to pay salary and bonuses to members of the Conspiracy, including Spitz.

278. Spitz, through Futura, personally received millions of dollars through the Slush Fund.

279. Upon information and belief, a third effect of the Slush Fund was to create a fund used to pay bribes to Russian Government officials.

280. A critical aspect of the Illegal Scheme was worldwide tax evasion, which permitted some Defendants to keep a much larger portion of the profits than would have occurred if all income was properly declared and all taxes properly paid.

281. Thus, these Defendants accumulated tremendous wealth which was used to effect further acquisitions and, upon information and belief, bribe Russian Government officials, all in furtherance of the Illegal Scheme.

The Crown Commodities UK Tax Fraud

282. Defendants created a plan by which Crown Trade and Finance Limited, which was based in Gibraltar, would purportedly act as a principal in its trading with TNK's oil.

283. In fact, Crown Trade and Finance Limited was a mere shell corporation, as all real trading was done in London by Crown Commodities.

284. Nonetheless, Crown Commodities falsely represented to the Inland Revenue in the United Kingdom that it was merely acting as a service agent for Crown Trade and Finance Limited so that it could limit its profits to 10% of its costs.

285. Crown Commodities, acting as a principal with regard to all trading of petroleum sourced from the TNK, should have been liable in the United Kingdom for taxes on the worldwide income earned from its trading. The activities of the Gibraltar office were limited to literally rubber-stamping contracts with a rubber stamp signature facsimile.

286. As a result of the United Kingdom tax fraud, Crown Commodities avoided over $30 million in taxes and penalties.

287. Ultimately, upon information and belief, Crown Commodities' function may have been replaced with Crown Resources AG, which registered a branch in England in order to continue the same illegal activities, much in the same way as previously conducted.

The Crown Management US and UK Tax Fraud

288. Crown established a system by which it only reported base salaries for its management, such as Spitz and Kuzmichev.

289. Such base salaries were supplemented by periodic bonus payments made to offshore accounts established by Astons and controlled by management, including Eastmount Properties, which was controlled by Kuzmichev, as evidenced by the email attached hereto [included with the documents], and Futura, which was controlled by Spitz.

290. Upon information and belief, such income was never declared for tax purposes by Crown employees, such as Kuzmichev in the United Kingdom or Spitz in the United States.

The Sham Invoice Fraud

291. Pursuant to certain contracts between TNK and Crown, Crown purported to act as an agent for TNK, responsible for accounting for the profits which it made on trading to TNK.

292. In practice, it was intended for Crown to act as a principal and for all trading profits to accrue to Crown.

293. In order to conceal the real trading profits, Crown and TNK adopted a plan called "Rondo" by which Crown would issues sham invoices for the sale of petroleum, as evidenced by [an email attached which, along with other documents, was annexed].

294. This plan involved the initial sale of petroleum received by Crown from TNK to a third party at an agreed-upon lower price.

295. A copy of this sham invoice was then submitted to TNK for institutionalised accounting and tax evasion purposes.

296. In the meantime, Crown arranged for a second transaction by which the third party would resell the petroleum to Crown at this lowered price, and then Crown would resell the petroleum to the third party at a higher, market price.

297. The effect of this plan was to hide the true profit and price actually received by Crown from the sale of petroleum received from TNK to the detriment of its non Access/Renova and Alfa shareholders, including American shareholders of TNK controlled companies and the Russian Government which was a shareholder of TNK.

298. This plan also perpetrated a tax (as well as customs) fraud on Russia because the true profit from the sale of oil was transferred from TNK to a Crown company located outside of Russia such as the UK (and the profit was then transferred to one of the Slush Fund Companies through the invoices for fabricated services).

The Diverted Address Commissions

299. In the oil brokerage business, it is normal business practice for traders, such as the Crown Groups, to arrange for the charter of vessels with shipbrokers.

300. It is also normal for the shipbrokers to pay an "address commission" of a percent of the cost of the vessel charter to the trader, for selecting such shipbroker.

301. Such address commission is normally 1 to 2 percent of the cost of chartering the vessel.

302. In order to divert funds to the Slush Fund Companies, the Crown Group arranged with shipbrokers, such as Simpson Spence & Young ("Simpson"), which has offices in Stamford, Connecticut and

London, England, to strike the "address commission" provision from its agreements and, instead, pay the address commissions to various Slush Fund Companies controlled by Defendants, including East-mount, Ringford Trading Limited and Fulbrook Trading Limited.

303. The diversion of such payments also operated as a tax fraud on the Inland Revenue in the United Kingdom because the true income of Crown was understated and the true incomes of the Defendants, such as Spitz, who received bonus payments from this fund were understated.

304. Upon information and belief, such payments amounted to tens of millions of dollars.

THE ENTERPRISES

305. Each enterprise defined below is an "enterprise" within the meaning of 18 U.S.C. §1961(4) and 1962(c).

Alfa Group Enterprise

306. Crown Finance Foundation, CTF Holdings, Alfa Finance, Crown Luxembourg, Crown Commodities Ltd., Crown Trade and Finance Limited, Crown Resources AG, TNK, TNK-NV, TNK-Nyagan, Alfa Bank, Alfa Eco, LT Enterprises, Sandwell Enterprises, and Eastmount Properties (collectively, the "Alfa Group"), is an enterprise operated and controlled, directly or indirectly, by Fridman, Kuzmichev, and Khan.

Alfa Holding Enterprise

307. The Crown Finance Foundation, CTF Holdings, Alfa Finance, and Crown Luxembourg (collectively, the "Alfa Holding Enterprise"), is an enterprise operated and controlled, directly or indirectly, by Fridman, Kuzmichev, and Khan, Access/Renova Enterprise.

308. Access and Renova (collectively, "Access/Renova Enterprise"), is an enterprise operated and controlled, directly or indirectly, by Blavatnik and Vekselberg.

Crown Enterprise

309. Crown Commodities Ltd., Crown Trade and Finance Limited, Crown Resources AG, and Crown Resources (USA), Inc. (collectively, the "Crown Enterprise"), is an enterprise operated and controlled, directly or indirectly, by Crown Finance Foundation, CTF Holdings, Crown Luxembourg, Fridman, Kuzmichev, Khan, and Spitz.

TNK Enterprise

310. TNK, TNK-NV, TNK-Nyagan, and NNG (collectively, the "TNK Enterprise"), is an enterprise operated and controlled, directly or indirectly, by Crown Finance Foundation, CTF Holdings, Alfa Finance, Fridman, Kuzmichev, Khan, Kukes, Bakaleynik, Access/Renova, Blavatnik, and Vekselberg.

Slush Fund Enterprise

311. LT Enterprises, Sandwell, and Eastmount (collectively, the "Slush Fund Enterprise"), is an enterprise operated and controlled, directly or indirectly, by Crown Finance Foundation, CTF Holdings, Alfa Finance, Crown Luxembourg, Fridman, Kuzmichev, Khan, Kukes, Bakaleynik, Spitz, Access/Renova, Blavatnik, and Vekselberg.

Astons Enterprise

312. Astons is an enterprise controlled by G. Caine and other persons.

KondPetroleum, Chernogorneft, NNG Enterprises

313. Kondpetroleum, Chernogorneft, and NNG are each enterprises operated and controlled by Crown Finance Foundation, CTF Holdings, Alfa Finance, TNK, Fridman, Kuzmichev, Khan, Kukes, Bakaleynik, Spitz, Access/Renova, Blavatnik, and Vekselberg.

Yugraneft Enterprise

314. Yugraneft is an enterprise operated and controlled, directly or indirectly, by Crown Finance Foundation, CTF Holdings, Alfa Finance, TNK, Fridman, Kuzmichev, Khan, Kukes, Bakaleynik, Access/Renova, Blavatnik, and Vekselberg.

Note: The Complaint now reveals the true purpose of all this: to provide a framework, established by Soviet/Russian intelligence, for the 'taking back' of Soviet State oil assets by the KGB/GRU/Party:

Alfa/Access/Astons Enterprise ("AAA Enterprise")

315. Crown Finance Foundation, CTF Holdings, Alfa Finance, Crown Luxembourg, Crown Commodities, Crown Trade and Finance Limited, Crown Resources AG, Crown Resources (USA). Inc., TNK, TNK-NV, TNK-Nyagan, LT Enterprises Sandwell, Eastmount, Futura, Access/Renova, and Astons constitute an "associ-ation-in-fact" enterprise (collectively, the "Alfa/Access/Astons Enterprise" or "AAA Enterprise" or "AAA Association") formed to take over a substantial portion of the Russian petroleum industry.

316. The 'association-in-facf is different from its members in that the 'association-in-facf exists in order to provide a structure for the criminal activities of the AAA Association.
317. Each member of the association has a defined role in regard to the criminal activities of the AAA Association.
318. Crown Finance Foundation, CTF Holdings, Alfa Finance, and Crown Luxembourg provide holding companies which direct the activities of its subsidiary companies and provide a legal and financial framework for the AAA Association in regard to the interests of the Alfa Group.
319. Access and Renova provide holding companies which direct the activities of its subsidiary companies and provide a legal and financial framework for the AAA Association in regard to the interests of Blavatnik and Vekselberg.
320. Crown Commodities, Crown Trade and Finance Limited, Crown Resources AG, and Crown Resources (USA) Inc. provide trading companies for the AAA Association by which oil taken from Russia can be sold in the world market from which the proceeds are then laundered through the Slush Fund Companies, and for the furtherance of communications among the Defendants.
321. TNK, TNK NV, and TNK-Nyagan provide operating companies for the AAA Association for drilling and shipment of oil from Russia to the Crown trading companies.
322. TNK, TNK NV, and TNK-Nyagan also provide operating companies with armed security forces for the AAA Association which can be used to seize other companies in Russia, as occurred with Yugraneft.
323. LT Enterprises, Sandwell, and Eastmount provide offshore slush fund companies by which proceeds from the sale of oil are laundered and transactions are effected as part of the tax frauds on Russia, the United Kingdom, and the United States by the AAA Association.
324. Astons provides administrative, financial, and accounting services in order to manage the various money-laundering and tax fraud programs of the AAA Association.
325. The above enterprises each constituted an enterprise pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §1961(4) which engaged in and affected interstate and foreign commerce in the United States.
326. The above enterprises continue to operate today and to... illegally control Yugraneft.
327. The above enterprises had continuity of structure and personnel because, from 1997 through the current date, they featured a hierarchical structure wherein each of the above- and below-named entities and individuals performed, among others, the following roles:
(a). Alfa Group Enterprise: The Alfa Group is an enterprise consisting of its various, affiliated companies, including the Alfa Holding Enterprise and Crown Enterprise and their various subsidiary companies, which were controlled by the Alfa Holding Enterprise.
(b). Alfa Holding Enterprise (Crown Finance Foundation, CTF Holdings, Alfa Finance, and Crown Luxembourg): The Alfa Holding Enterprise provides an overall legal and financial structure for the control of subsidiary enterprises including the Crown Enterprise, TNK Enterprise, Slush Fund Enterprise, and Kondpetroleum, Chernogorneft, and NNG Enterprise. All conduct of the subsidiary Enterprises was ultimately directed by the Alfa [i.e., KGB - Ed.] Holding Enterprise. This Enterprise raises capital to fund the Illegal Scheme. [= Soviet version of US 'Enterprise ops.]. (c). Fridman, Kuzmichev, and Khan operate and control the Alfa Holding Enterprise, including the direct involvement of Kuzmichev with the money-laundering and tax fraud activities of the Crown Enterprise and the Slush Fund Enterprise.
(d). Crown Enterprise (Crown Commodities Ltd., Crown Trade and Finance Limited, Crown Resources AG, and Crown Resources (USA) Inc.): The Crown Enterprise provides the trading operations and coordinates money-laundering with the Slush Fund Enterprise.
(e). Spitz: Spitz, along with Fridman, Kuzmichev, and Khan, operates and controls the Crown Enterprise, including its money-laundering and tax fraud activities.
(f). TNK Enterprise (TNK, TNK NV, and TNK-Nyagan): TNK Enterprise provides oil production, oil shipment, oil refining, domestic sales services, and armed security services.

(g). Kondpetroleum, Chernogorneft, and NNG Enterprise: This enterprise provides oil which is sold at below market prices to TNK and/or Crown and from which the proceeds are then laundered through the Slush Fund Companies.

(h). Kukes and Bakaleynik Kukes and Bakaleynik, along with Fridman, Kuzmichev, and Khan, operate and control the TNK Enterprise, including its involvement in the corrupt bankruptcies of Kondpetroleum, Chernogorneft, and NNG, and the Illegal Takeover of Yugraneft, including operation of the arrangement by which oil is sold to the Crown Enterprise from which proceeds are ultimately laundered through the Slush Fund Enterprise.

(i). Slush Fund Enterprise (LT Enterprises, Sandwell, and Eastmount): The Slush Fund Enterprise provides the offshore companies through which the money-laundering and tax fraud is effected and is ultimately controlled by Access/Renova and Alfa.

(j). Access/Renova Enterprise: Access and Renova provides an overall legal and financial structure for Blavatnik and Vekselberg for the control of subsidiary enterprises including the TNK Enterprise, Slush Fund Enterprise, and Kondpetroleum, Chernogorneft, and NNG Enterprise. All conduct of the above subsidiary enterprises was ultimately directed by Access/Renova, This enterprise raises capital to fund the Illegal Scheme.

(k). Blavatnik and Vekselberg: Operate and control the Access/Renova Enterprise. (I). Astons Enterprise: Astons operates and manages the Slush Fund Companies, including the preparation of the invoices by G. Caine for the fabricated services and coordination and accounting for the money-laundering and tax fraud.

328. The above enterprises were separate and distinct from the pattern of racketeering in which Defendants engaged because, among other factors:

(a): The members of the enterprises were coordinated and directed to such a high degree and were assigned such well-defined roles to execute the complex and far-flung operations of the Illegal Scheme, that they existed separately and apart from the pattern of racketeering, and: (b): The Enterprises had goals other than just racketeering, including, but not limited to, the continued operation of TNK and the Crown Group as producers and sellers of petroleum and Astons as the managers of offshore corporations.

335. Khan attempted to bribe Kondrashina at the August, 2000 meeting.
336. Khan attempted to bribe Kondrashina at the June, 2001 meeting.
337. Nam attempted to bribe Kondrashina at the August, 2001 meeting.
338. TNK attempted to bribe Timoshkin at the August, 2001 meeting.
339. Belevtsov attempted to bribe Timoshkin at the August, 2001 meeting.

EXTORTION

340. The Illegal Scheme included predicate acts of actual or attempted extortion through threats of physical threat or economic loss as described herein in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1951.

341. The Corrupt Kondpetroleum Bankruptcy was used to extort economic benefits from Sidanco's shareholders, including BP-Amoco and Kanrupan.

342. The Corrupt Chernogorneft Bankruptcy was used to extort economic benefits from Sidanco's shareholders, including BP-Amoco and Kantupan, and from Yugraneft.

343. The Corrupt NN2 Bankruptcy was used to extort economic benefits from Yugraneft.

344. Khan threatened Rotzang in November, 1999.

345. Khan threatened Kondrashina at the August, 2000 meeting in order to extort concessions from Yugraneft.

346. Khan threatened Kondrashina at the January, 2001 meeting in order to extort concessions from Yugraneft.

347. Khan threatened Kondrashina at the June, 2001 meeting in order to extort concessions from Yugraneft.

348. TNK took over Yugraneft in June and July, 2001 through physical force and the threat of physical harm.

349. TNK threatened Radov on August 1,2001.

350. Nam threatened Kondrashina in August, 2001.

351. TNK threatened Timoshkin in August, 2001.

352. Belevtsov threatened Timoshkin in August, 2001.

353. TNK obtained control over Yugraneft through extortion as reflected by the threat presented by the armed thugs.

Mail and Wire Fraud

354. The Illegal Scheme included predicate acts of mail and wire fraud as described herein in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1341 and §1343.

355. Upon information and belief, the predicate acts of mail and wire fraud included wiring funds through banks in the United States in order to bribe Russian Government officials involved in the Corrupt 1997 TNK Privatization, the Corrupt 1999 TNK Privatization, the Corrupt NNG Proceedings, the Corrupt Kondpetroleum Bankruptcy, the Corrupt Chernogorneft Bankruptcy, and the Illegal Takeover of Yugraneft.

356. Upon information and belief, the predicate acts of mail and wire fraud included telephone, telefax, and mail communications between persons and entities located in the United States, such as Access, Renova, Blavatnik, Vekselberg, and Crown Resources (USA) Inc. on the one hand, and persons located outside of the United States on the other hand in order to effect the Illegal Scheme, including the Corrupt 1997 TNK Privatization, the Corrupt 1999 TNK Privatization, the Corrupt Nizhnevartovsk Nefte Gaz Takeover and Bankruptcy, the Corrupt Kondpetroleum Bankruptcy, the Corrupt Nizhnevartovsk Nefte Gaz Bankruptcy, the Corrupt Chernogorneft Bankruptcy, and the Illegal Takeover of Yugraneft through fraudulent representations and the threat of physical force.

357. The predicate acts of mail and wire fraud included millions of dollars [directed] through banks in the United States in order to purchase a 40% interest in TNK through the rigged auction in 1997 in the Corrupt 1997 TNK Privatization.

358. The predicate acts of mail and wire fraud included wiring millions of dollars through banks in the United States in order to purchase the remaining interest of TNK through the rigged auction in 1999 in the Corrupt 1999 TNK Privatization.

359. The predicate acts of mail and wire fraud included wiring millions of dollars through banks in the United States obtained through the sale of oil of Kondpetroleum through the Corrupt Kondpetroleum Bankruptcy in 1998 and 1999.

360. The predicate acts of mail and wire fraud included wiring millions of dollars through banks in the United States in order to purchase the assets of Kondpetroleum through the Corrupt Kondpetroleum Bankruptcy in 1999.

361. The predicate acts of mail and wire fraud included wiring millions of dollars through banks in the United States obtained through the sale of oil of Chernogorneft through the Corrupt Chernogorneft Bankruptcy in 1998 and 1999.

362. The predicate acts of mail and wire fraud included wiring approximately $15 million through banks in the United States in order to repay the Ex-Im Bank loan in 1999 as part of the successful effort to take over Chernogorneft thorough the Corrupt Chernogorneft Bankruptcy.

363. The predicate acts of mail and wire fraud included wiring millions of dollars through banks in the United States in order to purchase the assets of Chernogorneft through the Corrupt Chernogorneft bankruptcy in 1999.

364. The predicate acts of mail and wire fraud included wiring millions of dollars through banks in the United States in order to make payments from the Crown Group to the Slush Fund Companies as part of the Massive Tax Fraud.

365. The predicate acts of mail and wire fraud included wiring millions of dollars through banks in the United States in order to make payments from the Slush Fund Companies to Futura, as part of the Massive Tax Fraud.

366. The predicate acts of mail and wire fraud included wiring millions of dollars through banks in the United States from the sale of Yugraneft oil after the Illegal Takeover.

367. The predicate acts of mail and wire fraud included wiring millions of dollars through banks in the United States from the illegal conversion of dollar denominated bank deposits and debentures of Yugraneft after the Illegal Takeover.

368. The predicate acts of mail and wire fraud included the conversation during which Khan attempted to extort Rotzang.

369. The predicate acts consisted of mail and wire fraud including Astons arranging for the wiring of millions of dollars through banks in the United States derived from the sham invoicing in order to facilitate money-laundering and tax fraud.

THIS CASE PROVES THAT THE RUSSIAN 'PRIVATISATION' PHASE WAS LENINIST, THEREFORE FALSE

In successive issues of Soviet Analyst from the early 1990s onwards, the Author argued that since the Soviet operatives and Party-State apparatchiks were all steeped in Leninist deception ideology, their 'free enterprise' and 'privatisation' offensive from 1991 onwards could not be relied upon to be genuine. This case proves that there was never any intention for state assets to remain in 'private' hands, even though these hands were KGB/GRU. ■

Money Laundering

370. The Illegal Scheme included predicate acts of money-laundering regarding the transfers of funds as described herein in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1957.

371. As part of the Illegal Scheme, the proceeds of the sale of oil from Kondpetroleum, Chernogorneft, NNG and TNK were laundered through the Crown Group through the payment of false invoices to the Slush Fund Companies in dollar-denominated wires through banks in the United States as part of the Massive Tax Fraud scheme and in order to create a slush fund to bribe Russian Government officials.

372. After the Illegal Takeover, the proceeds of the sale of oil from Yugraneft were laundered through the sale of Yugraneft's oil in the domestic market through TNK and the international market through the Crown Group in dollar-denominated wire transfers through banks in the United States so that Defendants could appropriate the assets of Yugraneft.

373. Upon information and belief, some of the profits of these proceeds were laundered through the Slush Fund Companies as part of the Massive Tax Fraud scheme and in order to create a slush fund to bribe Russian Government officials.

374. The predicate acts of money-laundering of the Illegal Scheme were in furtherance of the following actual or attempted acts of specified unlawful activity: bribery, extortion, mail and wire fraud, illegal transactions in monetary instruments, and Travel Act violations, as alleged herein.

Illegal Transactions in Monetary Instruments

375. The Illegal Scheme included predicate acts of illegal transactions in monetary instruments as described herein in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1956.

376. Proceeds obtained from the sale of oil of NNG, Kondpetroleum, and Chernogorneft, pursuant to the Illegal Scheme constitute "criminally derived property" in excess of $10,000 and were wired through banks in the United States.

377. Proceeds obtained from the sale of oil obtained from Yugraneft pursuant to the Illegal Scheme constitute "criminally derived property" in excess of $10,000 and were wired through banks located in the United States.

378. Proceeds obtained from the conversion of Yugraneff s dollar denominated bank deposits and debentures pursuant to the Illegal Scheme constitute "criminally derived property" in excess of $10,000 and were wired through banks in the United States.

379. Some of these proceeds were laundered through the Slush Fund Companies as part of the Massive Tax Fraud scheme and in order to create a slush fund for the purpose of bribing Russian Government officials.

380. The predicate acts of illegal transactions in monetary instruments of the Illegal Scheme were in furtherance of the following actual or attempted acts of specified unlawful activity: bribery, extortion, mail and wire fraud, money-laundering, and interstate and foreign travel as alleged in this Complaint.

Interstate and Foreign Travel

381. The Illegal Scheme included predicate acts of interstate and foreign travel in aid of racketeering as described herein in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1952.

382. In order to effect the Illegal Scheme, including the Corrupt 1997 TNK Privatization, the Corrupt 1999 TNK Privatization, the Corrupt Nizhnevartovsk Nefte Gaz Bankruptcy, the Corrupt Kondpetroleum Bankruptcy, the Corrupt Chernogorneft Bankruptcy, and the Illegal Takeover of Yugraneft, various Defendants and their agents travelled to and from the United States to Russia, including Blavatnik, Vekselberg, Kukes, Bakaleynik, Khan, Spitz, from 1997 through [to] the filing of the instant action.

383. The predicate acts of interstate and foreign travel in aid of racketeering of Illegal Scheme were in furtherance of the following actual or attempted acts of unlawful activity: bribery, extortion, money-laundering illegal transactions in monetary instruments, and mail and wire fraud, as alleged herein.

THE UNFOUNDED COMPLACENCY OF WESTERN OIL COMPANIES

Having generally fallen for the Soviet lies surrounding 'collapsible Communism', US and British oil corporations assumed that the energy assets of the 'former' Soviet Bloc would be accessible. This was true, but what they did not understand was that this would happen only on Soviet terms, for modernisation purposes.

The KGB/GRU 'oligarchs' predictably controlled this giga-scam in pursuit of long-term strategic objectives, which were always obvious to any observer whose understanding was not blinded by commercial considerations and greed - namely, to entice Western oil companies and peripheral service organisations into the 'posf-Soviet oil sector, so that the West would pay for upgrading the industry. The assets were always certain to be 'clawed back' by the Leninist 'Party-State' - the structures of which remained in place, 'working by other means' [Lenin]. Remember that at the 'higher' Illuminati control level, Marxism-Leninism is simply the dialectical opposite of Fascism, the contrived geopolitical instruments invented by the 'two Karls' in Germany. Of course the 'mainstream' media, financed in part by intelligence-controlled 'funny money', missed the cue. ■

422. Pursuant to the Illegal Scheme, the above Defendants conspired among themselves, and with others, to violate section §1962(a).

423. The above Defendants knowingly agreed among themselves to commit or participate in at least two Predicate Acts in furtherance of the Conspiracy.

424. Given the complexity and far-reaching nature of the Conspiracy, coupled with the number of instances in which the above Defendants engaged in the Predicate Acts alleged herein, the Predicate Acts committed by the above Defendants could not have been committed without coordination and agreement among the above Defendants to knowingly participate in the Conspiracy.

425. As a direct and proximate cause of the above conspiracy, Norex suffered damages in an amount in excess of $500 million.

A CHAOTIC ILLUMINATI-CONTROLLED WORLD WITH NO BOUNDARIES

In 'The Struggle for World Power", the Russian historian George Knupffer wrote that 'the [Soviet] Revolution was supported first and foremost by certain circles to whom national boundaries were a matter of no importance and who thought and acted internationally at all times'. ■

Violation of RICO §1962(d) for Conspiracy to Violate §1962(b)
Norex v. All Defendants except Astons

426. The allegations of the above paragraphs are incorporated herein as if set out in full.
427. Pursuant to the Illegal Scheme, the above Defendants conspired among themselves, and with others, to violate sections §1962(b).
428. The above Defendants knowingly agreed to commit or participate in at least two Predicate Acts in furtherance of the Conspiracy. [So much for the 'conspiracy theory' alibi].
429. Given the complexity and far-reaching nature of the Conspiracy, coupled with the number of instances in which the above Defendants engaged in the Predicate Acts alleged herein, the Predicate Acts committed by the above Defendants could not have been committed without coordination and agreement among the above Defendants to knowingly participate in the Conspiracy.

SATANIC SIGNALS FROM ON HIGH

LEADERS AND PROMINENT FIGURES OPENLY SALUTE THE DEVIL

In the following sequence of pictures, first published in Global Analyst, Volume 2, Number 1 [2005], the Author reviews the prevalence of open salutes to the Devil. President George W. Bush's wife and the President himself [see page 23], former US Vice-President Dan Quayle, General Tommy Franks, Silvio Berlusconi, Prince Edward and King Abdullah of Jordan are all shown saluting the Evil One -just like the Satanic rock band, the album cover and the participants at a Satanic event, also illustrated here.

Numbered pictures above and right: 1: Mrs Laura Bush displays the Satanic hand-signal, known as the 'horned hand', or 'Devil's Salute' signal, at the Inauguration on 20th January 2005; 2: Ex-Vice President Dan Quayle joins in the chorus of salutations to 'that old serpent, the Devil, and Satan, that deceiveth the whole world'; 3: General Tommy Franks, who inflicted mass deaths in Iraq, stands close [continued on page 733]:

to his President at a briefing in the Texas countryside, exhibiting the 'Devil's Salute', which comes naturally to him, it seems; 4: Silvio Berlusconi, ex-Prime Minister of Italy, caught in the act. He should know what this hand signal means: it's a 'Devil's Salute' used in Sicily to 'cast out evil spells'; 5: Prince William seems to think that the contrived salute he is delivering is amusing. The point is that it actually takes a moment's thought to extend the two fingers in question, which means that this salute cannot be delivered casually: it has to be a conscious act. It is not known whether Prince William, pictured here by Reuters, knew what he was doing, or whether this was just an instance of youthful silliness. The picture was not understood when first published: now we have the context; 6: Members of the (Satanic) Rock Band Metallica display the old 'Devil Salute', and a related 'in-your-face' acknowledgement of whom they worship and revere. They are an appropriately nasty-looking bunch; 7: The Devil's Salute, or diablo symbol, being displayed en masse at an incantation during a Satanic ritual; 8: Detail from an album cover by a Rock Band called Dio, meaning God. The diabolical graphics of this album cover are not fully shown here: but the rest of the cover displays the word Dio in demonic lettering which, when reversed in the mirror, spells Devil. This reflects the fact that the Devil turns everything back to front, and upside down. The Illuminati have no solution to anything, and their only product is death, procured via open-ended confusion - the Devil being the author of all confusion; 9: King Abdullah of Jordan finds it necessary to display the 'horned hand', or 'Devil's Salute' signal as he greets GRU-President Vladimir Putin; 10: The 'mano figo' a.k.a. 'fica gesture', is both a crude insult called the diablo symbol, and a satanic signal, an imagined defence against the evil eye (of Lucifer, also called the 'All-Seeing Eye'), and additionally, a sexual signal; 11: The 'mano cornuto', a.k.a. the Devil's triad, 'ilcornuto', 'cornuto', the horn, the horned Devil, the twin-horned salute, the horned hand, the 'Devil's Salute', and the 'Devil Horn Salute'. When the 'mainstream' US media actually noticed that the President of the United States, his wife and a daughter had seen fit to display these Satanic hand gestures during the Inauguration on 20th January 2005, a cover story was retailed for public consumption to the effect that the hand signal represents the 'Hook 'em Horns' gesture used by the fans of the University of Texas Longhorns. This 'line' was disseminated by Associated Press (which acts more or less as a US state news agency nowadays) and CNN - despite conclusive evidence, supported by academic authorities, that this gesture represents a celebration of, and a sign of obeisance to, the Devil, Satan, the Evil One. Beyond that, if the Texas University Longhorns perform this signal routinely, they salute the Devil routinely, too. Whether fans do this wittingly or not is irrelevant: that's what they are doing.

In his Inauguration speech, President Bush proclaimed: 'By our efforts, we have lit... a fire in the minds of men. It warms those who feel its power, it burns those who fight its progress, and one day this untamed fire of freedom will reach the darkest corners of our world'. What does this Luciferian statement mean in translation from the language of the hof-Illuminati? It rejoices in setting fires, which is a central preoccupation of the possessed and those in thrall to Lucifer - who, as the Author's late and dear friend Malachi Martin confirmed [page 7] 'have all passed through [initiation] that involves three things: the infliction of pain without flinching, the infliction of death without flinching, and the use of fire'. For initiates, the deaths in Iraq and those in New Orleans are just 'collateral damage'. ■

GEOMASONIC HANDSHAKE SIGNALS

GEOMASONIC HANDSHAKES: THE GRIPS OF THE BROTHERHOOD'

In the following sequence of pictures, taken from old press clippings (as reflected in their quality), some conspicuous geomasonic handshakes ('grips') are identified. A graphic summary of these 'grips' (labelled A-E) is given, with commentary, on page 737. Due to the relative imprecision of a few of these pictures, it is possible that one or more grips may be imperfectly identified: but the message of this presentation should be clear: the Illuminati inhabit their own secret synarchical world apart from the rest of us.

This picture was accompanied by no less than three handshake close-ups on the front page of 'The Times' of London, as though Rupert Murdoch, owner of the newspaper, wished to make it clear to those whom Lenin referred to as 'the interested' that 'The Brotherhood' is in the driving seat, and orchestrates such rapprochements in accordance with its own agenda (depending on priorities and the 'correlation of forces'); 4: Tony Blair, a 'high' Mason, demonstrating to Mr Nastase of Romania, that he is a Master Mason, with Nastase basically remonstrating with the strength of his grip that he is really 'Mr Nasty'; 5: This extremely revealing picture shows the high-ranking Masonic status of both President Clinton and of the Lenin look-alike, Gerry Adams. This may be a Pass Grip of the Master Mason, or Tubal Cain. In the United States, Master Masons often wear a tie-pin with the image of a cane (walking stick) with two balls, which is a typically cynical Masonic play on words, with obscene overtones: such people routinely wear such tie-pins to church, since they are 'double-minded'. Masonry and Illuminism are wholly incompatible with True Christianity (though not, of course, with paganised Christianity/Churchianity as purveyed, regrettably, by most of the churches); 6: Nelson Mandela and F W De Klerk, 8th August 1990. De Klerk is alleged to have accepted a substantial US-funded 'facilitation payment' for his corrupt part in handing South Africa over to the criminalist South African Communist Party, fronted by the African National Congress. All these pictures seek to demonstrate that this world is governed by the Illuminati. See Matthew 3, 8-11. ■

*Five Points of Fellowship:
Five is said to represent perfect intelligence, hence Pentagon and the Kabbalistic occult pentalpha. Performing the Five Points necessitates the Worshipful Master and candidate going foot to foot, knee to knee, hand to back, cheek to cheek or mouth to ear, whereupon the Master whispers Mah-Hah-Bone in the candidate's ear, which he then reciprocates. The overtones of this ritual are both obvious and repugnant.

G: SIGN OF A FELLOW CRAFT WITHOUT DUE GUARD, WHICH IS WHAT AMERICANS DO WHEN SALUTING THE FLAG AND STANDING FOR THE NATIONAL ANTHEM

'AS ABOVE, SO BELOW

In the mentally unstable and certifiable Luciferian occult construct in which the Masonic Illuminati operate, when the 'Orphic Egg' [see page XXXI] of 'Ancient Mysteries' mythology in the universe is 'broken', there are found to be three (3) energies, or 'phanes', resident within it. This is all lunatic, fantastic tripe and nonsense; but it is what these idiotic generational occultists 'profess' to believe.

The first of these 'phanes' is called three (or the letter I for Invisible or the Eye of the occultic all-seeing presence, i.e. of Lucifer: see the MI5 symbol in Figure 1 on page 3). Energy supposedly 'released' when the egg is 'broken' (exactly WHO breaks it is left unstated) remains, in the case of three where it is, As Above - while the other two 'phanes' or 'forces' descend to Earth, As Below. This 'As Above, So Below' gibberish is replicated in the common occult notion that God is both good and evil, and that Satan is part of him [see Figure 102 below]. This is ludicrously inconsistent with the parallel gibberish (or clashing lie) called Deism, which postulates falsely that God sleeps, so it is the privilege of the Illuminati to 'manage' the mechanistic universe that God created, before he fell asleep.

On Earth, the 'released' energy has split or metamorphosed into good against evil and evil against good. This is called 322, the presence of the god 3 in harmony ('As Above'), and the 2 mechanistic opposing 'seething energies' (22) released, and fighting for supremacy ('As Below*). When an orchestrated revolution, for instance, has been completed, 3, or harmony, is all that remains on Earth, 'As Above' (although, again, it is left unstated how 3 suddenly 'descends' to earth: presumably it 'fills the gap' left by the two self-destructed mechanistic 'energies', or 'phanes' - which will have fought each other to annihilation).

Translated from this mad nonsense into the contemporary global environment, the two competing 'phanes' that are struggling for power are two dialectical factions within the Illuminati - one being represented by the pan-German Nazi Illuminati 'line' (in geomasonic terms, the Illuminati-penet-rated Grand Orient), and the other being the 'Scottish' Rite Illuminati 'line' espoused by the (hated) and also equally deluded 'Anglo-Saxons'. Other 'dialectics' include the separate German Nazi-Zionazi conflict, and the rivalry/cooperation between the KGB and Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst (DVD), Dachau.

Since the protagonists live in an occult environment at various stages of actual or prospective demonic possession, this Luciferian, invented pyramid of fantastic lies is, for them, reality; and since the factions of the sect of the Illuminati have penetrated the intelligence communities and certain structures of the key governments - on behalf of Satan, father of death - the havoc these evil people are consciously inflicting upon the world appears, for the time being, to have no limit.

Their world is mechanistic although they profess to believe in good and evil, this is a feint, since in a mechanistic world, everything is deterministic, with no distinction between good and evil accordingly being possible. Pursuant to this fundamental lie, they call evil good, and good evil, contrary to the Word of God through Isaiah: 'Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness, that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter! Woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes, and prudent in their own sight' [Isaiah, Chapter 5, verses 20-21]. The sole product of these people is death: they are all themselves spiritually en route to death. Death is what 'they do'.

As they know that they themselves are doomed, their preoccupation is to bring everyone else down to the pit of perdition, with them. The obsession of some of these people with population reduction and mass slaughter - the false rationale being that this is the only way to 'save the planet' - is directly related to demonic infestation. They are indeed the most dangerous people on earth, regarding all casualties as 'collateral damage'.

Since, for the Illuminati, the occult mental state of decay into which they have fallen is reality, everything that is normal is unreal, expendable, ephemeral, transitional, temporary and ripe for 'change'. And having 'ascended' by Luciferian ritual initiations, they claim to have acquired 'authority' to reorder the 'mechanistic' world in accordance with their idea of 'what is best for Man', i.e. for the Brotherhood of the Illuminati. These are the same people who saw that Jesus Christ threatened their hegemony. He always will. Which is why True Christians are the Illuminati's 'Main Enemy', and why Weishaupt and many of his successors have acknowledged that the destruction of (TRUE) Christianity (which is impossible) is the 'top priority'. ■

DOUBLE-MINDED LUCIFERIAN ALLIANCE AGAINST THE 'MAIN ENEMY

'How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning! How art thou cut down to the ground, which did weaken the nations! For thou hast said in thine heart, I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God... I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will be like the most High. Yet thou shalt be brought down to hell, to the sides of the pit.... Thou art cast out of thy grave, like an abominable branch... That made the world as a wilderness, and destroyed the cities thereof, that opened not the house of [the] prisoners'. [Isaiah, Chapter 13, verses 12-15,19 and 17].

Giuseppe Mazzini, the drug-dealing Illuminist founder of the contemporary mafia, and reprobate colleague of the Satanist Magus Albert Pike, referred to the Pope as the 'Papal Caesar'. 'Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for it is the number of a man; and his number is six hundred three-score and six' [Revelation, Chapter 13, verse 18]. The beast, whose number kaballistically-numerologically is 666, translates as Lateinos, or 'the Latin kingdom', the number of which (in Latin) is 616 (devolving to 13, the 'magick' number of the Illuminati). As John's follower Polycarp knew, Lateinos stood for the God-Caesar referred to by Mazzini.

Herein lies the essence of the double-mindedness of the Illuminati, of which there can be no doubt that the Vatican is the central locus. For it is in the Vatican - where a man 'representing' Jesus Christ, and at times referring to himself or allowing himself to be worshipped as though he IS Jesus Christ - utters empty, soothing words in a specially contrived manner of speaking, preoccupied with the interests of the worldly church-organisation - that nuns murder Popes with poisoned champagne, as though this procedure were nothing unusual: which is the case, given that Gregory V (996-999), Damasus II (1048), Celesrine II (1143), Leo XI (1605), numerous cardinals and Alexander Borgia all died from poisoning, the Illuminati's preferred liquidation method. Pope John Paul I died in late September 1978 with his mouth gaping so wide in agony, that the four embalming brothers Signoracci from the Medical Institute were unable to close it for the duration of Vatican's usual death-fest - since death is the geomasonic Illuminati's only product. This is proclaimed by one of the Illuminati's own dogmatic assertions: 'Anyone who reveals our secrets, voluntarily or involuntarily, signs his own death warrant'.

Figure 103: Rochus Misch, a member of Hitler's innermost entourage - who turned out to be the last person to leave the bunker alive - is shown relaxing and enjoying the scenery in the restaurant car of Hitler's train, the name of which was Amerika. That the Fuhrer named his train Amerika reveals the essence of the Nazis' global hegemony strategy. Had the Third Reich conquered Europe, it would have targeted the United States - the total takeover of which remains the German Nazi Continuum's overriding objective. Figure 104: Hezbollah terrorists performing the Hitler Salute in Southern Lebanon in July 2006 [Associated Press]. When this image appeared in the British press, no reference was made to the whole point of the photograph - namely that these terrorists were clones of Hitler's stormtroopers and brainwashed Third Reich supporters. The reason they are all performing the Hitler Salute is that Hezbollah, Iran and Syria are secret operations of Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst, Dachau - the 'Black' Nazi strategic Continuum.

The renegade Jesuit Jew, Adam Weishaupt, and his associates resolved, with the formalisation of the sect of the Illuminati on the pagan feast of Beltane (1st May) 1776, to put into effect the programme that they had revealed in Munich a year earlier - to form and control public opinion by all means available, to insinuate its adepts into the entourages of rulers and wielders of power and influence, to usurp such power whenever feasible, to covet and procure control over the assets of the wealthy, raw materials, and finance, to degrade and destroy all formal religions and institutions including the family, en route to targeting private property, and finally to take over the Papacy - placing agents of its own in the so-called Chair of Peter (which is itself a deception, since Peter was never in Rome: see Galatians, Chapter 2, verse 7). Just about a century later, the Illuminati Magus Albert Pike developed his diabolical programme for three conflagrations. The third of these, exploiting Islam - the dialectical Antithesis of the formal religion of God-Caesar - is being leveraged for the Illuminati's agentur by criminalised elements of intelligence communities, which are implementing the Dluminati's mad, anti-nation state, global hegemony programme. Masking their abominations behind the cover provided by the Illuminati and its 'sib' 'Protocols' blueprint (which, not least the 'explosions from below' confirm is being implemented today, to the letter), the Dachau-based German Nazi occultic Continuum, Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst, with its serpent's head resident on the territory of the 'Main Enemy'*, the United States, makes common cause with the 'beas' in pursuit of its idolatry of global control.

But the 'Availing Time' is very short. 'For the mystery of iniquity doth already work only he who now letteth, will let, until he be taken out of the way. And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming: Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan, with all power and signs and lying wonders. And with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause, God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: That they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness' [2 Thessalonians, Chapter 2, verses 7-12]. So the global control clique, riven by jealousy and hatred, cannot succeed

Those who persist with this global hegemony idolatry, who covet control of vast financial resources, all who pervert and corrupt little children - those maddened fools who have said in their heart 'there is no God', save Lucifer - need to be reminded that 'the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone' [Revelation, Chapter 21, verse 8]. This, rather than the idiocy of reincarnation, is what awaits these creatures.

As for the rest of us, we need to remind ourselves of the wise words of David, the Psalmist: 'Fret not thyself because of evil doers, neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity. For they shall soon be cut down like the grass, and wither as the green herb' [Psalm 37, verses 1 and 2]; and: 'I have seen the wicked in great power, and spreading himself like a green bay tree. Yet he passed away, and, lo, he was not: yea, I sought him, but he could not be found' [Psalm 37, verses 35 and 36]. And to prevail, we must 'put on the whole armour of God, that [we] may be able to stand against the wiles of the Devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places' [Ephesians, Chapter 6, verses 11 and 12] - as illustrated in this work. ■

* Following the Second World War, the German Geopolitical Centre which had been established in the 1940s in Madrid, perfected and implemented its 'Blowback' operation against 'the Main Enemy', Britain and America. While Britain was enticed and entrapped in the Nazis' long-range strategic deception operation now calling itself the European Union, the United States was targeted via 'Operation Paperclip' and the consolidation of a massive Nazi penetration of US intelligence, the universities and military-industrial/official structures. The head of the Abwehr, Admiral Canaris - protected by the disinformation lie that he had been hanged naked on 9th April 1945 at Flossenburg - surfaced with a large contingent of Nazis in Oklahoma, using the alias Samuel Randall Pittman, or Pittmann. The records of this Nazi penetration were destroyed in the Murrah Building as a result of the Oklahoma Bombing. After Canaris fell ill in 1976, his place as head of the 'Gehlen Organisation', by now the secret Nazi 'Black' agency, Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst, Dachau, was temporarily taken by the alleged multiple operative Dr Henry Kissinger, who allegedly ceded it to George H. W. Bush (real name ?: Scherff) in 1978. The DVD has ruthlessly adhered to the principles enunciated in the 'Madrid Circular Letter' of 'building the Thousand-Year Reich on the Ruins of the United States' and 'fur uns der Krieg its niemals vorbei'. ■

This is a non-fiction memoir. Where noted, the names of characters and organizations have been altered.

Special mention must be made of one of the employers of Mitch, the antagonist in this non-fiction book. He reported to the author in January 2015 that the 1945 CIA Operation Paperclip resettled his Nazi mind-control scientist grandfather to America. Mitch is an American accented, senior military and intelligence officer and expert in MK-ULTRA mind-control. In May, 2015 Mitch did tell me the institution he works for, in addition to the military. For legal reasons his other employer will be referred to as CICA.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I thank my loving and dedicated wife, son, brother-in-law and his family, and my parents-in-law for their incredible love and support during the decade of difficulties that necessitated writing this book.

Special thanks also to:

Dr. Ira B., family physician, who has provided excellent professional care and support.

Ruth J. M. G. a professor of social work and her student Norm M. who cared for my wife and I in person during and following the very stressful events of 2015.

Ann Diamond for finding my postings online and asking to edit this book. She also provided heartfelt support to the author.

A close neighbour Carla L. reached out to support my family and me like no other.

Dr. Colin MacPherson, a Psychiatrist specializing in treating Psychological Trauma (and PTSD), for his outstanding dedication, medical care and humanity over 250 hours of therapy. Colin has moved near a Canadian Air Force base and leads a team that has treated many veterans of the Afghanistan war.

Lorna Milne, Psychotherapist at The Centre for Psychotherapy in Toronto for expertise in treating Psychological Trauma in over 250 hours of therapy.

Yvette C. (sister) for her editing of the first manuscript version in 2006.

Ellen R. and Vanna P. for providing edits to early versions of the manuscript.

Vladimir of the Russian Martial Art School for his teaching and patience.

Sean Stone, filmmaker, actor, and documentary interviewer for interviewing me on his show “Buzzsaw” at TheLip.TV, Episode 208 “Scopolamine: The Devil’s Breath and Confessions of an MK ULTRA Sleeper Assassin[1]”.

Adam Finnegan of the Indie/Alternative Rap Band ‘Foreign Policy’ for writing and producing “Scopolamine Sleepers[2]” a song inspired by the above-mentioned interview. Adam then created a stunning music video promoting the song and this book: Scopolamine Sleepers Video[3]

Adam gave much support, helping me traverse rapids of worry and fear to complete the book, and became a friend.

DEDICATION

This book is dedicated first to those who have been tortured, under any circumstances. Second, this book is dedicated to those who suffer Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD), which includes most in the first category. This book is especially dedicated to MK-ULTRA Monarch test subjects, including super soldiers, all of who, by definition, have been tortured, and suffer from PTSD.

Besides time, accelerators to healing need to include:

a) Psycho-dynamic psychotherapy, and

b) Mindfulness-based therapy, and

c) For some, adjunct medication therapies

There is no replacement for talk therapy with psychotherapists and those few psychiatrists specializing in Post-Traumatic Stress disorder.

This book is especially dedicated to the hundreds of Canadian Forces soldiers upon returning from Afghanistan had PTSD and have not received the help they deserve in a timely manner, or at all. More loss of life has occurred upon their return from lack of access to PTSD treatment than in the war. This is shameful to all Canadians.

These young, courageous men and women were injured in combat through no fault of their own and deserve prompt, top-quality, on-going treatment.

This is also dedicated to the innocent in Mitch's MK-ULTRA mind control experiment in 2008.

INTRODUCTION

A Canadian academic reviewing this book before publication insisted that before telling my story I must explain how it fits into the power dynamics of society.

On a family vacation in China in 2012 by chance I met several Chinese dissidents in their late twenties. One showed me an English translation of the essay he wrote and published which put him in the cross hairs of the government. His was a brave criticism. He was literally on the run, not staying long in any one place. I was shocked for the first time meeting someone who legitimately feared for their safety based on something they had written.

I told him of my book effort. I explained my non-consensual involvement since 2005 as the subject of mind-control research by the US Military Joint Task Force (JTF) and CICA with Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) support. I said I was considering publishing as fiction since the violent black operations by professionals left very little evidence, and I feared retaliation.

He said emphatically: “This is an important story! You must publish this as non-fiction, otherwise it will mean nothing!” I agreed with the Chinese dissident then, and I completely agree now after my subsequent whistleblowing has resulted in life-shortening retaliation. This retaliation suggests my story illuminates an important mechanism of the power dynamics of society.

Recently in Dallas, Texas radio host Alex Jones interviewed Vivian Kubrick, daughter of the great filmmaker Stanley Kubrick. Vivian Kubrick had held a pro-constitution sign in a peaceful protest, exercising her first amendment rights and police told her she had to move away. As she walked away the police repeatedly pushed her with their fists in the center of her back[4].

Jones asked, “What was your dad, with his great artist mind, what would he think of what America has turned in to, because his films predicted it?” She replied, “My father was very haunted by those factions on our planet that try to manipulate humanity…I think the films that he made, he wanted people to think for themselves, experience for themselves, whatever it meant to them…”

This book, not nearly so artfully, tells of the mind-control mechanisms used by some intelligence agencies, on behalf of greater societal forces, to manipulate humanity with manufactured hate crimes, assassinations and terror events. I ask people to read this book and make up their own minds.

US intelligence agencies, and military have been working since at least WWII on human experimentation, including mind-control, with the goal of forcing people to do things against their will and interest, such as carrying out missions as spies, assassins[5], couriers and sex slaves.

Canada historically has been a CIA MK-ULTRA mind-control research site of the USA. MK is thought to be an abbreviation from the Latin Germanic 'Mentale Kontrolle', or mind-control in German. In 1945, the CIA resettled many thousands of Nazi scientists, in rocketry and mind control, to America in 'Project Paperclip' seeding NASA, CIA, and the military with Nazism[6].

In 1940 secret letters between George Estabrooks of Colgate College in New York tantalized Ernest Bavin, head of RCMP intelligence with a plan of making hypnotically programmed spies.[7] After some back and forth, Bavin finally declined. Estabrooks had a successful career consulting to the CIA, military and did develop hypnotically controlled, non-consensual spies. However from the significant RCMP involvement in my case documented herein, it is evident they do support the CICA with mind-control R & D on Canadians. The report from another victim to me in 1981, (see Preface) suggests they have been at it for many decades.

The Canadian government and the CIA funded Dr. Ewen Cameron's mind control research on thousands of unsuspecting patients at the Royal Victoria Hospital and the Allan Memorial Institute in Montreal in the 1950s and 1960s. Thousands were disabled, and some died from horrors done to them. Very few were compensated as hospital records were destroyed. Still today Psychiatrists are not taught of this in Canadian medical schools. This Subproject 68 was one of over 100 CIA MK-ULTRA subprojects, many done in the USA.

In testimony before the US Senate Church Committee hearings in 1975, the CIA asserted this MK-ULTRA mind control research stopped. A former CIA deputy director Victor Marchetti said that "is a cover story." A CIA deep insider in 2014 reported this program was still active, only covert[8].

Few are aware that a method exists using torture, hypnosis and a rare Voodoo drug called Scopolamine, to turn a person into a robot, so they can be controlled to do anything. “I can give you a gun and tell you to go kill someone and you will do it,” said a leading expert on the drug, Dr. Camilo Uribe, head of the Toxicology Unit at San Jose University Hospital.[9]

The ability to anonymously mind-control an actor to be violent is a powerful aphrodisiac to those who lust for more power using deception. I have seen it with my eyes.

First the target is tortured until they dissociate. To dissociate means ones dominant personality goes to sleep to protect the psyche. Once dissociated, resisting hypnosis becomes very difficult. Anyone given enough torture-trauma conditioning will dissociate and can be turned into a “sleeper” to be activated later by the programmer.

Victims are hypnotically programmed to perform a newsworthy assassination, hate crime, mass-shooting or just hang around a crime scene after shooting a few rounds, acting as a ‘patsy’ to be caught after the professionals leave the scene without a trace.

After the first programming event, I had no conscious memory of what happened for four years and five months due to dissociative amnesia. I was handicapped in gathering evidence like seeking medical attention or calling the police.

For years after the programming, the anonymous handler can activate the ‘sleeper’ at any time through post-hypnotic triggers (signals) both visual and audible. ‘Plausibly deniable’, state-sponsored hate crimes, assassinations and terror events can be directed using non-consensual citizens who will have no memory of the event for years. While my mind was disabled by Scopolamine, torture-trauma to dissociation and hypnosis my body was used in such an event in 2008.

The political-security apparatus serve the uber-powerful.

News media ownership is highly concentrated in America and elsewhere. The owners exert enormous influence on what does and does not appear in the news by their power to choose editors and executives, and to dictate editorial policy.

Cherry picking news stories to create a preferred news reality is not enough for the uber-powerful. They go further to knowingly sell intelligence-agency-manufactured, false-flag terror events as authentic to deceive and usually terrify the public. A fearful citizenry is easier to control, for maximum profit.

Once the public is full of fear, terrorized, from ‘lone wolf/ideological’ terrorist events hyped by the media, they are more inclined to give up their rights to privacy, freedom of speech, freedom from arbitrary search and seizure, and so on ‘to be protected from the terrorists.’

The terrorized population is more accepting of wars waged to ‘get the terrorists’ usually in places with oil, opium, or geo-political interest. In short, deception and fear (terror) is used to control the citizenry, and to extort more profits from afar. If we delve deeper into who funds the overseas terror groups, we come full circle.

As of November 2015, 50% (14 of the 28) of the worst mass shootings in the USA[10] since 1949 had happened in the last decade. The expected percentage based on an equal time distribution is only 15% (10 years/65 years). The actual percentage is 233% higher than expected (35%/15%). Criminals had Thompson sub-machine guns before 1949. The US population in the last decade has not increased anywhere near 233%.

This clustering of US mass shootings in the last decade happens to coincide with my experience of being trained as a non-consensual, hypnotically programmed assassin in 2005, and later abducted to the US and non-consensually tested in 2008. The total mind-control training time was less than five hours in two sessions by a JTF and CICA mind-control expert descended from, according to his own words, a CIA Project Paperclip Nazi mind-control scientist grandfather.

Mass shootings were attributed to ‘lone wolf gunman/terrorists’ have brought about the most draconian, rights-reducing legislation ‘to protect us from the terrorists’ in the USA, Canada and Britain, since WWII.

The Canada Anti-Terrorist Act, Bill C-51, and the US P.A.T.R.I.O.T. Act and National Defense Authorization Act are prime examples. Two of these were passed right after 9/11. The citizen’s ability to participate in their democracy, i.e. to speak freely, to have freedom of religion, to have freedom of assembly, to have privacy, freedom from arbitrary search and seizure, were curtailed. The Pro-War, Big Oil, Corporatist agenda (e.g. TPP) is now nearly unopposed.

In summary, the covert mind-control R & D reported herein is a smoking gun in a covert war which benefits a select group in the political-security apparatus and a powerful few families whose banking, media and other interests benefit from wars and a more fear-controlled, servile citizenry. It would be naïve to assume other powerful countries lack this technology.

Except for a few paragraphs in the Conclusion there will be no more politics or agenda.

PREFACE

It was Christmas break of 1981. I had just returned home to my parents in Regina, Saskatchewan, after an exciting, intellectually stimulating and challenging first semester of Liberal Arts and Sciences at Trent University in Peterborough, Ontario. During the break I socialized a lot with friends, including attending a large party at the house of a friend of a friend. I was eighteen years old.

I had drunk a fair amount of beer, and began spouting revolutionary ideas. My father was a somewhat radical Cultural Anthropologist and Sociologist who had taught me to shake off the shackles of Prussian style education, to think critically and discover my own truths.

The worst that had happened to my father for being an activist and free thinker was getting a death threat by postcard. He had also had his teaching contract at York University not renewed after his stinging critique of York's administration at a national students conference ended up on page A6 of The Globe and Mail. He moved the family to Regina, Saskatchewan where he co-founded the Social Sciences department of the University of Saskatchewan, Regina campus.

The death threat happened in about 1968 after he asked his friend Barbara Frum, known from his activist years teaching at York University, to have CBC national news cover a case of at least excessive force. The Regina Police shot a young First Nations man in the back, dead, while he fled a convenience store robbery carrying a knife that had not been used.

My father then organized a protest of mostly students in front of the Regina Police headquarters, after which the police chief said to the press, "I hate hippies." I watched as the CBC national news team set up lights and cameras in our house. The whole house had gone dark just before the interview was to start when they overloaded the old wiring with their bright studio lights. Upon replacing a fuse, my father was interviewed.

The threatening anonymous-type postcard from Weyburn, Saskatchewan followed shortly after the story aired on the CBC National News. "Keep your big nose out of other people's business. Shut your mouth or someone will shut it for you." The return address was fake, and the Regina Police told my father they could not investigate further.

I was less than five years old. My mother was supposed to keep the postcard from me, but she left it out on the living room coffee table. I learned to read quite young and although I did not understanding some of the message, I memorized part of it and later asked my father about it later. He apologized for my mother leaving the card out, and gave me an honest explanation. He downplayed the threat completely so I would not worry. That was the worst retaliation for my father's decades of activism that I knew of.

After ten minutes of spouting revolutionary rhetoric at the house party in 1981, a man in his late thirties, probably the oldest at the party, approached me. I cannot remember exactly what I had been saying to a crowd but it was something along the lines of getting pitchforks and torches and marching to parliament.

The observer had been listening to me from a distance holding his beer and motionless except to sip his beer slowly. He wore glasses, long hair by today's standards, and side burns.

He approached me and said, "I've been listening to you talk. You're quite a talker."

"Thank you!"

"I want you to talk with you for just a minute."

"Sure," I said.

"Come with me over here where it's quieter," he said as he led me to a quieter corner of the living room.

He backed into the corner and gestured me to stand close. I approached taking a sip of my beer.

He said, "I want to let you know something for your own good."

"What's that?"

He continued, "If you continue talking the way you just did, one day you will get in a lot of trouble."

"What do you mean?"

"You will be picked up by the authorities, I don't want to say who, and they will make you an experimental subject. "

"What?"

"They will do horrible things to you… they'll use torture and drugs," he said now leaning in close.

"You'll tell your friends and they won't believe you, no one will believe you."

"But," I interrupted to no avail as the mature man continued.

"They will make you kill someone!" he said emphatically, and finally.

Seeing disbelief in my expression his speech became more rapid, “You will lose your friends, and family! Your life will be wrecked forever.”

“No! That can’t be true, this is Canada! We are a democracy,” I countered.

Without losing a beat he replied, “It is true. I was just like you at your age. Look into my eyes! It happened to me, it is true!”

I looked in his eyes and they were unflinching, he seemed to be telling the truth. I was flabbergasted and shocked. How could this be? This flew in the face of everything I believed about my country.

Awkwardly I extricated myself, “Um, I will think about that, I need to talk to someone,” I said as I gestured towards someone in the crowd and walked away.

From the age of two years old, I grew up in Regina, Saskatchewan, the birthplace of the New Democratic Party, originally the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation (CCF.) Tommy Douglas was the leader and brought in Universal Health Care and an Old Age Pension Plan, both of which were later adopted federally for all of Canada. This more compassionate society was distinctly different from our big brother to the south.

Every Sunday morning my parents took the family to ‘The Unitarians’ , where often an old gentleman in a wheelchair attended with his family. He had been present at the founding meeting of the CCF; it was held at his farm.

Canada had free speech among many other rights being enshrined in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms around that time. Prime Minister Pierre Elliot Trudeau had the intestinal fortitude to keep Canada out of the Vietnam War. Then my conception of our national identity came from my school textbooks; our culture was distinct from our big brought next door, something to be proud of.

Just before attending university I had spent nine months in Katimavik, a federal government sponsored, youth volunteer work program analogous to the US Peace Corps, but decidedly different. Participants lived in groups of twelve with a group leader, in three-month stints in different regions of Canada where they did physical labour for one dollar a day, to help the community. The group represented Canada’s demographics. We were taught many life skills, a second language and good citizenship.

I believed in the fundamental freedoms of our country. I believed we were a democracy. I could not believe Canadians could be selected “by authorities" based on their beliefs or speech for non-consensual mind-control experiments in which they were tortured, drugged and forced to kill.

I had not heard of MK-ULTRA, and its main goal to develop mind-control to force people into doing things against their interest including killing others, with no memory of the event for many years. I did not know that a former CIA deputy director, Victor Marchetti, had rebuked the CIA's assertion at the 1975 Church Committee Senate hearings that the program had stopped saying this was "a cover story."

I had never heard of MK-ULTRA Subproject 68, a CIA and Canadian government funded mind-control research effort led by Dr. Ewen Cameron at Royal Victoria Hospital and Allan Memorial Hospital in Montreal in the 1950s and 1960s.

To believe this man at the party would have crushed much of my worldview. I was experiencing Cognitive Dissonance but I did not know what that was. Once home a few hours later, I remember standing in my bedroom, thinking over what the man had said. I decided I could not believe him. To believe him would be too unsettling.

Over twenty-five years later, I have painfully come to know he was right.

Since I report what I did not believe of a stranger years ago, I am attaching a supportive doctor's letter so others may not make the mistake I did. I have since changed my pen name to Matthew Pauly to nearly match my Facebook profile http://facebook.com/matthew.pauley99 referenced later in the book.

Re: [redacted] (alias Malcolm Pauly),
D.O.B. [redacted], 1964

To whom it may concern:

This is to certify that I have known [redacted] (alias Malcolm Pauly) since the spring of 2006, and I have been meeting with him regularly in psychiatric follow-up since that time. He initially presented with symptoms consistent with PTSD, associated with vivid memories of having been tortured by government anti-terrorist forces in a van on or about November 26, 2005.

Since his initial presentation he has had trials of three different antipsychotic medications due to my concerns that these memories may be false. This includes a trial with clozapine, well known to be an antipsychotic with superior efficacy. He retains full memory and certainty of the events in question despite these trials. He has not been diagnosed with a Delusional Disorder.

He has never presented with suicidal ideations, intentions, or plans.

Sincerely,

Colin Macpherson M.D. FRCPC

CHAPTER 1: 2007 Q3 - Electroshock as Mind-Control

"Three things cannot be long hidden: the sun, the moon, and the truth" - Buddha

It was a cool, overcast, early autumn evening in 2007 as I walked east on the north side of King Street in Toronto towards the Yonge street subway. The distance from my workplace in the Holiday Inn building to the subway was about six blocks. It was early evening with sunset less than an hour away. The Broadway style theaters had canopies with hundreds of light bulbs that illuminated the sidewalk out front and radiated heat onto passers-by. The shows had already started, so there were no line-ups.

I worked as a senior computer programmer of on line trading systems. I had been a programmer for two decades and had returned to my career only six months earlier, after taking a year and a half off recovering from Post Traumatic Stress Disorder. Previously my longest time off work from sickness was two weeks in my twenties when I caught chicken pox. Although not yet back at the top of my game, I felt great relief at being back at work in my field.

I stand about 6' 1" with an average build, and what others have said is a 'Scottish look'. Given the huge influx of Scots into Canada a century ago, I could blend into a crowd, but there was no crowd this evening; the streets were almost bare.

Only two weeks earlier, I had received an edited version of my manuscript by un-encrypted email. My first editor, a relative with a graduate degree in English Literature, had spent several months editing a first draft of a tell-all book.

I knew my interrogators in November 2005 had made me promise to tell nothing about the van-based torture interrogation. The American officer 'Mitch', a US Joint Task Force (JTF) officer, and the Canadian JTF2 officer 'Red' had said my face would appear in the paper if I started talking about what was done to me. "It won't look good," Mitch had added. The taller, heavier, dark-haired Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) officer 'Burly', who spoke with a slight French accent, had said very little during the interrogation, but played a central role in hooking up the torture devices and obtaining a forced confession.

I thought of myself as someone who stood up for human rights. It had felt good to write of the experience, despite the personal risk. I knew that sending the manuscript to my editor by un-encrypted email was a risk, as the authorities in the van had said I was going to be kept under surveillance.

What would they do when they read my manuscript exposing the torture? But had I sent encrypted email I might have led them to believe I was hiding something sinister: perhaps they would think I really was a terrorist, perhaps they would interrogate my relatives. Besides, how could I teach my stepsister-editor to send PGP encrypted email from over one thousand miles away? There was nothing to be done now anyway, the action was taken. I was glad to see the manuscript making progress but I felt a little unnerved, my caution combined with a sense of foreboding.

Mitch had threatened that I might also be taken to Guantanamo Bay if I started talking about the coercive interrogation. But the most serious consequence of talking was only hinted at by an odd question. Mitch had asked, “What side of the bed do you sleep on, inside or outside?”

After I told him “the outside,” Mitch responded: “Just to make sure we’re clear on this, Matthew, by outside do you mean the side closest to the door?”

“Yes,” I responded.

This odd question would remain unremembered, rolling around in my unconscious for three more years. When it finally surfaced into my conscious mind it would erupt like a red-hot jet of lava from a volcano. A single question by an officer can have a profound effect on one’s sense of safety and security at home.

However, on that night in 2007 as I walked east along the north side of King Street toward the Yonge subway, the ominous question was still repressed, not yet in my conscious mind just as memory of my sleeper agent training was still repressed.

There were few pedestrians that evening, as the weather was partially overcast, partly sunny, with occasional sprinkles of rain. Up ahead, half a block away, I saw an off-white van parked facing me on the north side of King Street, my side. I continued walking east with caution, having become leery of parked vans since 2005.

Coming closer, I saw this van was not as big as the tall, boxy, dull mono-colour, armoured five-ton military van in which I was interrogated in 2005. Instead it was about the size of a Ford Econoline van, with a sliding side door and a slightly taller roof, similar to an ambulance. When I was a quarter of a block away, I could see the unmarked van had a driver and passenger inside. I started to feel nervous. My instinct was to run, but that was irrational. I couldn't run every time I saw an unmarked van parked on my side of the street.

A shorthaired, man in a dark suit walked towards me about an equal distance on the other side of the van ahead of me, but he his path was to my left, further from the curb. Curiously, at twenty paces from the van he veered towards the curb, towards me. To avoid colliding with him I veered to my right, which meant I was going to be closer to the curb parked looming van.

I willed myself to act normally and just keep walking towards and past the van. A car's length from the van, again the man veered to me, almost cutting me off. To avoid him I veered right to within two feet of the parked van and slowed my pace, as this erratic pedestrian appeared ready to sandwich me against the van. To my alarm, he also slowed down.

One pace after I passed the passenger door, I heard someone call "Matthew!" just behind me, in a loud voice from the passenger side window. I stopped in my tracks. I knew that voice. Time slowed down.

About six feet away stood another man with a big umbrella blocking the view to the west in case anyone was walking behind me. The man in the van who had just called my name remained facing forward; only the back and side of his head was visible revealing short, blond hair and an unsmiling mouth. The passenger window was half rolled down and I saw dust and smearing on the windshield, backlit from the orange glow of the sun, which was setting behind scattered clouds.

I recognized the man in the passenger seat. It was my torturer, Mitch. I heard a "clunk" that sounded like the van's side door unlatching beside me. Before I could turn towards it, I felt a damp, inhalant-soaked cloth being pressed over my nose and mouth as I was put into a headlock from behind. Uselessly, I tried to pull away; I was being dragged backwards into the van through the side door. I stepped backwards to release the pressure on my neck and avoid losing my balance. Just before I lost consciousness, I smelled fumes.

In a far-away voice, almost like in a dream, I heard my name being called: "Wake up, Matthew!" Now louder, the voice commanded, "Wake up, Matthew!" I realized I was not dreaming. I felt a sting on my cheek as someone slapped my face: "Wake Up, Matthew!! Wake Up!!" I opened my eyes. I did not know how long I had been out.

I was strapped down to a portable gurney in the van, the same kind found in ambulances. It was lowered so I was close to the floor. In terror, I recognized both officers from the 2005 torture interrogation: Mitch (JTF) and Burly (RCMP). I felt an apple sized, smooth, round, rubbery object in my mouth.

Mitch continued, “Matthew, you've been a bad boy... A very bad boy...” I looked back quizzically, faking innocence. “You've talked to people; remember you were warned about that... we warned you.”

“Don't lie to me, Matthew...we know you’ve talked to a lot of people....” Mitch said and added gravely: “You were warned.” Then from the side Burly leaned in closer, holding an apparatus that looked like headphones, with metal tips in place of speakers.

I felt the metal ends rested close to my temples. I can still remember the cold of the metal against my skin. I realized what the device was. I tried to scream, but the rubber ball gag plugged my mouth. Realizing electro shock was imminent I screamed “nnnnaaaaaaaaaaaa” as loud as I could but my scream was almost completely silenced by the ball gag. My only hope was that someone outside the van might hear my muffled cries.

Mitch picked up a box with wires leading out of it, a remote control of some sort. He was not going to give me any time to try and alert others. Hunching over as he stepped back, he announced: “Clear!” and a second later flipped the switch. The sensation was like an extremely loud buzzing for a fraction of a second before everything faded to black.

Sometime later I heard, “Matthew, wake up! Matthew, wake up!” It was still far off and dreamlike. Then louder: “Matthew, wake up!!” I realized I was not dreaming, and opened my eyes. The ball gag was gone, and so was my memory. I was sitting on a bench in a van that I did not remember getting into. It was as if I had suffered a stroke and awoken in an ambulance whose attendants did not wear uniforms and lacked medical equipment.

The blond man on my right was the smaller of the two. Another taller man with dark hair, sat about six feet away on a bench. They both looked oddly familiar and I felt deathly afraid of them. My mind was very blank, and my consciousness blunted.

"Look at me, Matthew!" the blond haired man said. Feeling spaced out, I slowly turned to look at the other man seated on my left. I was embarrassed that I did not know what was going on. The man asked, "Do you know where you are?" I was eager to appear able to function so I would be let go.

"Yes, I'm inside a van." I tried to sound matter of fact.

"Good, now what are you going to do?" the blond man asked.

"I'm going home," I responded hopefully.

"Good," the man responded, somewhat relieved, and he added, "How are you getting there?"

"I'm taking the subway." The blond man managed a half smile.

The dark haired, taller man sitting on the bench interjected, "And where is your home?"

"400 Walmer Road"

The dark haired man covered his face with his hands and slowly shook his head back and forth. I couldn't understand why he appeared despondent.

The shorter, blond man seemed annoyed. "No, Matthew! Your home is on the Yonge subway, on a street just north of Eglinton a few blocks."

"Oh yes, right." I was incredulous at my own mistake.

"Are you sure you know where your home is?"

"Yes, I remember now."

The blond haired man studied me for a moment. "The Yonge subway is two blocks in that direction." He pointed towards the back of the van. "Are you sure you understand?". The van was now on the south side of the street, as if it had done a U-turn since picking me up, but likely it had travelled many blocks in between.

"Yes," I responded, slightly annoyed at being treated like a child.

"Good, now go directly home, Matthew. Do you understand?"

"Yes," I responded mechanically. The tall man with the dark hair and moustache seemed ready to stand up. As I started to get up from the bench, the blond haired man motioned me with his hand to sit back down.

"Matthew, listen to me for a minute." Pausing for effect, the blond haired man looked directly into my eyes. I noticed his eyes were blue, and cold. "Don't talk to anyone about this!"

"About what?"

"About all of this!" he said as he made a sweeping gesture with the palm of his hand towards the walls of the van, himself and the other man.

"Yes, OK." My mind was fuzzy, confused, and compliant. I wondered what had happened that I was supposed to keep quiet about. I wondered why I had forgotten where my own home was. How did I come to be inside this van? What had occurred before I awoke sitting on a bench? Who were these men? Why was I feeling so spaced out? I felt a life threatening need to get far away as soon as possible.

The blond haired man stood up, and said, "All right, let's go." At 6'4" the taller, dark-haired man had to stoop over half bent to open the side door of the van. He stepped out and down onto the sidewalk. He scanned the surroundings in a slow arc before turning back to the blond haired man. "We're good to go."

I stepped down and turned around to face the blond haired man who remained inside the van. He bent forward and pointed east, towards the front of the van, and said, "The Yonge line subway is that way."

"Yes." I was eager to show that I could function on my own. I did not want to say 'Good Bye' as I felt deep antagonism towards these men. So I said, "I'm going now," and then turned and started walking towards the subway.

I would not remember what had happened in that van until several years later. This incident in the theatre district in autumn of 2007 damaged my memory and left me with amnesia. The torture interrogation they were trying to keep me from writing about had occurred in a military van in mid-town Toronto in November 2005, two years earlier.

CHAPTER 2: 2005 Aug 2 - Watching a Plane Crash

STOP: Unless you are interested in the extraordinary events leading to my selection as a mind-control R&D test subject, skip to Chapter 6. Many readers are interested only in the state actor events and some stop reading in chapters 2-5. You can always return to these chapters later.

“You must never be fearful about what you are doing when it is right.” – Rosa Parks

August 2, 2005 was my second day at my new job as a Team Leader and Senior Developer at a company Red Hand Software[11], a software vendor directly facing the Toronto Pearson airport. The company name was based on the name of a type of tarantula. There was a live one in a terrarium on display in the lobby and it was creepy.

The software vendor had hired me quickly, based on my extensive record as a team leader and systems architect designing and building complex software systems. I had been laid off from a previous position after getting into a disagreement with my manager. My career had been in decline ever since 2002, when I began having flashbacks and partial recall of severe childhood trauma, which my psychiatrist would not allow me to discuss with him in therapy.

Up until these memories surfaced, in my late thirties, I had had a near stellar seventeen-year career in software development, which began after graduating from university.

In the dot-com craze of 2000, I had been Chief Scientist of a publicly traded software development tools company, and for two years I was worth several million on paper. In 2002 the start-up failed as funding completely dried up during the dot-com crash. In that year, I involuntarily recalled previously inaccessible memories of severe childhood trauma/abuse and found it hard to keep my emotions under control. From then on, it became hard to keep a job or get contracts renewed.

The flashbacks were terrifying, and included waking from nightmares sweating and yelling, with arms and legs flailing. However my psychiatrist (Dr. R. G. C. at the then Clark Institute of Psychiatry, hereafter Dr. C.) refused to allow me to talk of this remembered trauma that involved severe abuse by Ray V., then a family friend. He cited the risk of “falsely accusing another” due to recovering false memories.

I have since done some research. In the USA in the 1980s a number of grown up children sued their parents for childhood abuse. A common defense of parents was that the child was having false memories. Justice being what it is in the USA, highly paid lawyers (parents often had more money than their children) used this “false memory” defense to defeat the litigation and also to sue the child's psychiatrists, sometimes successfully.

Therefore, starting in the early 1990s, psychiatrists began refusing to let a client discuss childhood trauma, lest it lead to a wrongful conviction due to a false memory. A wrongful conviction could lead to psychiatrists getting sued, which would increase their insurance rates.

Not being able to talk about severe childhood abuse to psychiatrists has led to a whole generation of patients not getting the therapy they need to recover from Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD).

Every time I raised my newly recovered childhood abuse memories to Dr. C., he would tell me: “I'm sorry Mr. Pauly, but I can't let you continue on this topic.” Once when I pushed the point, Dr. C. answered, “This interview is over.”

By late 2002 I had started to loathe Dr. C. My undiagnosed PTSD condition was becoming serious. To get to sleep at night, I sometimes fantasized a series of painful ways of inducing his demise. One scenario was dangling Dr. C. by his ankles out of his office window.

I had remembered severe childhood abuse (rape.) Parts of this event were repressed for 27 years to protect the psyche. What was still repressed was that after I was raped, I was taken to a remote location where I was shown the naked corpse of a young person dug up from a shallow grave. My attacker said this was what would happen to my mother and me if I told anyone.

Perhaps the reader might understand the rage I felt towards a psychiatrist who refused to let his patients speak of such memories “lest an innocent be wrongly prosecuted.”

I never had any plan to harm Dr. C.; I understood this imagining was simply a way to get to sleep for two months. In early 2003 I stopped my regular visits to Dr. C.

At the same time, I began to have trouble dealing with authority figures at work. I now suddenly found it a challenge to get a contract renewed or stay at one employer for a lengthy period.

In 2004, my manager at a government media-conglomerate's web division would throw temper tantrums and hurl papers across the table. I could barely contain my fear and anger during these eruptions, even though most of the time the focus of the bosses' temper would be another team leader who cowered in fear.

I told a colleague that this work environment triggered me and I was not sure I could handle my emotional response. Apparently my colleague reported this, as within a few days I found my contract assignment changed. For the duration of the contract, I reported to another team leader and my contract was not renewed. The colleague got my old position.

After several such career-'non successes', in mid-2005 I accepted the team leader position the software firm near Toronto Pearson airport. I was determined to break the career bad-streak, and try my hardest to make this position a success. I owed it to my family to have a stable career and income.

Unfortunately, sometimes putting the lid back on an over-boiling pot of trauma memories is impossible. With my memories partially recalled, I was like a ticking time bomb.

Software occupied the top three floors of a five-story steel and glass office building with 1980s-style tinted windows on Matheson Boulevard East in Mississauga. All that lay between the airport's runways and our building was the 401 highway (North America's busiest), with an unobstructed view of the airport. This perfect viewing point was half a mile directly south of the airport, very near the mid-point of the east-west runways (24R, 23L), and only five degrees off center of the northwest - southeast runways.

Having worked at dozens of client sites and employers in nearly two decades in the software development business, on my second day I was already feeling reasonably comfortable with the new job environment. The first impressions were good: the people seemed very bright, full of energy, friendly and helpful. Management appeared hands off. This was cause for optimism.

My cubicle was on the fifth (top) floor where most of the software development took place. Perhaps because of close proximity to Pearson Airport, the senior management occupied the lower storeys, and rank-and-file worked in the top-most floors.

At around four PM on my second day, I had successfully navigated to the fourth floor kitchen for the first time without asking for directions along the way. I felt proud considering I easily lose my way in a new building.

The previous business day, from the fourth floor kitchen, I had watched with wonder as shimmering heat waves rose from a mirror-like mirage on a runway that extended just over a mile towards the horizon. As the heat waves arose off the runway the outlines of the speeding planes became gradually distorted by wobbly, rotating jet wash while the planes grew smaller and smaller and took off into the sky.

From that distance, they seemed the size of remote controlled toy cars. It was fascinating to watch these big jets line up in a little row and wait their turn to take off, and then disappear into the hazy sky. Almost simultaneously, incoming aircraft landed into the wind on the east-west runways where the predominant wind pattern was south-easterly.

On this day, August 2, 2005, there were severe thunderstorms, with heavy rain, lightning and gusty winds. I had heard earlier in the day from co-workers that flights were stopped from taking off and landing due to the weather. As I walked into the kitchen to get a coffee, a white aircraft was coming in for a landing across the field of view of the window.

This was surprising, as I had heard that landings and take-offs were cancelled due to the thunderstorms. Having observed planes landing the previous day, I knew the aircraft needed to be on the runway by the time they passed the kitchen window, which was almost at the mid-point of the east-west runways. But this jet was not even close. I thought, ‘Oh great, a plane crash on my second day.’ Secretly I admonished myself for such a paranoid and very improbable thought. Several programmers were chatting while they looked out the window.

I drew closer to the window and recognized the jet had the familiar bloated airframe of a Skybust[12]. It was no more than a few meters above runway 24L as it passed the halfway point heading west.

I had monitored the safety history of this government-consortium-designed, first fly-by-wire commercial airliner since 1988, when it had crashed at its air show debut in France[13]. I had read that the computer programmers writing the control software were non-pilots and used functional specifications that did not take into account that pilots must ‘land hard’ during heavy rainstorms to prevent the wheels from hydroplaning.

The Skybust software-based control systems, at least initially, allegedly prevented pilots from landing hard; they insisted on a gradual descent to the runway. However, allegedly due to a design flaw, when landing hard in heavy rain, sometimes the control systems prevented pilots from applying wheel or air brakes and these aircraft would careen down the runway resulting in overshoot crashes.

I was so informed (and worried) about Skybust safety that in 1996 I had demanded to be let off one when it stopped for repairs in Mexico City en route from Toronto to Costa Rica. In the middle of the night, on the airport tarmac, the pilot announced a delay while a maintenance crew replaced a computer system in the underside of the front fuselage.

I got up and moved to the back of the jet where the washrooms were. I talked with a stewardess about my dislike of Skybusts. The stewardess lowered her voice and shared her dislike. She said her husband was a pilot, and he called them “SCUDs”. “Because you never know where they were going to land.” The SCUD was an inaccurate missile system used in a Middle East war at that time.

Allegedly some of the Skybust crashes were allegedly due to the computer getting into a fight with the pilots about whether it was time to land or not, and so the aircraft would decide to land on its own in the wrong places, like in a forest when the Skybust crashed at its air show debut in 1988.

On that night in 1996 in Mexico City, I decided I had reached my threshold. I informed my then girlfriend of the poor safety record. I explained we could get off the flight and catch a different flight the next day. She agreed, and we told the stewardess, who informed the pilot.

The pilot called me into the flight cabin. He was polite at first as he explained, “This maintenance is routine; there is no reason to worry.”

I declined his reassurance, “I have followed the Skybust safety record from the start and I don't want to take any more chances than I have to.” The pilot become annoyed and reiterated that the plane was safe. I mentioned one of his own flight crew shared his concern for the safety of Skybusts. The pilot was not happy upon hearing this. I insisted that my girlfriend and I be let off the flight. The pilot tried more reasoning to no effect, and then he gave up. He reluctantly called in the situation on the radio to the control tower.

Several minutes later, an army jeep pulled up, and a machine-gun toting Mexican soldier stepped out. A truck with a staircase drove up against the side of the aircraft. A stewardess opened a door and the co-pilot stepped out first and beckoned my girlfriend and me to follow. We walked down the portable stairs. Passengers could be seen nervously peering out the windows as we disembarked.

The co-pilot said something to the soldier, and then the baggage handlers that had appeared. The baggage handlers loaded many of the bags onto large baggage carts beside the aircraft. The staircase bearing truck shone a spotlight on the carts, and the soldier's jeep was positioned so its headlights shone on the baggage carts. The solider asked us to identify our bags. We found our bags in a few minutes, and after signing a declaration, the machine gun toting soldier drove us back to the terminal.

We spent a pleasant night and part of the next day in Mexico City and caught a connecting flight to Costa Rica in the evening.

On August 2, 2005 my coworkers and I watched as the plane glided by our window in a severe thunderstorm. Three programmers were already at the window and I walked over to join them.

One of the three said, "He's overshot the runway! He'll never be able to stop!"

Still in denial about what was unfolding, I thought these younger programmers must just be unaware of how rare a plane crash was. "No, there must be more runway down at the end there," as I pointed towards the west end of 24L.

"No, there isn't." Sure enough, putting my nose to the glass to get a better view toward the west end of the runway, I saw a row of lights protruding on eight foot high metal stands. After that, there was nothing but grass, disappearing down a slope.

Time slowed down. All four of us were silent at the rare event unfolding outside. The speeding jet had now touched down and was rolling down the runway with less than 25% of the runway left. There was a curious sight: two huge 'rooster tails' of high pressure water spray were driven back and up from each set of rear wheels, and reached into the sky about 100 feet above the aircraft. The water jets were what one would expect from high pressure fire hoses pointed back and up at a 60-degree angle from the rear wheels of the jet. A wake of water followed the aircraft down the runway like that seen following a high-speed motorboat on a lake

One of the others said, "See those rooster-tails of water spray? He's hydroplaning, he can't stop. Have you ever seen anything like that?" he asked the rest of us.

“No,” someone said. The room that minutes before had been filled with the din of conversation, was eerily quiet.

As the speeding plane approached the last 5-10% of the runway, it was still traveling at about 100 mph, too fast to stop in time. Sickened, I looked away. Another person at the window turned away from the window as well. The probability that many people were about to perish in an overshoot air crash, was too shocking to watch.

I felt my heart race and I knew I was breathing too fast. I made my way to the kitchen counter on the east wall, where I grabbed the countertop, leaned my body weight onto my arms, and took deep breaths to avoid hyperventilating.

One of the programmers at the window gave a grim play-by-play as at a sporting event: “He’s almost there… He's almost there... There he goes... He’s almost there… That’s it; he’s at the end… He’s knocked over one of the light stands…. He’s going over the grass…. There he goes on the grass... still on grass… wait -- he’s going towards the slope… there he goes… he’s going down the slope… He’s disappearing down the slope…. There he goes… There he goes… He’s gone... He’s gone... and --”

There was a pause of 30 seconds and then the play-by-play resumed “Smoke… Yes, I see smoke!” After listening to over a minute of grim commentary, I went back to the window and looked out at the smoke and made a dash for the kitchen door. A younger man followed me into the hallway and called after me: “I haven’t seen you here before. What's your name?”

“I just started yesterday.” I was purposefully avoiding his question.

The Good Samaritan said “You’ve just seen a plane crash. Are you all right?”

“Yes, I think so, I just need some air.”

“HR is on the on the third floor, if you want to talk to them.”

I descended the deserted gray concrete stairwell towards the ground level as I imagined the almost certain deaths in the crash and resulting fire. I was horrified. I felt incredibly guilty at having argued with the people at the window, insisting that there was more runway at the end, and that the jet was not going to crash. I had denied the almost certain deaths of many passengers. I now realize this was irrational, but that is how I felt in that moment of psychological trauma.

I thought, “It doesn’t matter if I’m Christian or Buddhist -- I’m going to hell for denying their deaths." Although I was not religious, this thought frightened me. By the time I reached the last flight of stairs, I had imagined two rows of faces, six in each row: the faces of grandparents, children, mothers, fathers, business people all screaming in pain as flames licked at their heads, and even a dog's howling face too. It was a hellish vision; the faces were more like gargoyle faces, animated and very scary looking. (Later, a psychiatrist specializing in PTSD said this could happen to anyone during a Psychological Trauma.)

By the time I exited the stairwell, I was hyperventilating, my heart was racing and I was in mild shock. As I stumbled through the emergency exit door and onto the grass outside, I took a few deep breaths of air. From the direction of the crash site I saw black smoke rising. My stomach felt nauseated; I lit a cigarette.

I thought of running to the crash site to try and help people. Then I thought how certainly I would lose this job if I disappeared from work on my second day. Firemen and ambulances would arrive at the site faster than I could jog there. In my panicked state, what good would I be to the victims? I decided not to run to the crash.

I did not understand how I could be so freaked out. I distinctly felt the experience of hallucinating in the stairwell had changed me, that I was not the same person I had been before. I was right. I hauled heavily on the cigarette pulling the smoke deep into my lungs.

After a few minutes, the same Good Samaritan employee came out the door onto the grass and faced me. He said, "I am disappointed that you're smoking. You told me you were going to get fresh air."

I replied testily, "Give me a break, I did breathe deep a few times. I just saw a plane crash and I need a cigarette!"

The Good Samaritan said "Calm down."

It was not fair to be angry at this man, and so I said "Yah, sorry, I guess I'm just upset at what I saw."

"I understand, but let's go back now."

I reluctantly threw my cigarette butt down, and ground it into the grass with my right foot. I entered the stairwell first and as I climbed the stairs I remembered the vision of burning passenger faces.

I had never had such a realistic imagining in my mind's eye before, and it frightened me. The thought that I might be losing my mind made me fearful and angry. I blurted out what I was thinking: "I don't need this shit!"

“What?” said the Good Samaritan.

“Sorry, I know it’s not your fault the jet crashed… It’s just that I only came here to program” I said.

“Then just do it!” the Good Samaritan repeated the Nike slogan, like a motivational speaker. I think he was stunned by my outburst and didn't know how to handle it.

When I returned to my cubicle, over a dozen employees were crowded around the windows as large plumes of black smoke rose from the crash site a kilometer away. I looked for a few seconds, but it made me feel sick.

Within a half hour, a programmer behind me reported in a loud voice “The CNN web page says everyone on board the aircraft died!” Reportedly a shoeless passenger from the crashed jet ran into the nearest terminal and shouted out that everyone aboard had been killed.

Again I felt that I should be running to the crash site to help; it took every ounce of my strength to hold myself back. It seemed completely wrong to be programming computer software when people were likely dying so close by. But it was only my second day on the job, after a bad career streak, and I felt a duty to my family to keep my job.

Large plumes of black smoke rose from the burning plane in the ravine and dispersed slowly. People were still gathered around the windows to watch. The stench of burning plastic and jet fuel became even stronger.

Again, I had to hold myself back from jogging to the crash site. I could not understand why we were not helping. After two hours, someone announced, “CNN’s web site says everyone survived!” A cheer went up in my section of the floor as people repeated: “They all survived!” But it was too late for me; I was already affected. I wondered if the news report was correct, since after all an earlier news report stated that everyone perished.

Ten minutes later, a woman walked onto the floor and announced, “I am from HR Everyone come over here.” People gathered in a crowd around the HR women. I couldn’t see her face, only that she was short. She said, “I don’t want to interrupt your work, but I know you are aware of the plane crash, and I just wanted you to know that everyone on board survived the crash.”

Surprisingly this gave me little comfort. I didn’t totally trust HR since they did not organize any rescue effort in the intervening hours. I wanted to see the information directly from CNN/CBC on TV at home.

For the rest of the afternoon I was startled and anxious. I had great difficulty concentrating as in my mind's eye I kept seeing the scene from the kitchen window of the jet speeding out of control towards the end of the runway, followed by smoke rising out of the ravine. It kept replaying in my mind, over and over. The HR lady asked if anyone had seen the crash in progress, but I did not want to admit to it. It was only my second day on the job, and I was still in the probationary period. I probably did not even have benefits yet, and if they found out I had PTSD they probably would just lay me off. I had some recall of the overshoot crash, but it was rapidly disappearing.

I decided to leave an hour early, on my second day on the job. I purposefully stopped by my team leader and said, "I sure hope all those people survived." As soon as I got home, I turned on CNN and CBC where it was confirmed that all had survived. That night I tried to calm myself down. I told myself that everything was all right, although I knew something was not right. For several hours after the crash, I continued believing that everyone had died. Something had snapped in my psyche; particularly while fleeing through the stairwell right after watching the overshoot.

In those few hours following the crash, I had felt terribly guilty for arguing and denying the certain deaths of the passengers. I also felt guilty for selfishly choosing to stay at work to keep my job rather than running the one-kilometer to the crash site to help the victims. But as the evening wore on, the events of the day were becoming fuzzy and hard to remember. I had disassociated. The crash was becoming a forgotten splinter lost in traumatized time.

I remembered the telephone conversation with the recruiter who had found me the position, about ten days previous. He had asked me whether I would be okay working right across from the airport. "Yes, of course, why not?" I replied.

"Well, I know someone who started a job there but had to leave as they could not stand working right across from the airport," the recruiter responded.

"My dad used to take us to a road next to the airport when I was a kid so we could watch planes landing and taking off," I said. The recruiter seemed satisfied I could handle it, as did I.

Now I was not so sure I could work facing airport runways. I tried to visit HR the following morning, but the third floor receptionist said no one in HR was available. "One person is on vacation for the week and the other is sick. What is it about?” she inquired.

“I have some new employee forms that contain confidential information and I don’t have a locked drawer yet, and also I wanted to speak with someone,” I responded.

“Here give them to me. I’ll see someone gets them.’

I handed her the forms. “I also wanted to just talk with an HR person,” I repeated.

“About what?”

“I’ll wait to talk with an HR person when one is available.” Then I added, “I’m disappointed that no one from HR is available,” and I left. I did not feel like disclosing my inner turmoil to a non-HR employee.

By the end of that third day, I had completely repressed the memory of seeing the plane crash and the event of running down the stairwell and the vision of people dying in flames.

On that afternoon, two people asked me if I had seen the crash, including my team leader. By ‘seen the crash’ they meant had I watched the jet land past half way and run off the end off the runway, knock down a light stand, race over a bumpy field and descend into a ravine where smoke erupted within 30 seconds.

I told him, “No, like everyone else, I only saw the plumes of black smoke rise from the crash site.”

My vice-team leader interjected: “Someone could get into trouble for lying about such a thing.”

Repressed Psychological Trauma memories can be dangerous to one’s health and sometimes even to the health of others.

CHAPTER 3: 2005 Aug 19 - Tornado Warning ‘Partial Evacuation’

“From out there on the Moon, international politics look so petty. You want to grab a politician by the scruff of the neck and drag him a quarter of a million miles out and say, ‘Look at that, you son of a bitch.’” -- Edgar Mitchel, Apollo 14 astronaut

Two weeks later, on Aug. 19, 2005 a severe storm hit Toronto with Environment Canada issuing a Tornado Warning for the Toronto area, the highest severe weather alert possible.

On this day, a tornado caused severe damage in nearby Fergus, Ontario and a severe storm destroyed 50 meters of Finch Avenue in north Toronto, a major thoroughfare. An unconfirmed tornado was spotted where I worked in northwest Toronto directly across from Pearson Airport.

At noon Jean, a French-Canadian member of my fourteen- person “Version 6” team, announced a big storm was coming and that he was going to work from home. I did not like the sound of that, but as I had barely been on the job for three weeks, I knew it would not be wise to ask to work from home.

By 2:30 PM four or five members of the team were clustered around a workstation displaying an Environment Canada web page. All were excitedly discussing the situation in both Mandarin and Cantonese. The sky outside was dark.

At around 2:45 PM the vice-team leader (who spoke fluent English) asked me to come over and review the storm situation. He added, "It seems serious." This was an understatement. The sky had become near black, so dark in mid-afternoon that the streetlights had come on. The only time I could remember such a dark mid-afternoon was when Toronto experienced a full solar eclipse in 1994.

My Chinese wife had instructed me in Chinese culture, and I knew it was politically unwise to do or say anything that might cause a Chinese-Canadian boss to 'lose face.' I responded to the vice-team leader, "You have five people on it already so you probably don't need me." I believed we should have evacuated hours earlier but since I was still in the probationary period of the new job, I was not going to give my frank opinion. Five or six senior team members remained around the workstation, heatedly debating.

At 3:12 the vice-team leader told me, "We're going to have a partial evacuation… only the Version 6 team." He added, "The team lead of the Version 5 team has already been told, so you should not talk to the other team's members. Only we are evacuating."

I was incredulous at the callousness of such a decision and I asked "What do you mean partial evacuation? That doesn't make sense."

The vice-team leader responded, "Just our team is evacuating. Talk to the team lead if you have questions." Most of the team had already left via the closest door, which was across a divider from my cubicle.

I stood up and peered over at my team leader who was at the door waiting for the stragglers. "What do you mean by partial evacuation? If there is a Tornado threat to the building, then we should evacuate everyone!"

By now panic showed in his eyes; he was clearly in a hurry to exit. Except for me, one other non-Chinese speaker, the vice team lead, and the only woman member of the team, everyone else had evacuated. The team lead's English failed him and he froze for a few seconds unable to manage a response. Then he found the words:"We're leaving, there is no time, and if you disagree you are on your own…. Do you understand? You are on your own! I want you to say 'Yes' you understand!"

I was incredulous at the thin veneer of civilization, and shocked at the choice of either silently joining an evacuation of only 14 out of 120 employees, or staying by myself. I said, "Yyyyeeeeesssssss" as a strange smile spread across my face. Compliance was a survival technique I had learned in early childhood traumas, which did not serve me well as an adult. I was in full panic at this point.

The team lead turned to the vice-team leader and said, "You heard him, he said 'Yes'!".

The vice-team leader started to object: "Both of you are acting and talking irrationally."

The team leader found this impertinent and said, "Be quiet!"

A Mexican-Canadian team member (the only other non-Chinese speaker) was told to leave but said, "It's okay, I'll stay with him," gesturing towards me. This man was sacrificing himself, out of concern for me. Perhaps he also felt it was morally wrong for only part of the fourteen person Version 6 team to evacuate while the rest of 120 employees were expected to work.

The vice-team leader took another look out the window, carefully cupping his hands against the side of his face and the window to block out reflection. It was like looking out of a window at night. "Oh my god…" he said. He backed away from the window and announced with alarm, "It's coming!" He hurried past the cubicles and out the door to the area by the elevators where the stairwell entrances were.

The sole female member of the team walked calmly past my workstation and said, "If you're looking for us, we'll be in the basement."

"Basement?" Until this point I did not know there was a basement, nor the quickest route to it. I heard the hallway door close.

I looked at my watch and it was 3:15 PM. On the other side of the fifth floor other employees were still working, but their windows faced in the opposite direction from whatever was coming. Likely their supervisors were afraid they would get in trouble with their managers for evacuating their teams to the basement. Obviously the managers showed little leadership in this emergency.

Two to three minutes later, the world outside the window became even darker, almost like midnight. The Northwest bank of windows started emitting a hissing sound, as one would expect from a pit of snakes. The low-pressure tornado was sucking air through the window vents to equalize the air pressure.

I peered over my cubicle wall at the blackened windows but couldn't see anything outside. The computers around my work station all suddenly rebooted, emitted beeps, and their screens flashed. The ceiling fluorescent lights were dimming as a dark area of unlit bulbs moved slowly across the ceiling at walking speed. I have since read an explanation for this: tornadoes push a strong electromagnetic field in front of their angle of attack.

I heard a knocking sound coming from the windows. Sand, dirt and vegetation were striking windows on the northwest side creating a swishing, knocking sound. The effect of all the flying litter and rocks was not unlike the experience of riding in a car through a car wash when the whirly mops traverse the windshield of the car, but more ominous.

After a minute a loud 'crack!' rang out from one of the windows. It sounded almost like a muted gun shot, as if a window had been hit by something very solid, rock gravel or a hailstone moving at high speed.

Having grown up in Regina, Saskatchewan, the site of the worst tornado in Canadian history, an F4, I had an especially deep fear of tornados. My elementary school, the library, and all major buildings had "1912" prominently chiseled onto their facades since much of the city had been rebuilt after the 1911 tornado killed hundreds. I had a schoolmate who had grandparents that survived the event. I asked him to ask them for stories about it. He returned to school the next day and told me it was so bad they didn't want to talk about it. They were superstitious and believed talking about it might bring it about again. My dad had shared frightening stories of tornadoes in Oklahoma where he did his Cultural Anthropology fieldwork.

Upon hearing the gunshot sound, the other remaining member of the team and I hit the floor under our desks with a simultaneous 'thud.'

A few seconds later the window emitted another loud 'crack!' and again I wondered if the windows were going to shatter. Loud cracking sounds kept coming from the windows. I lost count after about twenty. I just wanted to get away.

From my vantage point under the desk, everything was beige: the underside of the desk, the fabric on the dividers, the floor. No matter whether I lay down, crouched or sat, there was nothing I could do to feel safe, nothing to relieve the panic. I didn't dare try to make it to the hallway door, as I would have had to walk, exposed, down an aisle that ran parallel to the window area cubicles.

The cracking sounds started coming farther apart, and less loud. I heard a loud “Thunk” almost directly above me from the roof of the building. Crouched under my desk, I hugged my knees as the shower of sudden hard impacts thundered against the glass, threatenting to break it. Time slowed down.

As a distraction I started thinking about my colleague whose desk was a row closer to the windows. I stood up briefly and asked in a loud voice, “Are you under your desk over there?”

I lay back down under my desk, and realized I was in shock. Then things went all weird. Time seemed both to stand still and go by faster than it usually does.

People from the Southeast corner of the 5th floor (and other floors) were still working. A twenty-something woman came down the center aisle and saw me lying on the floor under my desk. A few minutes later she returned with a twenty-something man. She pointed to me crouched in a daze, under my desk. I was breathing irregularly although they might not have noticed that. The man said, "He's just sleeping" which seemed to satisfy her concern. They disappeared in the direction from which they had come.

Sometime later, a woman manager from HR came and asked me, “Are you afraid of the storm?”

I responded, “Yes, there were rocks hitting the windows.”

“There aren’t any rocks hitting the windows now. Do you want to come out?”

“No, I’ll wait for my team.”

Another management woman (whose office was beside the CEO's) approached me. “Hi Matthew. I was given a call by HR who were phoned by your team that is in the basement. I’m going to help you get out of there. I’m going to ask you to hold my hand.”

Like a child, I took her hand, with some difficulty stood up, and let her lead me slowly to the exit that opened into the building’s inner hallway where the elevators and stairwell doors were. She seemed to know I was in shock.

Once there, we started heading for the stairwell doorway. Suddenly the memory came flooding back of fleeing through the stairwell just after the crash, along with my horrific vision of the dead passengers.

As soon as I realized she was heading for that exit, I broke her grip. “No, I can’t go to that stairwell!”

“Why not?”

“The plane crash is in there,” I said, irrationally.

“What -- another crash?” She started pulling me in that direction.

“No, the one from before. The people are there now. They need help more than me. Help them. I’ll be under my desk.”

I headed back to my desk. I knew this was irrational, but I could not come up with a better explanation.

After a few minutes she came back with her father. In his seventies, Gary handled the coffee supplies, office furniture and various odd jobs, but I suspected his greatest value was to be eyes and ears for the CEO who treated him like a father. I had liked Gary when I met him only a few weeks earlier.

Looking at me, he said, very collectedly (but cryptically): “We missed another one, eh?”

Gary was also a WW II veteran and former member of the “Devil’s Brigade,” an esteemed WW II-era multi-nation special operations force. He had informed me of this when we chatted in the kitchen soon a few days after I was hired:

> “Were you in World War II?” I asked of the elderly gentleman I had just met.
> “Yes, I was.”
> “Air Force, Army? What unit?” I asked.
> “The Devil’s Brigade” he replied.
> “What was that?”
> “We were a multi-nation special operations force.”
> “Wow, so what did you do?” I asked.
> “I blew up bridges and that kind of stuff.”
> “Wow that’s incredible, that must have been dangerous. Thank you for your service.”

Gary beckoned, “Matthew, grab my hand and come out of there.” I trusted him, and did as he said. I was surprised at the difficulty I had in standing up. “Good, keep a hold of my hand, and now let’s walk together this way.” He led the way through the door to a hallway near the elevators. Reluctantly, I followed.

He started to lead me toward the same exit door, the same stairwell.

"No!" I said, "I can't go down those stairs…"

"Why not?" said Gary, letting go of my hand.

"They're not safe!" I turned around and returned to safety under my desk.

Gary regrouped after a few minutes and calmly beckoned me out from under my desk a second time. "Matthew, I need you to hold my hand again and get up." I reached up to grab his hand and with my other arm I pushed myself up off the floor. Again he led me through the door to the elevator area, and again I became uneasy. Before approaching the stairwell door, his wrapped his arm around my waist. His daughter was waiting by the door and on command -- "Ok, open it" -- she opened the stairwell door and inserted a wooden wedge to keep it open.

"Now get down to that landing!" She clip-clopped in her high heels down the cement stairs and waited on the first landing looking up. Gary started pulling me closer against him and towards the threshold of the door. I started to resist. "It's okay, come on." He tightened his grip on me and pulled harder.

I realize in hindsight Gary was trying to save my life. But then my oxygen-deprived, in-shock brain thought descending the stairwell equalled death.

First Aid web sites say that one never should try and physically force someone who is in shock. There is a good reason. My oxygen-starved brain thought Gary was trying to kill me.

As he tried to push me through the door I suddenly snapped. I broke Gary's grip, grabbed him by the lapels of his jacket, and pushed him backwards from the doorway with force. He was only five feet from the stairs and as he stepped back trying to catch his balance, he fell backwards on the stairs.

Gary grabbed the far handrail with his right arm, and landed on his posterior on the fourth stair. I stood in the doorway and growled like a dog, "GRRRRR!" and I have no idea why.

Everyone was stunned by what I had just done. Gary's daughter broke the silence. "WELL, THAT WAS A GOOD IDEA! Dad, are you all right?"

"Never mind, just stay there." He straightened up. "Nothing's broken."

I started to turn away. "Matthew, you sit down." That direct order subdued me. I sat down on the top stair.

The daughter said, "Should I call someone?"

"No, but keep everyone out of this stairwell. I want you to stand by the door down below and stop anyone from entering. Get someone else to stand outside the door up here. I want everyone kept out, do you understand? Now go on…"

Turning to look up at me, he said, "Matthew, why did you push me?"

"I don't know… I'm sorry. I don't know what I'm doing."

"Matthew, you are in shock and you don't look well. I'm going to sit beside you. You're not going to push me again, are you?"

"No."

Holding the handrail he climbed the four stairs and sat down with me on the top stair.

"Matthew, let me look at your eyes, look at me."

I looked at him and he peered into my eyes.

"Your eyes look like lasers, Matthew. That's not good. You need to get to a hospital, Matthew. You need to come with me down these stairs so we can get help for you."

"I can't go down the stairs, no way." I said.

"But why?"

"I don't know why, I just can't." It was a stairway to hell. I only knew that descending the stairwell might kill me.

Sitting next to me, he continued. "Your breathing is too shallow and rapid, Matthew, try and breath slower and deeper. Your eyes look like lasers."

I have since read when a person is dying of shock, the cells in the fovea give off luminescence as they die off from lack of oxygen.

CHAPTER 4: 2005 Aug 19 – Involuntary Childhood Trauma Recall

"Don't judge yourself by what others did to you" – C. Kennedy

My shock was worsening, and my vision had become only black and white. The knowledge that I might die very soon opened a window to an acute painful memory. It had been unconscious and inaccessible for nearly thirty years but now it was clear as I faced death.

I told Terry about the black and white part and the dark hole growing from the middle where I had a blind spot. Again he looked into my eyes. "Now one is much larger than the other," Gary commented.

I now recalled a disturbing detail from when I was sexually assaulted at age eight. Ray, a seventeen-year-old family friend in Argenta, B.C. (a Quaker community of 500) had invited me for a canoe ride, with only one paddle in the canoe. This was about one month after Ray's eleven-year-old sister (C.) had slept with me together in a sleeping bag during a sleep over. She knew too much about sex for an eleven year old.

I had bonded strongly with her after that night together despite obvious physical limitations to coitus. The bonding was more powerful as my mother had abandoned the family for three months when I was five (she was quite ill and unable to make sane decisions), and I had emotionally detached from her from that moment on.

Unfortunately, I made the mistake of sharing the details with a friend my age in Argenta, who had told someone else, and somehow it got to Ray.

About a week later, Ray approached me on the mountain road that ran past his house, the only road in this small community. "Would you like to go for a canoe ride?" he asked. At the time it seemed very cool for a seventeen-year-old to take an eight-year-old boy on a canoe ride so I accepted.

Ray appeared happy. "Wait here, I'll get the paddles and life jackets." He returned in a few minutes with the jackets and one paddle. "The other paddle is broken," he explained. As we walked down the mountain on the winding, dusty, gravel road towards Kooteney Lake, Ray said, "I've heard that you slept with my younger sister."

"Yes, we had a sleepover."

"But I heard that you had sex with my sister, Matthew."

"We love each other, and we're lovers," I responded innocently.

"First, you're only eight – you're too young. You shouldn't have done it. Second, you told Paul," he added. I felt cornered. "Paul has a big mouth, and now the whole community knows. You've harmed my sister's reputation, and my family's reputation."

"What does reputation mean?"

"It's bad for people to know an unmarried girl had sex! Do you understand now?"

I was unaware how serious an affront this was but I could tell Ray was angry. "OK, I'm sorry, I won't tell anyone else."

"It's too late for that now -- everyone knows."

We walked mostly in silence down to the dock by the water's edge. Ray stooped under some trees and turned over the red canoe. He pulled it out over the rocks and into the water. "Get in," he said.

I stepped in, and moved to the front. "Where are we going?"

"I'm not sure, just a little trip, maybe we'll stop on an island."

He took me to a tiny island, no more than about fifty square meters, with thick brush to obscure the view. He pulled up the red canoe up and turned it over. He had me lean over the hull while he pulled off my swimming trunks. During the rape, I tried to resist by shouting, but Ray slapped me. I disconnected, disassociating as I stared at the round, baseball sized green and gray rocks that lay in the depths of the hazy water around the island.

Now in the stairwell, in severe shock and believing death was imminent, I suddenly remembered what came next.

Ray said he was taking the canoe out for a while to decide what to do with me. "If you start to scream, I will come back and kill you." He pulled the canoe out from the brush, turned it over into the water, and got in.

He disappeared into the distance toward the lake's east side. After an hour or two, I felt abandoned and frightened. The sun was getting closer to the mountain horizon. I thought I might die of exposure if he didn't come back. I started screaming "HEELLLLP!!!" and could hear my voice echoing "heelllp!!" from the shoreline opposite. "HEEEEEEELLLP!!" I shouted again, over and over. Fifteen minutes later, Ray appeared, canoeing quickly to the mini-island. I stopped shouting.

Ray was furious. "Shut up!!!" he said as he pulled up. He ordered me to jump in and started canoeing quickly to the east shore of the lake where there were no cabins, just solid bush and forest.

A few minutes later we reached the shore. Ray dragged the canoe out of sight and ordered me to stay with it while he disappeared into the brush. After fifteen minutes he reappeared and forced me to march ahead of him into the bush where there were no cabins or paths. We were in a remote area. We came to a place in the forest where something was sticking out from the ground that did not look like a tree stump.

As I got closer I realized it was an unclothed, teenage female recently unearthed from a shallow grave. I became hysterical.

The burial was hidden in the bush, a few kilometers north of Argenta and its Quaker community. The only access was a long walk through bush from the road, or a shorter walk by canoeing to the nearby shoreline.

I tried to back away, but Ray pushed me to walk to within five feet of the corpse until I was about three feet away. "Look at it!!" he shouted. "This is what will happen to you and your mother if you tell anyone about today."

I screamed uncontrollably. Then the memory went blank, and resumed again when Ray's father showed up a few hours later. Ray must have gone back and fetched his dad, and they must have driven on the abandoned road that was close to the site. I recalled Chuck led me off the road into the bush. But I did not want to leave the road and I started screaming, "I don't want to go!!" Chuck reassured me by promising not to show me a body. Only then did I agree to walk into the bush with them.

The three of us came to where the body of the young woman had been before. This time there were fist-sized rocks piled perhaps a foot high where her head would have been. Chuck leaned down so his face was at my level and apologized for his son. He said he didn't know why Ray would do such a thing, as show me a corpse.

He told me Quakers bury their dead in this way in a shallow grave without a coffin, or clothes. He said if I spoke about it, and if my father found out, then he would alert the nearest RCMP detachment. They in turn would come and start poking around because these cops didn't know Quaker burial rituals. Of course, there is no such Quaker ritual, but I didn't know that at age eight.

He pleaded with me never to tell my mother or father, or anyone about what I had seen. Withholding my consent, I watched the desperation in his eyes turn from fake concern to a dark coldness. Chuck and/or Ray had likely murdered this young woman, and no one knew where I was at this moment.

I decided to lie to survive. “Yes, I promise. I'll never tell anyone”.

“Are you sure?” Chuck asked.

“Yes, I'm sure, I promise.” I willed myself to appear genuine. Chuck was noticeably relieved. Years later I learned that Chuck had later gone to jail for sexual assault of a minor.

I now related this event with perfect recall to Gary in the stairwell on Matheson Boulevard East in Mississauga, Ontario on August 19, 2005.

Further, I remembered and explained that less than one week after these events, I had caught Ray with a pair of wire cutters working under the front of the Jeep that my mother had borrowed from a friend. It was parked outside Ray’s family home, and the adults were inside the house. By then, I had already repressed all memory of the rape and the corpse in the woods.

I remember asking Ray, “What are you doing under there?”

“I'm working, and you're distracting me. Go away!”

The trauma of only a week earlier had led to a complete compartmentalizing of the memory to a split, smaller personality to preserve the main personality from what it could not handle. I had no recall of the rape, but feeling hurt (and frightened) by Ray's tone of voice, I walked back to the entrance of the house. Soon after, Ray crawled out from under the Jeep and went into the tool shed. When my mother came out a little later, I seated myself in the passenger’s seat. I said, “Ray was really mean to me just now.”

“You just stay away from Ray,” she said in a steady serious tone. She headed the Jeep south on the main gravel road, which had a steep grade all the way to Johnson's Landing, a tiny community only a few kilometers south.

We hadn’t gone far when the brakes suddenly failed. My mother pumped the pedal and thankfully kept her cool, geared down, and directed the jeep into a stand of small saplings along the road which slowed us down. We stopped abruptly as the front axle hit a stump and broke. My mother had the presence of mind to hold her arm in front of me so I didn’t hit my head on the dashboard.

I overheard the men at the crash site speaking very quietly about the brake lines, which were not rusted out. So Ray was also guilty of attempted murder.

Back to the stairwell on Aug. 19, 2005:

When I related the part about the body, Gary asked, “Are you sure there was no coffin?"

"Yes," I said firmly.

"Jeeze, Matthew, now I'm going to have to do something about this." He had his daughter bring him paper and pen, and he wrote down the details with names, dates and the postal code of the isolated community.

Meanwhile in the stairwell my physical condition continued to worsen; I was having trouble breathing, and my vision that had already turned black and white was starting to fade from the middle outwards. It was the same sort of blurry, gray fading vision that I had once when I fainted in a Sunday school choir in a tiny church basement.

One of my pupils was fully dilated, while the other pupil was pinned small. My eyes still had the 'laser' effect. Gary offered to call 9-1-1 but in this severe weather it would be at least one hour before an ambulance would arrive. I had other health complications, and doubted I would last long.

From family in-law experience, I knew those raised in Chinese culture had a remedy for shock: a multiple-person, rapid massage of torso and head. I told this to Gary and asked him to summon the (Chinese) team from the basement.

"Matthew, I have to think of the team's safety too. What if they come up from the basement and another tornado hits the building and kills them?"

Despite my severe shock condition, my thinking was briefly clear at this life and death moment. "Their death from a tornado is a small possibility, but I will very likely die soon." After a pause, Gary agreed.

He asked his daughter to summon the team from the basement. Looking at her, he pointed to his eyes, with his forefinger and middle finger forming a V. "Look at my eyes!! I mean get the team RIGHT NOW!"

(This pointing at the eyes was a hypnotic technique. Could it be that the Devil's Brigade in WW II was trained in hypnosis just as Special Forces are now?)

She rapidly disappeared down the stairs and I returned to the perceived sanctuary under my desk. Now I was fully reliving my childhood sexual assault, and I remembered a new detail. When Ray had returned to the island in the canoe after I had defiantly started yelling for help I shouted: "You left me for dead, you BASTARD!"

CHAPTER 5: 2005 Aug 19 – Workplace Interrogation while in Shock

“It is better to keep your mouth closed and let people think you are a fool than to open it and remove all doubt” – Mark Twain

When I heard the team coming out of the stairwell from the basement, I crawled out from under my desk and stood shakily gripping my desk for balance. The team leader was walking in front.

"You left me for dead, you BASTARD!” I shouted as I lunged for him. The vice-team leader gave me a martial arts chop to a pressure point in my arm, and I fell to the floor like a sack of potatoes. They picked me up and put me in my chair.

I pretended to look at my monitor, which I could not even see properly nor read as my vision was so blurry. The team lead said, “I am sorry that we left you behind.”

“Yaaah…. Yaaaah… Yaaaaah.” I said, my voice dripping with sarcasm.

The vice-team leader immediately recognized what my condition was. He turned to the team lead and said, “He is in shock.”

“But, he’s so, so…” the team lead responded, but before he could finish his sentence, the vice-team interjected: “That’s how they get when they are in shock.” “They” (I believe) referred to Westerners.

The team lead vacillated for a minute unsure what to do, and then vice-team leader said, "YOU are the team leader! HE is in shock! YOU have to do something!!” The team lead asked what to do, and the vice team lead told him.

The team lead asked me to turn my chair toward him. I complied. Next, the vice-team leader asked me, “To assess your condition, we need you to stand, and walk towards me.” I rose unsteadily to my feet and collapsed after the first step.

Frantic shouting erupted in Cantonese and Mandarin as the whole team gathered around my cubicle. They wanted me to remain lying prone on the floor, and the vice-team leader forcibly held me down. Confused, I resisted and tried to sit up. The vice-team leader enlisted four others to brace his as I tried to sit up with all my strength and got half way towards a sitting position.

A voice behind them said, “They have the strength of five men, I’ve seen it before.”

”They” may have referred to people in shock.

The vice-team leader asked me to stop resisting so they could help me. I went limp and stopped trying to sit up and my back hit the floor. The vice team lead told the others “now slowly let go of my back, slowly...”. The four others stopped bracing the vice-team leader’s back, and slowly the vice-team leader let me go. I did not try and sit up even though no longer restrained. The vice-team leader joined the others at a workstation where they appeared to be reading a First Aid web page.

A female programmer who had once been a nurse said, “I’ve seen this violent behaviour before; he is acting psychotic now. He will need to be questioned later.”

“I'll take care of that,” said Gary.

They removed my belt, loosened my shirt collar and took off my dress shoes. Gary said, “He’s got good shoes, he can’t be all bad.” This was one example of many where Gary tried to not only save my life, but preserve my reputation, as he knew I was sick with both shock and PTSD.

Some others started looking through my wallet/day-timer and found my membership card and photo ID for a medical marijuana supply organization. This photo ID was for patients of doctors who recommend such treatment for a specific serious illness.

They asked me if they could photocopy the card, and I said “Yes.” I was on the ground without my glasses, barely able to see, without my shoes, after being overpowered by five people. I was in severe shock; I doubt I could have supplied informed consent for anything.

Another of those looking through my wallet asked, “Matthew, what is your address?” I told them my street address. “Is that in Toronto?” he asked.

“Yes,” I replied, “Why?”

“Because you are a dangerous man, Matthew, we need to warn your neighbours,” he stated. “Is that okay?”

Public “shaming” is a form of social control in the Mao era Chinese culture, and apparently still is.

Very tentatively with a maladaptive, passive response I replied “Yyeeeessss” in a slow drawn out way just as when I answered the team lead on whether I understood I was “on my own” in the partial tornado evacuation.

The vice-team leader observed, “That’s the same way he answered before, when we were going to the basement.”

Referring to the First Aid website, the team asked me some medical questions including whether my bladder felt full, empty, or partially empty. I responded “empty.” After a few more questions, they announced my condition was "severe shock.”

They told the non-Chinese programmers to leave the area as they might find the sight disturbing. They asked for and got my consent to perform rapid massage over my entire torso and head. Twelve people rubbing hands on one's body, at once, is an intense experience; I was fearful so I repeated aloud the name of Buddha, “Amitoufu”, “Amitoufu” over and over. The vice-team leader told the team he knew I was Buddhist. Three times they paused to assess my condition by asking me questions.

At the first pause the team leader asked, “Are you still mad at me, Matthew?”

“YES!!” I responded. The rapid massaging resumed.

A few minutes of massage later the team lead asked, “Matthew, how do you feel now?”

“You have a karmic obstacle,” I responded.

The team lead asked the vice-team leader what this meant and he responded: “I don’t know, but I don't think it’s good.”

I added, “It’s okay, I have one too.”

The vice-team leader said: “Matthew, you’re not making this easy, you know?”

“I’m sorry, I’ll shut up,” I said, and the group resumed the rapid massage.

“Are you still mad, Matthew?” the team lead asked after a few more minutes of massage.

“What would I be mad about? You saved my life,” I said as I sat up and looked at the team leader: “And so did you.”

“We all saved your life,” the vice-team leader said as he opened his arms to include the whole team surrounding me on their knees. Some of the team, and myself, were in tears.

Though still in mild shock, I was no longer in severe shock. Everyone rejoiced as I started acting more normal. At this point, a Chinese member of the team said to me in an angry loud voice, “Matthew, the Buddha’s name is pronounced Amie-Toe-Fwa, NOT Ami-Tofu!”

The female member of the team objected to his tone said, “He’s English-speaking, he’s not expected to know that!”

A day or two later, that same individual told me “Matthew, you can’t be a programmer if you are a Buddhist.” “Why not?” I countered.

“Right Livelihood of the Noble Eightfold Path means not working on military technology and computer software is military technology and it takes jobs away,” he said. “Are you sure being a programmer is not allowed?” I asked. “Yes, that’s why I’m not a programmer any more, I work on help documentation.” This was a shock to me – it didn't make sense to me that writing civilian software was inherently bad, nor that writing help documentation would be any different.

Next, two team members helped me walk to a kitchen area by supporting me as I wrapped my arms around them; I could not walk a step unaided. I had to take a sitting break after only twenty steps. I had no physical strength. Once in the kitchen, they sat me down and gave me an orange soda purchased from a vending machine.

Gary entered the kitchen and explained he was going to interrogate me, as soon as his nephew arrived. I was staring off in the distance with a “1000 yard stare,” disoriented and still in mild shock. Surprisingly, Gary arranged for someone to take a group picture with the entire Version 6 team, with Gary and me kneeling in the foreground. The thirteen-person Version 6 team was clustered in 2 rows behind us, like in a formal group photograph. In the photo, I stare vacantly.

After the first flash went off, Gary leaned over and whispered, “Matthew, I told some other people about you pushing me, so it would be good if you smiled and put your arm around me for this picture.” I did what Gary said, once again stunned by the selflessness of his actions.

Later I realized the taking of this photograph was to gather a piece of propaganda counter-evidence to dispute my claim if ever I attempted to sue the company for their mishandling of the evacuation, and their contractual obligation to arrange for emergency medical care.

Gary's tall, 200-lb. nephew arrived half an hour later. It was clear the nephew was there only for protection in case I was violent. The young nephew appeared frightened, but he put up a good act of being tough. Gary led us to an unfurnished meeting room on another floor. It was so large it could have accommodated a dozen cubicles.

There were only three chairs; one was larger, padded and comfortable. The others were small folding chairs. Gary arranged the most comfy chair so it faced the wall. I offered him the more comfortable chair but he asked me to sit in that chair.

There was only one small window far off on the right side of the wall. Gary sat behind me with his nephew, three feet back, and dimmed the lights. He clearly knew how to conduct interrogations.

He asked if I had ever thought of harming myself. I told the truth. Yes, having suffered clinical depression in my youth (then undiagnosed and untreated), I had once attempted suicide at sixteen years old.

“I took a bunch of pills,” I replied.

He asked if I had ever thought of harming others. I told him a decade earlier, when a certain Ontario Premier was in power, I and a fellow programmer friend had once, for entertainment value only, spent a few hours discussing an idea for damaging the Premier’s office. Both Alain and I had the word scientist or researcher in our professional titles at some point and viewed this as no more than a mad scientist diversion for recreation. I exaggerated this event from my past, telling Gary it was a discussion over weeks, and then settled on hours of discussions over a few weekends, still much of an exaggeration.

“Matthew, there is a lot of difference between a few weeks and a few days,” Gary said. “Which is it?”

“It was a few days only,” I answered, still exaggerating.

Gary asked how we planned to do it. I responded that there was never a plan, just a ludicrous idea of exploring tunnels under Queens Park for sewer mains possibly leading to the Premier’s office.

It was a way of blowing off steam as we both were quite annoyed at some of the Premier’s mean-spirited actions, which had resulted in the deaths of mostly poor Ontarians including seven residents of Walkerton. I was trying to distract Gary from my recent violent behaviour, and so I exaggerated this event significantly making it sound much more serious.

Gary responded, “That idea would never work.”

Gary asked if there was any other time that I had thought about harming someone. I admitted feeling strong resentment towards my psychiatrist who refused to let me discuss my early childhood abuse. I told him my fantasy of dangling Dr. C. by his ankles out of his window. I also admitted that one day while driving in north Toronto, I had noticed a fuel depot, and had the fleeting thought that a truck of fuel might take out a building such as the one where Dr. C. worked.

Gary angrily pointed out how many innocent deaths that would cause. I agreed with him and pointed out that I never intended to act on this fleeting thought, years ago.

Gary would not take no for an answer.

With some anger he demanded, “But why did you never do it?”

I had to invent a reason as he did not believe this was just an idle thought, so I did.

“I could never threaten someone with a weapon to hijack a fuel truck.”

Gary prodded further: “If you had the stolen keys to a tanker truck of fuel, then would you have done it?”

“I don’t know.” I was stringing him along, knowing I never would do it.

I knew I would never wilfully commit such violence, but I wanted to leave the door open with Gary, as then perhaps he might be so focused on this that he might be less likely to pursue an assault charge.

Having even had a discussion ten years earlier (1995) with my friend, Alain about the former Ontario premier was a maladaptive way of coping with our shared dislike of a neo-con politician. Hate in itself is toxic. Having had thoughts of harming my psychiatrist in 2002 was also maladaptive. Admitting both of these thoughts in 2005 to a former member of the Devil’s Brigade, after having pushed him in in a stiarwell, (during PTSD trauma and severe shock) was very unwise.

Later I learned unequivocally that Gary did report my answers to “the authorities.” Had I been completely out of shock, I probably would not have attempted to give consent to a workplace interrogation by a professional.

Once the interrogation was complete, I was taken back to the kitchen area. Still in mild shock I stared off into the distance at nothing, which caused some programmers to comment that I looked strange. One said I looked like the guy in, “War of the Worlds.” They asked me if he had seen the movie. I could feel the memories of the afternoon slipping from my conscious mind.

I said, “No, I don’t remember seeing the movie,” adding, “I remember hearing the original Orson Wells story on the radio."

They asked me what I wanted to do right now.

"I feel like digging a hole … to be safe," I added.

It was nearing four-thirty PM, and the vice-team lead and team lead guided me to my car. The vice-team leader held my forearm. As I stepped off the curb into the parking lot, I heard the HR woman shouting, "I'll take you to the hospital, Matthew!"

I knew the vice-team leader was skilled in martial arts. I had felt him accurately chop my arm when I had earlier lunged at the team leader, and he showed expertise in holding a person down without harming him. I was in a headspace where I did not feel it safe to disagree with him.

"You don't want to go with her, do you?" the vice-team leader asked rhetorically as he guided me toward my car. I thought it pretty evident that the man holding my arm did not want me to go with her.

I answered "No," in a soft voice, in my now mechanical, maladaptive passive response.

"Tell her," he responded, gesturing in her direction.

I shouted out to the HR woman: "No, thank you!" As we approached my car, the vice-team leader let go of my arm, and the team lead walked me the rest of the way. I asked if it was okay to drive on the 401. The team lead said it was okay, but just to take it slow. The vice team-lead had joined the conversation and added, "But you must not smoke." "Why?" I asked. "Just because, you need to not smoke this trip," the vice-team leader said. He obviously did not want me to remember the failed Tornado evacuation, which was already becoming fuzzy and hard to recall.

I had already forgotten much of the afternoon, but I realized I was probably not in good shape to drive. Still I continued following the orders of the vice team lead. I started my car, backed out, and drove out to the 401. It was harrowing, but I white-knuckled it home safely. My wife was very concerned when she saw me come in.

The next day I came in to work and had no memory of the previous day – I had completely repressed it. My team member Jean said: "I heard the storm was a big problem for you."

"What? I was sitting here working all day," I countered.

"That's not what I heard." Jean withdrew to his cubicle. I was stunned. What was he talking about?

People in the hallways and kitchen were staring at me strangely. I had no memory of the failed tornado evacuation and did not know what was going on. Four days later, I felt compelled to write an email letter to the Severe Weather Meteorologist at Environment Canada to complain of their web site not properly explaining what to do in the event of a Tornado Warning.

I told them that at my workplace the staff worked all day on Aug. 19, while the Environment Canada workers were taking shelter in their basement. (I had learned this from a friend who worked at Environment Canada.) I had repressed what actually happened on the day of the severe storm.

To my surprise, the Chief Severe Weather Meteorologist responded that he agreed the web site did not adequately advise what course of action to take. He agreed it should, and said he'd instructed the web designers to make changes. I copied this response and my original email to my manager.

Sensing something was amiss with the way people were looking at me, I decided a proactive measure would be to arrange a meeting with my manager to see if anything was wrong. This was my first meeting with my manager after my first day of work. I asked the manager if my work was okay.

The manager responded, "Yes."

Then I asked if there could be a Safety Committee that could arrange to better handle such events as Tornado Warnings. The manager responded, incredulously: "What could we have done differently?"

"At least someone could be assigned to a bank of windows to watch for an approaching tornado so others could safely continue working at their desks." The manager paused, and said he'd think about it.

A few days later when Gary came in sporting an arm sling, and a bandaged wrist, I asked, "What happened to your arm, Gary?"

"I sprained it," he answered.

"How did you sprain it?"

"You did it, don't you remember?" He looked directly into my eyes. I was flabbergasted, I did not remember. I awkwardly withdrew from the coffee room/kitchen.

Another day Gary asked, "Did you see the plane crash on August 2, Matthew?"

"No, I did not," I said. "I only saw the billows of black smoke from the crash site like everyone else."

"Are you sure about that, Matthew?" Gary asked with a quizzical look, studying my eyes.

"Yes," I responded perfectly naturally.

He looked deep into my eyes for an uncomfortable few seconds, then withdrew his stare. "Battle Stress! That's what you've got!" Again I awkwardly retreated from the 4th floor kitchen area.

At every opportunity when Gary ran into me he would tell me to see my doctor immediately. The problem was I did not know what to tell my doctor, as I could not remember the events that Gary was talking about.

Gradually Gary turned up the screws with such statements as: "The Company can't wait forever, Matthew," and, "You are a danger to yourself and others until you see your doctor, Matthew."

He made it sound like I was a ticking time bomb.

In the week following the tornado, I found myself "disconnecting" in team meetings. The first meeting was in the usual corner meeting room with windows on two walls. Occupants could see planes going back and forth. I could not help but track the planes landing and taking off; I could not turn my head away. I was worried they might crash.

The female programmer, a former nurse, observed to the team lead, "He's watching the planes." I had just ignored something the team lead had said to me. The next team meeting a day or two later took place in a room with no windows. In this meeting I was much more present and focused, but I had nothing to say.

At one point there was laughter. But I had not listened carefully enough to understand what they were laughing at. I thought perhaps I had done something to make them laugh.

I found it illogical and disrespectful to be laughing with one team member still in an injured state of mind, even if that team member did not fully understand why. In short, I resented their merry making. Perhaps the team detected my mood.

They also noticed I was not responding to my name. I had drifted into a daydream while holding my glasses frames in my hands and was bending them back into alignment, almost in a trance. The former nurse said to the team leader, "He's not listening to you." At that moment I realized I had been tuning out the meeting. The team leader said "Matthew, you can fix your glasses after the meeting?"

"Sorry, I'm sorry, yes, okay."

The very next day after the meeting, it was announced in an email that I was being moved off the Version 6 team, to the Version 7 team, which had yet to be formed. I was told to go ahead and work through the on-line tutorials for the advanced software development environment that the vendor developed internally. I was now without a real team, although I did have a team leader. I felt awkward with my former version 6 teammates who were seated around me.

Also about this time, my only workplace friend, an individual who started on the same day, took me down to the HR department for what he described as a meeting with an HR person. I saw him talking with the team leader and vice-team leader first. It seems they had arranged an appointment for me with an HR employee, having realized that I was one of the walking wounded, with great missing chunks of recollection for the events of Aug. 2 and Aug. 19.

The friend walked me down to the third floor and found the office of the HR person. We were on time but the HR person was not there. We waited a few minutes, asking others, but the HR person was nowhere to be found. When we returned to the fourth floor after fifteen minutes of waiting, I overheard the team lead complaining about how HR had let the team down.

Meanwhile there were two incidents in the parking lot where team members and strangers said shocking things to me. The first happened two days after August 19.

I had parked in the outermost row away from the building. Several young Asian men walked to the Acura parked beside my car. One of them turned to me and asked, "Hey, are you Matthew Pauly?"

"Yes," I responded as the friends of the man waited and watched.

The unknown employee said, "What you did to Gary was wrong, you're a crazy man." I realized I must have done something violent to Gary as I had seen the arm sling and he had told me I sprained his arm, but I couldn't remember any details.

"I was in severe shock… people can be violent when in shock," I replied, defensively.

"I've read all about severe shock, and I've never heard of anything like that before. You should get a different job and leave." He got into the car with the others.

I did not answer. I got into my car. I was shocked that strangers in the company knew what had happened, and were approaching me in the parking lot. I had only flashes of partial recall for the events of Aug. 19, or Aug. 2.

A few days later, in the parking lot, I noticed a gathering of about a dozen young Asian programmers in front of a minivan just two parking spaces over from my car. It was a surreal scene as they were standing in a perfect group photo configuration, facing me as I tried to unlock my car. I recognized them as my old Version 6 team.

In near perfect unison they all called out “REMEMBER!”

An awkward two seconds passed. “Remember what?” I countered in a loud voice.

Someone shouted back, “You beat up an old man!” Immediately the team lead, or vice-team leader turned to the speaker and said, “Don’t say that!”

I had to bend over and pick up my keys, which I had dropped as I’d been startled by their shouting in unison. Some of what happened on August 19 began to come back to me. But I desperately wanted not to remember.

I shouted “Nooooo!!!!” as I struggled to unlock my car door. What was it that this team felt so strongly that I should be remembering? My mind was vacillating between partial and zero recall of the evacuation. I was confused, disoriented and very fearful.

A few days later at the end of a workday I got into my car and discovered it had been searched. Things that were in the side pockets were now in the center console pocket, and front seat things moved to the backseat and vice versa. It was clear the car had been thoroughly searched, and the searchers didn't care if it was obvious.

I suspected they were looking to see if I had any medical cannabis in my car, which they could conceivably use to get me into trouble. Thankfully I did not keep pot in my car. Nevertheless, I felt my personal space had been violated.

Towards the end of August, I was walking with my Chinese-Canadian wife and our dog at about seven PM, on our way to the nearby Eglinton Park. As we rounded the corner on Montgomery Avenue to walk north on Edith Drive we saw a shiny, new Acura car with three young, professionally dressed, Chinese-Canadians inside. They appeared to be in their mid-twenties. The backseat passenger was female.

When I looked at them, they studied a map on their laps in the driver’s console area between the two front seats, so their features were hidden. The whole scene looked suspicious.

At least one of them looked like one of the individuals that had approached me in the parking lot at work. Ten minutes later, the Acura was gone. I was reminded of people at work who might be transplanting a cultural punishment from China to Canada, namely public shaming by visiting one's neighbours. After all, on Aug. 19 some members of the team went looking through my wallet to get my home address and said they intended to "warn your neighbours because you are a dangerous man."

Seeing my wife and me, and realizing they had been seen, perhaps they chickened out for fear of being identified. Both my wife and I were left with a creepy feeling. This event would be the first of several events that year that led to my wife suggesting we move to China where the rest of the family is, for safety. Imagine a Canadian considering moving from Canada to China because of human rights concerns!

In early September, I was pulled into a meeting without notice. In the small meeting room were gathered my manager, the director of HR, another HR person, the CEO, Gary, and Gary's daughter whose office was beside the CEO's office. In his opening statement, the CEO mentioned that he considered Gary "like a father" to him.

The CEO pointed out he was concerned for the safety of his staff. I tried to speak but found myself getting very emotional. The CEO asked me what I remembered of Aug. 19. I completely lost my composure and said, amid sobs: "I can't remember anything!!!"

Gary turned to the group. "He's not ready yet."

I took leave of the meeting and was told I could take the rest of the day off.

The next day Gary persuaded me that it was absolutely imperative that I see a doctor right away, regardless of my not wanting to miss work. This gave my unconscious mind permission to remember at least some of what happened on Aug. 2 and 19. Soon after I saw my family doctor, and my psychiatrist a few days later.

The previous night I stayed up all night trying to think what I would say to my family doctor the next day. Still feeling acutely stressed, and now sleep deprived, I showed up with my wife to meet the family doctor about eleven AM.

Dr. Ira B., my family doctor listened carefully to my story plane crash and botched tornado evacuation, and ordered me to take at least the next three days off. He also gave me a note for the HR department. The family doctor gave every indication that he had no doubt I had experienced psychological trauma.

My family doctor would later tell me that during that meeting, he noted the intense fear as I described my inability to sleep after two severe psychological traumas at work, that I had all the major signs of Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD.)

On the third day off, my wife took time off work to take me to an appointment with Dr. R. G. C., the Psychiatrist. By then I had partial memories of both the jet accident and failed Tornado evacuation. I explained that while in severe shock I had pushed an elderly man down some stairs. I explained that I was expected back at work but did not feel ready -- I was too afraid. Dr. R. G. C. responded: “Get back on the horse that threw you. Sometimes these things cure themselves.”

This sounded unreal to me: only two weeks earlier I had pushed an elderly man down a concrete stairwell, and this doctor wanted me to just walk back into the workplace and pretend nothing had happened, and no therapy required?

This was the last straw. However, the doctor was head of a department at the regional specialist health hospital. I followed Dr. R. G. C.'s advice and returned to work the next day, despite the fact that it felt all-wrong.

I remember Gary's surprise upon seeing me. “You're back so soon?” he asked. I told him what the doctor had said.

The psychiatrist was wrong. It would be one year and a half before I would be well enough to return to work, elsewhere. With the fresh memories starting to flood back, I fell apart on the first day back and left work early.

I felt myself acting strange around Gary. Like the predator that attacked me when I was eight years old, I felt a compulsion to scare Gary. This was 180 degrees from what I felt in the executive part of my brain. My behaviour scared me as much as it must have scared Gary. I knew by the end of the day that there was no way I could return to work for a long time, if ever.

My wife was very concerned and took another day off work to accompany me to an appointment with my family physician, Dr. B. who read the cues when I tried to explain what was going on at work. I told him what happened after I followed the (reckless) psychiatrist’s advice to, “Get back on the horse that threw you'. Dr. B. gave me a note to fax to Human Resources, explaining I needed to be off from work for medical reasons until further notice.

I used the company's Short-Term Disability benefit from mid-September to mid-January, 2006, and then went on Long-Term Disability only to May 2007, eight months short of the automatic two–year coverage. I did it by practicing meditation to heal faster.

Dr. B. was surprised.

I fired Dr. R. G. C., and instead enrolled in a Psychological Trauma Unit program at Mount Sinai hospital where I attended weekly meetings with a psychiatrist Dr. Colin M., following a month of weekly meetings with a specialist nurse to gather the trauma details. Before meeting Dr. Colin M, I met with the then head of the program Dr. Alex T.

Dr. T. read my trauma report about the torture by the military. He said, "Matthew, I am from South America, I know about torture." In that moment he crossed his legs so his sock-less ankle was visible from his low-cut loafer shoes. There was a giant round scar between his Achilles tendon and his ankle, right where a hook could have suspended him upside down. He said anti-psychotic drug trials were recommended. He told me, "Matthew, no one will believe you until you do." The idea was to test if I had a delusional disorder.

Shortly thereafter Dr. Colin M. started me on Zyprexa, the first of three drug trials I would undergo over the next five years, each drug stronger than the last and having more side effects. The latter two were Risperdal and Clozapine. None of the drugs had any effect on my recall or certainty of the events reported.

I struggled unsuccessfully to get through Phase I of PTSD recovery (there are 3 phases.) During this early phase I was completely occupied by recalling the traumas of Aug. 2 and Aug. 19 plus related childhood traumas that were surfacing for the first time.

I was Hyper Vigilant: Any cues in my environment that reminded me of the traumas would trigger life-threatening fear. Sleep was horrible with vivid nightmares where I would awake screaming and kicking.

Whenever I communicated these traumas to friends or family, I would become very scared and agitated. They in turn would turn away and not be interested in visiting, or emailing me anymore. Most of my friends and family distanced themselves. This marked the low point of my recovery.

CHAPTER 6: 2005 Oct - The Devil's Brigade Calls

"Fiction is obliged to stick to possibilities. Truth isn't." – Mark Twain

One day in early October, while I was at home alone during the day trying to cope with PTSD, I got a strange phone call. When the caller said "Hello," I immediately recognized Gary's voice on the other end.

"Hello, Matthew. Sorry to bother you..."

"No problem, Gary."

"Matthew, have you been interrogated yet?"

I paused for a moment to take than in and then responded, "By whom?"

"By the Authorities!" said Gary in an annoyed tone.

"No."

"Aw, Jeeze... Those..." He was going to curse but caught himself and said, "Okay, Matthew, thanks... I've got to go, bye."

"Bye," I said.

This left me with little doubt that something bad was going to happen soon.

CHAPTER 7: 2005 Oct - Target Monitored

"In Canada, you are more likely to be killed by a Moose than a Terror plot" – Lead Now

One afternoon two weeks later, in late October 2005, I noticed two young men in their early to mid-30s seated in a car on the North side of Montgomery, a half block east of my house. As I approached and observed them closely, they appeared awkward. My gut told him these "dress-casual" clothed adults with short hair and "the cop look" were not sitting there in a car in the middle of the afternoon for nothing.

They were not contractors: their clothes told me that, and the van was very clean without the marks of a contractor, or the paperwork usually strewn about the dashboard. If they were canvassers, salesmen, or real estate agents, they would not have appeared awkward as I stared at them when I walked by.

They were parked one block east from a house which Bell Canada later informed me had a 'foreign drop' of my telephone line. They were close enough for radio-relayed, real-time telephone monitoring from a parked car. A Bell supervisor technician later gave the address of 'an old' foreign phone drop as X8 Montgomery. A supervisor pulled the wire from that address, and Bell customer service gave me a credit on my phone bill for the privacy breach.

Later that day, just before 7 PM, I left the house and walked briskly south toward the library where the Mood Disorder Institute of Ontario[14] (MDIO) had its offices. A fit man in his late thirties with a red complexion was proceeding north at a brisk walk. We met on the same sidewalk adjacent to the side of the library building. Somehow it was timed so that "Red" met me at the most quiet and private part of the walkway. Red was bustling north, while I proceeded south.

I tried to avoid Red by changing direction three times in total, but each time he swerved in my direction. He stared at me with cold, unblinking eyes suggesting aggression. Finally Red bumped into me although there was plenty of room for both of us to pass on the sidewalk. I felt pressure against my left side at waist level. In true Canadian fashion I said "Sorry," and continued on. Red did not say anything but continued walking north. I thought that was rude and unusual.

Later, after more severe events unfolded, I had reason to believe Red's collision with me was planned and I had been surreptitiously frisked for a weapon.

CHAPTER 8: 2005 Nov 19 – Survey Target's Basement

"If you tell the truth, you don't have to remember anything." – Mark Twain

On the afternoon of Nov. 19 a man calling himself an Enbridge Gas sub-contractor rang my doorbell and offered me a free, consumer energy conservation program. To enrol me, he needed access to my basement.

He said his name was Jerry and he showed me an Enbridge Gas invoice. "Jerry" had no ID tag attached to his overalls, only a first name 'Jerry' stitched onto the front. A gas sub-contractor's van was parked out front. He explained how he and a number of gas contractors delivered the free T.A.P.S. program, which provided energy-saving, flow-reducing aerator facet attachments, and that they also would down-tune my hot water heater.

He said there would be no cost. I fell for it.

After leading him to the furnace room, I watched as he started to work on the hot water heater; he acted anxious and furtive. When he asked me to turn on the hot water in the bathtub, I said "Sure, just a sec," and walked into the basement bathroom beside the furnace room.

Before I could get the water on, Jerry shouted, "Oh, you have a bathtub down here then." This gave me an eerie feeling. Why did Jerry sound disappointed that I was not going to the second floor? Why did he want time alone? Did he need time to survey the area?

After turning on the hot water, I stood in the basement bathroom wondering what to do. I decided to play along (my 'learned passivity' response) and left Jerry alone in the furnace room for perhaps two minutes.

When I returned, Jerry was affixing a 'T.A.P.S.' program sticker to the hot water tank. He had just finished applying the pipe insulation to the heater's output hot water pipe.

Then Jerry entered the bathroom and replaced the showerhead with a new, flow-reducing showerhead. In somewhat of a hurry he handed me two more flow-reducing heads in plastic bags, for use on other taps and showers in the house.

We moved to the upstairs to the breakfast bar counter to do the paperwork. Jerry signed the triplicate, zero-total invoice and asked me to fill out a few particulars, and sign it. The half-page invoice had the Enbridge Gas logo in black and white in the top right corner. There were three copies, pink, yellow and green. I filled in the blanks with my address, postal code, phone number, name in block letters and then signed the form. Jerry tore off my copy and handed it to me before exiting somewhat unusually.

When he first rang the doorbell (perhaps ten minutes earlier), I was napping upstairs and it took me a minute or more to get to the door (PTSD messes up sleep.) When I opened the door, Jerry's contractor van was parked in front of my house, and Jerry was at my neighbours front door.

He had opened their screen door and was pretending to knock. I couldn't hear the knocking sound. Further, there was a doorbell, so why knock? As soon as he saw me open my door, he waved to me and darted over. Yet on exiting, he returned directly to his van, and drove away hastily.

It was only after Jerry left that I noticed the three 500 ml bottles of Hydrogen Peroxide sitting on the furnace room floor, right beside the hot water heater, in the bottom shelf of an aquarium stand. The aquarium was empty except for a few inches of Diatomaceous earth. I had used the peroxide as a disinfectant.

I vaguely remembered hearing that Hydrogen Peroxide could be used to make an explosive. What if Jerry was a law enforcement officer on reconnaissance? Had Gary repeated to the authorities what I had divulged when he interrogated me at work?

My use of Hydrogen Peroxide was benign. A few years previously, I had used the aquarium to grow a mushroom with medicinal properties. The peroxide was used as a disinfectant. My wife's migraine headaches were then resistant to conventional drug therapies, and she suffered at least three times a month for up to several days at a time. Through Internet research I learned that Central American Indians had been using a fungus to treat migraines for thousands of years. After three tries, I finally successfully grew the fungus. (A municipal horse barn supplied free horse manure for gardening.)

Later that evening, following Jerry's visit, I used Google to find cannabisnews.com where I read that a 'free, energy-conservation program' offered by an unsolicited gas company visitor is sometimes a ruse for police to survey a house without a search warrant, perhaps because they lacked probable cause.

I had reason to be worried about possessing what might be construed as the building blocks of explosives. Gary had called only two months earlier asking if the authorities had interrogated me yet. That meant he likely had reported from his interrogation of me, while I was in mild shock, that a decade earlier I harboured hatred of the then Ontario premier, and worse, from my purposeful exaggeration of a talk with a friend about that. Would he also have reported my untoward thoughts of Dr. R. G. C. only a few years earlier?

Six months later a real gas company technician ‘Mat’ told me that Jerry’s installation of insulation on the hot water pipe was unprofessional, leaving less than one half inch between the combustible insulation and the chimney for the hot flue gases; the house could have burned down. The minimum clearance in the building code is six inches.

Jerry was anything but a trained gas technician. “The first rule of gas work is not to burn the customer’s house down,” said Mat. By putting combustible insulation within a half inch of the chimney flue of the hot water heater, Jerry had violated that rule.

Mat added that in his twenty years of gas contracting he had never heard of a T.A.P.S. energy conservation program, and filed a complaint on my behalf with the Technical Standards and Safety Council (TSSC).

CHAPTER 9: 2005 Nov 22 – Health Support Group Infiltration

“Make yourself sheep and the wolves will eat you.” – Benjamin Franklin

The weather on the evening of November 22, 2005 in Toronto, Ontario, Canada was hovering around zero, leaving no doubt that winter had arrived. Relatively calmly, at a few minutes after seven, I walked the three blocks to the Northern District Library; I looked forward to attending the support group on the second floor of the library. Depression is a symptom of PTSD, and these drop-in groups were helpful.

It was dark out and the streetlights illuminated frozen footprints lightly covered with a brushing of snow on un-shovelled sidewalks. These footprints were like temporary memories of a person’s tread. The frozen footprints last a day or two, then melt, and are gone forever, like a memory never to be recalled again; what a pleasant notion that was. I felt a bit jumpy and scared about being picked up by the authorities ever since the unsolicited gas company visitor a few days before.

That evening a new self-identified 'observer in training' showed up at the Depression support meeting, the only free group therapy I could find for my PTSD. This was ‘Red’ -- the same person that collided with me on the library sidewalk a few days earlier. Now his skin appeared cosmetically lightened, and he sported a red moustache that was trimmed so perfectly it looked like a paste on.

The interloper imitated the actions of a legitimate (co-) facilitator in training, including drawing a large circle on an 8 1/2” by 11” sheet of paper, and noting the first names and diagnosis as people introduced themselves around the circle. Co-facilitators have a form with a pre-printed circle for this purpose but Red the interloper did not.

The interloper was most interested in my part of the circle, and specifically me. He repeated my name in a questioning way and nodded to me. I automatically nodded back confirming my name. He did not nod to the others as they introduced themselves, except the only man of Middle Eastern background. The observer in training asked my diagnosis, and I replied “depression.” PTSD was not supported in these groups so I kept that quiet.

The following week, I drew a composite sketch of Red and had it confirmed by group members who agreed it matched the ‘observer’. Below is a much less accurate rendition using face design software. If one adds 7-10 years age to the picture then it approximates Red in 2005. Red has aged considerably in the six years since this composite picture was made.

After going around the circle of eighteen attendees asking each their first name and diagnosis, there was a one-hour break in which Red spoke with the Middle Eastern man. Neither Red nor the Middle Eastern man showed up again at subsequent meetings that I attended. In my later inquiries with the facilitator, they had no record of a person matching Red’s appearance attending, but they admitted they do not record the attendance of co-facilitators in training.

I was told co-facilitators self-identify as a shadow, or observer. Other co-facilitators are supposed to ask for their sign-up form, but in my experience they never did, they just trusted the stranger.

It was unethical, an invasion of privacy, and likely broke several Charter rights when 'the authorities' practiced “group infiltration” on a Mood Disorders support group. It was not a legitimate training exercise. All one had to do is have one officer attend once to get the simple protocol required of the co-facilitator (as two RCMP looking officers did two weeks earlier,) and then have another attend later and pretend to be a co-facilitator. No validation, no ID, nor any special knowledge was required.

Red stuck out like a sore thumb. He looked like an officer. I switched seats at the break to be farther away from him. At other meetings I had talked about having used medical marijuana in the past, and I worried Red could use this information against me. He significantly triggered my suspicion.

After the support group meeting ended, I followed Red into the men’s washroom on the second floor but waited a minute before going in. He was at the sink when I entered. After relieving myself, I washed my hands while Red washed his face.

He gave me a look that indicated he recognized me. Automatically I looked away and pretended not to notice as I continued washing my hands and wiping them with paper towel.

When I next looked at him, his appearance had changed. The moustache was gone; the white cosmetic powder was washed off and revealed acne scarring. Red continued to stare at me piercing and menacingly for a few seconds. I applied myself to throwing out the used paper towel, and pretended it was normal for Red to be removing a fake moustache and washing cosmetics off his face after the meeting.

I could not process this information in real-time, and preferred to act in denial. I just stuffed the memory and continued on to the coffee shop with my support friends after the meeting, as I often did.

Five or six members of the support group and I always gathered after our meetings at Tim Horton's coffee shop at the corner of Yonge & Broadway, two blocks north. I told one of them about what Red had done at the sink in the men's washroom.

Several of us noticed a large van parked on the wrong side of the street just across Yonge street on the south side of Montgomery facing west. I was embarrassed to mention it for fear of appearing paranoid, until Carry said: "What's bothering me right now is that van across the street…" Exhaust was coming out of the tail pipe, the headlights were on, and the two back doors featured unusual vertical rectangular windows with 'square-edged' one-way, mirror glass (as on armoured vehicles).

"Just because you are paranoid doesn't mean they're not out to get you," Stevie observed in an attempt at humour that fell flat.

The large van was unmarked and facing west but parked on the south (wrong) side of the street, with the back door, one-way windows facing Tim Horton's to the east.

"It might be a postal van," I said since it was beside the post office.

"No, it's unmarked and missing the logo," Carry replied.

Then someone got into the van from the passenger side. A moment later it began moving away.

"It's moving, thank God for that," I thought but after twenty feet it came to a stop on the west side of the post-office driveway.

"No, see it stopped again. That is not a normal van," said Carry.

There was a row of lights across the back and sides, not unlike a larger courier truck, but with single rear wheels. The fact that the engine was running made it look unusual.

Our coffee group broke up 30-40 minutes earlier than usual. At 9:32 I checked my watch as I always did, knowing my wife expected me home at 10 PM. Only Stevie and Susan stayed behind in the coffee shop, engaged in a conversation.

After walking my friends to the subway I bid them good night, crossed over to the west side of Yonge, and started walking back to the library with Carry who had forgotten a book in the support group room and planned to get a security guard to let him to retrieve it.

Dropping Carry off, I reasoned I could still avoid the van on Montgomery Avenue by continuing walking north to Helendale Avenue. I was wrong.

CHAPTER 10: 2005 Nov 22 - Van Coercive Interrogation and Mind Control

"The enemy is not Muslims, Christians or Judaism… The real enemy is Extremism" - Unknown

At 10 meters south of Helendale, on the West side of Yonge Street, as I walked north past the bars where people were smoking on the sidewalk, two plainclothes officers approached from the north and stopped me about five meters south of Helendale.

The blond one asked, "Are you Matthew? Matthew Pauly?"

"Yes," I replied.

"We are 'peace' officers," said the blond one with an American accent as he gestured to the tall, burly, dark-moustached man to his right.

"We want to know why you have three bottles of Hydrogen Peroxide in your basement, and what you are planning on doing with it?" he asked as he looked into my eyes.

Realizing the gas company visit three days earlier was a ruse, and that hair bleach could be used for nefarious purposes, I understood they thought I might be a terrorist. I decided to tell the truth, so they would let me go. After all, I was not a terrorist.

"I used it to grow some mushrooms."

"What for?" Mitch asked.

I explained I had read that Central American Indians had a natural cure for migraines, so I grew medicinal mushrooms in my basement for my wife's migraines and used the Hydrogen Peroxide as a disinfectant.

"I like mushrooms!," Burly said with a laugh and asked "Do you have any left?"

"No."

"Why not?" Burly countered in a barely perceptible Quebecois accent.

"Never mind that now," Mitch interrupted in an American accent, turning to me. "Matthew, we really need to ask you a few questions, and it's cold. Come to our van for a few minutes, it is parked just up here," he said as he gestured over his shoulder north.

I thought it best to humour them; clearly they thought I was a terrorist and since it was all based on a miscommunication surely they'd realize that after a few questions, and leave me alone. “OK,” I responded.

I expected Mitch to lead the way so I waited.

“Just walk in front us,” he said. I thought that was an unusual request.

“Walk across the street to the post-office driveway,” Mitch commanded.

I stopped at the yellow and black, diagonal striped boom at the parking lot south entrance since it indicated private property.

“Is this okay?” I asked.

“Never mind, go around it,” Mitch said from behind.

It was eerie as the lot was uncharacteristically dark; it was usually well lit by three high-intensity, orange Sodium vapour, automatic lights. On each side were at least two-dozen darkened postal vans.

I had walked past about ten vans and I said, “Is it one of these?” playing dumb. I feared going to the strange, large van the group of us spotted minutes earlier from the coffee shop.

“No, it’s not one of these. It is straight ahead on the other side of the lot. Just keep walking,” Mitch commanded.

I was feeling uncomfortable with proceeding so I stopped walking. 'Burly' shouted from behind: “KEEP WALKING!!!” I felt afraid and threatened. I complied.

At the north end of the lot was the same van we had seen from Tim Horton's only ten minutes ago. It had not moved from the south side of Montgomery and faced west as before, with the rear at the west side of the parking lot north entrance.

A young officer opened the van door from the inside. In his late twenties with roughly cut hair, he had black hair, a round face and stood about 5’9” and 175 pounds, with a bit of a belly paunch under an olive coloured T-shirt with a cigarette burn hole near the bottom, and drab, dark pants with extra pockets just above the knees.

The T-shirt with the burn hole suggested he was a Canadian soldier, as I knew they were underpaid. He greeted me warmly: “Matthew! Come on in!”

A second young officer with light brown hair stood with his feet spread wide apart blocking my escape west. He was about 5’10” and 165 pounds.

A third officer lurked to my right about five meters away – he was older, and resembled Red whom I had seen in the men’s washroom an hour earlier. A fourth officer stood on the North side of Montgomery. Two officers were behind me. I was completely surrounded.

The man inside the van was holding the door open and had to move aside as I stepped up into the van.

"Watch your head," said the doorman as I stepped in. The door closed behind me. It was quite dark. I asked the doorman officer why the other officers had not entered.

"They'll be along in a few minutes," he replied.

The interior was about a foot or two taller than an ambulance. There were fold-down roof cupboards like in an aircraft, and fixed benches in the back running half the length to the front. There was a reverse-facing, throne-type chair bolted to the floor near the front.

Soon Burly stepped inside. A light was switched on. I became aware there was someone in the passenger's seat up front besides the doorman. Everyone was quiet.

"Where's the other officer?" I asked, referring to the blonde haired officer. Burly said, "Oh, he's coming. He'll be here in a minute."

When Mitch entered, he said they were waiting for one more officer, who should arrive in a minute or two.

After a minute the red-haired, acne-scarred Red entered. "All taken care of," he said to Mitch. (I later deduced he likely removed a temporary flashlight that had been rigged to the light-sensor for the three Sodium lights in the post-office parking lot to keep them dark for the operation.)

Someone radioed, "Target in custody" and the receiver radioed back a confirmation.

"Matthew, why don't you sit here on the bench while we get started?" Mitch said. I got out of the throne chair and sat on a bench at a fold-down table in the back of the van. I sat between two officers on one side bench as instructed.

The officers, who were standing on the sidewalk when I approached, now entered into the van from the front passenger door and stepped into the back area. They joined the group at the folded-down table (from the wall on the driver's side), in the very rear of the van.

The benches along each sidewall could accommodate eight in a squeeze. There were no windows except the thick, one-way, bulletproof windows in the rear doors.

One officer I recognized as Red, but I said nothing about recognizing him.

"Matthew, list any medical conditions you have?" said Mitch, who appeared to be the one in charge. I told him.

Mitch asked what medications I was on. I listed them but forgot to mention one. They appeared to know my medical history but were surprised to learn I also had a liver ailment. I said, “It’s okay, It’s not active.”

The blond-haired interrogator, Mitch, asked in surprise, “What do you mean, not active?”

“I mean my liver is not enlarged.”

“But your blood is still toxic!” He sounded annoyed.

“Yes,” I said. Mitch, Burly and Red all donned white vinyl gloves at this point.

They removed my jacket and searched it thoroughly, including reaching inside the lining through a tear. “Where is your cell phone?” Red asked.

“I don’t have one,” I said.

“You’re a computer guy, why don’t you have one?”

“If a client or employer wants me to have one, they give me one.”

“But why don’t you have your own?”

“Because in 1993 I had a cell phone when consulting to a cell phone company. I used it for an hour a day and I started getting headaches, and little bumps growing on my skin where I held the phone to my head,” I said.

They looked at each other with concern as if it had never occurred to them that cell phone radiation could be dangerous.

Mitch turned to the burly officer and said, “Could you do it?”

“I don't know, let's see,” said Burly.

“Place your hands on the table, and spread your fingers!” Red ordered. I complied. Burly was holding a modified single-holed puncher that he opened and closed.

I asked, “Is that a single-hole punch?”

Burly replied, “Yes, but it’s modified.” The metal curved flange that holds down the paper had been removed.

Burly inspected my fingernails one by one holding the single hole punch against each fingernail. Each time Mitch would ask, “Can you pull that one?”

“I’m not sure, it’s short,” Burly said, and then he would move on to the next fingernail.

Periodically all three senior officers would look up at my face. I maintained a stoic resolve. Burly said, “Well, they're too short.”

“Could you get the pinkie finger?” asked Mitch.

“Maybe,” said Burly, as they all looked in my face with sadistic grins. I was horrified. What country or century did they think they were in?

Mitch said, “Matthew, did you know we were coming for you? Is that why your nails are so short?”

“No, I bite my nails,” I said.

Next Mitch ordered me to spread my fingers even wider. They joked amongst themselves as Red pulled out a sharp, pointed knife and another officer held my wrists so I could not move my hands. Red proceeded to rapidly stab the table in between each finger, moving first slowly across both hands, and then picking up the pace so I heard the rapid ‘tap, tap, tap’ as the knife missed my fingers by millimeters.

They stopped once he’d reached his maximum pace after a few cycles on both hands. They all looked at my face to see how scared I looked. Next Mitch pulled his own not-street-legal knife, and proceeded to stab the table between my fingers. He went considerably faster and the other officers exclaimed: “wow, ooohh, aaahh.” Again they looked at my face, but I had turned away earlier. As a computer programmer and touch typist, losing a finger would be debilitating. After a few more minutes of terror it was over. They asked me to take a seat in the large throne chair at the front of the van where I had first sat. It was bolted to the floor about three feet behind the front cabin area, and faced the rear of the van.

They folded the table back up into the wall on the drivers’ side. It was time to learn what the mysterious and intimidating throne-type chair was for.

The chair had a frame of five-inch diameter, round aluminum tubing on both sides of each armrest, leg rest, and on all sides of the seat and back. There was a sub-frame below the chair of square-steel tubing about one inch wide, which was bolted to the corrugated style, aluminum floor using hexagonal headed, shiny steel bolts.

The back was so high that my head did not reach the top where a frame member was, and my hands did not reach a frame member at the end of the long armrests. All the points where my body, including legs, touched the chair were constructed of tightly woven, three-inch wide, black nylon seat-belt material. This was obviously to lessen bruising which would create evidence. This was a 21st century, professional torture-chair.

Burly leg-cuffed me to the two front-leg supports and slid handcuffs around my wrists and armrests. Before locking the last cuff, the left one, he said, “This is voluntary”.

I said, “Yah right!”

"You don't believe me?" He unfastened the left handcuff. I made a split second decision. I was already ankle cuffed and surrounded. My gut told me that trying to assert my rights would result in violence to me. I was intimidated and afraid to resist.

Severe childhood traumas played a part in my learned passivity. I had used compliance as a child to survive horrific trauma.

"Jacket OFF!" Mitch ordered.

Burly pulled my three-quarter-length leather coat forward and down over my wrists but the handcuffs made it impossible to remove the coat. It was almost comical.

"No! Remove the cuffs to take off the coat," Mitch ordered.

Burly unfastened the handcuffs, removed my coat, and then refastened the handcuffs.

He approached my left arm while holding a large needle and syringe. I asked: "Sodium Pentothal?"

Burly replied: "Have you ever been given Sodium Pentothal before?"

"No."

"Then how do you know its Sodium Pentothal?" he demanded.

"I didn't. I just thought it might fit."

He continued, "Why do you know about it?"

"I had seen a video of prisoner in the USA interrogated under Sodium Pentothal."

I knew it was a truth serum. It was one of the drugs that came out of MK-ULTRA research in the post-war period, and was experimented with on unsuspecting patients of Dr. Ewen Cameron at the Royal Victoria Hospital and the Allan Memorial Institute in Montreal in the 1950s and 1960s.

Before inserting the needle, he paused. "OK?" he asked.

"Whatever…" I said.

"I need you to say 'OK'! We can wait all night if you want," he said.

I was starting to be frightened.

"If you refuse, we can hold you for three days on a security certificate, without access to a lawyer."

"Would I be able to contact my family?" I asked.

"No!" said Mitch. I imagined the severe worry my disappearance would cause my family.

I thought if I said no, what options would they resort to next? Would they pull out my fingernails?

"OK!"

My left forearm was facing up. Burly jabbed the needle into a vein opposite the elbow. I grimaced. The jab hurt much more than needles usually do, probably because it was such a large needle.

Using white medical tape Burly taped the 150 cc (or larger) syringe on the underside of my left forearm. He pushed the plunger in just a bit. Within five seconds I felt drunk, four-very-quick-beers drunk.

NOTE: From this point forward I was drugged against my will. I was in no position for informed consent. Inaccuracies may be present in the order of the different events that occurred in that van. The events are accurate but due to the drugging I missed some dialogue and the order may be incorrect. Only the military recordings will show what inaccuracies there are, if any.

I knew it must be a 'truth serum' like Sodium Pentothal or another Phenobarbital cocktail. The prisoner in the video being interrogated acted and looked as drunk as I felt.

Next, Burly applied a heavy cuff around my upper right arm, not unlike a blood pressure cuff, except it felt heavy, and had wires connected to it. I was horrified as I guessed what it might be for. He asked if it was comfortable.

This was such a weird question. I replied "Yes... What is this for?"

"This is so you tell the truth." Then it dawned on me what the cuff was for.

Burly removed my glasses. Everything was out of focus from this point forward. Burly then started taping my eyelids open with such skill and rapidity that he'd clearly done it many times before. My right eyelid hurt from the tape. I said "Ouch!"

"OK then," Burly said as he pulled the tape off and refastened it slightly looser so it pulled a bit less. "Is that better?"

"Yes, thanks." I could not blink my eyes. I asked again: "What is this tape for?"

"So you can see better."

"I can see better with my glasses on."

"You don't need to see that well! I'll put in eye drops in every once in a while."

Three floodlights materialized near the ceiling, about three feet from my head adjusted to shine directly into my face. Since I hadn't noticed them before, I could not tell if these were actually mounted on the ceiling or on floor stands.

The lights were absolutely blinding and I could not make out any shapes behind them. With my eyes taped open, I could not see anything but bright light.

Interrogation – Pre-seizure Questions:

Burly dropped very cold eye drops into my eyes, causing me to jump in pain. The bottle had probably been stored in the unheated compartments of the van and it was near freezing outside. Still I was dependent upon those eye drops to blink and lubricate my eyes. Then I heard, “awiie mm yourrr inlrtergoatr. Lissstnnn tooo mmy voozce.” It was electronically altered so the voiceprint of the speaker would be indistinguishable.

Although I was listening carefully I couldn’t understand what was said. “What?”

The speaker repeated, “awiie mm yourrr inlrtergoatr. Lissstnnn tooo mmy voozce.”

“What?” I asked again.

The interrogator discarded the electronically altered voice machine. “I am your interrogator. Listen to my voice,” he said. It sounded like Red.

“What terrorist organizations do you belong to?” he asked.

“None.”

“Not any?”

“Not any.”

“Anytime in your life have you belonged to a terrorist organization?”

Again I replied, “Never.”

“What about earlier in your life? Have you ever belonged to a terrorist organization ever in your life?”

“No, none ever.”

“What terrorist organizations have you belonged to in the past?”

“None.”

“In the past what terrorist organizations did you belong to?”

“None.”

Red re-framed the question slightly and posed it again. Each time I answered “No.”

“Answer yes or no: Have you ever been a member of Hamas?”

I was born in Canada of American parents, Christened an Anglican

(I’m a WASP) and raised first a Quaker and then a Unitarian. I was thinking, “Can he be serious?”

“What about Al Qaeda? Have you ever corresponded or met with them?”

“No.”

“Are you sure?”

“Yes, I'm sure.”

“Do you know anyone who might belong to Al Qaeda?”

“No.”

“What about Hezbollah? Have you been a member of that?”

Again I responded, “No.”

“Not ever?”

“Not ever.”

The blond officer, Mitch, took over and continued this line of interrogation for at least twenty minutes with a list of terrorist organizations with Arabic names I’d never heard before.

Mitch would repeat the same question over and over about half a dozen times with slight variations until he was satisfied with my answer. Then he would move on to the next group. If I delayed too long before replying, I was given a jolt of electricity.

“Matthew, I can take you to Guantanamo Bay tonight. I have a jet waiting, so you better tell the truth.”

“Are you a member of PETA?”

“What does that stand for?”

“Oh, you mean the People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals?”

“Yah, that’s it, are you a member?”

“No.” I couldn’t believe this was a terrorist organization.

“Have you ever been a member?”

“No.”

“Do you know anyone who has been a member?”

“No.”

“Have you ever been a member of The White Panthers?” Mitch asked.

“I thought it was the Black Panthers.”

“No, there’s white panthers now,” Red clarified.

The extensive terrorist organization list was likely from the American State Department’s list of “Foreign Terrorist Organizations.”[15]. This going through the long list of terror organizations took about twenty minutes.

“What political organizations do you belong to?” asked Red.

“None,” I replied, relieved at a change in topic.

“What political organizations have you belonged to in the past?”

“I was a member of the Liberal Party of Canada once.” There was a pause.

“Is that supposed to be a joke?” Red asked slowly in a monotone, serious way with unblinking eyes staring at mine.

“No, I'm being honest,” I said. “I was a member of the NDP once too.”

“Now we're getting closer!” said Red enthusiastically, since the NDP is Canada’s democratic left party. He leaned closer, and Mitch also leaned forward.

I couldn’t name any more organizations I had belonged to, besides the Regina Aquarium Society when I was eleven years old.

“Any organizations that had a purpose or goal of some sort?” Red asked.

“No, none.”

Then the interrogation took a very strange and abrupt turn.

“Who is the Prophet?” Red asked.

I countered, “Which one?”

“You know,” Red said in a tired tone. “The Islamic one.”

“Mohammad,” I said.

“Say it together with me: Mohammad is the Prophet,” Red commanded.

“No,” I said, knowing this was a setup. Someone gave me a shock with the power turned up, so now my whole arm stung. I decided to comply and said, “Mohammad is the Prophet.”

The tall burly officer with the black moustache and greying hair now broke in for the first time since he’d applied the torture-device. “Matthew, I have just one question for you.”

“OK, go ahead,” I replied.

“Why do you sing to your dog?” he asked deadpan.

“What?!!” I said with embarrassment.

“Don’t deny it, I've heard it,” Burly said.

“Moving along,” said Mitch.

“By the way, you need a new fridge,” Burly added.

I did a few times did sing a few lines to my dog and I needed a new fridge. The hourly clunk when the compressor shut off could be heard throughout the house and startled visitors and guests. However, I only had sung to my dog on the first floor of my house when others were out and I wanted to perk up the dog.

I would take an already known tune, perhaps a Christmas carol and substitute in my dog's name and some lyrics of praise. The dog got a kick out of hearing its name, and it added some levity to my days at home alone recovering from PTSD.

Aside: Later when I was tortured to dissociation this officer asked me about an ongoing RCMP Major Crimes investigation in Alberta. Someone I knew briefly in Alberta about fifteen years earlier had been the victim of a major crime. About a decade earlier an RCMP officer visited my residence in Toronto and asked me questions. I cooperated fully and gave a statement in writing. Unfortunately they were unable to convict the accused, so when I was completely tortured to submission in this van, I was again asked about this investigation. I had no information beyond what I'd reported a decade earlier. This is how I know for certain that this Burly officer was RCMP.

A stranger had approached me a few months earlier in the Yonge-Eglinton shopping center near the entrance to Radio Shack. He was of East Indian descent, about 5' 7", 150 pounds, and maybe forty-five years old.

"Sir, I want to buy a cordless phone, but I don't know which one to buy. "

"You look like a man that knows about electronics," he added.

"Any name brand will be good," I advised.

"But which one do you have?"

He was too insistent. I detected subterfuge but I couldn't see how this information could be used against me. I wanted to get rid of him.

"It's a Motorola cordless with a base station and two handsets."

"What model?"

"I don't remember the model. It is the expensive one with the 'room monitor' feature."

Now I realized my phone must have been hacked, and my singing and all private conversations observed. This explained the recent loud feedback squeal heard when my wife or I would pick up the phone.

The interrogation continued, "What is your Arabic name?" This question was asked many, many times until time itself seemed to blur.

They kept repeating the question. I kept replying negatively. "I don't know my name in Arabic.“ I kept getting shocked, randomly. They pushed the plunger of the syringe in more, and I felt drunker than ever. I could not supply them an Arabic name because I did not have one. Red tried saying something to me in what sounded like Arabic, or maybe Farsi, but I did not speak either language. They shocked me again.

After going back and forth for at least ten iterations, in frustration, I said, "I don't have a fucking Arabic name!" Then there was a pause.

Red said, "Matthew, your Arabic name is Mohash."

I purposefully tried to not remember it.

"Now say it!" he commanded.

"No," I replied. I knew that announcing my new Arabic name was not only misleading, but in the post 9/11 political climate, it was not a good idea. Surely the van was wired for sound. Red repeated the command. I stayed silent.

Next I felt the stinging slap of a pair of vinyl gloves across my face. I felt very vulnerable in this van full of military men who were behaving sadistically. I was virtually blind, handcuffed to a chair and now I was being assaulted. I could not even blink my eyes for protection.

I flashed back to the recently remembered rape trauma from thirty years earlier when I was eight years old, in which my attacker slapped me when I was not obedient. I wept. My voice quivering I said to Red, "Please do not slap me, I'm flashing back to thirty years ago when I was attacked."

"Why are you going all the way back there for?"

"Because I have PTSD!!!!" I shouted at him through sobs.

One of the two regular Canadian Forces officers sitting in the front of the van asked what PTSD was. Red paused for a few seconds.

Red then said, "Matthew, I won't slap you again, but you've got to do something for me. I want you to repeat your Arabic name and then we can move on."

"OK," I said amid sobs.

"Go," he said.

"My name is Mohash," I said with a quivering voice that broke.

"That was good, Matthew, but do it once again without crying," Red said.

I focused and repeated, "My name is Mohash".

"Good, Matthew, now we can move on," Red said.

Mitch was explaining some no-mark torture techniques to Red. He said, “Matthew, close your right eye, but keep the left open.”

Impaired by the Sodium Pentothal and never being good at opening one eye, I just shut both eyes. “No, I want you to open your left I so you can see me,” he said and I complied.

Mitch explained to Red that he needed to flick his finger just hard enough, but not too much. He demonstrated the force to use by flicking his finger against Red’s forearm. Red cautiously approached, hesitated and then flicked his finger against my shuttered right eye. It was very painful, as the eyeball was knocked back hard against the eye socket.

“Oouch!” I shouted. “Don’t do that!”

Next Mitch explained to Red how to use the second joints of the fingers (first below knuckles) to push into my cheek right where the upper and lower teeth touch, and then twist the wrist so the finger joints and jam the inside cheek membranes against the crowns of the teeth.

“Matthew, clench your teeth together,” said Mitch, and I complied. Red pushed the second joints of his closed fist into my cheek and twisted back and forth.

“STOP, that hurts!”

Again Mitch asked, “What is your other Arabic name?”

“Mohash”

“No, tell me your other name!” Mitch demanded.

The interrogation was taking an unpredictable turn. I was now getting an electrical shock even when I tried to cooperate by answering the name question. There was no way out of the pain. This was scientific, Nazi-style, sadism causing a predictable personality meltdown.

It appeared to be a 'teaching' question (for Red the student), as Mitch was showing Red how to get a subject into a complete state of surrender: the 'ideal state' he called it. They brought me to a mental state of complete and utter helplessness.

Dissociation is a normal human response to excessive Psychological Trauma. The dominant personality goes to sleep (and has amnesia afterwards.) What is left is an infantile, very malleable consciousness that is easily hypnotized.

CHAPTER 11: 2005 Nov 22 - Creating a Sleeper Agent

“There’s a plot in this country to enslave every man, woman and child. Before I leave this noble office, I intend to expose this plot.” – Pres. John F. Kennedy, 7 days before his assassination

I was asked over and over, “What is your name?”

When I answered “Matthew,” Mitch would say “No! Your other name?”

I tried replying, “Matt?”

“No, I want your other name!”

I offered my childhood nickname, “Boo Boo.”

“Where did that come from?” Mitch said.

“It was my childhood nickname, from the Yogi Bear cartoon.”

“No, I want your other name!” Mitch demanded.

“But I don't have one!”

“TELL ME YOUR OTHER NAME!” Mitch shouted.

I didn't answer, and I was shocked severely. This was a question that there was no right answer to, as I had no other name. I knew they wanted an Arabic name, but I knew no Arabic beyond what they had taught me.

I tried answering “Mohash” as they had taught me, but they gave me another shock. Again Mitch asked, “What is your other Arabic name? Your other name?” I tried inventing a name, and got shocked again.

“What is your name?” Mitch repeated. I decided to remain silent. Another shock. There was no pattern. No behaviour would stop the random shocks.

“What is your name?” Over and over. Time became elastic. I arbitrarily said nothing or invented a name, and was arbitrarily shocked. There was no other sound except “What is your name?”. Sometimes I would hear Mitch say “now” and then the shock would hit me. I realized Red must have been holding the controller.

The session became silent and Mitch used hand signals, which I could not see, so I could not know when the shock was coming.

“What is your name?” In such a perverse situation, the mind cannot avoid the electric shock, and random answers to avoid the shock result in random electric shocks. There is no way out of the pain. Within ten to twenty minutes, the mind shuts down, regressing to that of a traumatized, captured small animal. This is what happened to me.

For the next six years, it was rare for a day to go by when I did not hear the question "What is your name?!!!" in my mind, whenever I was stressed or tired.

I remember Mitch telling Red how to recognize when the desired surrender, dissociation state had been reached. “You see how his eyelids are flickering constantly against the taping?” Mitch asked.

“Yes,” Red replied.

“That’s one of the signs. Also watch this,” and he motioned his hand between the floodlights and my eyes causing a fast moving shadow. I recoiled away in fear to the full extent of my restraints. “That's another sign the state has been reached. You have to stop when they reach this stage or they will go into shock,” Mitch explained.. “Matthew, slow down your breathing!”

I breathed slower.

Starting from this regressed, dissociative state, the subject can easily be hypnotized. “Look at this, Matthew,” Mitch said as he pulled something out from under his jacket. It was a cube of plastic or glass about two and a half inches on each side, and illuminated from inside by gradually pulsating, warm coloured LEDs.

It contained a hologram depicting two scenes.

The first scene in the top right of the cube, was a detailed, exquisite 3D image of a mountain vista with an eagle perched on a tree. The second scene in the bottom left of the cube, was of the Apollo 13[16] spacecraft next to an American flag on the moon.

“Wow,” I exclaimed, “It's beautiful! What is it?”

“Never mind” Mitch said, “just look at it.”

The hologram was slowly changing as the LEDs pulsated, causing a colour shift among green, blue, red, and yellow. The Eagle appeared to take flight as the colour lights illuminated different aspects of the hologram, and the spacecraft simultaneously lifted off the moon.

I was literally mesmerized. “Can I touch it, just once, please?”

”Just once” said Mitch as he held it close to my right hand, which was still handcuffed to the metal torture chair. I touched the surface with two fingers. It felt just like a cube of hard plastic.

Mitch held it back at my eye level, and said, “Matthew, I want you to focus on this, and do exactly as I say.”

“Okay.”

Mitch continued, “You are going to sleep now, even though your eyes are open, and you are going to do everything I ask. Relax.”

I immediately slumped in the chair.

Mitch started to put the cube away. I said, “Can I look at it more, please?”

“No, no, no, Matthew,” Mitch said with a chuckle. “That's enough,” and he put it away. He continued: “Matthew, you will repeat exactly what I tell you to repeat, out loud.”

“Do you understand?” he asked.

“Yes.”

“Now say it, I will repeat everything I am told to.”

“I'll repeat everything I am told to,” I said.

MIND CONTROL PROGRAM #1

I was now fully in a hypnotic trance.

“Repeat after me “If I find a gun in my jacket pocket I WILL go to the nearest closet, without delay’.”

I repeated word for word: ““If I find a gun in my jacket pocket I WILL go to the nearest closet, without delay.” Something happened inside me as I said this.

I did not like the sound of “gun” and “go to the nearest closet.” I had always been afraid of guns and rifles. It started when I was an eight-year-old kid in Argenta, B.C. one summer when I visited a ten-year-old kid who lived about half a mile up the mountain road from where I was staying with my mother and brother in that Quaker community.

The kid met me on the road out front, and showed me his .22 rifle and demonstrated shooting it while aiming up the road. I objected that he might accidentally hurt someone. “It won't hit anything but trees!” the kid said angrily. Then he pointed the loaded rifle at my chest and I froze. “If I pull this trigger here right now,” he said as he wiggled his finger, “you'll be dead.” He smiled sadistically. I was speechless and terrified. After a few moments, the kid pointed the rifle in another direction.

The mention of the gun in my pocket brought back another memory. At fifteen years old I’d read three books on hypnotism, and I realized that

Mitch was in the process of implanting a dangerous post-hypnotic suggestion.

Post-hypnotic suggestions are harmless enough as part of a Stop Smoking program, or when a show hypnotist makes people act like children or animals on stage.

As anyone schooled in hypnosis will say, it's difficult to forcefully hypnotize someone if they wilfully resist. A prelude of torture anti-conditioning to cause dissociation makes it nearly impossible to resist. If I had not read those three books on hypnotism, I would not have had any knowledge to attempt to resist.

My fear of the words "gun" and "go to the nearest closet" made me feel resistant. My knowledge of how hypnosis works came back to me. This allowed an inner voice to rebel even under hypnosis. I knew I had to hide this – I absolutely could not handle more torture anti-conditioning. I did my best to secretly will the opposite of what they forced me to say out loud, over and over.

"If I find a gun in my jacket pocket I WILL go to the nearest closet, without delay," Mitch intoned, and I repeated it out loud word for word. Inwardly I repeated the same sentence substituting "WILL NOT" for "WILL".

There was a diversion from the programming as Mitch taught me how to turn the safety off on a handgun.

"Have you ever used a handgun?"

"No."

"Have you seen one before?"

"Yes." (I'd seen police on the street carry them).

"Do you know what a safety is?"

"Yes. I had a pellet gun as a kid and it had one."

Mitch turned to Burly and said, "Do pellet guns have a safety?"

"Yes, I believe they do," Burly answered in an uncertain tone. Clearly Mitch was a city-raised kid. He pulled out his own chrome-plated handgun and the younger Canadian officers sitting in front said "Wooo hooo!!" as the expensive looking, shiny handgun glimmered in the floodlights.

Mitch then lamented, "Well, it won't look like this one."

Burly said, "Here, use mine," as he pulled his black Glock out from under his jacket and handed it to Mitch. "It's loaded." Glocks are standard issue for RCMP officers.

“Yes, I know,” said Mitch annoyed as he accepted the weapon for the demonstration.

“OK, Matthew. To turn the safety off, you just press this little button here.” He held the gun just outside my reach, midway between my face and my handcuffed right hand.

“OK, I understand,” I said. It was a button just in front and above the trigger. The programming continued.

“Repeat after me: ‘After stepping inside the closet but before closing the door, I WILL turn the safety OFF on the handgun,’” I repeated the sentence word for word, while silently negating the command in my mind.

“I WILL then close the door to the closet without delay and then immediately put the barrel of the gun to my head.” I repeated it aloud while silently repeating the opposite statement in my mind.

“I WILL pull the trigger in one smooth action. I WILL NOT delay in pulling the trigger,” Mitch said, and I repeated after him.

5. “I WILL NOT shoot my family, or anyone else.” I repeated it aloud, still keeping up with the demanding pace but I was slowed as I had to break the pattern and not negate the logic of this program.

6. “I WILL NOT remember this program until a gun is found in my pocket.” As I repeated it, I told myself : “I WILL remember this program until a gun is found in my pocket.”

“Matthew, don't hesitate!” He started over and had me repeat statements 1 through 6 again, one after another. He repeated the whole program, and I repeated after him. This went on for ten to fifteen repetitions.

MIND CONTROL PROGRAM #2

After the umpteenth time repeating program #1, Mitch moved on to the next program. “Matthew, do you know what a controller is?”

“Kind of,” I replied.

“A controller is someone you treat specially. You treat them as your best friend, and you answer any questions with a straight answer, and you do anything they ask.“

Mitch had me supply an already memorized elementary school friend’s last name for the controller so I would more easily remember. He said it was important I chose a person I would not have contact with in the future.

I chose "Smith" after my elementary school girlfriend. I suggested "Larry" for the first name, after the dunce in the same classroom.

“I don’t know, Matthew. Larry Smith is too common. Choose something else,” Mitch ordered.

“Look, I am the one who has to remember this for years, so let me pick the name,” I said assertively despite being in a trance, dissociated from torture anti-conditioning.

Mitch considered it for a few seconds and finally agreed.

“Repeat after me,” said Mitch.

1. “When someone introduces themselves as Larry Smith, I will treat them as my best friend.”

“When someone introduces themselves as Larry Smith, I will treat them as my best friend.”

In my mind I tried to negate the logic with my inner voice.

2. “I will tell Larry Smith the straight answer to any question he asks of me.’” Again, I repeated this out loud while trying to remember to inwardly negate it.

3. “I will do everything Larry Smith tells me, including kill.”

There was a brief dead silence in the van.

“I will do everything Larry Smith tells me, including kill.” I responded, terrified.

Mitch then taught me the method to use to kill in case Larry Smith asked me to kill.

“Matthew, you will run towards the target. At full speed run you will impact the target with your hands on their torso to knock them down. You will jump on them and roll them on their back. You will squeeze their chest with your knees. You will clamp their throat with your hands, and lean forward putting all your weight on your hands. But don’t cross the thumbs, Matthew.”

“Your long arms are perfect for this technique, Matthew. “Repeat the method back to me.”

“I will run at them full speed, knock them down with my hands impacting their torso. I jump on them, get them on their back, squeeze their chest with my knees, and clamp my hands around their throat, and lean forward putting all my weight on my hands.”

“Yes, that's close but you need to remember not to cross your thumbs.”

He clarified the killing technique by demonstrated the choking technique on an imaginary victim without crossing the thumbs.

In retrospect, I realize this technique would leave plenty of forensic evidence. But since a sleeper agent – which I was being programmed to become -- doesn't know anything about his controller other than a made-up name, and has amnesia for years after, I would appear to be just another crazed killer with blood on my hands.

"Repeat after me," Mitch went on: "I will do for Larry Smith anything he asks, including kill." Terrified, I repeated this, and tried to repeat the opposite in in my mind.

4. "Repeat after me," said Mitch: "I will not remember this instruction until a person introduces himself in person as Larry Smith."

I was aghast but compliant, and I repeated this out loud, while I silently repeated the opposite in my mind.

Then Mitch started over from step 1 coaching me through step 2, 3, and 4, each time ordering me to repeat it exactly. I complied.

As with post-hypnotic program #1, this whole program was repeated ten to twenty times. I strained to keep up while secretly willing the opposite. Mitch would praise me when I repeated the steps correctly without delay, but berate me if I hesitated and threaten me with a shock.

It would be four years and five months before I remembered the mind-control programming. What a perfect murder scheme by anonymous state controllers; what tragic implications for democracy.

MIND CONTROL PROGRAM #3

After repeating all the steps of program #2, Mitch went on to the next program.

"Repeat after me," said Mitch:

1. "If I find myself in a Psychiatric hospital or Psychiatric ward of a hospital, the first time I am alone in a room with doctor or nurse wearing a stethoscope, I will strangle them with it."

Again I repeated the program out loud, and silently repeated the reverse in my mind.

"Good, now this is how you'll do it," Mitch said.

Mitch pulled out a real stethoscope and taught me to hold it a certain way to most efficiently strangle the victim. "You fold it in half like this," he said. He held the stethoscope folded in half, with one hand holding the rubber cord folded in the middle, while his other hand held the metal ends.

"Again, repeat after me" Mitch said, "If I find myself in a Psychiatric hospital or Psychiatric ward of a hospital, the first time I am alone in a room with a doctor or nurse wearing a stethoscope I will strangle them with it."

I repeated the instruction out loud, and silently repeated the reverse in my mind.

2. "Repeat after me," said Mitch:

"I will not remember this instruction until a person introduces himself in person as Larry Smith."

These two post-hypnotic suggestions were repeated between ten and twenty times.[17]

Creating Alpha

Then Mitch took me to other states for demonstration purposes, like a puppet.

"I am going to introduce you to two new names just for you Matthew, Alpha and Beta, I want you to remember."

"I had two cats named Alpha and Beta once."

"Good, then you will have no trouble remembering," Mitch said.

"Matthew, who got you really angry when you were a kid?"

"My older brother."

"How did he do it?"

"He would tease me, and then call me chicken over and over."

Mitch started insulted me, making fun of my physical characteristics: glasses, bent baby fingers, and teeth.

"What you going to do, four eyes freak?"

"What's wrong -- are you chicken?"

I tried to resist being affected.

"Chicken, chicken, chicken." Red joined in the name-calling.

I started to get angry after a few minutes. Mitch continued goading me, until finally I exploded with a threatening rant.

I yelled: "You're lucky I'm restrained, you short motherfucker, or I'd rip your head off!" Mitch was 5'11", a few inches shorter than I.

Once in this state of rage, Mitch told "Stop, listen, Matthew… the rage you feel right now, I want you to remember this. You are Alpha now, remember the way you feel now. This is your Alpha personality (alter), Matthew. Remember it."

Then he said something to make me laugh that I don't remember. He said things to cool me down.

Sexual Assault, Humiliation

Mitch said, “Go out in the neighbourhood and get me a clean garbage can, the large kind.”

OK,” Burly said deferentially.

“I want an aluminum one, not a plastic one and it has to be clean.”

“OK.” Burly seemed slightly worried at the tall order. Burly’s absence provided a respite from the torture interrogation and mind control programming. The previous several hours had given me not one minute to rest.

“What is taking him so long?” Mitch asked Red.

Burly returned with a garbage can and Mitch asked, "What took you so long?!!"

“I’m sorry but I had to walk four blocks to find the kind you wanted.”

“It took you long enough,” Mitch said as he lined the large can with a clean black garbage bag.

Mitch then placed 3-D goggles on me, which I could not look away from since my eyelids were taped open. He also put headphones on my ears.

I watched a series of disturbing videos shown, each a few minutes long, depicting violence of all types, including sexual. Various types of pornography were also shown to me. At the end of the sexual-content segments Mitch instructed Burly to “test whether he's hard.”

The Mitch groped my genitals several times announcing “hard” or “not hard” to the entire van of officers. The 3-D goggles were briefly removed. The floodlights were now off.

Again Mitch asked Burly to check whether I was hard. At this third groping Red lost his cool and said to Burly, “You better stop that!”

“But he's saying to,” Burly pleaded, nodding towards Mitch.

“That doesn't matter, he can charge you!” Red said nodding towards me[18].

Next the DVD player played horror-show flicks. Under the influence of drugs, torture and not being able to look away because ones eyelids are taped open, they were truly horrifying. The soundtrack featured a death metal band screamed murderous rage in my ears.

I do not care for this music genre, and this terror-inducing use of it was a perfect example of why. The hate spewed towards women and other humans was horrific. Later I found the music on Youtube, it by a band Cannibal Corpse.

Next came a twenty-second black and white film clip showing officers bulldozing dead bodies into a large open pit. The bodies were in such a state of decomposition that they fell apart as they bounced off each other as they were pushed into the pit. It was the most sickening thing I had seen in my life.

That the US military would force me to watch this was outrageous and implied they were holocaust supporters.[19] I screamed in horror, "Noooooooooooo Nooooooooooo."

Mitch shouted back in my ear, "Shut up! Don't scream!"

Another horror video at first appeared as a car commercial. A shiny European car passes along a gently winding road and disappears behind trees. The eye anticipates the car emerging from the trees. It does not. The mind starts to wonder what happened. Then some sort of monstrous humanoid creature jumps into the front of the frame. I later found this video on Youtube under 'Scary Car Commercial'.

I screamed again. The headphones were removed and I was told to stop screaming. Once I stopped screaming they were placed back on.

Next I was shown what would have been very scary 3-D content except that I recognized it from a video game called 'Battle Zone' I had played as a teenager. It was the part where the 'buzzing missile' weaves into and obliterates the player, ending with the simulated cracked windshield in the tank. I chuckled and said, "This is from a video game I once played."

Slightly annoyed, Mitch said, "Okay then, we'll fast-forward past this part." The video jumped ahead past the video game.

Next I was shown such terrifying content that I screamed at the top of my lungs. I remember dismembered corpses and a flaming skull. There was occult imagery. When I screamed, Mitch screamed in my ears, "Shut up," but I would not. They took the headset off so I would stop screaming.

The 3-D headset was put back on.

Mitch instructed Burly, "On my mark I want you to pull off the goggles so Matthew doesn't mess them up." He added, "Ready... on my mark, 6…, 5..."

I watched as the camera did a close up of a girl's Raggedy Ann doll lying on a perfectly cut green lawn sloping down a hill. There was soft, relaxing music... "4…, 3…, 2…" it was calming, and peaceful as the camera lowered to doll level.

"1…" In an instant a wave of computer-generated animation enormously large ants crawled across the screen in 3-D in an undulating wave and quickly started biting and eating the doll lying on a green perfectly cut lawn. The mark was reached and Mitch said, “NOW, pull them off!” Burly did as told.

Exactly at this point I leaned forward and vomited into the garbage bin that Mitch had tilted towards me. Mitch asked, “Is that all, Matthew? Are you sure?”

“Yes, that's it,” I responded.

“Wow, that's impressive... most empty their entire lunch.”

Next Mitch announced, “This is to demonstrate how obedient Matthew is to me.“ With a grin on his face, he poured the vomit into a white, plastic washbasin. Then he announced I would drink it. Some officers were heard mumbling disagreement. Mitch replied, “He's not going to drink the whole thing. He’ll only be taking one gulp.”

He added, with a slight lisp, "This is to demonstrate Matthew's compliance and willingness to follow my instruction." He held the washbasin to my lips and tipped the basin up. Vomit sloshed down both of my cheeks, and when Mitch said, “Swallow now!” I did as told. One of the Canadian officers could be heard retching behind me. It tasted a bit like hot and sour soup, but decidedly less tasty. I did not retch. I was too frightened of disobeying Mitch.

The other officers went silent. Mitch was happy. "See, I told you Matthew would drink it if I told him."

Red rushed in with paper towel and for the first time he knelt down on one knee as he wiped the vomit off my face. He actually apologized: “I'm sorry Matthew... I didn't see this coming.” I believed him.

I believe the American officer underestimated the effect some of these actions would have on the morale of the Canadian officers in this joint training exercise.

Creating Beta

Next Mitch asked the Canadian officers to step out of the van. A new officer entered and followed Mitch’s orders. He had an American accent. Using further torture, he took me to a very compliant, passive state.

“Matthew, I am going to adjust your restraints and I want you to stand on your knees just in front of the chair,” Mitch commanded. Mitch removed some restraints and re-adjusted others so I could kneel with my back against the front of the chair. (This must have been the reason for backup.)

"Don't sit, stand on your knees," Mitch ordered.

"I need to lower your pants and underwear to put something on," Mitch explained.

"What for?"

"Never mind, it will not hurt, you will like it. You'll see," he explained.

While I was still restrained Mitch pulled my pants and underwear down. He strapped an artificial, rubber coated, pre-lubricated, electrically controlled, artificial vagina on me. He put 3-D goggles on and headphones and a short pornography scene was shown. The device undulated and squeezed. I reached orgasm in a few minutes. He pulled off the goggles and headphones.

"Matthew, the way you feel right now passive and sexual, you are Beta now"

"Remember this is your Beta personality, Matthew."

After the sexual event, he wiped me with paper towel and pulled my underwear and pants back up, and stowed the artificial vagina in one of the overhead storage bins after stuffing paper towel into the orifice. He adjusted the restraints so I could sit back in the torture chair. He stepped out to tell the Canadians they could come back in the van.

He used torture and anti-conditioning to get me back into the particular dissociative state he wanted for more interrogation and mind control. It took me nearly five years to recall the mind control programming, sexual assault, and humiliation that night, and I did not want to remember. I feel for the prisoners in Guantanamo Bay.

CHAPTER 12: 2005 Nov 22 - Pre-Forced Confession Interrogation

"In keeping silent about evil, in burying it so deep within us that no sign of it appears on the surface, we are implanting it, and it will rise up a thousand fold in the future. When we neither punish nor reproach evildoers, we are not simply protecting their trivial old age, we are thereby ripping the foundations of justice from beneath new generations." – Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn

Mitch removed a handcuff on my right arm. "Matthew, hold your elbow out and back," Mitch ordered. I complied.

Mitch grabbed my arm near the elbow. He started moving my arm back and it started to cause pain.

"What are you doing?"

"Be quiet!" Mitch ordered.

In one swift movement, he dislocated my shoulder. The pain was excruciating.

"My arm, my arm!" I cried.

The van was quiet. I could not move my arm at all.

I felt a tendon or ligament pulled tight like a banjo string between my arm and my shoulder socket. It felt like it might snap and my arm would just fall away.

"What have you done to my arm?" I asked as tears welled up in my eyes from the pain.

"I dislocated it. I'll put it back in a few minutes," Mitch said.

"Don't be such a baby! It doesn't hurt that much."

Mitch moved from behind me to right in front and he stood facing me.

"Now listen to me, Matthew. I am going to ask you some questions and I don't want any guff from you, none at all. You are going to cooperate fully. Say 'Yes, I will cooperate fully.'"

"Yes, I will cooperate fully."

Mitch walked to behind me, and in one swift motion put my arm back in its socket.

My shoulder was very sore, but the extreme pain had stopped.

He cuffed my right wrist back to the armrest.

Mitch asked, "What do you know about bomb making?"

Eager to play along after being tortured, I said: “I could blow up this van with a bag of flour and an electric fan.”

Mitch looked at Red. Red stepped forward and said, “What he is describing is an IED.” (Improvised Explosive Device.)

Mitch asked, “From what experience do you know so much about bomb-making?” I told how both my best friend Luke and I had received chemistry sets for our sixth birthdays. We combined sets and began a long study in Chemistry at a young age.

I related some of the stories of making simple explosives for fun between the ages of eight and twelve years old. At one point Red asked, “Where were your parents when you and you friend were making these bombs?”

“At home,” I said, “We would tell them we had gone to the library when we were really testing explosives in unoccupied green spaces.”

“Can you explain how to make a dirty bomb?” Mitch asked.

“Yes, take a conventional explosive like witches brew, and then spike it with a radioactive isotope.”

Red asked, “Where would you get the radioactive material from?”

I paused a moment and responded, “A XXXXXXXXXXX in a dump would be a source.”

“That’s a pretty good guess!” Red interjected. I only knew of such a source because I'd been an anti-nuclear activist and had a book that detailed nuclear disasters including one where some dump workers exposed their families accidentally.

Red asked, “How would you cut XXXXXXXXXX containing the radioactive material?”

“I would use a welder to cut through the steel.”

“Do you know how to weld?”

“Yes, I took welding in high school.”

“Electric or flame welding?” Red asked.

“Both,” I lied as I was now eager to play the role to please my torturer. I was briefly trained only in electric welding. I heard an audible groan by Red.

“What do you know about detonators?”

“Electrical ignition is best and XXXXXXXX wire used to ignite hobby rocket motors does just fine,” I said.

Mitch asked Red, “Would that work?”

“Yes,” Red responded.

“How would you trigger the explosion?” Red asked.

“I’d use an old fashioned mechanical clock.

“Not an electronic remotely operated RF device?” asked Red.

“No, that would be too complicated, and error prone,” I answered.

“Have you ever used the word CIGARETTE to mean ELECTRONIC DETONATOR?”

“No, but I know a cigarette can be used as a crude, time-delayed detonator by stuffing the unlit end into a package of matches,” I said.

“That’s not quite what I mean, Matthew. I mean specifically the word cigarette to refer to an electronic detonator.”

“NO,” I said after searching my memory.

“Are you sure about that, Matthew?” Red asked.

“Yes, I’m sure,” I replied truthfully. Six months later I would read in coverage of a UK bomber’s trial that cigarette was a code word used by a terror cell to refer to an electronic detonator.

Red asked, “Have you made a pipe bomb?”

“Yes, at age 11, my friend and I made copper tubing based pipe bombs for an experiment.”

“Did you detonate it?”

“Yes.”

“Was anybody injured or was there property damage?”

“No, we lowered it down a manhole cover before detonation so no one was injured, and there was no property damage.”

“That was good thinking. Did you ever make a large pipe bomb?”

“Yes, we once made a pipe bomb with five or six copper pipes.

“Did you detonate it?”

“No, we gave it to a friend, and he turned it over to the RCMP.”

Burly, who had been quiet for virtually the entire interrogation (besides the humiliating 'why do you sing to your dog?'), now stepped into the light and asked, “What year was that again?”

Mitch and Red chuckled at Burly's sudden keen interest in the interrogation.

I replied, “It was in about Grade 8.” They did the math and worked out the date and Burly made a note before stepping back into the shadows.

Wal-Mart Missing 10,000 Exit Signs

Next the van became very quiet as Red led into a new and bizarre line of questioning. “Matthew, have you ever stolen an exit sign from Wal-Mart?”

“What do you mean, exit sign?” I asked.

“You know, those signs near exit doors that are lit up like neon signs.”

“First I don’t steal, and no I have never stolen one.”

“Are you sure, Matthew?”

“Yes, I'm sure.”

“Do you know anyone who has a stolen Wal-Mart exit sign?”

“No, I don't,” I responded. “Why would someone steal one?”

“Never mind that, but tell us if you know of anyone who has such a stolen sign.”

“I don’t know anyone who stole a Wal-Mart exit sign,” I repeated. There were several more questions of a similar nature until they were satisfied I knew nothing of stolen Wal-Mart exit signs.

I would later learn these signs were not filled with neon gas, but Tyranium[20] gas a radioactive element. Further, 10,000 such signs were missing. Later research by my friend Ian indicated that Tyranium was a critical part of making a high-yield atomic weapon.

About half time in the drugging period in the van, they asked: “Have you ever harmed someone?”

Since having been diagnosed with Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) two months earlier, I had recovered memories that had been repressed for decades. Among these time-bomb memories, most of which involve being assaulted or threatened, I remembered one where I had assaulted someone as a teenager.   They repeatedly asked the question: “Have you ever harmed someone?”

Not wanting to self-incriminate I answered each time with “NAME, RANK, SERIAL NUMBER”. I had seen a movie where WW II POWs replied this way. The movie told the story of the Japanese military capturing an American submarine and interrogating the captured.

With each uncooperative reply I was shocked with a stronger jolt. The first shocks scared me, but soon I realized it was not harmful at the lower levels. However, the shocks became more and more painful each time and I still avoided the question with “NAME! RANK! SERIAL NUMBER!” each time. In turn I started shouting louder and louder with each shock delivered.

Red shouted: “STOP YELLING!” He leaned forward to the driver’s side and said, “Driver, can we move forward a block, so we do not attract attention from neighbours?”

Frustrated, Red pushed the plunger in on the 150 cc syringe. I saw it jump forward more than ever before. I started to lose consciousness and heard Mitch say, “Grab his tongue! Pull his tongue out so he doesn’t bite or swallow it!” Red’s vinyl gloves grabbed my tongue pressing into it with his fingernails.

I choked as my tongue was pulled out at least two inches. It felt like something in my throat was being torn, as a burning pain seared deep down. I could not see. I yelled out in pain, more of a loud shrieking, humming sound. Red let go an inch or so. He seemed a professional at this, like he had been a rancher or something - perhaps he grew up on a farm.

Then there was a fade to black. My next memory was the last ten seconds of the seizure. I remembered Mitch's voice shouting at close range in my face “ARE YOU TRYING TO BREAK FREE?” I was still seizing involuntarily when this question was put to me and I could not see anything.

I finally awoke with a pair of hands holding each leg and arm straight out while my head was being jammed against the headrest. Mitch was shouting: “Matthew! Look at me! Don’t roll your eyes back in your head like that! Look at me!”

As I heard this statement the seizure stopped. Mitch looked at me, and then he instructed the other officers to let go of me slowly, which they did.

Then using paper towel, Red started wiping away foam, which during the seizure had erupted from my mouth and over my chin, neck and shirt.

Red said, “You messed yourself up.” Someone said something about the foam on the shirt being possible evidence.

Burly appeared and said in an understated tone, “Let’s remove this now,” as he unplugged the IV and put a band-aid over the wound.

Establishing Jurisdiction of the van

During the seizure, my watchband had partially opened, and the face of the watch had slipped under my wrist, where it was hammered while sandwiched between the underside of the tighter fitting, steel handcuff and the solid metal, tubular, armrest frame as I thrashed my arms when seizing. They had to undo that handcuff to remove my watch. Red noticed a star fracture on the underside crystal and said “possible evidence” as he showed the watch to Mitch.

Mitch asked, “Matthew, was this crack here before?”

Desperate for evidence, I lied for only the second time in 3.5 hours, “It has been there a long time.”

Red said, “Can’t we just keep it?”

Mitch replied, “I don’t know…this looks like a very expensive watch. He’s a computer guy, it’s probably real. That would be ‘theft over $500’.”

Red replied, “But we don’t have that law here.”

Mitch, the American said, “That doesn’t matter!” He pointed a finger to the van floor: “In this van, we operate under my rules!”

Mitch asked’ “Matthew, how much is this watch worth?”

“Fifteen hundred dollars,” I responded truthfully.

“See, I told you,” Mitch remarked to Red. They put my watch back on my wrist, and then they put the handcuff back on.

Questions about former Premier H.

Red made use of my ‘brain reset’ from the seizure to move into another area of questioning: former Premier H.

“Why did you hate H. so much?” he asked.

“He cut welfare by 20% to the poor, and it hurt single mothers most.”

“Why do you care so much about the poor?” Red asked.

“My mother was poor and on welfare once.”

“That’s not enough reason to want to kill somebody! Why else did you hate H.?”

At the beginning of the interrogation I was told never to say, “I never planned to kill H.” because they said they knew otherwise, and they didn't want to hear me disagree. All three senior officers said this in unison, as if threatening me if I dared dispute it. I have never intended or planned to kill anyone in my life, but my explanations about my interrogation by Gary August 19, 2005 at work were forbidden at the outset and I was intimidated.

So I acted and played along as people do under torture and drugs. “He killed Dudley George!” I said aloud.

There arose groans, and disagreeing utterances from several of the officers. “We’re not going there again!” Mitch commented. The Ipperwash inquiry about Dudley George's murder was making weekly news stories at this time.

To his credit, Mitch had memorized the history and pointed out my talk with a friend about H. in 1995 was actually several months before Dudley George was shot by the OPP.

When asked again why I cared so much about Indians I replied: "Well, I know all of you were trained in Regina, (RCMP training headquarters) so I know you don't care about Indians." I was testing to see if they were RCMP: Regina has lots of racism.

There was a pregnant three-second silence, then a dissenting voice from the front of the van commented, "Not all."

This was Ben, the doorman and driver.

Red said, "SHHHH!!!" He repeated the question, "Why do you care so much about Indians," turning toward Ben and adding, "No disrespect intended."

In a slurred voice (from the Phenobarbital), I told them I had grown up on Indian reserves during the summer, as my father was a Cultural Anthropologist.

"A what?'" Red asked.

"He was a professor who specialized in North American Indian culture." I explained I had spent summer months at Indian reservations as a child.

This was just after the seizure, and my speaking was becoming very slow and laboured, as I was so drugged from the Phenobarbital overdose, I was on the verge of blacking out. Red realized this and called for a break.

10-minute Briefing of Senior Officers Outside Van

The senior officers (Mitch, Red and Burly) decided to take a 10-minute briefing (and smoke) break outside the van. Before stepping out, Red opened his palm to reveal a white pill, and said, "Take this, you'll feel better." He had retrieved the pill from one of the overhead bins.

"What is it?"

"It's an amphetamine, it will wake you up." I opened my mouth; Red popped in the pill and held a water bottle to my lips. I swallowed a mouthful of water with the pill. Red joined the other senior officers outside the van.

[20] Name obscured for security reasons

CHAPTER 13: 2005 Nov 22 - Two Canadian Forces acted heroically

"We all have the seed of love and compassion within us." – His Holiness the 14th Dalai Lama

The two regular Canadian Forces officers who had been sitting up front had now moved into the rear. One of them told me: "Our job is to keep you from falling asleep."

My wrists and ankles cuffed, an electric shock cuff on my right upper arm and in a very drugged state with my head dangling forward, I was very close to losing consciousness. The two regular CF officers (whose names were Ben and Jim) shouted repeatedly to keep me awake. "WAKE UP Matthew!!... Lift your head up!"

At some point, I ignored their orders and dozed off again. I was rudely awakened by a powerful shock and screamed in pain, "Aaahhhhh!!"

The shock-cuff controller had been on the highest setting. Red opened the back door, looked in, and asked Ben, "Did you use that thing?"

"You said not to let him fall asleep."

"Never mind! Don't do that again!!"

For a moment, Red was protecting me.

After Red re-joined Burly and Mitch outside, I came up with a plan to leave electronic evidence. I said: "You guys busted my mother for pot possession a long time ago!"

"Really!? What's her name?" asked the junior officer (Jim) who was back sitting in the passenger side front seat where he had a laptop. "Spell it."

"E-N-D-L P-A-U-L-Y." He typed it into a keyboard and said, "Holy Crap, we did! That was a long time ago!"

"Yah, 1974," I replied.

"No, 1975 actually," Jim, the Caucasian officer, corrected me. He added, "The charges were dropped."

"I didn't know that."

"Are you saying this record is wrong and the charges were not dropped?"

"No, I'm saying I was just a kid when it happened."

I knew that their typed queries to a nation-wide police information database would be recorded, leaving evidence.

Ben had got out of the driver’s seat and moved around to where I could see him easily. He told me, "Matthew, my friend and I are regular Canadian Armed Forces. My name is Ben, my friend here is Jim and we don't agree with what they did to you back there.”

“Why don’t you tell them that?” I drunkenly nodded my head toward the side of the van, outside of which the senior officers were meeting.

“Because I’d lose my job.’

“At least you have a job. I’m on short term disability.”

“Matthew, I am Aboriginal.”

“You’re Aboriginal?” I said in disbelief. “I thought you might be Greek.”

“Greek! You thought I was Greek?”

“I had some friends on the Danforth (a Greek area in Toronto) that looked like you.”

“No, I’m aboriginal, and if you want to find me, ” he lowered his voice, “my name is Ben E., and I’m from Oneida Nations, Turtle Clan”.

“Isn't that in Quebec?” I asked.

“No, in Quebec are the Mohawk nation, I'm from the Oneida nation here in Ontario near London.”

“Well, you can’t be half-bad then. What are you doing here?” I asked.

“You really lived on a reserve?” Ben asked.

“Oh, yah, as I kid I spent summers on reserves in Montana and Morley, Alberta, to attend the Indian Ecumenical Conferences with my dad” I replied.

Gesturing to the light-brown haired officer with the keyboard in the passenger’s seat, Ben said, “Me and my friend Jim here are regular Canadian forces. We don’t agree with what they did to you. Matthew, I’m going to help you.”

“Are you going to let me go?” I asked as I pulled at the handcuffs.

“No, I can’t do that, but I’m going to tell you something not to forget….” He continued slowly: “J-T-F-2”.

“I’ll never remember that!” I protested.

“Say it Matthew, J-T-F-2.”

“J-T-F-2” I repeated.

Jim, the other young CF officer, interrupted: “Shouldn’t we also tell him JTF?”

“No, he doesn’t need to know that,” Ben corrected him. “Just remember JTF2, Matthew.”

JTF referred to the American’s outfit, the Joint Task Force.

“What’s JTF2?” I asked.

“JTF2 are the people that did this to you…remember it, Matthew: J-T-F-2.” He broke off quickly as the van door slid opened.

Special operation forces in Canada since the WW II Devil’s Brigade in Canada have not been so esteemed. A former Canadian Airborne Regiment veteran I met when walking my dog confirmed that after disbanding of the CAR, many of the Airborne’s former members later joined JTF2 when it was formed in 1993. JTF2 is Canada’s primary special operations force, and it is based (reincarnated according to the history page on the JTF2 website) on the WWII “Devil’s Brigade”. Both JTF and JTF2 are experts in clandestine warfare, counter-terrorism, interrogation, general subterfuge, etc. JTF2 shows up under the radar at First Nations blockades and other events in Canada, and were active in Afghanistan.

In 1993 Joint Task Force 2 (JTF2) was formed when the Canadian Forces Airborne Regiment was disbanded following several members of the Airborne torturing and killed a civilian in Somalia. JTF2 considers the “Devil's Brigade” to be the elite unit it is conceptually based upon, as documented on their web site at least in the period 2006-2010.

The acronym had to be JTF2 instead of JTF since the Americans already had that, and both forces trained together and sometimes deployed together.

JTF2 was caught using torture during a training exercise in Quebec, which resulted in civil litigation.[21]

Interrogation Part II – Post Seizure, Post Briefing Break

The senior officers re-entered the van and Red announced: "Matthew, we're going to make a movie and you’re going to be the star!" I had to validate the intelligence I had been given. Was it disinformation, or were Ben and Jim telling the truth?

"Great,” I said. “What's JTF2?"

Red's face turned ashen and everyone in the van stopped moving. He looked gravely at me and said "WHO TOLD YOU THAT WORD?!" He pointed at the white soldier. "THIS ONE?" and then pointed to Ben. "OR

THIS ONE?" Then he changed his mind. “No, I want YOU, Matthew, to point to who told you this.” I tried to ignore the question, but Red grabbed the electroshock controller and repeated the question and I knew a strong electric shock was imminent if I did not comply.

Slowly I lifted the forefinger of my handcuffed right hand to toward Ben. Red replied, "That’s what I thought." To Ben, he said: "I'll deal with you later!"

I felt significant remorse at having not believed Ben at first and having turned him over to his superiors. I hope his punishment was not too severe. I commit one half of my royalties of this book if Ben will testify of the events of that night. I will even throw in a portion of the movie rights.

JTF Interrogator THREAT 1

Mitch interjected: "Matthew, what you just heard and seen here, you're going to have to forget this. Because if you remember it, I can have you sent to Guantanamo Bay. I have a jet waiting at Pearson and believe me, it's not nice there."

The red-haired JTF2 interrogator added, "Afghanistan is a hole, I've been there, you don't want to get sent there either."

I promised them I would forget hearing the word JTF2. (And I did repress this memory for a full five months.)

Unmasking the Torturers

I later learned by a license plate trace by Julia-Ann G. of Service Canada that this van plated 250002 was registered to a military vehicle, according to her RCMP source.

Since Mitch was American accented, and since Ben the driver was First Nations from Oneida Nations near London, Ontario, the puzzle starts to fit together about Mitch’s comment: “In this van, we play by my rules!”

In 2006, the DND web site posted a summary of Joint Task Force Two (JTF2) activities in 2005 including a joint-training exercise with the American Joint Task Force (JTF) titled: “Joint Control, Unified Command 2005 (JC UC 05) that involved: “Group infiltration, and enhanced interrogation” in Southern Ontario. (This title and description were altered after appearing in my manuscript in 2007 that was sent on the Internet unencrypted.)

One would expect the US JTF to want some ownership in the Canada based training exercise, so they may have rented the van from the Canadian Military, like the black site on the island of Diego Garcia which is rented by the US Military from Britain. This would explain Mitch's American-accented statement: "In this van, we play by my rules!" regarding American laws like "Theft over $500" if taking my watch.

A Canadian soldier was driving the truck/van, and we know American military vehicles are not allowed to operate in Canada, so it had to be a Canadian military van.

Further, a Canadian Forces soldier approached me anonymously on Yonge street in 2010 to correct my Internet-posted specification on the truck/van. He said he had a correction for my manuscript, but he could not say his name. "It's five ton, not two ton and it is armored. I know because these vans are dozens of years old, and are hard to maneuver. I drive them."

He would not take questions. He said, "It's too risky for me to be seen with you, I have to go." The services of the Canadian Forces driver Ben, and navigator Jim were likely supplied as part of the deal with the US JTF in renting the truck/van since it was so old and difficult to drive.

Given that:

a) Red's scolding of Burly's behavior in the van when he touched my groin, and

b) Burly's complete obedience to of the American officer, and

c) Burly ran the telephone surveillance (Why do you sing to your dog?), and

d) Burly noted a Regina event when I was in junior high school and the RCMP gathered a small incendiary device, that Luke and I had built for an experiment

e) Burly asked me about an ongoing RCMP Major Crimes case that I could not help him with, it is reasonable to conclude Burly was an RCMP (National Security department) officer.

The senior officers then were: Mitch (JTF), Red (JTF2), and Burly (RCMP). Ben and Jim were regular Canadian Forces by their own admission, and they were heroes. Although Red did some horrible things, at times he acted bravely, and he made penance to me after the event.

[21] "Canada's Elite Secret Army", Paul Worthington, The Sunday Star, July 15, 2001.

CHAPTER 14: 2005 Nov 22 - Forced Confession as Terrorist

"The only thing necessary for the triumph of evil is that good men do nothing" – Edmund Burke

Severely drugged, recovering from the recent accidental Sodium Pentothal (Phenobarbital) overdose and subsequent Grand Mal seizure, and threatened with further electric shock, I now acted out just about everything they asked me which included learning how to pronounce "Allahu Akbar", and to say with great fervour and fist-shaking (against my restraints):

"My name is Mohash!
"Mohammad is the Prophet!
"Allahu Akbar! Allahu Akbar! Allahu Akbar!
"I know how to make bombs!
"I am going to blow up the CN Tower!"

Here is how they arrived at that forced confession. They had removed the IV-Phenobarbital after the seizure, but the electroshock cuff was still on. They threw my long leather coat loosely over my body to hide the electroshock cuff. They also insisted I pull against my restraints and act like a crazed man and open my eyes wide so the whites showed.

These scripted lines had to be re-shot several times as whenever I shook my fists with fervour, the leather jacket would fall from my shoulder and reveal the electroshock cuff. In fact I purposefully shook my shoulders and arms to cause the jacket to fall away each time and to expose the electroshock cuff, but each time Burly the cameraman noticed, stopped recording and came over to pull the jacket back up over the electroshock cuff. On about the third re-take, Burly said, "Matthew, now you did not do that on purpose, did you?"

"No," I replied with a lie. In these circumstances I did not think it was unethical to lie.

Again I shook the electroshock cuff, while pulling at the restraints. Finally convinced I was doing this on purpose, Burly removed the electroshock cuff for the last scripted line.

Now with no imminent threat of electroshock I refused to say "I'm going to blow up the Parliament buildings of Canada.”

Mitch instructed Red: “Don’t lose compliance.”

Red let me bargain the target down to the CN Tower. I agreed to the negotiated threat and the scripted line. Why? For the same reason tortured people the world over do: I was afraid for my life, and cooperation seemed the way to survive.

Both interrogators and cameraman were smiling and happy once the VHS ‘terrorist tape’ was completed. Red said “Matthew, do you know what a Section 38 is?”

“No.” I was trying to sound disinterested.

Again they asked, “Come on, Matthew, don't you want to know?”

“OK, what is it?” I replied.

“It means if you try to sue the federal government for what happened here tonight, then with this tape we’ll get a Section 38 on you, and then you’ll never be able to talk about any of this.”

Mitch nodded agreement and added, “It's true.”

“Surely I could still just talk to a friend about it”,”

They corrected me: “No, you’d go to jail if you did.”

I have since read Section 38 of the Canada Evidence Act, and this fascist piece of legislation actually exists. It opens a legal loophole and enables the security establishment to get away with torture, as long as they get a forced confession so the victims have no chance to be in court and defend themselves when the video is shown to a federal court judge. It turns out that getting a forced confession is easy using torture, which is why it’s used in autocratic countries for this purpose.

The two lead interrogators were whispering between themselves, and each turned to me, held a forefinger to his lips and said “Ssshhh”.

Mitch added, “Forget this part, Matthew. This conversation just now. Forget it.”

CHAPTER 15: 2005 Nov 22 - Post Forced Confession Questions

“How can you make a war on terror when war itself is terrorism?” – Howard Zinn

The following questions were repeated over and over, until a satisfactory answer was supplied, either negative or positive. Getting them to accept a negative answer was very difficult and repetitive. I can’t be sure of the exact ordering of these questions and whether they were posed before or after I had the seizure. The recordings in JTF2 or RCMP SECRET files may someday reveal all these details.

Mitch asked, “Matthew, how long can you be out before your wife panics, before she contacts someone... someone with power?”

“What do you mean someone with power?” I asked.

“A friend with connections or the police, how long before she would contact the police?”

“I don't know -- 2:00 or 2:30 AM?” I was deliberately misleading them.

“That long?”

“OK, maybe not that long, perhaps 1:00 or 1:30 AM.”

The questioning continued. Red asked, “Have you ever harmed small animals?”

I responded, “When I was about eight years old, my friend and I were cruel to a guinea pig. We threw it in the air so it did a somersault just to make it squeal.”

“What?” said Mitch. Red explained guinea pig behaviour to Mitch who obviously never had one as a pet.

“Have you ever behaved sadistically?” Red asked.

“Yes,” I replied. I told them a brief story of something that was not sadistic, but bordered on drunk and disorderly behaviour. The officers all laughed.

Red asked, “Have you ever started a fire?”

“Oh yes, I set fires when I was a kid,” I answered.

“What damage was there?”

“Very limited property damage. Part of a back-yard fence was destroyed,” I answered.

They asked a few more psychological questions. Then they took a pause to tally up some numbers.

After perhaps thirty seconds, Mitch announced, “Congratulations, Matthew! You are a psychopath! Do you know what that means?”

“Yes,” I said but I strongly disbelieved the accuracy of their test. Since then, my doctors have fully refuted the conclusion of that test.

Now Red asked the familiar question, “Matthew, what time must you be back by before your wife calls the police.”

“I don't know, maybe 12:30” I responded. Red turned to Mitch and Burly.

Mitch said, “OK then, let’s not waste any more time.”

Topic: Atomic Weapons

Post seizure and post forced confession; Mitch was noticeably in control of the interrogation. There were many more questions about bomb making. Apparently the little bit I knew from childhood study (age 8-12) was a real concern.

Mitch said, "Matthew, you seem to know a lot about bomb making and rockets. When would you ever use this knowledge?”

I thought a moment. "Never.”

Mitch persisted, “Come on, when might you ever use this knowledge if you had to?”

I reflected and answered, “Well, it would have to be something really major.”

“Major, like what?” Mitch asked.

After a pause, I said, “Maybe if the US invaded Canada."

Mitch raised his voice. "You can't seriously believe that we would do that!!!??" Anger showed in his voice and in his facial expression.

"You did it before," I replied.

"What? Are you talking about the Fenian Raids?" he asked, and then answered his own question, "That was over 250 years ago!"

Mitch's American history was better than mine.

I thought carefully and then said slowly, since I was intoxicated on a Phenobarbital: “Don't you have a saying in this business that the best predictor of future behaviour is past behaviour?"

Mitch was furious. Breathing hard, he was speechless and livid. Red intervened: “Calm down!” But Mitch was mortally offended that a Canadian would respond in such a patriotic way.

Red now asked, “Did you ever research making a fertilizer based bomb?”

“No, I've never made one,” I responded elusively.

“I'm asking did you ever look it up on the Internet or in a book?” Red asked.

“Yes, once I looked it up on the Internet,” I answered. In the aftermath of the Oklahoma bombing, the scale of the violence stunned me. I saw an article about McVeigh and I could not understand why someone would do such a horribly violent act. I also wondered how such a deranged person could have built such a powerful bomb. I did a five-minute Internet search on fertilizer bombs.

“Where?” Red asked.

“On the Department Of Mines web site.”

“Ours or theirs?” Red asked.

“Theirs,” I responded. This us-and-them language by Red gave me some hope. This divisiveness might have been genuine felt sentiment considering the Canadian officers had been forced to watch one of their countrymen be:

a) Drugged, tortured with: electricity, physical assault, forced viewing of 3-D horror video content specifically to terrify the subject, and sexually assaulted
b) Hypnotically programmed to commit suicide
c) Hypnotically programmed to obey future orders by his controller including orders to kill
d) Hypnotically programmed to murder a Canadian doctor or nurse
e) Forced to drink his own vomit to show his compliance to the American JTF officer.

Suddenly Mitch jumped in: “That must have been before 9/11!” implying they must have removed that Internet content after 9/11, and placed search ‘traps’.

“Yes, it was,” I responded. Then I asked Red, “But did you know that half the diesel fuel could be replaced by used motor oil?” proving I had actually looked it up.

“Yes, I knew that,” Red responded calmly.

Mitch asked, “Do you know how to make an atomic bomb?”

Playing my role, I told them the little I knew that Luke had showed me from a science book when we were eleven years old.

Red asked, “But what about the thing that makes the charges ignite simultaneously.”

“Yes, I forgot about that part,” I responded and added defensively, “I was eleven years old.”

Mitch started interrogating me along a new line, with noticeably more seriousness. "Matthew, I advise you to listen very, very carefully to the next question and think before you answer." He paused for effect, and the van was quiet. “Have you ever heard of Tyranium?[22]” His American accent was showing.

I thought to myself where I may have heard of it. I remembered it was a radioactive isotope, and it was in the fallout of an atomic bomb. “Is that like Strontium 90?”

“What?”

“Since the atomic weapons testing of 1950s and beyond, everyone in the world has Strontium 90 (fission by-product) in their bones.” I had learned that viewing Helen Caldicott's film “If You Love This Planet.”

“No that's not it. Tyranium.” Mitch continued gravely, “What do you know about it?”

“But how could it be used?” The van was absolutely quiet.

“I don’t know,” I answered.

“Think, how to you think it might be used?” Mitch demanded.

“I don't know, maybe it’s part of the bomb somehow,” I replied.

Mitch shook his head and said to the others, “He knows about it.”

Mitch, it seems, had made a decision. Next, Mitch placed his arm on my shoulder as if to pronounce something important, like that he was taking me into custody.

Red interrupted. “He said he doesn't know what it’s for!”

Ben interjected: “Yah, he didn't know!” and his partner Jim chimed in too, “He didn’t know.”

Some of the Canadians cleared their throats for effect. There was a perceptible shift in the politics of this multi-nation operation. The Canadian officers must have known Mitch's assertion, “He knows about it,” was a preparation to justify taking me into custody, transporting me to the airport, and off to Guantanamo Bay which is run by the JTF.

This radioactive element is used to increase the yield of an atomic bomb by several orders of magnitude. Even knowing what it is used for is apparently enough to tip the scales, so that a terrorist suspect could be taken away to Guantanamo Bay or some other foreign country where torture is permitted.

In those few seconds, the energy in the van became polarized between Mitch, the lone American officer (JTF), and Red (JTF2), and the two CF officers, Ben and Jim; Burly remained silent. Burly was a hardened, skilled torturer, and the one who hooked up the medical equipment. He was also the one who "showed the tools of torture" at the start by making a big deal of inspecting my fingernails with a fingernail pulling device. His deft skill at applying eyelid tape gave away his considerable experience. He assisted in the forced vomit consumption event. He never showed remorse, not once. He always did what Mitch told him, even if it violated the Criminal Code of Canada, Geneva Conventions and was not in our national interest.

Burly had been only too happy to hand Mitch his Glock 9 mm after Mitch had commented his all-chromed gun was not what I would find in my jacket pocket. Burly was also the only non-American recognized later in the 2007 forced ECT (chapter 1,) and the lone Canadian officer presenting himself as 'Larry Smith' a few months after the 2005 torture interrogation and again one year later. After nine months living with Quebecois in Katimavik when I was seventeen, I detected Burly's barely detectable Quebecois accent that night, so he was a traitor to a founding nation within Canada as well as Canada.

Several Canadians cleared their throats, as if to remind Mitch he was outnumbered. Red, Ben, and Jim knew I was not a terrorist.

Mitch detected this shift, and that's when he backed down, but he was angry and frustrated. He kept his hand on my shoulder and said, "Fine then... By the powers vested in me, I declare you an enemy of the People of the United States of America."

Mitch must have felt that team cohesiveness had dissolved, and was at a tipping point.

"Matthew, tell me your full name!" Mitch ordered. "I want your full name exactly as it appears on your passport!"

I repeated my full name as it appeared on my passport: Matthew Kevin Pauly.

"Is that exactly how it appears on your passport?"

"Yes, exactly."

Burly pulled my driver's license and birth certificate from my wallet, and showed it to Mitch who said, "Matthew, I advise you to never approach the US border."

Since my parents are American and many of my relatives are in the USA, I asked, "What will happen if I do?"

"If you do," Mitch said as he looked directly into my eyes, "You will answer to ME!"

I got the picture; I would likely be indefinitely detained, tortured, and possibly killed if I ever tried to cross the US border.

Mitch said, "One more question, Matthew. Which side of the bed do you sleep on, the outside or the inside?"

I considered what this question was for. "What does that have to do with anything?!"

"Never mind, just answer the question!" Mitch demanded.

"The outside," I responded.

"Let's be clear, Matthew: by outside do you mean the side closest to the door?"

"Yes!" I said, knowing there was only one reason this information was sought. Someday, if I were unlucky, I would hear the creak on the wood stairs in the night. It would be unlucky because resistance would be futile. The assassin will have a silenced, powerful automatic pistol with a large magazine. There would be no defense. The wood door would be splintered to pieces if necessary to gain entry. I would know for perhaps ten seconds of my impending death, rather than having it occur in my sleep.

Mitch said, "Matthew, we are not comfortable with you continuing to live in the Pearson Airport flight path with your knowledge of rockets and explosives. We want you to move. Will you do that?"

I was indignant and said, "No, my wife and I love our house. Move the flight path!"

For the first time I was feeling and showing my anger.

"OK, Matthew, if you do not move, then we have no choice but to continue to monitor you," Mitch said.

"Fine."

Red asked, "Are you sure you are OK with us monitoring you, Matthew?"

"Do what you want," I said.

"Have you ever harmed anyone?" Again this question came up and again I resisted by replying “NAME, RANK, SERIAL NUMBER.”

[22] Name obscured for security reasons

CHAPTER 16: 2005 Nov 22 - The Breaking of Resistance

"The media's the most powerful entity on Earth. They have the power to make innocent guilty and guilty innocent, and that's power. Because they control the minds of the masses." – Malcolm X

After continued to reply, "NAME, RANK, SERIAL NUMBER" to their question on whether I had ever harmed someone, the electric shocks were very frequent, and at the highest setting. I was screaming. But with each question I shouted the same reply, "NAME!, RANK!, SERIAL NUMBER!".

After over ten iterations of my getting shocked and shouting "NAME! RANK! SERIAL NUMBER!" I heard Mitch comment to Red, "He's been trained (in torture interrogation resistance)." This was false; I had watched a movie.

Mitch and Red turned my statements into questions. "What is your NAME?" Red asked.

"Matthew."

"Good, what is your RANK?" Mitch asked.

"Underling." They chuckled.

"What is your SERIAL NUMBER?" Mitch asked.

I blurted out a random sequence "4728125" that sounded forced, not memorized.

"He's lying," Burly blurted out.

They continued asking if I'd harmed someone. I continued replying, "NAME, RANK, SERIAL NUMBER."

Again Mitch said to Red, with disgust, "He's been trained."

Gradually my strategy started to fail, as my body became more affected by the electricity as the electro-shock cuff was on maximum power. My heart was racing, skipping beats and beating irregularly. This frightened me as it never had happened before. I did not want to die.

I pleaded, "STOP!! My heart is beating irregularly; you're going to cause me a heart attack! I'm a smoker you know!"

"Yah, we know." (At the beginning they searched my coat and found a pack of cigarettes.)

Then a young voice to my left said in a genuinely concerned tone: “Can’t we just give him a break for a minute or two?” It was Ben, who deserves a medal for standing up for the rule of law in that van.

“SHHH!” said Red. “Matthew, if your heart is bothering you, then I advise you right now to tell me what I want to know.”

After pausing a few moments I realized Red was ready to kill me if he had to. A torturer is only a heartbeat away from being a murderer. I realized that if I had a heart attack, they might not take me to the hospital as it would compromise the operation. They very well might dump or destroy my body. I wanted to live.

I told them I assaulted another teenager when I was young. They asked for the location, the year and any victim particulars, which Burly (RCMP) wrote down. Mitch, the JTF interrogator asked, “Have you got anything more recent?”

“No, that’s it,” I replied.

The van started moving. I wondered if they were taking me away somewhere. I asked, “Where are you taking me?”

Mitch said, “We're taking you home.”

“Which home?” I asked, as I wondered if jail or Guantanamo Bay was my new home.

“Your house, we’re taking you to your house,” Mitch said. “Don’t park in front of my house,” I said, foolishly worried about what the neighbors might think about a five-ton, armored military van. “We won't, we’re going to park a half block away,” Mitch replied. Then they parked the van on the north side of Montgomery, about ½ block east of my house.

Then the ‘cool-down’ started.

The Interrogation Cool-Down:

“How did you come up with the NAME, RANK, SERIAL NUMBER stuff?”

“I saw it in a movie,” I responded.

“Which movie?” asked Mitch.

“I can't remember the title. It was about a US submarine crew that was captured by the Japanese in WW II.”

“Do you remember the title?”

“No, I don't but it had scenes of the soldier's resisting interrogation by the Japanese.”

“That was pretty cool how you did that,” said Mitch and Red added, “Yah, that was pretty good!”

They undid the restraints, tentatively. After having me sit on one of the benches that ran along the back half of the van on each side Mitch and Red started saying nice things like: “Matthew, you’re not such a bad guy,” and, “Your wife is nice!”

“How do you know my wife?”

“I don’t, I just saw her. We’ve been watching you.”

I remembered many times seeing two men sitting in a parked car on the north side of Montgomery in late October and early November.

Mitch said, “So, we heard you saw that plane crash at the airport… That must have been fun.”

“Yah, right,” I replied sarcastically in turn. I did not want to talk with them about the Psychological Trauma I experienced watching the Air Flunk Skybust crash.

They folded the table down from the wall again.

Next they took a picture of me with my back against the rear wall, both with glasses on and off, again without permission. Red produced a tray in front of me with three items on it, a smaller plastic tray, and two cotton balls, one on the tray and the other beside it. “You are right-handed, correct?”

“Yes,” I responded.

“Pick up the cotton ball that is beside the tray and wipe your right forefinger with it.”

I picked up the cotton ball. It felt wet, and my finger was cold afterwards so it must have been soaked in alcohol.

“Now place it beside the tray, not on it,” Red ordered. I complied.

“Now pick up the other cotton ball, and wipe the inside of your cheek, and then put it back on the tray,” Red ordered. I knew this must be to gather a DNA sample. My glasses were off, and men who had tortured me for three hours surrounded me. I did not for a moment consider resisting. I wiped the inside of my cheek and placed the cotton ball on the tray as instructed.

I later consulted a doctor who said this would have been an unreliable DNA sample. Perhaps they were afraid of me poking them in the eye if they'd given me a Q-Tip.

Red turned away and started putting away the tray and the objects on it in the overhead bins. The table now was folded down in the back of the van between the two seat benches on either side. Red placed a legal-length document in front of me on the table. He then placed a pen beside it and said, “Sign right here” and pointed to a part at the bottom of the form.

I picked up the paper. Red then presented me with my glasses, which I put on. I squinted my eyes at the eight-point font, and noticed there was printing on both sides. I could not read any of it. After three hours of having my eyelids taped open, with three bright floodlights focused on my face for much of that time, being drugged, electrified, and suffering a Gran Mal Seizure, my eyes simply could not focus on anything close, and eight-point font was impossible to read.

I said, “I can't read it, any of it. Something is wrong with my eyes. What does it say?”

Mitch answered: “It says all of this was voluntary,” and he smiled.

“What happens if I don't sign it?”

Mitch gestured to Red to be quiet, as he responded to me, “We will not let you go until you sign it!”

I paused to think.

The van was by now parked only half a block from the safety of my house. I had thought I was going to die at many points during the time I was captive and now I was almost free. I thought that if I did not sign, that they would compel me with more torture and violence. I knew my body and mind simply could not handle one minute more. I thought there was no way, after three hours of torture, that signing the form could possibly be considered as consent to what they did to me. I reluctantly and resentfully decided to sign it. I picked up the pen. As I signed, I purposefully signed something that looked quite unlike my signature.

Red picked up the document and examined it. The other two joined him to study it. One of them produced a document that was the same size and colour as the gas company invoice I had signed in triplicate three days previous, after the fake gas company technician “Jerry” had surveyed my furnace for the energy conservation ruse.

Red and Burly were concerned about the signature mismatch.

“Look at this part here, then look at this other signature. They’re different!” said Red.

“Yah, they're a bit different, but it’s no big deal,” said Mitch.

Then Burly said, “Look at this other part here, then look at this one over here, they're completely different!"

Again Mitch said, "Yah, they're a bit different, so what? It's no big deal. We don't have time. Let it go."

After all, Mitch the Joint Task Force officer could just slip across the American border to evade prosecution. The American government would never extradite a military officer to Canada to face torture chargers, and the Canadian government would never ask unless they were both completely cornered, that is, unless they faced losing the consent of the people to govern.

The International Criminal Court in The Hague has bigger fish to fry. Red and Burly could be culpable in civil suit or criminal action for torture on Canadian soil. But Mitch was the teaching and therefore dominant officer of this torture-trio and Red and Burly had to acquiesce into accepting my purposefully bad signature.

Red told me, "The best thing for you and your family, Matthew, is for you just to forget this whole thing…." He opened his hand to reveal a pill bottle and he added, "And these pills will help you forget."

"What are they?" I asked.

"Propranolol," he replied, "You take one a day before bed until they are done." (Propranolol inhibits the nightly storage of short-term memory into long-term memory.)

I was shocked. I had been tortured for over three hours, coerced into making a false confession, held against my will until he signed a consent form, and now I was being ordered to take further drugs to forget.

But I knew was so close to freedom. I knew this was going to be the last demand. There simply couldn't be anything left. I would be free soon. I recognized the drug name since my wife had taken the same drug, a beta-blocker, for migraine headache prevention years ago. I thought it would have little effect. "Okay, I will take it," I said.

I held out my hand as Red poured the pills into my hand. I asked for some water. Red handed me his half-empty water bottle. I asked what was in the bottle, and Red replied defensively, "It's just water, my water."

I popped the entire handful of pills into my mouth (seven, a whole week's worth) and quickly swallowed all the water and the pills.

Mitch looked at me in amazement. "What did you do that for?"

"How else will you know I have taken them?"

Mitch had forgotten how compliant he had made me become through torture, drugs and hypnosis. [An unintended side effect of not taking the drug as directed was that it did not work to prevent the conversion of short-term memory to long-term memory.]

JTF Interrogator - THREAT 2

Mitch repeated his warning, “Matthew, if you remember any of this and start talking about it, I GUARANTEE your picture and name will be in the paper, and it won’t look good.”

“Why not?”

“Look at what you have told us here tonight!”

In truth, I was having trouble remembering much of what I had told them. The Phenobarbital, torture-trauma dissociation, and hypnosis had made the memory foggy and disjointed. It was like the previous three hours were like a foggy, surreal nightmare

Seeing me unsteady on my feet outside of the back of the van, Burly asked, “Do you want me to help you walk to your house?”

This offer only made me angrier. “No, I'll do it on my own!” Before departing, I steadied my gaze at the license plate of the van.

Ben said, “He's looking at the plate!!”

“It’s not a problem,” Mitch replied. The plate was 250002 with different colouring than regular Ontario plates, and without the usual label.

Before I could get moving Mitch stepped out of the van and asked, “Matthew, are you an Epileptic?”

“No. Did I have a seizure?”

“I don’t want to say…. But you might want to ask your doctor about that,” Mitch added.

Before they drove away, I yelled ‘Hey!’ to get their attention while the back doors were still open, and then added, “Leave My Family Alone!”

Mitch said, “Don’t worry, we’ll leave your family alone.”

I slowly walked the fifty meters to my home. I was aware they were watching me. When I was within twenty meters of my sidewalk on Montgomery Avenue, I heard the van move, and I turned to catch a glimpse of it reversing into a driveway, and then turning east on Montgomery.

When I reached my front walk, I ran back out into the street and caught a glimpse of the back of the van one block away as it turned south on Duplex Avenue. It was going to drive right by Toronto Police Services, 53 Division.

I stamped my foot in the snow and said out loud to myself, “REMEMBER!” This was a self-hypnotic technique I invoked, anticipating it might be difficult later to remember. The three books on hypnosis I had read as a fifteen year old were becoming useful.

I stared at the snow on the ground amidst the trees in front of the Montgomery apartments. I had to figure out a way of remembering the plate 250002. Right then I created a mnemonic. First term (25), times second term (0002) = Labatts 50, the beer referred to in the racist OPP recording before they killed Dudley George, one day after Premier H. urged them to “Get the Fucking Indians out of the Park!” This racism and urge towards violence is reflected in the OPP's own words.

A handful of Ontario Provincial Police officers posing as a media crew, were caught on tape having a shocking conversation:

"Is there still a lot of press down there?" one officer says.
"No, there's no one down there. Just a great big fat fuck Indian," replies another. “The camera's rolling, eh?" "Yeah." "We had this planned, you know. We thought if we could get five or six cases of Labatts 50, we could bait them." "Yeah." "Then we'd have this big net at a pit." "Creative thinking." “Works in the South with watermelon."

As the reader can see, it's a conversation rife with racist remarks, recorded just a day before the land dispute ended in the fatal shooting of First Nations activist Dudley George. It was only released after an access to information request by a producer with The Fifth Estate.”[23]

The racist recording of OPP chatter at an Aboriginal roadblock caused enough revulsion when I first heard it, that it served as an ideal mnemonic to remember the license plate of the van used on or about Nov. 22, 2005 to torture-interrogate Matthew. (25 X 0002=Labatt's 50).

My wife was asleep when I reached our bedroom, and I was thoroughly exhausted from over three hours of torture. I was intoxicated from both the Sodium Pentothal and now the Propranolol was kicking in.

I did not want to wake my wife, and cause her trauma on learning what her husband had just been through. She had immigrated from a communist country only seven years earlier, and I did not want her to be traumatized by what Canadian and American federal officers had done to her husband. I feared she might want to return to China. I fell directly to sleep.

The following morning, November 23, 2005 on my left inside arm, just opposite the elbow, I found a dime-sized dark bruise with a tiny scab in the middle indicating a large needle had roughly inserted. I had no memory of what caused it. I remembered nothing from the moment I left Tim Horton's at 9:32 PM the night before and when I walked in the front door of my house later. I did not want my wife to think I was an IV drug user, so I hid it.

My wife said, "Where were you last night?"

"I left the Tim Horton's at 9:32 and I was home in ten minutes," I said.

"No, I woke up at 11:30 and you still were not home."

"That's impossible," I said. I had no idea how that could be. Later in the day I checked her bedside clock and it had the correct time.

I was so exhausted I slept the entire day. Upon returning from work my wife was furious at my sloth, and I could not explain why I was so exhausted. [A friend later researched Propranolol and learned seven doses of even the smallest pill was in the fatal overdose range. Those JTF, JTF2, and RCMP officers in the van ought to have known that, but they did not intervene. I was incredibly lucky not to have died.]

The second night after the coercive-torture interrogation I had a seizure in my sleep including urination.

About seven nights later I had another seizure in my sleep featuring a bleeding tongue. I saw my family doctor immediately. He ordered an EEG, which thankfully indicated I did not have epilepsy so I could keep my driver's license. The seizures were likely related to the Phenobarbital or other drugs administered on Nov. 22, 2005, but I had no memory of that yet.

In the next few weeks I started getting flashbacks, poignant memories, to being tortured in a van by military people. It was real memory, and it was getting more complete. The incremental partial recall was exactly the same pattern as what happened after the failed tornado evacuation on August 19, 2005.

When I remembered I had been brutally tortured and interrogated at length, I made an appointment with my family doctor. My wife came along. I related everything I could remember in a taped interview with him on December 22, 2005.

He listened carefully and made notes of what I reported. He said that my PTSD symptoms appeared to be getting much worse. It was true, I reported that now I was having nightmares not just about the plane crash, and failed tornado evacuation, but about being confined by military people in a van and torture-interrogated for hours. I remembered I had been drugged in the van.

I was becoming more hyper-vigilant than I had been before. The sight of a large mono-colour van would bring out a fear of death. Seeing people parked in cars on my street would also make me very frightened.

In the week of Dec. 22, I checked with several toxicologists into the possibility of gathering forensic evidence of the drugging. Both toxicologists reported that Phenobarbitals are excreted within a few days; hair/nail samples will only show chronic, not one-time, use.

By 2009 I believed I had remembered the vast majority of the interrogation, but I was wrong. It was not until late April of 2010, after 500 hours of therapy by two PTSD experts, that my unconscious was willing to reveal the mind control programming that accompanied the torture interrogation. One's unconscious mind never lets one recall more than one can handle.

I found that even five years after the event, I was still occasionally remembering details that escaped my earlier recall. That's how Psychological Trauma memories are recalled; they don't all come at once. The memories come in waves, in the order of least traumatic to most traumatic. Over time the frequency diminishes but the amplitude of each wave does not.

CHAPTER 17: 2006 Q3 - The RCMP Theft

"There will be in the next generation or so a pharmacological method of making people love their servitude and producing dictatorship without tears so to speak. Producing a kind of painless concentration camp for entire societies so that people will in fact have their liberties taken away from them, but will rather enjoy it, because they will be distracted from any desire to rebel by propaganda, or brainwashing enhanced by pharmacological methods. And this seems to be the final revolution." – Aldous Huxley

In the late summer of 2006, I was at home on long-term disability, recovering form PTSD. I knew the police were not going to take me seriously when I reported my experience of being subjected to a bi-lateral Special Forces, black-op torture-interrogation and mind-control session inside a van parked on a Toronto street.

I began a letter writing campaign to the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario. The Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario (most populous province) reports to the Governor General of Canada who in turn reports to the Queen of England. As such this office is arguably the third highest in Canada.

I had read two autobiographical books by Mr. Bartleman and I was impressed. I knew he was half aboriginal, which made me trust him more. I knew he had grown up from humble beginnings to become a very senior Canadian diplomat. I trusted him immediately. He was the first very senior official in Canada who in an effort to reduce the stigma of mental illness, admitted to suffering from Depression, and PTSD. I greatly admire this man.

I also read that he had suffered a horrific Psychological Trauma while on a diplomatic trip to South Africa. A robber with a gun held him at gunpoint in his hotel room and beat him for several hours. Because of this torture, he contracted Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD). He would know exactly what I was going through.

All told I wrote him six letters, detailing the trauma I had suffered in 2005, including the torture. At that time I had not recalled the mind control programming, which I would not remember for another four years. Had I remembered it in 2006 and included it in my letter to the Lieutenant Governor, he might have dismissed me as delusional.

As it was he didn't dismiss me.

After sending the letters I started calling his office and spoke with his staff. Finally I received a letter addressed to me from the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario. It was short and went something like this:

"Dear Mr. Pauly,

I have received and read your letters. You should immediately get a lawyer. Please call the Lawyer Referral Services at 1-800-XXX-XXXX

I'm afraid due to the nature of my position I cannot offer further help.

Sincerely,
<his signature>
<his name>
The Lieutenant Governor of Ontario."

I had never seen such fancy letterhead. I hoped the gold leaf was not real. I was gushing with happiness after receiving the letter. He didn't tell me to see a Psychiatrist, nor to check-into a hospital. Neither did he ignore me. He wrote me to give me the best piece of advice he knew of: "Get a lawyer immediately." He even implied he would have preferred to be of more help.

Before showing the letter to my sceptical friend Ian, I read it to him over the telephone -- the same land-line that Mitch had said was going to be monitored after the 2005 torture interrogation.

A few days later, in the daytime when my wife was at work, someone knocked at my door. I opened to Burly the RCMP officer.

Burly said, "Hello Matthew, I'm Larry Smith. Remember?"

"Yes," I said, already in shock and moving into a hypnotic trance just as I had been programmed to do.

"I hear you got a letter from Bartleman?"

"Yes," I responded uneasily.

"Can I see it?"

"Yes," I responded, "Just a minute I'll go get it."

As I turned away, Burly stood holding the screen door open from the outside. He did not ask permission to enter. I walked down the hallway past the living room, through the dining room and kitchen to the basement stairs. I descended the stairs to my basement office where my filing cabinet was situated. As I opened the sliding drawer, I heard a creak on the stair. I turned. There was Burly, stooping over at 6'4" and 235 lbs. Burly, who was known to carry a loaded Glock 9 mm under his jacket, had let himself in.

I was terrified. I quickly pulled the letter from my hanging vertical file and held it up to him so he could read it. He took one glance at it and said: “Where's the envelope?”

“I don't have it.”

Burly held the letter and said, “I'll take that.” He backed away from me and turned around and started up the stairs, and I followed slowly behind him. I rounded the corner at the top of the stairs just as he opened the front door and let himself out.

That letter demonstrated a very senior official believed I wasn't crazy, and needed a good lawyer. Burly stole it to cover up the torture and other crimes in which he had participated.

Burly could use that letter to blackmail the Lieutenant Governor. He could show him the (forced) confession video ‘proving’ I must be a terrorist. [24]

Burly, in his collusion with and absolute deference to American authority, and his willingness to use torture, and now to steal the Lieutenant Governor’s letter to a victim of RCMP crimes, was helping his superiors protect the RCMP.

The RCMP has clearly not followed their 1981 revised mandate, which was to stay out of security service work. Their involvement in hooking up the torture equipment including non-consensually taping my eyes open, putting on an electro-shock cuff, and failing to get adequate consent for the drug injection in the November 22, 2005 van-interrogation was a significant violation of that mandate, The Charter of Rights and Freedoms, and Geneva Conventions.

[24] The RCMP had helped throw the 2006 election to the Harper Conservative government (J. Travers, ‘An Eloquent Plea for Democracy’, The Toronto Star, 2009) This government subsequently introduced mandatory prison terms and built many new jails despite Canada’s falling crime rate, and also later introduced the draconian ‘anti-terror’ Bill C51, which turned the RCMP into a secret police and suspended many civil liberties.

CHAPTER 18: 2008 Q3 – MK-ULTRA Sleeper Assassin Test in USA

“When we decided to take up arms, it was because the only other choice was to surrender and submit to slavery” – Nelson Mandela

Two years went by. I did not work and stayed home for 2006, and the first quarter of 2007 collecting Long Term Disability benefits from Red Hand software and trying to heal from Complex PTSD.

PTSD manifested primarily with a) horrible nightmares based on the traumatic events where I awoke shouting, sweating, and kicking, and b) ‘Hyper Vigilance’.

My shouting and kicking in bed was so bad my wife had to sleep in a different bed. During waking hours when I would see something that reminded me of the traumas like an unmarked van, or a car with occupants inside parked near my house, I would become hyper alert, and full of life-threatening fear.

The HR department head communicated to my wife that I was not welcome to return. Further he denied I could have been affected by the plane crash, which he said had not been visible from the building. He also denied there had been a failed tornado evacuation.

I attended two hours a week of therapy for PTSD during this period, one hour from a Psychiatrist specializing in PTSD (Dr. Colin M.), and another through a private psychodynamic psychotherapist (Lorna M.), both mentioned on the Acknowledgment page of this book.

I was concerned the Mood Disorders Institute of Ontario (MDIO, name slightly obscured) had been so easily infiltrated by Special Forces (including Red, JTF2, and what appeared to be two RCMP officers two weeks earlier), I decided to form my own therapy group, on a volunteer basis.

I met with the MDIO managing director to see about collaboration but she was noticeably annoyed with my plan and somewhat hostile. I put up notices in the North Toronto Library in the same hallway as the MDIO offices. I held an information session in a rented library room, and had people sign up. I found a volunteer therapist willing to lead the group therapy, an Ellen R. I collected dues enough to cover the room rental cost, and personally covered the costs of another group member who could not afford to pay.

The group therapy was three months in duration and was helpful to all. Some of us are still in contact to this day. However, it was only in early 2007 when I started to practice meditation for one half hour per day at the encouragement of my psychotherapist that was able to put the fear aside long enough to start to heal.

Still on benefits in May, 2007 I went through a gruelling interview process to get hired as a senior programmer at a large Internet based foreign exchange trading company on King Street in Toronto. I was still eligible for nine more months of LTD coverage but I wanted to work and resume my career. My doctor had never seen anyone resume working when nearly half of the automatic two-year LTD coverage remained to be paid.

The job went well. One of the co-founders was a computer-engineering professor and most of the staff had a master or doctorate degree in Computer Science/Engineering. It was a pleasure to work with so many talented peers I could learn from, in an environment that valued creativity and high performance.

As always, I threw myself into my work and would often stay until 7 or 8 PM. Of the just over one hundred employees, mostly programmers, very few would work as late as me. It was not uncommon for me to be the last person to leave.

I signed off of my computer, and put on my jacket and got up to leave. I was walking through the programmer and reception areas to the magnetically locked glass doors that featured a card reader on the elevator side. Alone in the premises, I pressed the door release button, passed through the doors, and pressed the elevator down button.

The doors opened to an unusual sight: three men in very dark, virtually identical suits, all with dark, wrap-around sunglasses, all within an inch or two of each other in height, and all with an athletic build. Since the offices were inside the Holiday Inn on King Street in downtown Toronto, sometimes hotel guests would enter the wrong elevators that served the office part of the building. These were not tourists. They did not look like employees of other companies in the building either. They stood out, like a well-dressed team of agents, and closely resembled the so-called “Men in Black.”

I felt the danger, as I realized I’d never make it back through the card swipe doors since my card was tucked away. Whatever was going to happen would happen. This was before I studied Russian Martial Art. Now I would make a run for it, and in retrospect, that would have been the right thing to do, as at least I would have been on camera. I had forgotten that the reception and elevator area had a video camera trained on it from the office side of the glass walls and doors.

I stepped back into the elevator and they all stood still, one on my left, and two more on my right, each occupying a corner. The doors closed. Immediately the lights went off, and I felt the stabbing pain of a needle on the left side of my neck. I lost consciousness.

I awoke seated in a three-bench row utility van with bucket seats up front for the driver and passenger. There was a driver up front. Judging by the light, it was now early morning.

I was seated towards the left side of the middle row bench. Mitch was seated in the first row on the left, giving instructions to another officer seated behind me. The officer behind me rolled up the long sleeve of my dress shirt and gave me an injection in my left arm, near the shoulder.

I felt like I had just chugged four 5% alcohol beers in about one minute, which I can only estimate as I'd never chugged beer before. I felt impaired. My head felt heavy. Scopolamine is made from a plant native to Columbia, a member of the deadly Nightshade family of plants. Among its most significant uses is as a "Zombie" drug[25] for societal control in Voodoo cultures.

Mitch said, "Matthew, lean forward and put your arm over the bench."

I put my left arm over the bench. Mitch lit a cigarette. He grabbed my wrist and pulled my arm down so my armpit was clamped overtop the first bench back support.

"Matthew, hold still."

He held the cigarette in his right forefinger and thumb, parallel to the skin on my left upper arm about 1/8 inch from the skin. I felt searing pain.

"OOWWWWWW! That hurts!! Stop that!"

Mitch was moving the cigarette very slowly down my arm, at a quarter of an inch per second. I screamed, "Stop!!! Why are you doing that? Please stop! Stop!"

Mitch had a smile on his face. It was clear he was taking pleasure in causing me pain. He was a sadist.

"Matthew, do you know why I'm moving it slowly like this?"

"No!" I shouted.

"Because this way, it doesn't leave a scar, yet it still causes maximum pain!" He had a smile on his face. I was in excruciating pain. That he took pleasure in it communicated that it might not end.

Within a minute or two, something happened. I became silent and detached. I had dissociated, i.e. my dominant personality had gone to sleep and what was left was an infantile, highly vulnerable and suggestible subconscious persona, just like in the van during the November 2005 interrogation when I had been randomly shocked incessantly for twenty minutes no matter what answer I gave to the question "What is your name?" which they repeated over and over.

Lifting the cigarette away from my skin, Mitch said, "Matthew, I am Larry Smith. You know me as Larry Smith, do you understand?"

"Yes," I replied, instantly triggered to program #2 from the November 2005 torture-trauma-dissociation, hypnosis-mind-control programming event. I was now in a hypnotic trance.

"Matthew, I need you to terminate a target. They will be coming along shortly from that way," he said as he pointed towards the left side of the van.

There was a radio mounted on the dashboard. The driver was doing a radio check with a portable radio, testing it communicated with the dashboard radio.

Mitch ordered the officer to take his position about 100 yards to the left with a handheld radio. The driver opened his door, got out and walked away.

"Matthew, the target always comes by this place at exactly XX:XX o'clock every morning," said Mitch with a smile, proud of having good intelligence on the target, and looking forward to a certain kill.

Then Mitch proceeded to run me through the mechanics of the termination technique, to be certain I'd not forgotten the programming. He got up and sat in the passenger's side front seat of the van to wait. After a few minutes, he commented, "Matthew, you stink!"

In this dissociated, hypnotized state I felt awkward about smelling bad. "If I had a toothbrush I could brush my teeth," I offered.

"No, it's not your teeth, Matthew, it's the drug."

Mitch was obviously knowledgeable about Scopolamine, otherwise known as "Devil's Breath." Since Scopolamine wipes free will, it is used as a date rape drug, and to rob people. MK-ULTRA programmers also use it for mind controlling their victims to do false-flag hate crimes, assassinations, and terror events.

Mitch looked at me and said, "Matthew, you know you are an enemy, right?" He was referring to the fact he'd sworn me an "Enemy of the People of the United States of America" while in a rage because Red the Canadian JTF2 officer and Ben and Jim of regular Canadian Forces, refused to let him take me to Guantanamo Bay[26]. They knew I was not a terrorist and it was my talking back to Mitch that led to his attempt to take me into custody.

Mitch rolled down his window, lit a cigarette and held it outside the window. I asked, "Hey, can I have a smoke please?"

"No, Matthew. No smoking in the van."

Now in the Alpha (dominant aggressive) alter after being drugged with Scopolamine, tortured to dissociation, and hypnotized via post-hypnotic suggestion, I was becoming assertive.

"Listen, you are smoking, and you're forcing me to do something I do not want to do that will affect me for the rest of my life, so I think you should give me a cigarette."

Mitch thought for less than a second and replied, "OK, I'll give you one but you have to smoke outside the van."

It's tragically ironic that for Mitch, adhering to the no-smoking policy in federal government vehicles was more important than abiding by Geneva Conventions, the US Constitution, or the Criminal Statutes of the State and Federal government.

Mitch ordered the officer behind me to open the sliding door of the van. I was stunned to see the lush state of the greenery. We were definitely far south of Toronto; and since all three of the officers spoke with American accents, I assumed we were in the USA. Our white van was parked on the grass in a green area with sparse trees and hilly terrain. Since we were in a depression I could not see any building, or know if this place was in a city or not.

I shimmied to the right side of the middle bench and for a fraction of a second stood in a crouch with one foot on the threshold. I was surprised that I was so weak; my legs were quite heavy.

I exited the van and placed one foot on the long grass. As I stood up I almost fell down. It felt like Earth's gravity had just doubled. It took considerable effort to raise myself to my full height keep my balance. Scopolamine intoxication impairs the mind and body.

My upper eyelids were droopy enough to block a bit of my vision. I could not seem to keep them up to their normal position, another signature symptom of Scopolamine intoxication "Hey, I'm having trouble with my eyes here, my eyelids are not staying fully open," I said to Mitch.

“Get used to it.” Mitch replied.

He clasped the lighter flame with his cupped hands and lit my cigarette. His cigarettes were much stronger than I was used to, and it had been over eight hours since I’d smoked, so there was big nicotine relief in those first few inhales.

Mitch un-holstered a black handgun, not the all-chrome one he had shown us during the November 2005 abduction. Longer than a normal handgun, it had a silencer attached.

Mitch proceeded to explain the triangulation he wanted me to use to intercept the target. His voice sounded stressed upon learning that I did not know the mechanics of triangulating a target. He quickly explained what this meant. I was half way through my cigarette when the radio in the van squawked. The officer in the driver’s seat reported the target was in sight.

Mitch ordered, “Matthew, put out your cigarette.”

I butted out.

“When the target is within fifty yards, you will start your pursuit. I will tell you when, so get ready.”

I considered my options. Even in that hazy, drugged into submission, dissociated, hypnotized state, this went against every moral fibre in my body. I was baptized an Anglican, raised a Unitarian, and already had a leaning towards Buddhism. I had been a very active and noted Peace Activist in University. I had been raised by a Pacifist father, and had talked my way out of fights all my life with a speech about non-violence. Now I was being coerced into terminating another and it repelled me.

Despite the Scopolamine, I considered my options in a fleeting moment.

Mitch had just reminded me that I was “an enemy” of the most powerful country in the world, on whose soil I now stood (non-consensually.) I was surrounded by Special Forces of the US Military, excellent marksmen, and highly skilled in killing and covert operations. Mitch held a silenced handgun. They also had my wallet with my ID, credits cards, and cash – on Scopolamine I could not run very well and had no free will. I did not even know where I was. And I had insider knowledge of this extra-judicial murder setup.

If I tried to run away, or simply fell to the ground and refused to act, there was a high likelihood I would be killed, along with the target, and the scene arranged to look like a murder-suicide or the bodies simply disposed of. These US Special Forces would be heroes for killing me since Mitch had sworn me an Enemy of the People of the USA.

I would have been too much of a liability to keep alive if I did not perform.

My only chance of survival was to be valuable enough to keep alive.

"Go, Matthew, go now!" The target was approaching at a jog from about forty yards away.

My Alpha alter was full of conditioned rage as I started running towards the target from their two o'clock position. The target did not seem to notice at first and kept on running as my Alpha was closing in at their three o'clock position and accelerated to a full-out run for the last ten yards, closing in from the target's four o'clock position.

The target turned, looking surprised and very afraid as they were knocked to the ground with full force rolled onto their back. I followed the instructions from the 2005 hypnotic programming in the van, including no crossed thumbs, and the target stopped struggling, and was unconscious within twenty seconds.

After another minute or two, Mitch walked quickly over and after scanning both directions, said in an urgent tone, "Matthew, stop! It's over. Come to the van now. We have to leave!"

I got up and had one last look at the target. They were not moving at all. As I approached the van tears streamed down my face and I shouted at Mitch, "There, are you happy now!!"

"I'm not happy, I'm just doing my job," Mitch said in a subdued voice.

In the years of non-consensual drugging, torture, mind-control, abductions, and worse before and after that event, Mitch never expressed a guilty emotion once, except that day. He knew what he had done was wrong.

I got in the van and sat on the second row bench again. From behind, the assisting officer injected me again on the left arm below the shoulder. I lost consciousness and awoke some hours later, in a different van in front of my house.

It was early morning perhaps an hour or two after sunrise. Mitch's fellow JTF officers were present, but not Mitch.

"Where is Mitch?" I asked.

"He's busy now, it's just us," the officer said.

The leader of this group of more junior officers acted drunk with power. "We want you to kill that old lady two houses over there," he said pointing east.

“What? That’s Mrs. Porter’s house, she’s a friend!” I said. “I will not!”

I was no longer dissociated, no longer hypnotized, and most of the Scopolamine had worn off. I was shocked and horrified they would suggest such a thing.

“OK, Matthew, now what are you going to say to your relative about why you have been out all night?” the lead officer asked. My wife and son were on vacation, and a close relative was staying with us.

“I will tell him: I was out at Ian’s all night playing with computers,” I said.

“Will he believe you?” the officer asked.

“Yes, I have stayed out really late at Ian’s playing with computers lots of times,” I replied.

“OK, tell him that then. Now Matthew, I want you to go to go bed and sleep the whole day,” the officer said.

“Ok, but shouldn’t I call work?” I asked.

“No, Matthew, do not call work. They will know you are sick. Do NOT call.” They let me get out of the van, and I didn’t look back.

I walked up to the door and discovered my keys and wallet were back in my possession. I unlocked the door and stepped inside. My close relative was pale, and looked very concerned, as if he had not slept much. “Matthew, where were you last night? Were you at Ian’s?”

“Yes, I was at Ian’s playing with computers and it was really late so I stayed over, and I didn’t want to call and wake you,” I said flatly.

“That’s what I thought,” he said, looking at me with concern. “Are you sick?”

“Yes, I feel sick, I’m going to bed,” I said. I must have looked sick after coming down a high-dose of injected Scopolamine, knocked out with some other drug twice, abducted across international boundaries.

I went upstairs and slept immediately. I awoke once or twice during the afternoon and evening to use the washroom, and drink some water. I don’t recall eating. I only got out of the bed the following morning when my alarm went off. The Scopolamine and other drugs had fully worn off. I had no memory of what had happened.

I got ready for work, had coffee, ate some breakfast, walked to the subway and got on. I arrived at work, sat in my pod seat, and started logging into my computer. My team lead, who sat to my left, turned to face me angrily. “Matthew, next time you are going to be away for a day, at least send me an email!”

I had no memory of missing a day of work, as far as I was knew the previous day I had been at work programming.

I could tell from his anger that I should just play along. “Ah, OK,” I said.

Normally I would have said “Sorry,” but I did not want to admit to something that as far as I knew was not true.

I was missing time.

[25] Traditional Voodoo employed Scopolamine. When a person was found to be very disruptive to the community perhaps a rapist or murderer, the medicine man of the community would dose them with Scopolamine, specifically a dust of the dried plant, which can be easily blown into someone’s face for immediate effect as it lands on the mucous membranes of the eyes, nose, mouth and throat. The victim would immediately lose all free will power. Their breathing would become shallow and infrequent causing them to lose consciousness and appear dead. They would be placed in a coffin and buried in front of family and friends. In the early morning hours the coffin would be dug up and the living person inside would be sent off to another island, given a daily dose of Scopolamine and kept as a slave until their death.

In Medellin Columbia in 2013, 50% of Emergency room admissions were due to Scopolamine. It’s a favourite way of getting tourists to be mind-controlled to go the nearest Automated Teller machine and withdrawal their limit and hand it over to the criminal who dosed them.

[26] In a 2015 Oct home invasion Mitch claims Guantanamo Bay was a threat only. He said he would have taken me to the USA. He’s a spy so I don’t think that’s necessarily true.

CHAPTER 19*:* 2009 Q3 – Penance from a Patriot

“The only difference between the Republican and Democratic parties is the velocities by which their knees hit the floor when the corporations knock on their door. That’s the only difference.” – Ralph Nader

One year later, I had absolutely no recall of being exercised in the USA in 2008. I was still trying to reach Stage III of recovery from PTSD, and martial arts were part of that. Having recalled the violent 2005, 2007 events, I wanted to be able to protect myself.

I had studied Asian martial arts before, as a novice. I earned the first belt in three martial arts. But that was years ago. With none of those arts would I have been able to handle five mostly armed officers of the 2005 van interrogation, or the five men involved in the 2007 snatch-and-grab with forced electroshock in a van.

On January 2 of 2009, I decided to study the latest of the Chinese martial arts, developed only 500 years ago. The special-operations forces of several countries are trained in this very effective Kung Fu style, as was Bruce Lee. Sunny Tang, the proprietor of the studio had actually trained with Bruce Lee in his youth in Hong Kong. I had been training for about six months when one winter morning I was uncharacteristically ten minutes late for class.

When I arrived, I immediately noticed there were two new, middle aged men who appeared 'four square' like officers with the short haircuts, and appropriate physique and general attitude. They were training together.

The senior student instructor of that day also had an officer-like appearance himself. When I arrived he broke the two new men apart and assigned me to one of the new men as my training partner, while pairing his officer-looking friend with someone else.

I thought I recognized Red by his red complexion, acne scarring, intense eyes, 6’ height, and developed chest, with very little fat at about 180 pounds. His nose and chin were the same as Red’s. His cheekbones were slightly wider than I remembered from 2005. In the four years since I last seen Red, he looked to have aged about ten years. I was not positive it was Red only because it was so out of context and it would be risky for Red to be there.

The teacher had us start a training drill.

I asked my partner, “When did you start training?”

“Today, I’m just here with my friend to try it out.” We were starting a basic hand-to-hand combat training exercise in which one of the pair forward punched as he marched, and the other back stepped and blocked with a 'Pak-so' (a simultaneous block and punch.) When we reached the end of the mat area, we would reverse roles and return from the other direction.

Red was not performing the complicated footwork properly. I started instructing him, but surprisingly the student teacher said, “No, they don't need to learn the footwork”. That was unprecedented as the basic drills were not negotiable; there is only one way to do them. We resumed and when Red and I reached the edge of the training mat and proceeded to switch roles, Red held his hand up like a target and said, “Hit me!”

I was familiar enough with Wing Chun to know that this holding up the open fist as a target and saying, “Hit me!” was not part of the training. It was from Western boxing. The student teacher did not correct Red, which was also strange. I ignored Red’s request.

He did it again when next we reached the end of the Gym. This varying from the training was unprecedented in the six months I had trained, and the presence of what looked like Red made me doubly flabbergasted and stressed. Again I ignored him.

I was not sure what was going on, but I became increasingly agitated as Red said repeatedly, “Hit me!” Perhaps the fact that I was facing one of my torturers was starting to sink in.

Finally on the third or fourth pass I could take it no more. I wound up all my energy and made to punch Red’s open hand as hard as possible. The student instructor, as if expecting trouble, lunged forward to intervene and shouted, “Noooo!” but it was too late. I punched Red's hand, as hard as I could.

Red paused and shook his hand. “Ouch, that hurts!” Then he stepped back from me and said, “Good, now we're even!”

Then he stepped even further back, perhaps expecting an attack. I froze, realizing now it had to be Red, but unable to process that.

The student instructor then paired Red and me with different partners.

I had learned from a Canadian Broadcasting Corporation (CBC) documentary that by the age of 40, almost all JTF2 members are retired from the unit due to its extreme physical requirements. Red had appeared 38 or 39 years old in the 2005 van interrogation. This was four years later so he was definitely over 40 and likely out of JTF2. His purposeful visit to me was risky, as there is no certainty how a 'former target' might respond. Had I lost control and an incident happened, that went public, he could have been in trouble with the DND. Bringing a friend along was a good idea.

I believe that Red's conscience had suffered dearly for his participation in my torture. He needed me to punch him to satisfy his conscience.

That Red had aged so much in the intervening four years, and that he felt so compelled to have me hit him showed he was a man of conscience. I could tell that the end of the interrogation in November 2005 that Red was disgusted with the event, and his involvement, he had a conscience.

For example he had admonished Burly (RCMP) for groping me several times, he had apologized after watching me being forced to drink my own vomit, and he started using divisive “us or theirs” language when asking which Dept. of Mines web site (US or Canada) that I had visited. Finally it was Red who refused to let Mitch take me to Guantanamo Bay after I had answered the question about Tyranium with too much knowledge for Mitch’s comfort.

For these reasons, I forgive Red.

CHAPTER 20: 2010 Q1 - Internet Posts Response: Bumper lock Surveillance

"Our lives begin to end the day we become silent about things that matter"--Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., Civil Rights Leader

I felt I owed it to my countrymen and countrywomen to tell them about the perilous state of Canadian democracy and sovereignty regarding the 2005, 2007 events. I had not yet recalled the 2008 test in the US.

But I felt very afraid to continue working on my book. Since I had not yet recalled the forced electroshock, and the ominous question about what side of the bed I slept on, I did not know why I was afraid. My conscious mind did not remember these threats.

I reasoned that it would be safer if I found a sympathetic on line community, and started posting my story there.

By telling my story online I could reach the public to expose the MK-ULTRA mind-control programming, and get interest in the developing book. I found rabble.ca was a good community for this. I posted in a Babble forum/topic I created:

> Torture in Canada
> "January 31, 2010 – 2:46 am
> This topic will address the issue of human rights in Canada, specifically crimes by the state against its citizens, both pre-9/11, and post 9/11, from a first person perspective. I will be drawing from an existing manuscript, and writing new material. This all tells of my unfortunate intimate experience with this topic."

By February 7, 2010 I had posted details of the torture-interrogation (2005) with the forced confession dialog. I also posted an earlier version of the psychiatrist's letter attesting that I had gone through drug trials to test for a delusional disorder and none was found (see Preface for last version.)

There was a regular group of rabble.ca readers who were receptive to the story. Initial responses were positive with one exception, someone who admitted he was a reserve Canadian Forces (CF) officer. He repeatedly attacked my postings. I defended myself and pointed out that as a CF officer, he owed it to his country to defend the truth about how its laws are being broken.

Others started posting defenses of my story. Then something happened. As I started posting each day from the book, I started to feel better, and my unconscious mind decided it was time to remember more.

I started to remember the mind-control programming for the first time. On March 2, 2010 at 8:18 pm I posted my first recollections of the self-termination program. The posting began with “Oh God, Oh God, Oh God!!!” This was just so depraved, despicable and terrifying. I posted the memories as they came in.

March 21, 2010: I remembered and posted program #2: to carry out any instruction by my controller “Larry Smith” including murder, and how I was to do it. The rabble.ca/babble on line community was hooked. By this point my thread “Torture in Canada - Part 3” was the number one most frequently viewed thread on rabble.ca's “babble forum”. It also had among the highest viewings to postings ratio.

babble is rabble.ca's discussion board but it's much more than that: it's an online community for folks who just won't shut up. It's a place to tell each other — and the world — what's up with our work and campaigns.

At about this time, specifically after writing the actual text of the post-hypnotic suggestions or ‘mind-control’, I noticed I was being followed.

It started as intimidation. My on line postings revealed more and more about what the RCMP, JTF and JTF-2 had done. I had become emboldened, and the court of public opinion in the online community was starting to turn my way. The lone resisting CF officer now was supporting my posts and me.

GMC Suburban Intimidation

March 24, 2010: I stepped out on my front porch with the dog. A Black GMC Suburban was waiting at the corner and suddenly accelerated full throttle. It 'burned rubber' for about ten feet, the engine roared as it sped past me and continued roaring until it stopped at a stop sign.

The driver's side window was tinted as dark as the back and rear side windows. This tinting is not legal in Ontario as a police officer must be able to see inside well enough to recognize a face. I had seen several such over-tinted GM Suburbans circling around the US Consulate on University Avenue when I marched with other activists during the G7 meetings in Toronto about twenty-five years ago.

After stopping at the stop sign, the driver continued at full throttle for the next block and came to a halt at Yonge Street. For eight years I had been living with my family in a quiet, upper middle class neighbourhood, which has the lowest rate of violent crime in Canada. This had never happened before.

Bumperlock Surveillance

The rabble.ca babble community posted supportive messages, which said in effect “They're only trying to intimidate you.” I thought intimidation was something I could live with. At this point, I had not yet recalled the question in the van, “What side of the bed do you sleep on, inside or outside?” I didn't yet recall that they had hinted they were prepared to kill me, perhaps if I went public.

Then something frightening started. I noticed I was being followed regularly. I would see the same face in a car that followed me across the city at times. There were at least three different people and as many cars involved. One tail was a middle-aged woman (wearing what looked to be a blonde wig) with large sunglasses, who followed me to the Toronto Star building at 1 Yonge Street, but turned off one block before I got there. At one point a Liberian diplomatic, long, black Cadillac was following me across the city complete with a little Liberian flag waving from a tiny mast.

I did a 'find the tail' manoeuvre known as a Surveillance Detection Route (SDR). I turned into a side street then quickly changed direction, turned my car around and waited parked around the corner. The blond women looked aghast as she rounded the corner and saw me waiting for her.

At one point I was on a highway and I noticed four cars were boxing me in. I had been driving since I was sixteen years old, and was skilled enough to manoeuvre aggressively to escape. I ended up behind a Google camera car and my tails disappeared suddenly. I continued following the Google camera car for another half hour.

The final straw came on April 12, 2010. I was driving on a small street with a speed limit of 40 KM/hour when a Range Rover suddenly pulled out of a street parking spot and nearly clipped my bumper. The car behind me honked furiously. The late model Range Rover had a blue 'Emergency' sticker on the driver's side windshield (see below). The driver was a middle-aged man with what looked like a wig of curly hair and large sunglasses.

I did something I'd never done before, or since. I was so certain this man was tailing me that when I stopped at the next red stop light, I jumped out onto the road. With my driver's door swung open, I knelt down on one knee and snapped a picture of the driver and car. I had been carrying a camera for the past few weeks, and I intended to at least try and record the overt surveillance. But I was wearing a knee length black leather coat, and to reach the camera, I had to reach into my long coat. It seems the driver of the Range Rover thought I was pulling out a gun.

I got back in to the car and left. I was panicked. I took a day off work, and followed a trail of recommendations from different security storeowners. I told them my life was in danger, and I needed the best counter-surveillance technology available. These vendors could have sold me equipment but they believed my situation was serious and so they recommended a man said to be among the best counter surveillance experts in Ontario, if not Canada.

Sean D. of Spy Toped[27] was a very tall and heavy man. He boasted of having high profile clients like Conrad B., and claimed to have been interviewed in a BBC documentary on security and counter-surveillance. This Canadian 'expert' in counter-surveillance examined my photo of the follower, and reported, "Oh no, you have real trouble… he looks like Mxxxxx." He added, "They use 800 MHz for their radios."

Around the world, the "dirty work" of surveillance, control, and assassination is contracted out by allied intelligence agencies. The home-grown agencies cannot be caught illegally monitoring, intimidating, or doing worse to their citizens.

There is a large array of cellular-frequency antennas near Ottawa pointed towards nearby US cities to monitor their cell phone traffic. The Americans have similar arrays of antennas that point at nearby Canadian cities. In this way they exchange the cell phone traffic so they can monitor communications without a warrant, and without technically breaking laws.

Since Bumperlock Level 5 surveillance can easily lead to an encounter with police, it is especially suitable to contracting out to a foreign intelligence agency.

Intelligence agencies contract out everything from overt surveillance to assassination. If the USA were caught running Level 5 Bumperlock Surveillance, or even assassinating a citizen of their closest ally, it would be a public relations disaster.

This is a textbook case where contracting out to another foreign, friendly intelligence agency would offer the lowest risk. The Mxxxxx have a worldwide reputation as meticulous, if ruthless, operators. So Sean's assessment of the threat I faced as 'something serious' was believable.

On April 13, 2010 I posted the following pictures of the pursuer on rabble.

AHFL 799

In the first picture, notice the driver's window is half rolled down. In the enlargement (2nd picture) notice the 'Emergency' blue sticker to lessen the chance of being pulled over by police. Also notice in the middle right what looks to be the end of the front barrel of a gun pointed towards the camera, but raised slightly to left.

He must have thought it was not a camera that I was pulling out of my knee length black leather coat. It may have been he just wished to scare me, which would fit in with Level 5 Bumperlock surveillance.

Posting these pictures on line (they have since been deleted) at rabble.ca within 24 hours had some impact. I cried foul in a posting and wrote a pleading letter to Canadian politicians including PM Harper, and journalists. I telephoned CSIS and said there would be a question in the House of Commons in one week's time if they didn't get the pursuers off their mark[28]. The female CSIS agent repeated my threat in a mocking tone and referred me to local police.

Within 48 hours of the posting, the same man appeared in a vehicle going the opposite direction instead of following me. He had ditched the expensive Range Rover, a picture of which with plate I had posted. This time he drove an old van.

He was still wearing the ridiculous wig and sunglasses, and after flashing his lights several times to get my attention, he emphatically waved his right arm in a sweeping motion away, above the dashboard, and mouthed the word "OFF" with each sweeping gesture. But the surveillance was not totally off, just made less obvious, as I was to find out.

The day after the Range Rover incident, Sean of Spy Toped identified the gunman in the photo as appearing to be Mxxxxx, the Ixxxxxx Institute of Special Operations and Intelligence. They are the most feared assassins in the world. He told me, "You have big trouble." Sean then sold me the most expensive item he had in his store, a $4,300 bug sweep device called the CPM-800. In hindsight what I needed was a $600 bulletproof vest and a $100 car camera.

I discussed with my wife a plan to get protective custody from the police. First I called my best friend Ian to drive us to his apartment. From there I called the police. My friend refused to have the police come into his apartment, so my wife and I waited out front. It was getting dark.

When the police arrived, they were quite perplexed. They knew nothing of my story. They did not know how to spell Mxxxxx. The Toronto Police 42 Division officers separated my wife and me. The female officer interviewed my wife, and the male officer interviewed me.

For over ten minutes I pleaded for protective custody. The officer explained protective custody was difficult to arrange, and would take days. I asked if I could stay in the police station until then. The officer said no. The officer said that the quickest way to be protected would be to get into a locked hospital ward.

As they spoke I noticed a van parked one block south on Poplar Plains

Road; we were on the sidewalk on the East side of Poplar Plains just a few addresses South of St. Clair Avenue. The van had its lights on and was not moving. As I was explaining the danger I was in, the van slowly started moving towards us.

I directed the officer's attention to the van, which was slowly creeping towards us and was less than a half block away. The officer said, “Could that be one of them?”

“Yes,” I said. The officer held his right hand above his hip holster, as officers do when they feel threatened.

[I later learned from an article at stratfor.com that the hostile surveillance I experienced matched the definition of Level 5 ‘Bumperlock’ surveillance. This is the highest on the 1-5 surveillance hostility scale. It is designed to make a target think they are going to be murdered so they will seek sanctuary in a locked hospital ward and discredit themselves.].

Now the van slowly drove by, its markings indicating it was an ambulance. The passenger side occupant opened his arms in a welcoming gesture as if to say, “Do you want us to take him?” The police officer and I just stared. The 42-division officer looked at the license plate and commented, “That is an out-of-province ambulance.”

Out of province ambulances do not have jurisdiction to troll the streets of Toronto looking for people to pick up.

Given the appearance of the vehicle and its passenger, the surveillance from one block away, the slow drive-by, the gesture of offering to take me, and the fact that this was an “out of province” ambulance, it seemed suspicious. A medical cover pattern emerges; the pursuer with a gun had a medical emergency sticker on his Range Rover. Now an ambulance was part of the operation that was cruising by slow and gesturing to offer their services to take me to the hospital.

I had never been admitted into a Psychiatric hospital, or the Psychiatric ward of a hospital. I knew that self-admitting into the locked ward of a hospital might strain my credibility, but given the alternative of possible death, it was the lesser evil. I also realized that straining my believability by self-admitting to a locked ward might make me less threatening to JTF, CICA or whoever had hired the pursuer with the gun in the Range Rover.

Once I agreed, the female 42 division Toronto Police officer demanded my license plate number, even though my car was not present, nor involved. Before letting me into the back of the police cruiser they insisted I wear handcuffs, but the officer said I was lucky as usually those in the back had their hands cuffed and chained to the floor of the car.

During the admissions process at Centre for Addiction and Mental Health (CAMH), I was alone in a room with a female doctor wearing a stethoscope who was giving me a physical examination. I found myself staring at the young doctor's stethoscope dangling around her neck.

I felt myself start to fall into a trance. For the first time I recalled the third mind control program and felt a compulsion to harm the woman doctor. I was horrified and demanded that the security guard in the hallway be called in. I reported the third post-hypnotic suggestion program exactly as recalled, and notes were hurriedly made in my medical chart. Never again in that hospital was I left alone with a doctor or nurse wearing a stethoscope.

I insisted on being treated with the third and final drug in the test for delusions by Dr. Colin M. Clozapine is among the very strongest of anti-psychotic medicines available. Dr. MacPherson said it was not necessary, but I wanted to prove my case. This was my third trial of an anti-psychotic drug to prove my recollections were not delusional, despite the fact I had never suffered delusions in my life. Clozapine was the big hammer.

I had agreed to these treatments because the head of the Psychological Trauma Unit at Mount Sinai Hospital, Dr. T., said no one would believe my story until I took the drugs. With each drug Dr. MacPherson would ramp up the dosage over weeks until I reached therapeutic range of each drug.

After about a month at the effective blood level of the drug, Dr. M. would question me about the 2005 van interrogation. If it were a delusional illness, the anti-psychotic would remove the delusion and the memories ought to be gone. My answers to these questions every time included full recall, and certainty of the details.

While I certainly felt safer during the stay in a locked ward, it did not affect my memory of the events of 2005, and 2007 one iota. The 2008 event was not yet remembered. Later in 2010 I would start to get the first flashbacks about the 2008 event.

Just to allay the doctor's concern that my beliefs might have been delusional, I stayed on Clozapine for a full six-month trial after being discharged. It was debilitating, as were the strong side effects.

Again, the drug made no difference with my recall and certainty of the earlier events, just as with the previous trials on two other powerful anti-psychotics. See the letter from the doctor at the end of the Preface.

Since I had voluntarily admitted myself into a Psychiatric hospital, my credibility was lessened and I was less of a threat to the opposition. I believe that any sane person would have done the same thing under the observable threat I was under, knowing it would take the Toronto Police days to arrange for protective custody if they did at all.

I noted no obvious surveillance or tails once I came home from the hospital in the early summer of 2010.

September 20, 2010 at 17:45 on rabble.ca, I posted the 2006 telephone recording of the Service Canada employee Julie-Ann G. reporting that the plate 250002 from the van in 2005 had been identified by the RCMP as belonging to a military vehicle.

On the same day at 18:02 Rabble.ca moderators "catchxxx" and "mayxx" froze my active (open) thread, and disabled my account. In private messages it was explained that I had compromised the identity of a government employee, and that this violated a privacy policy of Rabble.

Apparently Rabble editors weighed a government employee's right to privacy as more important than a citizen's right to post part of a voice telephone recording with a government employee as supporting evidence of a federal torture-based interrogation on Canadian soil in 2005.

I had already posted my real name on Rabble in the same thread, in an earlier effort to increase my safety. Therefore I negotiated with Rabble to have my entire five threads removed. This was done within a few days. One false start thread remains.

In October 2010, for the first time I sent an email to a journalist. In the email I mentioned Mitch (then known to me only as "Blondie") and gave a description of him. About forty-five minutes later, I stepped out onto my front porch and was about to walk my dog east on Montgomery.

Mitch suddenly drove by from the west to the east, very slowly, in a Cadillac. He smiled at me as he went by. The hair rose on my neck. This seemed to confirm what Mitch had promised in the Nov 2005 van torture-interrogation and mind-control event, that I would be under surveillance forever: physical surveillance, not just phone and Internet. Not only that, but this event again indicated Mitch was reading my email in near real-time[29].

Since the RCMP would have the wiretap, this was the first indication they were sharing the intercept with the Joint Task Force in real time. The US Consulate on University Avenue is about 15-20 minutes by car in non-rush hour traffic, and logically where the JTF would reside. I would later confirm the US Consulate is where Mitch worked. I ceased further contact with journalists for a time after.

CHAPTER 21: 2014 Jun 21 – Scopolamine Aerosol Fog Weapons Test

Over the next four years, I repaired my career. First I worked at an aircraft point-of-sale system vendor for six months on salary. I had a great manager, and established myself as a significant contributor in complex systems analysis, design and programming.

I resigned to take a lucrative contract with the Foreign Exchange department of the computer systems organization of a major Canadian bank. After only a month or two I was promoted to researching a new project, and after prototyping parts, I assisted in writing the requirements and design of the new system with others. Then I team-led the delivery. It was a success. That took me to end of 2012. In 2013 I consulted to a cellular telephone company for part of the year.

I took a break to return to my book project. I also decided to help a city councillor candidate who was also a neighbour. On June 19, 2014, I completed the audio-visual work for councillor candidate’s launch party. This lawyer, newspaper columnist, and neighbour impressed me. She had done advocacy work on relations between the police and marginalized communities. It was not my best work. The taping did not go perfectly as the camera shut off right in the middle of the campaign speech.

I had just read “The Art of War,” by Sun Tzu. In this over one-thousand-year-old classic book on military strategy, he writes something like: “If you don’t know where your enemies are, you must flush them out by whatever trickery will work.”

I felt confident that I had rebuilt my career and life after the terribly intimidating Bumper-lock surveillance in 2010, which happened after I had posted word-for-word the post-hypnotic, sleeper assassin programs on rabble.ca. The Bumperlock surveillance had driven me into the hospital for safety as I thought I was going to be murdered, the exact intention of this type of surveillance.

In short, after four years, I was feeling a bit cocky as I felt I had recovered my life. I had just completed a major contract for a bank’s capital markets department where I led the architecture, design and delivery of a successful million-dollar project.

I wanted to follow Sun Tzu's advice. I wanted to know how much I was still being targeted in order to know where I stood. I did a "bait test." I pointed my browser to the Russian Consulate web site in Toronto, and navigated to "hours of operation" at 10 PM on June 20. If I were still under surveillance (as they said I would be in 2005), the reaction of the listeners (RCMP, JTF) would indicate how much I was being targeted.

The next morning June 21, the day was briefly normal. My wife arose early and left for work. We had slightly different schedules and I remained asleep in the second floor bedroom of our semi-detached home three blocks from the geographical centre of Canada's largest city. The bedroom faced Montgomery Avenue, a small residential street that ironically was the site of Canada's first rebellion in 1837. The bedroom window was open only a few inches.

I awoke to a male voice: "Matthew, wake up!" Again the voice commanded, "Matthew, get up!" The voice continued, "Get up and walk the dog, Matthew!" These phrases were repeated several times at regular volume, not shouted. The voice sounded familiar. I sat up and looked out the window. No one was on the sidewalk on either side of the street, nor was anyone visible sitting in a parked car.

The voice continued: "Matthew, wake up! Walk the dog." It sounded like Mitch. I knew immediately something was amiss. It was impossible for a soft-spoken voice to enter through the street facing window and be so clearly audible, doubly so since there was no one standing on the street outside. I pulled on my clothes, leashed the dog, and stepped outside to investigate. It was 7:00 AM. I turned left (east) on the public sidewalk and walked towards the public green area in front of Montgomery Apartments only 80 meters away so my dog could do his business.

At about 75 meters I reached the Montgomery Apartments street driveway on the North side of the street. These are rare, quaint, low-rise apartments in a neighbourhood of single-family dwellings and high-rises. I crossed the driveway and continued walking on the public sidewalk.

There was a three-meter area of grass, and then a private sidewalk that ran alongside a parking lot, and led north to the Montgomery Apartments entrance. On one side was a dense hedge, about four feet high and three feet wide and twenty feet long (oriented north-south). Cody, our nine year old family Golden Retriever, sniffed at the hedge and pulled at his leash to investigate a curious scent. I pulled him back towards the public sidewalk and around the hedge to the public lawn with trees on one side.

As I passed the hedge the same voice started again: “Matthew, this way!” I looked to where the voice came from. It was emanating from the middle of the hedge about three meters to the north. There was no room for a person to hide in that dense hedge, and no sign of anyone sitting when I scanned the top of the hedge. The voice abruptly jumped to a small, perfectly trimmed hedge, about three feet high and eight feet long, running East-West four meters north of the public sidewalk.

In the hundreds of times I had walked the dog in this area, I had never seen this perfectly trimmed hedge before. On the other side of this hedge was yet another parking lot for an adjacent high-rise apartment building.

In the previous week I had seen a round-faced, dark-haired man in his late twenties, with slightly heavy build, perhaps 5’11”, standing beside a van parked in the corner of that parking lot closest to where I now stood. The man had watched me and turned briefly to speak to someone inside the van as I walked by. He had grinned at me and his direct staring startled me because it was out of place. He seemed to enjoy intimidating me. The van was not marked as a service van, and the man was too well dressed to be a tradesman. I now realize this prior visit was to “scope out” the operation.

Behind the new, small, perfectly trimmed hedge was a van parked sideways to the parking lines, so it blocked the view of the area from the apartments to the North and East. It looked like the van I had seen in the week prior. Meanwhile the voice continued: “This way, Matthew, past the tree!”

The ground was uneven and rough with tree roots. I tentatively walked towards the voice. The leash tightened in my hand and Cody would go no further. I was drawn to the voice, but I did not know why. I dropped the leash. I walked to the tree and stopped. Seeing no one, and getting frustrated, I said, “Now what??!!”

“Behind the tree, Matthew. Come around behind the tree.”

To this day I regret and do not understand why I ignored the danger signs. Probably I had fallen into a trance, as it was Mitch, my controller’s voice I heard. I stepped around the tree and was now facing the newly appeared, small, perfectly trimmed hedge.

“Now what?!” I said in a loud voice, feeling frustrated.

A man appeared on his knees facing me, dressed in black. He had just performed a very rapid and well-executed, “lying-down to crouching-position” military roll. Crouched behind the small hedge he held a black hose with a fire-extinguisher type nozzle pointed at me. The black hose disappeared behind him and led to the van.

A white fog poured out of the nozzle as the man stood up, and the fog continued erupting. I was blinded, and froze. It billowed from the ground to above my head and I could not see anything but fog. I held my breath.

Gradually over about ten seconds the fog sunk to lower than my eyes.

I hoped it was simply a gardener spraying pesticide.

The man-in-black now attempted to step over the small hedge but his right boot went into the hedge. As he pulled at his boot the hedge started to roll forward. He shook his military boot to free it from the hedge.

A real hedge does not appear overnight. A real hedge does not roll forward along its length. The hedge was a fake, mounted on a board.

The military roll, the all-black clothes, military boots, and gas mask were proof enough. I had been purposefully lured with V2K, mind-controlled by hearing a certain voice, and fogged, and it had to be Mitch (JTF). This was an MK-ULTRA chemical weapons test.

Fog blasted all around me forming a cloud. I was holding my breath and feeling stunned. As the fog settled to below my eye level, I recognized Mitch by his body shape.

I said, sarcastically: "Thanks!"

Mitch stepped back from the fog area, back into the parking lot. He pulled off the gas mask from chin to over his head and responded, "Anytime, Matthew!" with heavy emphasis on my name, dripping with contempt. This was exactly how the Neumann character on the TV comedy “Seinfeld” used to greet Jerry with “Hello, Jerry!”

As I spoke I inhaled some of the aerosol. My eyes, nose, lips and throat burned and I turned to run. My legs became very heavy; I recognized this intoxication effect of Scopolamine from the 2008 USA event, which I had started remembering as flashbacks four years ago in mid-2010.

This was the first time I had been dosed by an aerosol fog of anything. I would later learn that NASA had developed an aerosol of Scopolamine in 2013 “for medical purposes.” I would argue they developed a chemical weapon for no good reason.

The intolerable risk of criminals spraying an aerosol into an innocent person’s face and them mind-controlling them to things against their interests had been ignored all to provide an alternate dosing technique for the limited medical uses of this deadly Nightshade plant family drug.

Since this was only a year after NASA announced its new product, I may have been a Guinea Pig tester for the US Military on the outdoor effectiveness of Scopolamine fog delivery. Would it work or would it kill the subject?

I had just said “Thanks” to Mitch and accidentally inhaled a bit of the fog. I literally could not breathe, almost as if my diaphragm was anesthetised. I could feel consciousness slipping. I knew I had only seconds before I was unconscious. I turned and jogged south towards the most public piece of grass nearby which was in front of Montgomery Apartments. Time slowed down.

Jumping the real hedge in front of Montgomery Apartments was not an option as my legs were so heavy and the hedge was tall. I reached the public sidewalk and skirted this hedge to the public grass on the other west side where I collapsed face down. I had covered the twenty-foot distance without taking a breath since my first inhale of the aerosol. I fell unconscious.

The next thing I felt was my lips and nose being licked by a long, floppy, wet tongue. I opened my eyes and took a breath. Cody, our Golden Retriever had revived me briefly by licking my lips and nose, as a mother dog does to her puppies at birth to get them to breathe. After one or two breaths I went unconscious again.

The next time I awoke, Cody was gone. I briefly raised my hand and waved for help saying, “I can’t breathe, I can’t breathe!” before I fell unconscious again.

The final time I awoke a man in his late twenties with dark hair was standing over me, videotaping me with his smart phone. “Have you been drinking?” he asked

“No,” I replied.

“What are you doing then?”

“I am walking my dog.”

“Where is your dog?”

“I don’t know.” I lifted my head and looked around. I sat up and shouted “Cody! Cody!”.

I saw Cody running towards me from a point about 2/3 of the way to our house and about 80 meters west. His leash was dragging behind him. The videotaping man narrated, “Here is the dog coming now, trailing his leash," as he aimed the camera at Cody running towards us. Cody was very happy to see me and licked my face and hands.

"Has this happened before?" the man asked.

"No," I said.

"You should go home and rest," the man said.

"Yes, I will go home and sleep now" I said compliantly. Intoxicated on Scopolamine one does whatever they are told. I grabbed the leash, stood up and led Cody home. Once inside I took off his leash and went straight to bed. Upon waking up a few hours later I had no memory of the event.

It took three days to start having flashbacks that started with being twigged every time I walked Cody by the site of the event. Within five days I had full recall. As with the other events I reported this one to the Toronto Police Services. They noted it was odd the person did not suggest I seek medical attention, or even call 9-1-1 for me. I agreed.

About a week or two later, Cody started limping. After a few days we were concerned and called the vet but since there was no obvious fracture it was deemed low priority and the appointment was set for about five days later. After another three days Cody stopped limping, and tragically we cancelled the appointment. We have since learned that dogs instinctually hide their injuries, and will adjust to not limp.

A few months later a large bump formed on his ankle. Tests were done and the vet announced he had bone cancer. An x-ray indicated Cody had a previous injury to his anklebone.

The vet said in front of another witness, “In this breed bone cancer starts in the knee not the ankle. This prior injury is where the inflammation started that caused the bone cancer. It looks about four or five months old.” That was in October. Four months would have been June when the Scopolamine Fog test occurred.

When Cody licked my lips and nose to get me to breathe, as I lay helpless on the grass after being gassed by the Scopolamine Fog, he interfered with the JTF’s MK-ULTRA chemical weapons test. They needed to test if the fog would kill me or not. Likely they want to use this fog on peaceful protesters. It looks like they hit him in the ankle with a metal rod or gun barrel so he would flee for his life, which he did. His thick fur coat had masked the resulting injury.

In the voice-to-skull (V2K) transmission that woke me up just before the test, I was instructed to walk the dog so they were expecting the dog’s presence and would have had a suitable weapon ready. No dog, especially a Golden Retriever, voluntarily leaves their owner unconscious, not breathing on the grass, especially after successfully reviving them once. Below is a photo of our shrine to Cody, a very loving a loyal Golden Retriever.

CHAPTER 22: 2014 Jul 9 – Poison Marker Weapons Test Trap

"Citizens of the democratic societies should undertake a course of intellectual self defense to protect themselves from manipulation and control, and to lay the basis for meaningful democracy." – Noam Chomsky, Necessary Illusions: Thought Control in Democratic Societies

I could have had American citizenship at 18 but I declined. My American lineage goes back to 1630 when the "John and Mary" arrived from Scotland, where my ancestor John P. came from the lowlands.

Once I recovered my trauma-dissociated memory of being gassed on Canadian soil by Special Forces of our closest ally, the country my parents were born in, I was shocked and degraded.

I felt I needed to do some symbolic act to regain my dignity.

On July 9, 2014 I performed twenty minutes of street theatre by playing loud rock music in my car with windows down while parked across the street from the back entrance of the US Consulate. A security guard pointed me out to another guard, and one of them went inside. Fifteen minutes later, two marked police cars drove slowly by but did not talk to me even though I was parked at a stop sign with engine running.

I drove home about five minutes later. Two watchers in different cars appeared on Montgomery Avenue. One was on Montgomery Avenue near the site of the Scopolamine Fog test; the other was in the parking lot near where the fake bush was laid out during the experiment. When I walked towards them with a walking stick (this is legal) they drove away.

An hour later there was a new car. An athletic looking man with a professionally calm but serious demeanour in a red car, seen in the video[30], had left his passenger side window all the way down, tempting me to poke my walking stick inside, which I would never do.

He would have grabbed and pulled the stick in, and with my arm within reach he would have swiped the poison marker pen on my skin. I read in the CIA invented this covert, lethal weapon for agents to build across enemy lines in the 1950s. The agent needs only a marker pen, some DMXX (a liquid that penetrates biological membranes immediately), and an indigenous plant or animal poison to mix it with.

In the video notice the poison-laden marker is held in his teeth, cap end first for a quick draw. There is no paper visible in the video. The agent lowers his arms once I pass by. Later that evening he jogged back and forth in front of my house in the pouring rain for a full hour, soaked, holding up an umbrella, just to demonstrate his athleticism and to intimidate.

One might ask “Why the exotic weapon?” MK-ULTRA has always had not just mind-control, but chemical, biological and radiological weapons experiments. Since the RCMP is supporting this work, there must be an agreement between Canada and the USA. It’s reasonable to assume that since mind-control experimentation is permitted, which involves torture and drugs, that they also allow weapons testing, as MK-ULTRA projects allowed in the past.

CICA is likely not allowed to overtly assassinate a test subject. They must instead test a fatal weapon on the test subject to adhere to the agreement. It is still an assassination, as the target is being murdered for political reasons, they have become a whistle blower. The poison in this particular pen was probably a new type. Thankfully I did not fall for the trap.

It turns out puffing one’s chest at Godzilla is not such a good idea.

In the January 2015 home invasion Mitch confirmed my analysis about the poison marker pen with: "You figured all that out huh?"

In a later home invasion not in this book timeline Mitch negotiated with me to change the Facebook post of the single-frame picture to non-public visibility, while I was torture-trauma dissociated and high-dosed on Scopolamine. He explained the clandestine officer in the red car could not work as long as his picture was publicly available according to ‘the rules’ of their employer.

CHAPTER 23: 2014 Q3 – Busting a US JTF Covert Operation

“The two most important days in your LIFE are the day you are BORN and the day you find out WHY.” – Mark Twain

A Mercedes Benz 2500 Sprinter, all black van appeared parked at the “perch” outside my house at about 9 PM. A perch is a counter-surveillance term describing the closest place where physical surveillance is run, as close as possible to your residence, or even your workplace. The most frequently used perch for watching me was on street parking on the north side of Montgomery Avenue, about two addresses east of my house.

I found this presence unnerving. Looking through the windshield I saw a three panel, fold-down divider behind the driver and passenger bucket seats blocking my view to the large rear of this two-ton van. I looked in the driver’s side window and saw a six-inch LCD color computer display with rows of numbers being updated in real time.

It would be foolish to have that computer display draining the battery if there were not officers in the rear of that van at that moment. I photographed the van, and the display. The photo of the display did not show the numbers legibly as the LCD display was specially designed so that off-angle viewing is distorted.

The van was parked under a streetlight. I know all my neighbours, and they know me as the guy that has knocked on their door giving out the resident’s association newsletter. Most neighbours know me personally. The houses were originally built in about 1929, so there are no garages out front like in the suburbs. The living rooms look out on to the street. The chances were good that I would not be shot by the US military on the street.

I decided this was a rare opportunity to make a statement that I would not tolerate a two-ton surveillance van full of Special Forces watching my house. I walked up to the five-foot wide sliding door facing the sidewalk. I wound up a back fist using my right arm and with significant force delivered the back fist strike into the center of the sliding door producing a loud “BANG!” that echoed off of the front of the nearest houses.

From inside the van I heard a “thud,” followed by a shout of “NOOO!!!” in what was remarkably similar to Mitch’s voice. I walked home.

My interpretation is that the tall JTF officer from the July 9 Assassination Trap event had pulled out his weapon and was about to leap outside and shoot me, but Mitch ordered him to stand down, knowing there was no imminent risk to justify it. Such an action would have terminated his MK-ULTRA Monarch research subject in Toronto that he had spent a lot of time and money on.

Then I went to my computer and looked up the number for the Canadian Security Intelligence Service (CSIS) to report a National Security Threat. I called and told them I had a van full of US Military Special Forces out front doing surveillance and that they were likely armed. I pointed out that they had set an Assassination Trap for me on July 9, and that I was a non-consensual MK-ULTRA test subject. They said the usual thing, "If you are in danger, contact your local police." The call lasted one minute or less.

By the time I returned to the front window, the van had pulled away. I have no doubt they heard every word of that phone call. Mission accomplished.

Twenty-four hours later, the motion-detector floodlight on my back deck was dead. Replacing the floodlights made no difference. I tested the circuitry with a multi-meter. The power to the light sockets was gone. Only the motion detector red LED was lit. Either this was an incredible coincidence, or sabotage payback by the JTF for causing their hearts to flutter when I hit their surveillance van and caused a loud "BANG" as they huddled in silent mode knowing I was just outside.

I posted to Facebook a quick summary of the sabotage and let the JTF know I will add the $69.95 + tax replacement cost of the motion-detector light to the millions of dollars I will be seeking in compensation someday.

That posting and the posting with the photo of the van, and the headliner mounted LCD display inside the van were all deleted, during a home invasion by Mitch a few months later, in January of 2015.

CHAPTER 24: 2015 Jan – Home Invasion-Search for a Double- Agent

“Peace cannot be kept by force; it can only be achieved by understanding” - Albert Einstein

My wife had left for work at about 7:00 AM, early as usual, on a winter morning, and I was asleep. I awoke to the sound of Mitch’s voice from behind me as I lay on my stomach with my face on my pillow facing away from him. “What, no alarm system, Matthew?”

“It was costing money each month, and we knew you’d get through it anyway.”

“You figured that out, huh?”

I heard the “SHHHHH” sound of a spray can and it was just enough to intoxicate me without knocking me unconscious. I recognized the cognitive blunting effects of Nightshade.

This was the first time I had been dosed by Scopolamine via an aerosol spray can. Given I had been a test subject back in June 2014, I may have been among the first test subjects for the aerosol spray can, too.

I had no free will now that I was intoxicated with Scopolamine.

Mitch asked, “Matthew, where is the alarm system central panel?”

“In the south bedroom closet.”

He left the bedroom and called out from the south bedroom: “Why are all the lights off?”

“Because it’s unplugged,” I yelled back.

“Come here and show me!”

I got up, walked in to the south bedroom, and pointed to the power bar where the alarm power adapter lay unplugged. “See -- we disconnected it a month ago to save money.”

He pulled out a smart phone and took a photograph of the alarm system panel that had the manufacturer name label on it. Satisfied, he led me back to the middle bedroom and told me to lie down.

I lay down on my stomach on the bed[31]. Mitch now had one knee in the middle of my back, and the other on the back of my arm on the elbow, which was painfully hyperextended into the soft mattress. “Ow, ow, ow!” I screamed.

"You're hurting me!!"

"I know I am hurting you," Mitch replied in an unemotional monotone voice.

"Ow, ow, stop!" I shouted. Thinking that he might value my Russian Martial Art training I shouted, "You'll screw up my training!"

"You won't let that happen!"

The excruciating pain continued and within one minute I dissociated.

"Matthew, you are a lucky man. You know those videos you have on your YouTube channel, the Russian Martial Art ones?"

"Yes," I replied in the compliant tone.

"I watched them all!" he said. "You are so fucking lucky to be training with him!"

"Yes, I know."

Now Mitch started to apply no-mark torture, using a joint manipulation.

"Oow!" I screamed in pain.

"Did your Russian trainer program you Matthew?"

"No, he did not."

Mitch applied pain again.

"Ahhhhh No!!"

"Come on, Matthew, what did he do when you told him about me?"

"Nothing, I told him only some of what I've posted on Facebook."

"What was his response?"

"He did not want to talk about it. If I talked more than five minutes, he would kick me out of his office."

"He's a smart man," said Mitch. "Is there a Russian accented voice in your head Matthew?" he demanded, as he applied more pain.

"No. That hurts!" I shouted.

He applied more pain, "Come on, Matthew, is there a Russian-accented controller in there?"

"No, I swear no."

He kept this up for about half a dozen times, using pain each time from joint-manipulations (elbow, shoulder, fingers) to ensure my compliance with a truthful answer. I would shout in pain. "No, stop!" Finally he stopped, satisfied I had not become a double-sleeper-agent.

"I have not seen your body in a few years, Matthew. Turn over so I can take a look, but before you do my face will be uncovered, but you will not see my face. Instead you will see a black region where my face is, you will not see my face, and you will not remember it," Mitch said. "Now turn over," he commanded.

I sleep wearing only my underwear and I turned over. Mitch's face lit up, "Wow, you're bigger than the last time I saw you," as he noticed what a year's worth of training can do. "Look at you!" he exclaimed noticing significant core, chest, shoulder and arm muscle development.

"Now sit up Matthew, I have a something special for you."

"What is it?" I asked as Mitch pulled out a needle from his knapsack.

"Its special, Matthew. It's called Adrenochrome. Have you heard of it?"

"I think I've heard of it," I said, although I recognized only the adreno part of the name.

"No, Matthew you've never heard of this," he said almost chuckling, knowing how rare a drug it is, and how eager a subject is to please the mind-controller. He knew I was stretching the truth.

As I sat on the edge of the bed, he grabbed my left arm, found a vein opposite my elbow, inserted the needle and pressed the plunger.

"Now turn over on your hands and knees."

I did as he said. In that moment, I remember exclaiming, "Oh my God!". This was unlike any drug I had ever experienced. There was a sudden mind-altering effect, not unlike a spiritual, 'in touch with the universe' type of feeling.

"You know what it's made from?" Mitch asked. "They make it from dead people, Matthew."

That was horrible news. I was speechless.

"I'm going to pull these down," Mitch said, as he slid my underpants off. Not since I was eight years old had been raped, then by a family 'friend'. Dissociated to the compliant 'sex slave' Beta alter, I had no ability to stop what Mitch was doing.

He said, "I can tell by the length of hair on your legs, that you've trimmed your back side hair. Did you do that for me?" he asked.

"No, that was for cleanliness," I responded, surprised he would expect me to predict the rape, and to wilfully make it easier by trimming the area.

As he started to enter me he said, "You're my Russian Beta." Mid-way through he was having trouble and asked, "Give me something to work with here. Can you flex your back muscles?" I flexed my back muscles and he accelerated.

When he was done he kissed me on an area where my back muscles were most pronounced, and then pulled out and said “I’ll be back in one second,” as he left for the bathroom down the hall.

In two minutes, I heard him say, “Nice bathroom.” The bathroom has a marble sink and floor tiles.

“My wife designed it,” I replied in the Beta alter. He wiped my backside once and took the tissue back to the bathroom and I heard a flush. Then Mitch returned and said, "You know if you tell anyone I will kill you, right?”

“Yah, I know that,” I replied.

Mitch stood over me, consulting notes on his smart phone. He had clearly read all of my Facebook postings.

“Matthew you wrote ‘Blondie is a SADIST’. You got the emphasis wrong, ‘I AM a sadist.”

“Right, OK.”

“Matthew, stop calling me Blondie in your writing, I don’t like it. Use Mitch as my first name.” He continued reading.

“Matthew, I am 5’11 inches tall, not 5’10.”

“OK,” I said.

“My eyes are Blue, not Blue-Green.”

“OK.”.

“Also, I am not from the Virginias, I’m from Oklahoma.”

“Oklahoma, really?”

“What’s that supposed to mean?” (Having grown up on the prairies I recognized his defensiveness about growing up in the mostly rural part of his country.)

“Nothing, it’s just that’s where my father did his graduate thesis with First Nations,” I clarified.

“Matthew, my friends say I look like Michael Phelps, the Olympic swimmer.” He must have wanted to be remembered correctly, to be famous?

Then he got really personal, “When is your son leaving to study abroad?”

“What does that matter?” I asked.

“Never mind, tell me when!”

“Around February 15,” I replied.

“But what is the exact date?”

"I am not certain, but it's within two days after that date."

"You don't even know when your son is leaving to study abroad?"

"I did not make the reservations, so I don't know the exact date."

Mitch persisted, "Never mind I'll find it myself, was the reservation on Quantas?"

"Yes, probably," I replied.

"Matthew, remember you wrote on Facebook you thought I lived in a condo?"

"Yes."

"I live in an apartment, Matthew," he said.

"Really?"

"Matthew, the military doesn't pay well."

"What part of town?" I asked tentatively.

After a pause he said, "In the Annex," an area in downtown Toronto adjacent to the University of Toronto and full of large, old, redbrick homes rented out mostly to students.

"I don't have the things that you have, Matthew, like a house, a family, good-paying job skills."

"That doesn't seem right," I replied.

"You know people think you're crazy wearing that bullet proof vest. Why do you think I'm going to kill you?"

"Last July you sent that tall JTF officer in a red car with a poison marker pen just after I scared away the two followers you sent after I played loud music outside the US Consulate."

He said, "You figured that all out huh?"

I had read online the CIA developed the poison pen in the 1950s so an agent could make a lethal weapon across enemy lines with a bit of DMXX and a local plant or animal poison.

"Why did you send an assassin?"

"Matthew, you were coming after my guys with a stick while wearing a bullet proof vest!"

"I was walking down the sidewalk with a walking stick, it's legal. I would not have hurt them."

"It was a Kung Fu stick!" Mitch exclaimed and repeated, "You were coming after my guys!"

He moved on.

"Matthew, why do you drive around often with your windows down playing loud rock music?"

"I don't do it all the time. I want people to notice and remember me in case my car is in a staged accident with a semi-tractor or blows up a block later."

"What you did on June 20 last year -- Matthew, you really surprised me with that."

The night before the Scopolamine Fog test of June 21, 2014, I had navigated my browser to the Russian Consulate web site, specifically to the 'Hours of Operation' link as a bait test. How they responded would indicate the extent of my targeting.

Being gassed with a fog of Scopolamine the following morning was a positive test result that my RCMP wiretap was being shared in real-time to the US Consulate, the third such positive bait test over the past decade since November 2005.

"Matthew, you know how you wrote on Facebook that you thought my father might have been German and came to America in 1945 in 'Project Paperclip'?"

"Yes," I replied.

"It was not my father, it was my Grandfather. Everything I have done to you, he did to me."

"I'm sorry to hear that," I replied in my Beta-conditioned sex-slave alter, which is compliant, and even sympathetic to the torturer-controller.

Mitch went on, "We both have blond hair and blue eyes. Your grandfather is German, Matthew. We could be brothers."

My grandfather was a lawyer and then for over twenty-five years a Judge in Antrim County, Michigan. Never in the times I visited, all as a child, did he ever make intolerant remarks. He was not a Nazi, only a staunch Republican.

"You're not my brother!"

"Matthew, I want you to write in your book that I was only five years old when my grandfather got his hands on me, maybe younger,"

"Oh, that's terrible, I'm sorry! Okay."

"I want you to contrast that with the age of Omar Khadr when he entered Guantanamo Bay at fifteen years old," he commanded, adding: "Everyone seems to have sympathy for that guy."

"OK," I replied.

"Matthew, I want you to use the term… no –" He paused, and then continued. “Yes, I want you to use the term ‘Geneva Conventions’ about me.”

“OK, I will.”

“Matthew, do you have problems with any major organs, like your heart for example?”

“No, well, I do have a slightly dialled Aorta.”

“What’s that exactly?” Mitch demanded.

“Nothing really, it’s just a connective tissue problem I have, similar to Marfan’s Syndrome, so I have a slightly dilated Aorta.”

“Dilated Aorta, huh….” Mitch said.[32]

Mitch was likely looking for health vulnerabilities to exploit for a plausibly deniable assassination. Many intelligence agencies have all manner of poisons to cause heart attacks for example. The drugs are designed not to show up on routine blood tests when a person is admitted for a fatal heart attack.

MK Experiment #1 – Mind-control subject to suicide

“Matthew, that anti-depressant you take is bad for you. You have to stop taking that. You have to get off that stuff.” He repeated this order with slightly different wording about six times. “Matthew, you have to get off of the anti-depressant, it’s bad for you.”

Then he said, “And Matthew, when things get bad and too much to take, just go down to one of those piers on Lake Ontario.”

“You mean like the one on Cherry Street by the sugar refinery?” I asked.

“Sure, that will do, just find the longest one you can, and just walk off the end, Matthew, and it will all end painlessly, there will be no more pain.”

“OK.”

“Matthew, how much time do you need to finish your book?”

“Two or three months,” I replied, not realizing I’d have so much PTSD illness following the home invasion that I’d be unable to write for months.

“I can give you six months Matthew, no more,” he answered.

“That’s plenty of time,” I responded, optimistically.

“One more thing, stay OFF Facebook!”

“OK,” I replied, but I knew this would be impossible; this was not a totalitarian country. We have free speech as a fundamental right.

“Matthew, on Facebook you wrote: ’Next time he tries to pick me up it will get messy.' What did you mean by that? Do you have a knife Matthew?"

I truthfully said, "No."

"Come on Matthew, do you have any knives?" he asked, applying torturous pain with a joint manipulation.

"No, I don't have any knives!"

He applied more pain.

"No, I swear I don't have a knife!"

"Come on, Matthew -- do you have any knives?"

"The only knives are in the kitchen."

"Then what did you mean by that statement?"

"I meant I would resist."

There was perhaps one second of silence as I willed myself to resist.

Even in my dissociated state, I remembered promising myself during martial arts study that I would resist next time Mitch attacked. I also remembered my martial arts study.

Suddenly I started violently rocking Mitch off my back, left, right, left, right. I felt a blunt hard object pressed against the back of my skull. I froze.

"Do you know what this is, Matthew?" he asked in a deadly serious tone.

"Yes, it's all shiny," I remembered him pulling out his all-chromed handgun in the 2005 event. "That's right, you remember! I ought to blow you away right now," Mitch said in a clipped, stressed voice.

There were a few terrifying moments of silence as Mitch decided his next move. Then he got off me, and I heard a "click" (safety on.) At first I thought it was the trigger but the bullet would be in my brain before I heard the click of the trigger. I heard the "SSSHHHHHHHH" sound of the spray can of Scopolamine behind me.

I turned my head back from the pillow and called out, "You Bastard!" not knowing if I would ever wake up.

MK Experiment #2 – Measure how long a subject can be mind-controlled to forget a threat to the health of his family

On awakening I was tortured until I dissociated into the Beta (compliant) alter once again.

Mitch said, "Come with me," as he led me downstairs to the kitchen. I was looking around. "No, come here and watch me." He held the microwave door open. He pulled out a penknife and peeled the corner of the polycarbonate film off the inside of the door glass.

As he started to peel it back with his fingers, I protested, “But that protects us from radiation!”

“No, trust me, you don’t need this,” and he continued peeling it off in one piece. “Trust me, you do not need this.” When he was done I offered to put the film in the recycling bin and he said, “No, I will take it,” to hide the evidence.

Then he said “Repeat after me: I will not remember this,” and I did. “Keep repeating that over and over.”

I kept repeating, “I will not remember this,” over and over, as I was high on Scopolamine, and torture-trauma dissociated.

Next Mitch led me to my computer on the dining room table. “Sit down, log in. Open your book,” he ordered and I opened the book in MS Word on my MacBook Pro. “Show me the chapter on the USA event.”

I did.

“Now delete it Matthew, all of that chapter.”

“Why?” I asked.

Just do it!”

I selected the entire chapter, and deleted it. “Now, let’s go through the other versions,” he said. “Choose two old versions to keep, and delete the rest,” he said.

I did.

“Now open each of the backup versions, and delete the same chapter,” he said. One by one I did.

“Show me the pictures on your phone,” Mitch said.

I pulled out my phone, entered the pass code, and choose the photo application. “Find the pictures you took of my Mercedes surveillance van last fall in front of your house,” he said. I pulled up the several photos of the van (the one I hit with a backfist.) “Do you have iPhone backups?”

“No,” I said, and added, “It was getting complicated as I retired an old machine and the iPhone refused to back up to a new one.”

“But why?” I asked.

“It’s not allowed, Matthew, delete them,” he said.

I deleted them.

“What about the picture of the data display?” he said, knowing I had one since I had posted it on Facebook. I showed him the picture. “Delete that too,” he said.

“But the display writing is not visible!” I protested.

“It does not matter, delete it, Matthew,” and I did.

“Log on to Facebook. “Go back on your timeline to last fall where you posted the van pictures,” he ordered.

It took a few minutes of paging backwards but I found the post. “Delete the post, Matthew,” he ordered. I deleted it.

MK Experiment #3 – Mind-control subject to almost harm a loved one upon hearing an audio signal

He led me back upstairs to the bedroom and had me lie down. Then he said, “Matthew, repeat the following ten times over: ‘When I hear the air horn sounded twice below my bedroom window, I will squeeze my wife’s neck for ten seconds, and then let go.’

“You are not going to strangle her, just squeeze her neck for ten seconds, enough to interrupt her breathing,” he clarified. “Now repeat it!”

I did. He counted for me as I repeated it about ten times.

“Matthew, stop. Now I want you to listen to this air horn.” He pulled out an air horn from his bag.

“Listen, I’m only going to sound it once.”

He tooted a hand held air horn once so I would know the pitch and tone.

Within two weeks, in the middle of the night he sounded the air horn twice below my bedroom window. Upon barely grasping my wife's neck with one hand while in a hypnotic trance, I heard her shouting "Matthew!!" and I stopped, and fell back asleep.

She told me what happened in the morning. I believe the intent of this was not just an MK-ULTRA experiment, but to establish a pattern of homicidal violence so useful in a last resort. A staged murder-suicide would silence this whistle blower, and take out his family as collateral damage.

[31] As with any of the events involving dissociation, the order in which the events happened while dissociated is difficult to pin down and may be presented here slightly out of order.

[32] Confirmed with a Dr. N., a Doctor of Genetics at North York General Hospital in November 2015 that I do not have Marfan’s syndrome. A follow up heart ultrasound indicated this minor aorta dilation did not increase since it was first detected years ago. There is no risk.

CHAPTER 25: 2015 Jan - MK-ULTRA experiments and consequences

"If someone thinks that peace and love are just a cliche that must have been left behind in the 60s, that's a problem. Peace and love are eternal." - John Lennon

MK Experiment #4 – Mind control subject to keep doing a location-based behaviour and measure how long this overrides their fear of an introduced tailored-threat

Mitch's last item in the January home invasion was to start a 'community based' MK-ULTRA mind control experiment.

"Matthew, you know that gas station your buy your cigarettes at?"

"Yes," I replied.

"Say its name."

"Petro-Canada at Eglinton and Avenue Road."

"That's a good place to buy smokes, you should keep buying your cigarettes there."

"OK," I said. He repeated the instruction again five times in the next three minutes while I was intoxicated with Scopolamine, and torture-trauma dissociated to the passive Beta alter.

Starting near the end of the first week of January 2015 the Petro-Canada gas station and convenience store on the southeast corner of Eglinton and Avenue Road had their window shot at. It started with one hole.

I preferred buying my cigarettes there as I had come to know the owner. He was about my age. He grew up in Montreal. He was a conscientious small business owner, always trying to improve his large convenience store with an A&W Burger co-location and gas station. He was always giving tips to his staff on how to do their jobs better. He had shared with me his plans to open a video vending machine a few months earlier, and his intentions to make a seating area, which he did.

I was impressed with his drive and attention to his staff and business. When I saw a bullet hole in his window facing Eglinton, I was dumbfounded. This area has the lowest rate of violent crime in Toronto. There were no drug dealers hanging around on corners. It did not fit.

Since I bought one pack of cigarettes at a time, I would be in there almost every day. After a day or two another bullet hole appeared in the window. Then another appeared about a day later. There were nearly ten bullet holes when I sat down with the owner and asked him about it.

He pointed out he had met with the police several times, and he had a binder with plastic encased pages detailing steps to follow when it happened. He flipped through the pages to show me how prepared he was, how committed he was to helping the police find the shooter. I felt sorry for his staff, and him. Who would do such a thing to his employees and his business?

Then one day I used the self-service coffee bar to get a coffee, which faced the window. As I reached forward to drop an empty sugar packet into the hole in the counter that was for garbage I noticed a bullet sitting right beside it.

It was copper coloured, with a silver coloured scratch near the front running at an angle to the length axis for the first half of the bullet. The rounded front of the bullet was flattened about 3 mm perhaps from going through several panes of thick glass. I was stunned and a bit terrified.

Mitch knew I was afraid of guns as during a Scopolamine, torture-trauma dissociation event he interrogated me about things I was afraid of. My fear was from having a loaded, .22 calibre rifle, with safety-off, pointed at my heart by an unbalanced eleven-year-old in British Columbia when I was about eight years old. The boy said, “You know if I pull this trigger you are dead.”

This was a small calibre bullet. It may have been a bit larger than a .22 but it was not as big as a .38. I was shocked and fearful. I walked over to the counter where the young male cashier was serving a line-up three or four deep of people. I walked towards the cashier counter and said, “Come here and see this.”

I walked back to the coffee area, spread my hands wide above the counter, and said, “Look at this.” There were a few sugar and coffee creamer containers lying about with sugar spilled on the stainless steel countertop, and the bullet.

The cashier from ten feet away said, “Oh that, don’t worry I’ll clean that up in a few minutes,” and he turned away and returned to serving the waiting line up of about five customers waiting to buy gas, lottery tickets, and cigarettes. He must not have seen the small bullet. He must have thought

I was complaining about the counter not being in a clean state.

A few days later I met with the owner and explained finding the bullet, and the staff failing to understand what I was drawing their attention to. Since I reported seeing the bullet on the counter to the staff, the owner said the police were told I'd seen a bullet. The police never interviewed me.

I believe the purpose of Mitch's MK-ULTRA experiment #4 of the January home invasion was to frighten me with a threat matching my fear to measure how long before the mind-control to keep attending the location would wear-off once a tailored threat was introduced.

It was a significant coincidence that in the weeks following Mitch's programming to keep buying my cigarettes at the very same gas station and convenience store that these were repeatedly shot up by a professional that despite nearly ten shots never seemed to be caught.

I told the police that Mitch had almost certainly had been the shooter. The police are not trained to deal with Special Forces black ops. Without evidence they assume the complainant must be delusional and even a suspect. They did not even appear to even make a note.

MK Experiment #1 Result

In the weeks following I found myself compelled to stop taking the anti-depressant. I explained to my wife that I needed to go off it. She disagreed. I started ramping down the dosage anyway.

She insisted I meet with my family doctor. I told him:

"I want to stop taking my anti-depressant."

"Why?" my doctor asked.

"I don't know why exactly, I just think it's time I stopped," I said and then added, "Mitch said I should stop taking it."

Dr. B. is one of the few family doctors that have witnessed a MK-ULTRA Monarch mind-controlled patient under mind control.

He asked, "Mitch?"

"Yes, the American JTF mind-control guy I told you about that home invaded in January; the one who was in the 2005, 2007, 2008 events, etcetera."

He asked, "Does it occur to you that you're being mind-controlled right now?"

"No, I just think I need to stop it."

He did not approve but could not stop me.

The abrupt self-tapering off the medication that followed ended with me admitting myself, upon my wife's insistence, into a hospital for three days in late February, 2015 to get my dosage back up to the point where I felt normal again.

I conclude that an MK-ULTRA test subject in a strong marriage is less likely to fall prey to implanted self-destructive programs.

The doctor that admitted me, a Dr. M., said she had never heard of MK-ULTRA or Dr. Ewen Cameron. I pointed out Dr. Cameron was once head of the Canadian, American, and World Psychiatric Associations.

She did not flinch and said, "I have been 38 years a Psychiatrist, and I'm telling you mind-control does not exist. To think it does exist is delusional and I could have you formed (involuntarily committed) for that." It's scandalous that the Psychiatric profession keeps its own members in the dark about the professions involvement in MK-ULTRA mind-control research.

Instead I voluntarily entered the hospital for three days to resume my anti-depressant.

MK Experiment #2 Result

Regarding the RF-blocking film being removed from my microwave oven, it took nearly six months for the mind-control to wear off.

For some reason, nearly six months later, I bought a good microwave RF meter ($250) and measured about a 250% increase in microwave leakage compared to a neighbour's microwave with film intact, same brand, same wattage. Upon seeing our oven had been tampered with (no RF blocking film on inside glass of door), I started to recall what happened.

Since it was my wife who stood in front of the microwave oven in the six months following the tampering, it was she who absorbed the excessive microwave leakage. The short-term effects were nightmares, and some depression. Most disturbing was that Mitch was now targeted my family in his mind-control experiments. We don't know the long-term effects.

We unplugged the microwave but kept it as evidence. After reading about how the negative impacts of microwave ovens on the nutrition of food, we decided not to replace it.

The oak shelf in the kitchen that used to house the microwave has been converted to a shrine for Cody, the loyal Golden Retriever who was mortally injured for starting his owner breathing again.

MK Experiment #3 Result

My dear wife was frightened the night Mitch triggered the hypnotic behaviour by blasting an air horn beneath our window twice and I grabbed her neck with one hand. I was shocked and angry that Mitch targeted my family. I was also shocked that a violent mind-control program could be triggered by a non-verbal, audio-signal.

MK Experiment #4 Result

All of the 18-22 year old gas station/convenience store employees, about five, were traumatized. Who would not be traumatized working at the counter with your back to a window that was getting regularly penetrated by bullets? Some will have needed counselling. I expect some quit.

The business owner was affected psychologically, and financially by staff turnover.

I stopped buying cigarettes there when I realized it was me the shots were for.

CHAPTER 26: 2015 Jan - Road trip to Hell

“War is over ... If you want it.” - John Lennon

One early January early evening, Mitch home invaded and took me for a ride. I have a third party confirmation (a bank) of an activity that occurred, so I know it was January 2015.

Scopolamine had been sprayed on me in my sleep. I awoke to Mitch torturing me with no-mark joint manipulations. I dissociated, i.e. my dominant personality went to sleep. I was in the compliant Beta alter.

“Matthew what would you do if I came in the middle of the night, and you heard me?”

“I would go out the South bedroom window,” I said without hesitation, as I’d already come up with the plan.

“But you’d fall,” Mitch said.

“No, there is a slanted rooftop there. I’d jump on the neighbours roof, and keep jumping a few houses before dropping down.” My neighbourhood is semi-detached houses, with about three feet between rooftops.

“What about your shoes?”

“I don’t need shoes, I’d go barefoot,” I said.

“You’d do that?” Mitch asked, and then answered his own question, “You would do that wouldn’t you?” he said smiling.

“Yes I would.”

“Matthew, put your pants, shirt and socks on. We’re going downstairs,” he said. I dressed while he waited.

Mitch motioned for me to walk in front of him. I reached the main floor front hallway.

“Now put on your shoes Matthew. We are going out for a ride, I will bring you back after.” “Ah, OK,” I said tentatively. I sat down on the footstool in the front hallway, tied up my shoes and then stood up and said, “I’m ready.”

Mitch paused for a moment, smiled and said, “Its cold outside Matthew, put on your coat,” as you would say to a child. I put on my coat.

“Matthew, we are going to get into my van just out front.”

“I am going to walk first, and you are going to follow behind me. I’ll open the side door for you but once you get in, you’re going to slide it closed behind you. There is a handle just inside the door.” This plan would give the appearance of a voluntary departure to any neighbours or passers by.

“Do you understand?”

“Got it,” I said.

We stepped outside and I locked the door. I walked behind Mitch to the van parked right out front. He opened the sliding door and I got in.

I fumbled for the handle, and Mitch pointed and said, “Its hard to find, do you want some help?”

“I got it,” I said slightly annoyed at being treated like a child. I closed the door.

The van was already running. The van pulled away within seconds. I was riding in the first bench of a van, middle seat, and Mitch was seated in the front passengers seat. Someone else was driving but they had a hood on so I could not see the back of their head.

“Matthew, I need your cell phone.”

I passed it to him.

“Turn your pockets inside out,” he commanded.

I did, revealing only my keys and some coins.

Mitch asked, “Do you have anything tucked in your socks?”

“No,” I said.

“I have to see, pull up your pant legs so I can have a look,” he commanded. Oddly I felt hurt he didn’t believe me.

I pulled up my pant legs, and pushed my feet forward “See!” I said. I knew Mitch wanted to see if I was hiding a weapon or a recording device.

There was no conversation as the van pierced the night along Eglinton Avenue East.

Nearing out destination, Mitch announced, “Matthew you and I are getting out here,” he said as the driver parked the van. He got out first and opened the sliding door. I stepped out.

He walked me about ten paces on the sidewalk from the van. “You’re going to open a bank account at this CIBC branch,” Mitch commanded.

“My wife and I do all our banking at XXXXXX, I would never open an account at CIBC, I don’t like that bank. I had an account there many years ago.”

“Matthew, it has to be CIBC. You are going to open an account at this branch,” he said as he pointed out to a building with a big CIBC sign only twenty feet away. “Matthew you are going to use this ID,” as he reached into his pocked and showed two plastic covered pieces of ID.

“Your name is Matthew Palk, that’s P-A-L-K” Mitch said. “Now say it back to me, spell it,” Mitch commanded. “My name is Matthew Palk, P-A-L-K” I repeated. Palk is only a few letters different from my real last name so even though Scopolamine impaired I was be able to reliably repeat it.

“Good, now I have to go inside for just a few minutes, I want you to stand right here and wait for me.” “How long are you going to be?” I asked. “Just five minutes or so Matthew, stay here until I’m back,” Mitch assured. “OK,” I said.

I looked around. I was lost in a Scopolamine fog, not wanting to walk more than ten paces in either direction.

As promised Mitch returned in about five to ten minutes. He walked up to me and said, “OK Matthew, all the forms are filled in.”

“Just go in to the Customer Service counter, straight ahead through the doors. Say ‘I am here to open a checking account’. Then show your ID, say ‘My name is Matthew Palk’, and give them the ID,” Mitch commanded.

“OK,” I said.

Mitch handed me the two pieces of ID he had shown me earlier. “Now remember Matthew, your name is Matthew Palk, say it again,” he commanded. “My name is Matthew Palk, P-A-L-K,” I said.

“Good, now go in, and come right out after you’ve signed the forms,” Mitch said.

I opened the door of the brightly lit bank, and proceeded to the counter that was straight ahead. A professionally dressed woman was sitting behind the counter, and looked up at me. “Hello, I’m here to open a checking account, my name is Matthew Palk, P-A-L-K” I said.

“Yes, I need two pieces of ID please,” she announced and added, “One with a picture.”

I placed the two pieces of ID on the counter top.

“Thank you,” she said.

After a minute she said, “Mr. Palk, the forms are all ready.”

“Good.”

“Just one thing Mr. Palk, is your phone number 647-234-5678?”

“No,” I said annoyed, “My residential number is 416-482-XXXX.”

“I’ve had it for twelve years,” I reported.

The woman said, “Oh, well that’s not what it says on the form, I’ll change it then.

“Good,” I replied.

She printed out another version of the form, and presented the document on the counter top. “Please sign here Mr. Palk,” she said.

I signed the form with my new last name. She gave me a confirmation document back.

“Its all done Mr. Palk, thank you for choosing CIBC,” she said.

I opened the doors and walked into the night up to Mitch who was standing on the sidewalk twenty feet away.

“How did it go?” he asked.

“I did it,” I said.

“Good Matthew, now I need this ID back,” he said as he pulled the ID out of my hands along with the confirmation document handed to me by the bank employee.

He led me back to the waiting van. Again he opened the side door and I got inside. This time he closed the door for me. After sitting on the same bench row I asked, “Can we go home now?”

“Matthew, that was just a stop on the way, we have one more place to go,” Mitch said. “Then can we go home?” I pleaded. “Yes, then I’ll take you home Matthew,” Mitch said.

I thought of the wrong phone number issue, “Just…” I said cutting myself off. “What’s that?” Mitch asked. Somewhere beneath the fog of Scopolamine I knew that telling Mitch about the phone number change was a bad idea. “Nothing,” I said. I sat back as a passive passenger in a Scopolamine haze.

We were driving on a highway. On the right was a horizon lacking city lights indicating we were heading east along the edge of Lake Ontario. I was concerned how far we were headed.

“Where are we going? To the USA again?”

“No, we will be going to a warehouse Matthew, we’ll be there in a few minute.”

Bad things happen in warehouses I thought to myself.

After fifteen to twenty minutes the driver pulled the van into a multi-vehicle sized garage in a warehouse.

Mitch unlocked a door to the building from the garage. He held the door open and said, “Through here.”

Mitch led me down a passageway to a ‘torture room’. There was what looked like a doctor’s examination table, and a bright floodlight just above it. He ordered me to lie down on the table.

Mitch pulled out a spray can and sprayed Scopolamine in my face. He then grabbed my arm and did a finger joint manipulation to cause extreme pain. I screamed, "No, stop!" but there was no one in this industrial warehouse space to help me. After a few minutes of torture featuring elbow hyperextension, I dissociated, again.

I was now in the Beta slave alter.

Scene end. Self-censored.

It is not in my interest, nor in the interest of those who wish to stop human experimentation, to write here how a reputation smearing video was produced.

If the this video is leaked, my designate, or I will disseminate to the media my ten-page account of how this CICA produced smear film was made using torture, dissociation, Scopolamine drugging and gunpoint coercion.

I believe there may be another smear video from a few years ago, which I have also documented the production of. If this second video is leaked, my full account will be disseminated to the media of how this CICA produced video was made with torture, dissociation and Scopolamine drugging.

Nowhere else in this book will I withhold.

In November, CIBC telephoned my wife and I in a routine marketing call about this account. They were quick to hang up when I denied having an account there as I still lacked recall. Within thirty minutes I called back as I started to remember. My wife and I escalated to a supervisor 'Luke'.

I informed this account was opened under duress after being home invaded, drugged with a date-rape drug, and tortured. They said they had a mailing address for the account different from my own. My wife and I met with an officer at Toronto Police Services, 53 Division that same night and reported all in incident report #1843431.

I begged them to go to that address and interrogate Mitch for the January, May home invasions and gave them a full physical description. The officer left to confer with a detective and returned in a few minutes saying the account opening is all they would investigate. The next day I called E. P. in CIBC Client Care Escalation and relayed the incident number to her voice mail twice, but she never called back. There has been no report back from the police or CIBC.

CHAPTER 27: 2015 Feb - Luring Mitch into a Photo Op

"If the media were honest, they would say, 'Look, here are the interests we represent and this is the framework within which we look at things. This is our set of beliefs and commitments.' That's what they would say, very much as their critics say. For example, I don't try to hide my commitments, and the Washington Post and New York Times shouldn't do it either. However, they must do it, because this mask of balance and objectivity is a crucial part of the propaganda function. In fact, they actually go beyond that. They try to present themselves as adversarial to power, as subversive, digging away at powerful institutions and undermining them. The academic profession plays along with this game." – Noam Chomsky, from Lecture titled "Media, Knowledge, and Objectivity," June 16, 1993

By the first week of February I started to have flashbacks from the January home invasion. It started with a flashback of the mind-control experiment where Mitch programmed me to grab my wife's neck for ten seconds at the sound of two toots of his hand-held air horn. The Special Forces of Canada's closest ally had conspired to commit violence against the family member of a non-consensual Canadian test subject. I was shocked and angry that Mitch has escalated his violence to include my family.

After another day I recalled more of the dialog in the experiment. I was angry.

In a few more days I started to recall another of the experiments.

Then I remembered the rape. I felt degraded.

I felt violated and livid.

I knew I should report it to the police, but I knew they'd never believe me unless I had evidence.

When I drove my wife to work every day downtown, I passed within about six blocks of the US Consulate, where I believed Mitch must have been situated based on his response to my bait tests. I had told her some of what I recalled. She was upset hearing of this.

The sense of degradation I felt was similar to how I felt after being gassed with Scopolamine Fog on June 21, 2014 during a fatal weapons test. I felt I had to do some symbolic act to regain my dignity. This time, Mitch had come after my family with two of his mind-control experiments.

I decided to drive by the US Consulate on my way back home after dropping off my wife. I drove north on University Avenue from Queen street, and the US Consulate was on left, on the west side of University Avenue.

As I approached the consulate I unrolled my window half way, and gave a thumbs down sign as I drove by with my hand still in the car. I noticed an unmarked white van followed me for a few blocks to College Street.

The next morning, I rolled down my window all the way, and extended my arm outside the window and held my fist high with a thumb down sign as I drove by. I noticed an SUV outfitted with emergency lights followed me further than the day before, to Wellesley Street. The driver had a ball cap on, and a blue T-shirt.

The next morning, February 16, I held my arm out of the window and gave the finger to the consulate high above the roof of my car.

This time immediately a Black, overly tinted, GMC Suburban followed me. A civilian car turned in behind me within two blocks and joined the pursuit. It was a white Nissan Altima with overly tinted windows. It followed me past College, past Wellesley seeming to take over from the Black, overly tinted, GMC Suburban, which fell back.

Just after Bloor Street where University turned into Avenue road, the white Nissan pulled to my right at a stoplight. I had seen Mitch drive by my house as I was walking my dog, in a more expensive Nissan sports car about 2007.

I realized my drive-bys of the US Consulate with hostile hand signals were triggering security concerns, and I was considered to be Mitch's asset-liability. Mitch was getting into trouble. He needed to scare me away.

Since it was only 8:10 AM he was likely on his way into work when the call came about my drive-by. He likely didn't have time to get a US Consulate staff car.

I had a hunch it was Mitch. It was eerie having him in a car beside me. I had to wonder if he would pull out a weapon and shoot me.

I pressed a button to roll down the passenger's window, and used my iPhone to snap a picture of the driver in profile. Once enlarged the full-face profile is visible on a Retina display after turning up brightness to maximum or digitally enhancing the photo.

Enlarging the picture shows a slightly elongated chin to lip distance, like Olympic swimmer Michael Phelps, whom Mitch described himself as having likeness to during the January 2015 home invasion. A large brow is also evident. I had seen Mitch enough times to recognize him in profile.

Mitch (alias)
US Military JTF
39 years old in Jan 2015
5’11”
Slim build
170 pounds
Short blond hair
Blue eyes
Oklahoma origin.
His Nazi mind-control scientist grandfather immigrated to the US using CIA Project Paperclip.

He turned off following me about St. Clair Avenue, thankfully. I stayed away from the US Consulate after that. I felt I had reclaimed a bit of dignity.

I had to report the home invasion, as serious crimes were committed, even though I had little evidence. In the spring I called the police. I explained the home invasion, the whole story since 2005. Predictably the police were baffled.

Covert black ops by Intelligence Agencies and Special Forces that leave very little or no evidence are designed to be impossible for the police to decipher. Police are not trained to deal with state actors specialized in covert operations leaving no evidence. The police lack capabilities to investigate these crimes. I showed the above photo without the annotation, to two Toronto Police Services, 53 Division at my house in early summer.

One officer ran the license plate from another photo I took of Mitch’s car on that February 16, 2015, but he reported it was registered to a woman, which would be ideal cover when he does an operation cross-dressed. Upon hearing of the rape, and other events of the January home invasion, a conscientious officer, about thirty years old said, “This Mitch, I think he’s trying to control you.” I had to bite my tongue, as I thought “No shit Sherlock?” “Show him you’re someone not to mess with,” the officer advised.

A few days later I went to the station and met with a higher rank officer who interviewed me with a pair of colleagues. He stated they could not do much. (I don’t have enough evidence.) He added, “I am not saying I don’t believe you.“

“My advice is: First, finish the book. Get the book done.”

“Second, be aware of your surroundings at all times. This is important, be aware of your surroundings at all times, and get some pinhole cameras in your house.”

The January home invasion rattled me. It was an escalation in Mitch’s actions against me. The battle to control this MK-ULTRA test subject had come to my house and family. What might be next? Would I be used in a false flag terror event?

I thought up a way to prevent myself from being used in a false-flag operation. I got this tattoo to try and save my life, and others. If I were ever found as an actor at a terror event, dead or alive, this tattoo would indicate the event was a false flag. It’s my first, and only tattoo.

CHAPTER 28: 2015 May – Home Invasion: Termination Interview, Poisoning, RCMP

"Control of thought is more important for governments that are free and popular than for despotic and military states. The logic is straightforward: a despotic state can control its domestic enemies by force, but as the state loses this weapon, other devices are required to prevent the ignorant masses from interfering with public affairs, which are none of their business…the public are to be observers, not participants, consumers of ideology as well as products." – Noam Chomsky, from article "Force and Opinion" in Z Magazine

Never in all Mitch's mind-control experiments did he say a non-work-related sentence. Everything he said to me was in the context of a mind-control experiment.

I awoke in bed, lying on my stomach, to the sound of Mitch saying, "It's just me again, Matthew."

My wife and I had restarted the burglar alarm monitoring service after the January home invasion so my first words were: "But what about the alarm?"

Mitch said, "Yah, sorry about that." Having photographed the alarm control panel in the January home invasion, he had obviously looked up the vulnerabilities of the particular system and circumvented it

I heard the "SHHHHH" sound of Scopolamine being sprayed on me from an aerosol spray can. When I awoke I was tortured for a few minutes, until finally I dissociated. Again I was put into the compliant Beta alter. "How's the book going, Matthew?" Mitch asked.

"Well, it's taken longer than I expected since my PTSD symptoms became much worse after the January home invasion, I'll need another month or two."

Mitch did not respond to that. He changed the subject. "Matthew, you're going to see me sometime in the next while walking in the neighbourhood, dressed as a woman. Do you know what I mean, Matthew?"

"Yes," I replied.

"So, you have trans-sexual friends, Matthew?"

"No, but I once had one twenty five years ago."

"Good, so when you see me, I will REALLY be a woman, Matthew."

"OK," I said.

"You will recognize me by my same hair, and a hole beneath my left knee."

"Your haircut? I'm supposed to recognize your hair cut?"

"Yes, and a hole beneath my left knee. Study my hair cut now so you will remember."

I moved around to the side to study the cut in particular from the temple down to the neck, noticing the slightly rounded edging around his face. "What if the hole below the left knee is too small and I don't see it?"

"Don't worry, it's a big hole, Matthew."

"OK," I said.

"Matthew just so we're clear, when I am walking towards you and you are driving, the left knee will be the one farthest away from you."

"Yes, I got it," I said, annoyed he thought he needed to remind me of basic geometry.

"Now repeat this a dozen times, Matthew, 'When I see you dressed as a woman walking towards me on the street in my neighbourhood, I will recognize you by your same hair, and a large hole beneath your left knee. I will open my sunroof, pull over my car, get out and walk to you."

I repeated these two sentences over about ten times until he told me to stop.

Next Mitch said, "Now wait here, and think up some terror plots."

He walked downstairs, and I heard the front door open. He stood and talked with another man downstairs for a few minutes. I continued thinking of terror plots. He came back upstairs and I heard small talk with another officer who stood in the hallway just outside the open bedroom door, out of my view.

Mitch said: "Matthew, give me some terror plots."

In my drugged and dissociated state, I answered "You could take a fiberglass panel van, and with an EMP device in the back you could drive by the Front Street Internet hub and shut down much of Canada's Internet at the push of a button without hurting anyone."

Mitch turned toward the RCMP officer. "Is that place shielded?"

"I believe so," the officer answered.

"Check."

The officer spoke into a radio: "Central, is the Internet center on Front Street EMP shielded?"

Someone at the other end said, “Yes, it is.”

Mitch turned toward me and said, “What do you think about that, Matthew?”

“Good, one less thing to worry about. Right?”

“Give me another, Matthew.”

I said, “One could load up a bunch of cardboard tubes with hobby rockets carrying explosive payloads and park just outside the US Consulate and open the back door and fire them.”

“Could you do that, Matthew?” he asked.

“Yes,” I said eager to please.

In fact, I would never do that, as I don’t believe in violence except in self-defence. Firing rockets is not self-defence; it is an act of war. I don’t believe in war. It would be suicide to do that; anyone doing so would be shot in a matter of seconds by forces at the embassy. I have not made gunpowder since I was eleven years old, and I have no desire to do it again. All of my telecommunications, visa and banking transactions, and travels are monitored. If I made one move to acquire any of the components I would be charged with a terrorist offence. So the answer is “No, I could not do that.” But torture-trauma dissociated to a slave Beta alter, and high on Scopolamine, a slave is very eager to please his torturer[33].

“That’s good, Matthew, you just keep thinking up those terror plots,” and he chuckled. He walked downstairs with the officer, and let him out. It was perhaps ten minutes before he returned. He may have faked his own exit to the officer, and let himself back in.

“I’m back.” He was back in the bedroom. I sat up on the edge of the bed as he stood in front of me. ”Take your shirt off.”

I did. He turned and pulled a small bottle out of his knapsack on the floor. He knelt down and unscrewed the cap revealing a stick with a tiny brush at the end. He started moving it toward me.

“What are you doing?!”

“Be still, be very still.” I froze. He dabbed some dark liquid substance about an inch below my left Pectoral. “There, I was good to you Matthew. I put it where your doctor will see it. Now don’t touch it until you take a shower, Matthew.”

I knew it had to be a carcinogen, but thought that at least skin cancer can be treated successfully if caught early. If it were a biological poison I’d probably be dead by now.

Next Mitch pulled out a metered inhaler, the kind people with Asthma or COPD use. “Matthew, I will hold this to your lips and I want you to inhale when I press the button.”

I knew that this was dangerous. “No, I won’t do it!”

He pulled out his gun, the black one he showed in 2008, from behind and held it in his hand, angled slightly up. “You will do it!”

“OK,” I said fearing imminent death.

He held the inhaler against my mouth, between my lips and said, “OK, I’m going to press the button and you inhale at the same time.” He pressed the button, and I inhaled, as shallowly as I could. I felt the spray in my throat, and upper lungs.

“What was that for?”

“Matthew, you wrote on your tattoo design, ‘Blondie, Kiss my Canadian Ass.’”

“What are you talking about?”

“Downstairs in your china cabinet drawer you have a piece of paper with a tattoo design with that written on it.”

“But that was a draft of the design, I never got that sentence on my tattoo!”

“It doesn’t matter, it was the intent. Put on your shirt, and come downstairs with me.”

I got up off the bed, put on my short, and followed him downstairs. I knew then it was a slow-kill assassination test, probably a carcinogen.

Termination Interview

He pulled out one of the dining room chairs, the South one at the end, and said, “Let’s sit down and just talk, Matthew.”

Recall that those about to be executed by firing squad are sometimes offered a cigarette and even a chance to exchange a few words with the person who lights their cigarette. That is exactly what this was. Mitch knew I was going to be terminated in a fatal weapons test in June, and this was a termination interview.

This report is only due to a tradecraft technical error by Mitch (JTF) in the June 4, 2015 assassination-fatal weapons test event, and my own resisting mind control.

Mitch pulled out the chair and said, “Have a seat, Matthew.”

“OK,” I said hesitantly but I only leaned the chair towards me instead of pulling it out. I was stuck in indecision, as I was afraid of sitting down with him. I feared this man like no other. He was pulling out the chair to my right, the one that is at the south end of this north-south oriented, hardwood dining room table.

He saw my indecision and said, “Matthew, it’s all right. I won’t hurt you. We’re just going to talk.”

“All right.” This was the first time in 10.5 years he ever said to me “I won’t hurt you.”

There is no question I have suffered from Stockholm syndrome, the tendency for those held captive to become sympathetic with their captors.

There is a related phenomenon where victims become admiring of their torturers after repeated torture that causes dissociation. In the WW II concentration camps some of the victims of the twisted, Nazi war criminal Dr. Jusuf Mengele’s reported referring to him as “Beautiful Joseph.” I understand that.

The torturer is the only one who stops the pain. The mind is tricked by repeated torture, and the torturer is seen as the liberator from pain.

Mitch asked, “Can we smoke?” He was reaching into his jacket left pocket for a pack of cigarettes.

“No, my wife will kill me if she smells any smoky smell in the air,” I said. On Scopolamine and torture-trauma dissociated, it is nearly impossible to lie. Of course I did not mean she would kill me literally, just that she would be very upset.

“Well, we’ll keep this short then,” he said in an annoyed tone suggesting I was rapidly using up whatever goodwill or peaceful intent he was attempting to show me (for his own conscience perhaps.)

“What do you think of life, Matthew? Just any thoughts on life?” he asked.

“Well, I believe life is short, and so it’s about making a difference in the time we have, to make the world a better place.”

“Interesting,” he replied.

I had read Victor Frankl’s “Man’s Search For Meaning” in my twenties, and having a solid meaning in life is one of the few reasons I have survived so far, the other being my incredible wife of fifteen years. Mr. Frankl narrowly survived the Concentration Camps of WW II.

Mitch asked me to name my favourite sports team.

“I’m not into sports.”

"Your Facebook page says you like the 'Roughriders.'"

"Yes, I grew up in Saskatchewan. I might watch the Grey Cup if they play, but that's about it." There was a pause.

I interjected: "What your grandfather did to you at five years old was awful. Mitch."

"Yes, it was," he agreed.

"Matthew, I'm CICA."

"What? I thought you were JTF."

"Why did you believe I was in the JTF?" Mitch asked.

"The Canadian soldier in the van said so, in 2005."

"The Indian one?" Mitch asked.

"No, he only said JTF2, the white soldier said JTF."

"Oh," Mitch said.

"I'm both. Matthew."

"I didn't even know that was possible."

"Well it is."

He walked over to the bookcase at the southwest corner of the living room. He said, "Let's have a look at your books." He said "hmmm" a few times as he scanned the book spines, not pulling a book out.

One book caught his attention -- it had a Swastika on the spine.

He smiled and said enthusiastically: "What is this?"

He pulled out the only book in the house with a Swastika on the binding and read the back cover notes silently for about ten seconds: "A team of British commandos parachute into the high peaks of the Austrian alps in the depths of winter. Their mission: steal into a seemingly impregnable alpine castle—headquarters of the Gestapo—and rescue a captured American General before he reveals the Allies' plans for the invasion of Europe."[34] It was a spy novel, "Where Eagles Dare" by Alistair MacLean.

"Ohhh," Mitch sighed with disappointment realizing it was an anti-Nazi book.

He placed it back in its place on the bookshelf.

"Let's sit down again." His tone was friendly.

He led me back to our designated seats at the dining room table.

"Do you have any questions for me?"

I strongly suspected he might be a Nazi given his grandfather's influence and the behaviour with the book, and this was a rare opportunity to find out.

"Yes, what do you think of Jewish people?"

His face filled with loathing, and his mouth became a flat line as he pursed his lips. His voice was low, steady, monotone and slowed down as he measure each word, "I don't want to talk about that, Matthew." I had never seen this side of Mitch before. It was like a different Mitch, an alter.

Then I have a blank in memory.

The next thing I remember is pain.

I was in my bed on my stomach, with Mitch kneeling over me in torturer mode twisting an arm, hyperextending an elbow or finger joints.

"Matthew, who are your Jewish friends?!" he demanded angrily.

"Who are your Jewish friends!?"

I knew this was dangerous territory. I beg readers to understand that Scopolamine wipes free will.

First I said, "There is a professor I know that lives a few blocks away who is Jewish."

"What's his name?"

"He is really an acquaintance."

"What's his name?!"

"I don't remember his name."

More pain.

"Honestly, I don't know his name, I met him when we were both children in Regina. I had attended his brothers Bar Mitzvah. I ran into him at a resident's association social a year ago.“

"What other Jewish friends do you have?"

"That's about it, I think."

More pain.

"Come on, Matthew, which of your other friends are Jewish?" he demanded.

He made a motion to hurt me more.

"Diane Yusuf[35]." She is a neighbour and friend.

"What does she do for a living?"

"She's a lawyer and newspaper columnist, not an active lawyer though," I told him.

He thought for a second and announced "No."

"Give me another name!"

"George Bernstein[36]." He is a community activist, leader and friend on the board of my residents' association.

"Is his wife Jewish?"

"I think so."

"What's their address?"

"I don't know the number, they live two blocks south on Orchard View, they're in the book"

"I'll find it," he said.

Mitch marched me downstairs to the dining room table.

He was calming down, his voice became more normal, and his facial expression.

"Matthew, sit down in front of your computer, and log in."

He stood behind me as I typed my password, then he walked over to the living room.

"Matthew, I need all your banking passwords."

"I don't know any of them. My wife does all the banking."

Mitch walked around the couch to face me in the dining room (open concept layout.) He leaned against the couch and gestured with his hands. "I need your banking passwords!"

"Honestly, I don't know any of them"

"Are you sure!"

"My wife is a banker, she does all the banking. I don't even know the usernames."

Mitch sighed as he lowered his head.

Clearly Mitch had been counting on stealing some money. He probably does this to all his MK-ULTRA test subjects just before lethal weapons tests. That means he must regularly need money laundry bank accounts to transfer the funds to.

He had given me six months to get the book out in order to plead his case, or make him famous. I was a liability only being kept alive long enough to make him famous, but I had missed the deadline. I did not know it, but my time was up.

He told me to stay at the dining room table while he went upstairs and searched. After a few minutes he returned with a skeleton key.

"What does this open?"

"That looks like the safety deposit box key."

"What's in the box?"

"Just papers, and a bit of gold."

"How much gold?"

"One ounce, or two at the most. It's a family member's gold, not mine."

"How many ounces exactly?"

"Two, I'm sure," I said assertively.

"Hmmmm," he thought for a few seconds. "Not worth it." He put the key back upstairs where he found it. Then he left. (The key has since been safely located off-site.)

Threatened by RCMP over Forced Terror Confession

About ten days after this home invasion in May, my wife was busy and I did the weekly grocery shopping on my own. I did not yet recall the May home invasion.

It was a sunny, summer mid-afternoon as pushed my cart of groceries to my car. I unlocked my car at The Great Canadian Superstore on Don Mills Road and Eglinton Avenue East in Toronto at about 12:30 PM.

A man approached me from behind just as I opened the driver's door and said, "You know we can seize your vehicle." I turned to a see a man with short hair, a slightly tall and trim body consistent with that of a plain-clothes officer.

"Why?"

"Because you are a terrorist, and we are allowed to under Anti-Terror Law (C-51.) We can seize all of your assets as proceeds" (of terrorism.)

"I am NOT a terrorist!" I said. I got in my car, started the car and drove away.

The RCMP and CSIS use Bill C-51 to work the anti-terror file. But only the RCMP have a history of in my case of collaborating with Mitch.

In the May home invasion a Canadian officer was ordered by Mitch to "check" the shielding status of the Front Street Internet centre. The officer used a radio to call 'central' and with one question he determined the Front Street Internet center was EMP shielded. The same officer recorded my forced confession to terror plots after being drugged and torture-trauma dissociated by Mitch.

The RCMP used information obtained from drugging and torture in Canada by a CICA officer, to tag me this whistleblower a terrorist, and to threaten to seize all my property. This is at least partly the result of a former PM Harper policy that allows Canadian federal officers to use information obtained by torture, by other countries forces.

I'm not sure the Harper approved policy is meant to allow torture on Canadian soil, but once he approved federal agents/enforcement using information by torture by other forces, he must have known that forced confessions are trivial to obtain with torture. That is why torture is used around the world by autocratic regimes. He should have known a judge reviewing a recording could not tell in what country the recording was made. Such policy and laws are ripe for abuse and violate human rights.

Anyone in my position cannot sue the federal government for abuse because Section 38 of the Canada Evidence Act allows federal agents to show a federal court judge in private a taped confession of a suspected terrorist. The video actor cannot be present, or their lawyer to challenge the forced video confession. They have forced confessions from me dating from November 2005, and now May 2015.

The judge has no way to determine that the person was drugged and tortured. The actor appears dangerous and the judge grants a Section 38 to make the entire trial a national secret along with all the evidence presented. The media could not report on it. A Kangaroo Court proceeds and the claims of torture would be ignored. Those present could not talk to anyone about the court evidence or they would go immediately to jail.

This law invites abuse. That's not the level of democracy Canadians deserve and expect in 2015, and it is inconsistent with The Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, and Geneva Conventions.

[33] This paragraph was re-introduced in the Fifth edition. Mitch had removed the earlier version of this paragraph during a home invasion in October, 2015, and it was not noticed during the final editing phase. In so doing, he set me up to be classified “as a grave threat to the USA” useful for an extra-judicial killing, legal under recent Presidential Orders

[34] I had picked it up from someone’s curb dump of books. It is labelled property of Lawrence West library. I prefer John LeCarre for this genre.

CHAPTER 29: 2015 Jun 4 – Nicotine Gun Fatal Weapons Test

"Indifference is Injustice's Incubator - Canadian Supreme Court Justice Rosalie Silberman Abella

I had just run a few security-related errands on a sunny June afternoon. I had visited two security companies regarding home alarms, and pinhole cameras.

I was almost home as I turned off Eglinton Avenue and drove northbound on Edith Drive in mid-town Toronto. I noticed a spectacle ahead. A woman dressed in white, with sparkles glinting off her sequined jacket in the sunlight, was walking south on Edith on the East side only two blocks from my house.

As I got closer I realized it was a gay or transgender man in high-end, very convincing 'drag' including fake breasts. There was a large hole below his left knee, and he had the same blond haircut as Mitch.

I went into a hypnotic trance. My eyes blinked very little. I was fixated on the visual trigger, a transsexual drag Queen with a large hole beneath his left knee, and the same hair cut as Mitch.

He was swinging a very large purse, open at the top, the handle looped over his left shoulder and wore professional makeup, large tinted glasses, a gold necklace and tight, pre-faded-to-white, blue jeans. Swinging his hips from side to side as he drag-walked, he successfully impersonated a seductive woman worthy of a role in a movie.

Strangely in my conscious mind I did not recognize Mitch. I only felt an overwhelming urge to stop the car and talk to the transsexual drag Queen.

Curiously, one end of an aluminum tubular object rose to the top rear of the purse as he swung his hips while cross stepping in my direction south on Edith. The aluminum glinted in the sun. He noticed and reached across his body with his left arm and tried to stuff the aluminum object deeper in the bag, but he could not force it back down. A scowl showed on his face: no time to repack the bag.

He resumed smiling as he lifted his shoulder and pulled his left elbow up and back to try and hide the aluminum tube object from me as he continued his drag walk.

This overt subterfuge of hiding a metal object was a danger cue I picked up on even in the hypnotic trance I had slipped into.

I was driving slowly northbound and as programmed, upon identifying the trigger I immediately opened my sunroof, and pulled over. For some reason I could not then understand, I felt compelled to approach and say hello.

I stepped out, but did not walk towards him as I detected danger. I stood in the middle of Edith Drive between my open car door and my Honda SUV. Mitch was about 15 feet behind on the sidewalk.

I stood in the middle of Edith Drive with my driver's door open for perhaps ten seconds trying to resist the post-hypnotic suggestion (the program) to approach him.

My dominant personality in a trance did not recognize this person as Mitch, but was compelled to approach them. I told myself, "With all the dangerous mind-control experiments I have been through in the last ten years, it would be risky to follow an urge to do something so out of character like stop my car and approach a complete stranger just because of their appearance, leaving alone that they were in drag."

I decided to break the impulse; I aborted the post-hypnotic program. As I turned to get back into my car, I noticed my seat was covered with a clear liquid that had dripped in from the sunroof. There was a tree branch above me, so I thought perhaps it was rainwater fallen from the overhanging tree branch, wet from an earlier rain, on this sunny day.

I brushed the liquid aside with my hand not knowing what it was and sat in the seat. More liquid fell through the sunroof and soaked into my right pant leg, and in that moment I saw a spurt of clear liquid land diagonally across the hood, coming from the direction of the transsexual drag Queen.

That completed the risk analysis. I knew I was in danger. A liquid-firing gun was being used on me. I closed the sunroof as more liquid was fired and a few more drops fell through. I drove the two blocks home, parked, went inside and quickly changed my jeans.

I sat in a Muskoka chair on my back deck. In my panic I took one drag from a cigarette and felt nothing. It was like inhaling air. There was no Nicotine blood level elevation from the inhaled smoke as is always the case after a smoker has gone at least 30-45 minutes without a cigarette. Realizing my bloodstream was dangerously saturated with Nicotine already, I butted out. That aluminum tube must have been part of a Nicotine laden liquid heart attack gun.

The CIA had displayed a Nicotine frozen crystal Nicotine gun in a public hearing back it the 1970s.

My heart was banging loudly in my chest like never before, at less than sixty beats per minute, “BANG, BANG, BANG.” Still partly in a trance, I remembered and used special breathing techniques and mental work from Russian Martial Art study to direct blood, and oxygen to my heart.

With each in breath through my nose, I exhaled slowly through my mouth imagining the air coming out through my heart. The next thirty minutes were terrifying as my heart banged. I believed I might die. After about twenty minutes, my heart was still banging but interrupted with normal beats. After another twenty minutes it was beating almost normally.

I saw an aluminum tube sticking out of Mitch’s purse in the black op. I saw him try to hide it. I saw the liquid on my drivers seat. I saw the liquid then fall through my open sunroof, and onto my pants. I saw it land in a diagonal line on my front hood from the direction where Mitch stood on the sidewalk. I witnessed no nicotine blood level elevation when inhaling from a cigarette afterwards, like never before. I witnessed my heart banging in my chest, slowly, continuously for many minutes, like never before.

This had to be a fatal weapons test. By resisting the mind control urge to approach Mitch, I suffered only an indirect hit from a medium-length, Nicotine-laden liquid, heart attack gun. This fatal weapons test was the first obvious assassination attempt; I was very frightened of what might follow. As usual, since I dissociated from the moment I saw the hypnotic trigger (Mitch in drag) I had no memory of it when the event I got out of the Muskoka chair on my back deck.

53 Division Toronto Police Service came to my house tonight to talk with my wife and me at my request. The senior officer took my report quite seriously. The junior officer could not help but be influenced.

In my early June meeting with a Detective and another officer at the police station, again the senior officer took my report quite seriously. I got some good security tips tonight, but most importantly advice on dealing with terror tactics (rape, death threats, torture), “let him know you are not someone to mess with,” i.e., to not give in to threats.

This morning about 10 AM I shared a summary of my story with a major US TV network, and the CBC via Facebook messaging. The ‘manifesto’ summary did make an impression. Of course while the major US network person expressed how sorry they were about what was done to me, they could not report on it.

“Yes no kidding” I replied. They are part of the 80% of TV media with majority control by one wealthy family. I asked them to at least report on it if I am terminated. Now that the polls show the Conservatives will not win, I hope the CBC will start standing tall again.

Within about an hour of these communications, the JTF officer from the US Consulate conducted an unprecedented attack. Note that none of this exchange was posted on Facebook. Thus, this is a third ‘bait test’ indicating my phone line is not only wiretapped by the RCMP, but also shared real-time with “Mitch” the USA JTF officer in the USA Consulate.

… (Book: Mitch told me in a subsequent home invasion that what I edit out here was incorrect)

At 8:00 PM tonight I saw what looked like Mitch the JTF officer from the USA Consulate, in the same colour car, make, model as I photographed him in February after I lured him out of the Consulate to get his picture. He had just pulled over on the north side of Montgomery in front of us as my wife and I drove by. He looked down at his phone to hide has face.

I said nothing to my wife but upon getting home (two blocks,) I put on my protective gear (no lethal weapon) and took a route to approach from behind. I noted a vehicle that is one of several that have been keeping me under surveillance on my way around the block to reach him from behind – he was gone when I arrived. (He carries an all chrome automatic handgun, which he put to my head in the January home invasion when I tried to resist. He also showed it in the 2005 event.)

At 8:18 pm my wife picked up the phone and the caller hung up. The caller's number was the same exchange as my neighbourhood (416) 482-XXXX, which was tactical as we would be more likely to pick up for a neighbour - I am on the board of my neighbourhood association. Calling the number yielded “This number is not in service.” That's when I called the police. As a computer professional I know it is quite possible to falsify caller-ids, but it takes specialized software, equipment and know-how. 99% of the population cannot do it, but covert, USA Military Special forces have all such technology at their fingertips.

My wife survived the trauma of being a top targeted family under Mao's Cultural Revolution in China for 10 years. This last 10.5 years of targeting of her family IN CANADA she finds much more stressful, and fearful. This is getting too much for her, and she may have PTSD now too. I believe it was the microwave tampering that did it.

Now it is Canada Day. Let’s review the situation here in mid-town Toronto, three blocks from Canada’s first rebellion:

- A US Special Forces (JTF) officer out of the US Consulate has been allowed to terrorize my family and I for 10.5 years, including yesterday.

- His June 21, 2014 chemical weapon covert test mortally injured our dog, and easily could have killed me as I stopped breathing several times. In Jan, 2015 he home invaded our house; I was drugged with Scopolamine, tortured-to-dissociate, raped, and interrogated. He sabotaged our microwave to cause harm to my family and me for an experiment.

- The RCMP National Security department refuses to help, as in fact they are enablers, and referred me to local police.

- CSIS has had more than a half dozen communications from me, and has done nothing but refer me to local police.

- Community police do not have the training and equipment to deal with foreign country, Special Forces, covert activities on Canadian soil. Since the pros never leave evidence, all is “Plausibly Deniable.” [If they left evidence, they wouldn’t be pros]

The best assassin for secret police (National Security department of RCMP are secret police) is one who can be directed to kill and have no recollection of the event afterward for years, and thus be unable to finger the state security apparatus orchestrators. That is what was used in the Parliament Hill shooting terror event.

I was an R&D sleeper assassin, and I know how to spot the signs. It was false flag event, to justify ramming through C-51 which massively removes Canadian’s civil liberties, and charter rights.

Our country has imported the Nazi tactics (burning of Reichstag by the Nazis to justify suspending civil liberties,) direct from the USA. They in turn perfected this technology by importing 500 Nazi mind control scientists to America in 1945 in the CIA 'Project Paperclip', see wanttoknow.info.

The recent Charleston shooting also has strong indications of being such an event, since the video of him entering the police station shows his pupils dilated, and his eyes blinking slowly just as Scopolamine causes. I was hit with Scopolamine 3 times in non-consensual tests. There are many other events in the US going back 60 years that have indications of mind-controlled assassins that were tarted up as 'Marxist', 'Islamist' or 'Anti-Government' types.

If North Americans, and Europeans wish to clean up/sanitize our democracies, they have no better an opportunity currently than helping this recovered MK-ULTRA R&D sleeper-assassin get his tell-all book out. I believe I am the only R&D sleeper assassin that has managed to get this far public. There may never be another.

The tactic being used now is to traumatize my family and I so much that we separate (PTSD causes lots of divorces,) whereupon it will be much easier to take/murder me to stop the book from coming out, or even movie.

The RCMP Commissioner Bob Paulson should resign. Mr. Harper plucked him from the National Security department AFTER I wrote him in April 2010 telling him that the RCMP played a pivotal role in the 2005 torture-interrogation, and mind-control demonstration between JTF and JTF2. He promoted the man who signed off on RCMP involvement in crimes against humanity for the reward of getting the very latest and greatest sleeper-assassin (mind-control) R&D training.

Perhaps Mr. Harper's decision was by design, as only a few years later we see sleeper-assassin, false flag event on Parliament Hill just as the Harper caucus was sitting down to plan the implementation of C-51, rights removing legislation. How convenient to terrorize the house members, and the public to accept C-51 being rammed through. Look also at the spate of 'terror' events that followed within 6-8 weeks.

This would explain why despite my numerous emails to/cc Mr. Harper, he still permits this continued TERRORISM by a foreign military, special-forces operator of a law-biding, Canadian civilian and his family. We saw these terror tactics in dictatorships with secret police (i.e. STASI) before the Iron Curtain fell. We also saw them in CIA propped-up dictatorships with their secret police in the Middle East, Central American, Africa and elsewhere, in fact we still do.

To quote the G20 police officer "this is not Canada anymore."

Is there not one newspaper publisher with Katherine Graham's grit and guts that understands the importance of this, and would be willing to permit a story to be written? Even one story could significantly enhance the safety of my family, co-author and I.

With such protection (plus better physical security), my family can stay together and get this important work complete. This book will educate the public on how to spot false flag events by sleeper (mind-controlled) actors. This should help cleanse our democracies fairly fast.

As for Mitch, the JTF Officer's very real threat of a painful and possibly life-debilitating/ending response to my continuing email campaign:

Its Canada Day, get together with some friends, put on some music (Rush, The Guess Who ‘American Woman’) and drink some beer.

Peace,
Matthew PXXXX
Montgomery Avenue
Toronto

There was no response from the email but there was some satisfaction in telling the politicians and media what is going on so they could not deny it later.

The first week of July, my wife went on holiday to help close family with a newborn. I was getting flashbacks of the May home invasion, but had not remembered the part about Mitch confessing to being CICA.

As I drove around town doing errands, I noticed surveillance.

I started to recall for the first time the June 4, fatal weapons test, which had been masked out due to dissociative amnesia.

AFTERWARD

"Its not just what you stand for, but what you stand up for" – Canadian Supreme Court Justice Rosalie Silberman Abella

When you are the target of escalating violence while writing a tell-all book about being a test subject of CICA mind-control R & D black operations, there comes a point where the risk of death or setup incarceration and not getting the book done outweighs the risk of not getting the latest events properly documented.

There have been many violent events, including life shortening ones, in 2015 after July 1 that I would have liked to have properly covered here.

I have reached the 200-page limit for a manageable read. I am out of pages, out of editor budget, nearly out of health, out of time, and this is why the timeline of the body of this book ends in July 1.

Spies are professionals in leaving no evidence, in having all actions plausibly deniable. Police investigate little of reported black ops for lack of evidence. Newspapers won't write stories for the same reason. Clandestine activity thrives in the darkness.

An intelligence agency victim's true report is from the darkness and therefore contrasts starkly with the white and shades of grey of mainstream media reports. This makes if difficult to accept, and Cognitive Dissonance rears its ugly head. The public simply does not know how devious intelligence agencies can be.

The best a whistleblower can do is to get the word out and let the public be the judge. I am indebted to those MK-ULTRA Monarch survivor-whistleblowers who trod this path before me including Cathy O'Brian, Kathleen Sullivan, Carol Rutz, Brice Taylor and Fritz Springmeier.

CONCLUSION

"We must never forget how the world looks to those who are vulnerable" – Canadian Supreme Court Justice Rosalie Silberman Abella

Despite the suffering experienced, I still have some faith in my country and humankind. The actions of a few brave female Canadian intelligence officers did protect me from some foreign threats this year, but unfortunately not all. After the torture, drugging and forced confessions by the RCMP, to see other Canadian agents helping a Canadian (running interference surveillance) did move me and led me to hang a big Canadian flag on my porch.

In 2011 an anonymous, off-duty, Canadian soldier provided a correction to the tonnage of the truck/van used in the 2005 event. He had seen my manuscript posted on rabble.ca in 2010, since removed. This gives me hope.

I am also hopeful with the new Prime Minister Trudeau and his gender-balanced cabinet.

Bill C-51

If the Trudeau Liberals do not repeal Bill C-51 they will be abandoning the civil rights concerns well established as a Liberal Party traditional value going back to when Trudeau's father was Prime Minister.

C-51 benefits those in the security-apparatus, and the uber powerful, not the Canadian electorate. C-51 is designed to stifle dissent by enabling virtually anyone to be tagged a terrorist suspect because they sign petitions, protest against pipelines, against proroguing of parliament, for indigenous rights, or whatever. Once tagged, the citizen is subject to unending invasions of their privacy and communications, approaches from entrappers or agent provocateurs, all to effect more societal control.

While the Prime Minister repeals C-51, he should also repeal former PM Harper's policy allowing information to be used that is obtained from torture. It violates everything Canada stands for. Reliable information is not gained from someone under torture. Torture has been used for centuries to get forced confessions and still today that is its function; every regime that allows it is autocratic.

Of course the Prime Minister should also withdraw former PM

Harper's new policy of allowing foreign country officers to carry their guns in Canada.

I also have faith from the many Americans, Canadians, Commonwealth citizens and citizens of Norwegian countries who have reached out to me and offered not only support, but also a helping hand with crowd source campaign editing, and donations to my modest book crowd source campaign.

Summary

There is a significant economic and human cost to the CICA mind-control R & D done in Canada with RCMP assistance. The human cost of the program is staggering to the direct and indirect victims, their families, friends, neighbours, and even the businesses they frequent and their staff.

The taxpayer cost of medical care for those affected, and police investigations of crimes committed by CICA, which are never solved, and lost productivity to all involved is not insignificant.

America's CICA has shown little regard for the health, wealth and safety of the civilians of their closest ally, neither has that ally's own paramilitary, in fact they enabled it. There is no regard for the test subjects themselves, or for the 'collateral damage' to families and communities.

The RCMP has supported CICA with my telephone intercepts throughout, as confirmed with numerous 'bait tests'. The RCMP physically assisted in 2005 Nov JC UC 05 torture interrogation and mind-control training exercise, 2007 Q3 van abduction with forced electroshock, and 2015 May home invasion forced confession.

This is not the Cold War era. These are crimes against humanity. The RCMP should be stripped of all national security and intelligence work. If the Prime Minister or any reader does not understand the systemic problems with the RCMP, and why they need massive reform, they should read Paul Palango's excellent, informed analysis in "Dispersing the Fog: Inside the Secret World of Ottawa and the RCMP". They have always lacked effective oversight. The PM's new global civilian review agency should immediately be implemented for direct supervision of the RCMP.

Security Intelligence agencies of America cannot be caught experimenting on their own citizens. This is why citizens of their closest ally are used as Guinea Pigs with RCMP support.

Since the RCMP is an organ of the Canadian government, the government is complicit in law-biding Canadians selected by the RCMP to have their lives devastated as CICA mind-control, and weapons test experimental subjects. If after a decade a test subject continues to whistle blow, we become the subject of repeated lethal weapons tests until we die.

If we don't die quick enough from fatal weapons tests, the CICA forces us during home invasions to inhale from inhalers unknown substances (carcinogens?) at gunpoint, unknown pills and injections and worse. How long will the Canadian federal government continue to allow Canadians to be used as Guinea Pigs?

This is cold war thinking. That dated security-apparatus pseudo-ethic of utilitarianism goes something like this: "Weapons need to be tested on someone. That's the price of defense. If some get hurt, that's for the greater good." Utilitarianism is a slippery slope. How many is too many to sacrifice? 5, 500, 5000? How many do you say is okay to write off, for the 'greater good'?

The knowledge gained from the CICA mind-control experiments on Canadians is useful only for nefarious, Geneva-convention violating activities: creating non-consensual spies and sex slaves, and creating actors and patsies for manufactured false-flag hate crimes, assassinations, and terror events to manipulate public opinion.

The public is terrorized and deceived into supporting Orwellian suspensions of their civil rights, and the waging of wars overseas to 'get the terrorists'. Is this R & D really in Canada's interest? No, it is a relic of Cold War ideology and it should be stopped, to quote the Prime Minister as to why he has a gender-balanced cabinet, "Because its 2015".

In Canada, on the very day the Conservative caucus was sitting down to work out the implementation of Bill C-51 in 2015, a Michael Zehaf-Bibeau burst into the Canadian Parliament with a rifle after shooting Corporal Nathan Cirillo at a war memorial out front. Zehaf-Bibeau was shot 31 times. The legislators and public were so terrorized that PM Harper easily rushed the rights-suspending Bill C-51 through parliament.

In his 'Jihad' confession video shot on his cell phone five minutes before the shooting, Zehalf-Bibeau could not keep his upper eyelids higher than his pupils, a Scopolamine signature. The RCMP commissioner Bob Paulson announced to the media the drugs Zehalf-Bibeau had been tested for, and it did not include Scopolamine. Paulson was the head of the National Security department in November 2005 when the RCMP assisted my torture-interrogation in JC UC 05.

My Cultural Anthropologist and Sociologist professor father (American by birth) frequently wrote about American and Canadian cultural differences. At his memorial in 2009 another professor recalled that as a Ph.D. student he asked my father to help him understand the relationship between America and Canada.

My father replied, “To understand this relationship you need to study the historical relationship between England and Scotland.” The professor reported that this greatly increased his understanding, and felt it was a profound observation.

For those who forgot this history, I recommend viewing the movie “Braveheart” (1995). Also see “Conspiracy Theory” (1997) featuring torture-interrogation scenes quite close to what I endured. (I do not endorse Mel Gibson’s past off-screen, drunk, intolerant rants.)

My father once said, “Matthew, don’t ever wrap yourself in the Canadian flag and be a patriot of Canada…. They will kill you for it.” July 1, Canada Day I hung a four-foot Canadian flag over my front porch, and I have not taken it down since. It’s a symbolic act of sovereignty, not a war-mongering one.

The primary damage of this human experimentation is the mostly US based, false-flag terror events. A dozen or more innocents, often students, are executed in school or a public place, by a ‘lone wolf terrorist’ whose body is never tested for Scopolamine.

The actor(s) leave a message attributing their act to the bogeyman ideology of the day. The latest was in San Bernadino. Now this has spread to Canada with the Parliament Hill 2014 event, and the unusual stabbings in Toronto in the last half of December 2015.

Those charged with terrorism, hate crimes and random murders must be tested for Scopolamine so we may stop the deception. Since NASA recently developed the aerosol form of Scopolamine, it’s dangerously easy to mind-control anyone using a single spray to the face.

Since I have witnessed a consistent working relationship between the RCMP and CICA in performing MK-ULTRA mind-control, drug, and chemical weapon tests on non-consenting Canadians, there must be an agreement to define this partnership. By definition this activity violates Geneva Conventions. The new Liberal government must cancel that agreement forthwith. The RCMP must be stripped of the National Security Service role again, since its obvious they have crept back into it, and abused their powers horribly.

RCMP and Cognitive Dissonance

Some readers may believe the RCMP is beyond reproach. That was certainly what we were taught in school. To lessen the Cognitive Dissonance here is a small subset of documented RCMP wrongdoings.

1971: RCMP Theft of dynamite. In April a team of RCMP officers broke into Richelieu Explosives, and stole dynamite. A year later, officers hid four cases of dynamite in Mont Saint-Grégoire, in an attempt to link the explosives with the FLQ.[37]

1972: RCMP Burned down a barn. They were concerned separatists might have a meeting with Black Panthers there. A judge would not give them a warrant to bug the place. They burned it down.[38]

1973: RCMP Committed a break-in, and stole the PQ membership list. Operation HAM. They stole and then hid it away secretly for years, then burned it.[39]

1974: RCMP Security Service Corporal Robert Samson was arrested at a hospital after a failed bombing. Sampson claimed he had done worse things than plant bombs.[40]

1978: RCMP Break-ins and bombing. Director of the RCMP criminal operations branch, admitted the RCMP has entered more than 400 premises without warrant since 1970.[41]

1981: Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's Liberal government exposed Operation HAM it in the 1977-1981 McDonald Commission into the RCMP's dirty tricks campaign. This led to the force being stripped of its security service duties and the creation of the civilian Canadian Security Intelligence Service (CSIS).

2002-2007: Torture Scandal: The stories of Ahmad El Maati, Abdullah Almalki and Maher Arar

"On September 26, 2002, during a stopover in New York City en route from a family vacation in Tunisia to Montreal, Maher Arar was detained by the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service, acting upon information supplied by the RCMP. Arar was sent to Syria where he was imprisoned for more than 10 months, tortured and forced to sign a false confession that he had trained in Al Qaeda camps in Afghanistan….

Like Arar, Ahmad El Maati, Abdullah Almalki and Muayyed Nureddin are Canadian Muslim men who were detained and tortured overseas while under investigation by Canadian investigators. They were all detained when they arrived in Syria and taken to the same Syrian detention centre — the Far' Falastin, or Palestine Branch — of the Syrian Military Intelligence. All were tortured. All were interrogated by the same Syrian interrogation team, who accused them all of links to terrorism using information and questions that could only have originated with Canadian agencies."[42]

2006: The RCMP helped throw the 2006 election to the Conservative government as so well written by James Tavers, Toronto Star Columnist in "An Eloquent Plea for Democracy" in 2011[43]. The new government subsequently introduced mandatory prison terms and built many new jails despite Canada's falling crime rate, and later introduced the draconian 'anti-terror' Bill C-51, which effectively turned the RCMP into a secret police and suspended many civil liberties, i.e. The RCMP manipulated the political process for their gain.

2009: "RCMP bombed an oil installation as part of a dirty tricks campaign in their investigation into sabotage in the Alberta's oil patch… Their lawyer produced evidence that the RCMP bombed a well site and that they did it with the full support of the energy company that owned it. The Crown admits the allegations are true." - "RCMP bomb oil site in 'dirty tricks' campaign" - CBC News Canada, 01/30/99[44]

2015: "Monty Robinson Sentence: Disgraced B.C. Mountie Jailed For Perjury"[45] A Polish immigrant Robert Dziekanski was stranded in an airport for ten hours upon arriving in Canada. He was worried and upset. He could not speak English. He died after he was tasered many times by a group of RCMP, because he had a stapler in his hand. Several officers then lied during a Public Inquiry and two-served jail time.

In my case, they used torture on a civilian, and drugs to get a forced terror confession twice, staring in Nov 2005 in JC UC 05 as an Arab Muslim Extremist terrorist complete with a script I was forced to repeat.

In the May, 2015 event the RCMP officer was careful to only enter the house once Mitch had already drugged and tortured me. This CICA officer let the RCMP officer in to a crime scene in progress, and the RCMP officer took advantage to get a forced terror confession as I lay drugged and tortured on my bed. Then an officer threatened me two weeks later based on this torture-confession. This is not democracy.

While these events happened three blocks from the geographical center of Canada’s largest city, this is not the Canada that many Canadians gave their lives for in WW II, and in other wars.

I submit its been proven twice now that the RCMP should not be involved in security service work. First by P.E. Trudeau’s 1977-1981 McDonald Commission into the RCMP's dirty tricks campaign, and second, with this report.

There is an idiom: “Fool me once, shame on you; fool me twice, shame on me.”

We allow foreign intelligence officers to carry their guns in Canada thanks to a new policy by former PM Harper, but our own intelligence officers (CSIS) are not allowed to. Our paramilitary (RCMP) carry guns, but they help foreign forces in Geneva Convention violating human experimentation on Canadians.

Several times I have seen RCMP officers defer to the CICA officer. In the van in Nov 2005, only the JTF2 officer asserted Canada’s interests, never did the RCMP officer; he was more of a gopher boy to the CICA officer.

We need to clean up our own backyard. We cannot blame the USA for entering into an agreement with us during the Cold War. We must focus our efforts on cleaning up our own act regarding the Canadian actors in this Geneva Convention violating human R & D.

I know there are at least three others like me in Toronto through my own investigations, and by extrapolation likely a dozen. A country that turns a blind eye to systemic Geneva Convention violations is not a just society.

If politicians are afraid of the RCMP, then they should do something proactive, use their legislative powers accordingly. We need a special armed intelligence unit made up of cross-trained JTF2 and CSIS agents to take over what security service duties the RCMP currently have, to dovetail into CSIS and JTF2.

If we do not stop MK-ULTRA R & D, we Canadians will continue to be partly responsible for the deployment of torture-trauma, Scopolamine mind-control slaves in false-flag operations, mostly in the USA. Thousands more innocents will die, all the for sake of terrorizing the population with ‘lone wolf gunman’ ideological terror events to achieve nefarious public opinion manipulation.

The best and brightest peaceful leaders in politics and art will continue to be ‘plausibly deniably’ assassinated by dark forces. John F. Kennedy and John Lennon’s official killers were nothing more than MK-ULTRA patsies with no motivation to kill. Both targets were anti-war, disregarded secret societies, had enormous positive sway of public opinion and were seen as threats to the uber powerful. Martin Luther King Jr., Malcolm X, the list goes on.

Even when we halt MK-ULTRA R & D in Canada we still require a regulation that all those charged with hate crimes, assassinations, and terror offences are tested for Scopolamine. That needs to be our litmus test for the authenticity of crimes designed to frighten the public. Journalists should be asking the police on camera whether Scopolamine has been tested for when reporting on these crimes.

If we fail, our democracies will continue to crumble through deception and manipulation. Those that profit from war will continue to consolidate power. We will slide into a single global government ruled by the uber powerful enslaving all.

"Our lives are summarized on our gravestones with two dates with a dash in the middle. Make the most of the dash." - unknown

APPENDIX I - Signs of a Sleeper

These are all based on my own experience as a non-consensual MK-ULTRA Monarch mind-control, R & D test subject. I have been high-dosed on Scopolamine at least four times.

1. High-dosage Scopolamine is required to remove free will in the subject. The signs of Scopolamine impairment are:
    - a. Dilated pupils
    - b. The victim will want water as they will have a very dry mouth
    - c. Droopy eyelids: The upper eyelid rests lower on the eye than normal, almost obscuring the top part of the pupil
    - d. Very foul bad breath: Scopolamine clearing in the body causes foul gases to be released by the lungs, ergo the Indigenous name for Scopolamine from Columbian First Peoples "Devil's Breath"
    - e. Heavy legs: loss of strength in the legs requiring extra will power just to stand up right, walk, and run
    - f. Heavy head: The subject may have trouble keeping their head held up straight, e.g. they might be slightly "bobbing" their head while seated
    - g. Loss of willpower: subject will do virtually whatever they are told with no resistance, including acts of violence especially when combined with torture-trauma dissociation and hypnosis
    - h. Post-event amnesia: Scopolamine intoxication in itself causes amnesia for 3 to 5 days following the time period the person was intoxicated (will be at least several hours.) Usually a subject is torture-trauma dissociated concurrently, which in itself causes amnesia from months to many years, and even decades
2. The Scopolamine intoxication is combined with torture-trauma to cause dissociation, and finally the subject is put in a hypnotic trance. Signs of a hypnotic trance:
    - a. 'Clear Eyes' is the intelligence community code for an active sleeper. The subject's eyes are vacant, and staring blankly
    - b. There are abrupt changes in behaviour when previously programmed triggers (through hypnosis) are present. If changes include personality change, even voice change, this is known as an 'alter'. Triggers can include hearing a person's name, or a sentence spoken, and even non-verbal including hearing a particular air-horn sounded a specific number of times, being shown a fabric of a certain colour or pattern, and even light shone in their eyes of a rare color signature. For triggers to invoke dangerous behaviour, two of the above are layered to prevent accidental triggering. The audible triggers can even be effectively delivered by a phone call. This last point is just a repeat of declassified MK-ULTRA CIA documents, see http://wanttoknow.info ‘mind control’ topic

PROLOGUE

KNOCK, KNOCK

It was inevitable that this book would be written.

There is, among conspiracy afficionadoes, a kind of brotherhood. (I use the gender-specific term "brotherhood" deliberately.) It is a brotherhood buried alive. What does that mean?

Imagine a person buried alive. Imagine yourself. You are equal parts alive and dead. You are in your own tomb; you feel the sensations of mortality with a keenness you never did before. Death approaches. Or maybe it has already arrived and you just don't know it yet. Edgar Allen Poe wrote about it.

More importantly, such premature burial is an essential part of the Masonic initiation ceremony of the third degree. To be ritually and symbolically slain, buried, and raised again is a feature of many initiatory programs around the world, from Siberian shamanism to quaint nineteenth century English secret societies. It is a liminal event: you are on the threshold of living and dying, and in that sacred spot you can see in both directions.

Conspiracy theorists are kind of like that. They have one foot in the world of mainstream history and culture, what Robert Anton Wilson used to call "consensus reality." That's the world where most of us live. We are all products of that world, and of the ideas and worldview it represents. We are trained in this world virtually from birth: school, church, government, media all conspire to present an image—a picture—of reality that will result in the development of perfect citizens in an easily-managed society. There is a social contract: we contribute to this society with the expectation that we will receive goods and services in return. We obey the laws that are created by other people, believing that our best interests are being addressed thereby. We fight in wars declared by our governments in order to preserve our society: this carefully-structured, albeit artificial, society.

And all is right with the world.

But conspiracy theorists have their other foot … well, somewhere else. Not everyone is asleep to the darker mechanisms of reality. In fact, everyone becomes aware of them at some point in their lives. Everyone questions. The very nature of reality itself is at times so hostile to human life that human institutions must be challenged for their inadequate protection of their constituents. Conspiracy theorists seize on this inadequacy as evidence of the tenuousness of consensus reality. There are other forces at work, forces that are unacknowledged by the state, the church, the media because to admit their existence is to admit failure. Thus, when things go wrong terrorists are blamed, or communists, or witches. This serves to rally the citizens around the government once again, instead of stopping to insist that explanations be given, that evidence is properly analyzed, that the guilty are apprehended and punished. And we once more go to war, against … someone, somewhere.

Paranoia becomes institutionalized. It is appropriated by the government as its own prerogative. The state determines the nature and quality of the paranoia: it creates intelligence agencies whose sole purpose is to give a form to paranoia, to enshrine paranoia as one of the necessary qualities of an observant and caring state. To prove that paranoia is an acceptable characterisic of the paternalistic regime.

The citizens are not allowed to become paranoid unless it is at government direction and sanction. Individual cases of paranoia are frowned upon. The state tells us that if we are not paranoid the way it is paranoid—and about the same things—it's because we don't have all the facts: about terrorism, fundamentalism, communism, foreign countries, weapons of mass destruction, sleeper cells. The state has all the facts: classified documents, wire-tap transcripts, intelligence feeds, high-altitude reconnaissance images, none of which the citizen is permitted to see.

It does not realize that the logical conclusion of all this paranoia is suspicion of the state apparatus itself.

What the conspiracy theorist often fails to realize, however, is that those working for the state are often just as clueless as the average citizen when it comes to the origin and function of the forces at work to subvert it. The strength of a conspiracy, after all, rests in the limited number of persons who are aware of its existence and parameters. No one has the entire picture. Each member of the state apparatus only has possession of a single piece of an enormous jigsaw puzzle. Putting together all these disparate pieces—particularly when one does not have the original picture to work from—is a soul-destroying enterprise that consumes decades of work and years of one's life. This is especially true when the state has in its arsenal of lies the techniques of disinformation and misdirection, of false testimony and planted documents.

Anyone who works with this material eventually comes to that realization. But the motivation to keep digging is still alive; the urge to uncover one more piece of the puzzle, one more document, is perhaps a central characteristic not only of the conspiracy theorist but of human nature itself. The more intelligent of the theorists soon come to realize that Hansel and Gretel have left breadcrumbs everywhere, in no discernible pattern. Thus, the inclination among some of the best to stop looking for the children and start looking for the Witch.

The deeper one delves into the conspiracy literature, the more one is struck by the tendency of some theorists to look beyond the documents and the tangible evidence of government malfeasance or political conspiracy to more transcendental sources of power. One begins with the government agents, the spies, the politicians, the military and soon gravitates towards the secret societies: the Freemasons and the Illuminati (among so many others). This involves studying their texts, their social structures, their stated goals, their secret conclaves, their antinomian beliefs and practices.

One comes face to face with the Occult.

A strange journey, indeed, from a presidential assassination to an interview with the Devil.

Yet, once one has made the leap from BU-Files and documents stamped LIMDIS and NOFORN to grimoires and magical diaries, it all seems to hang together… for awhile. New sources of evidence become available. New testimony appears. Weird cults are seen linked to secret government machinations. George Washington was a Freemason. So was Simon Bolivar. And Gerald Ford. What does it mean?

It would take a 21st century Kabbalist to figure it out. Someone with knowledge of codes and decoding. Someone like the author of this book, S.K. Bain. Someone who was observant enough to notice the details most of us ignore, since we have not been trained that way. Since we have not done the reading.

It needs someone who is as versed in Kabbalah as in conspiracy, in gematria as in government. It requires a new science, a new art, a new approach to the old material. Furthermore, it requires a sense that conspiracy may be transcendental, may have its origins in the unconscious mind of the state. The numerology alone is significant: someone, somewhere is pulling these particular quantum strings. The numbers are consistent, insistent. They are either the result of a conscious and deliberate series of acts by agents so powerful and so unknown that a belief in an ultimate Secret Society is our only option, or they are evidence of the workings of an even Darker Force … and no one is in charge.

This is where S.K. Bain comes in. He notices things. He sees patterns in the dates, names, places, and documents that most of us either ignore or can't see on our best days. I have stayed away from 9/11 conspiracy theorizing since there are already a lot of people doing that and I have nothing of value to add to the conversation. That is not true of S.K. Bain. What the author adds to the ongoing dialogue about 9/11 transcends the hideous events of that day and extends into other times, other spaces. This is new material, a new approach to the conspiracies and cover-ups that surround the day that—in the view of the mainstream media—"changed everything" (although many of us know better, know that nothing had changed, know that it was the twentieth century taken to its logical conclusion).

What is more, Bain develops his thesis with a rare sense of humor and style. This is not merely another angry diatribe about government complicity and corruption. This is not the work of a man who sees reptiles in human form, or Jewish-Masonic plots hatched in Czech cemeteries. Bain doesn't scream at you. He doesn't try to shout you down. Instead, his prose is written with a sense of astonished discovery that invites us in, to share in his startled and startling conclusions.

Bain may very well be the 21st century Kabbalist we have been waiting for, and this—The Most Dangerous Book in the World—may prove to be his Sepher Yetzirah, his Zohar, his Liber 777.

As someone who writes about the link between magic and politics, between ritual and conspiracy, I can recommend this text for its revolutionary approach to the central political event of our recent history. Many times during reading I found myself thinking of other connections, other links to earlier events, all suggested by Bain's Kabbalah. Whether or not you believe in a conspiracy surrounding 9/11 is not really important. The nature of Bain's argument is such that you will find your mind expanded by the new possibilities, the arcane potentialities lurking behind political and historical events. By choosing to see 9/11 as a ritual on a massive scale, we paradoxically may better be able to understand it, to accommodate it's message on a psychological—even spiritual—level as we approach the end of 2012 and the birth of a new aeon.

You may be mystified by Bain's work. You may be frustrated, exalted, annoyed, confused, even relieved … but you will not be bored. Read it alongside the newspaper, the blog, and the television news and see how much the reality around you begins to shift and change in ways you would never have foreseen, all because Bain has challenged you to look at the details, to notice the numbers, to see beyond the official statements and the spin, to the unseen patterns behind the great Dramaturgy of our times.

Good luck.

U.S. ATTACKED

HIJACKED JETS DESTROY TWIN TOWERS AND HIT PENTAGON IN DAY OF TERROR

A CREEPING HORROR

Buildings Burn and Fall as Onlookers Search for Elusive Safety

By N. R. KLEINFIELD

It kept getting worse.

The horror arrived in episodic bursts of chilling disbelief, signified first by trembling floors, sharp eruptions, cracked windows. There was the actual unfathomable realization of a gaping, flaming hole in first one of the tall towers, and then the same thing all over again in its twin. There was the merciless sight of bodies helplessly tumbling out, some of them in flames.

Finally, the mighty towers themselves were reduced to nothing. Dense plumes of smoke raced through the downtown avenues, coursing between the buildings, shaped like tornadoes on their sides.

Every sound was cause for alarm. A plane appeared overhead. Was another one coming? No, it was a fighter jet. But was it friend or enemy? People scrambled for their lives, but they didn't know where to go. Should they go north, south, east, west? Stay outside, go indoors? People hid beneath cars and each other. Some contemplated jumping into the river.

For those trying to flee the very epicenter of the collapsing World Trade Center towers, the most horrid thought of all finally dawned on them: nowhere was safe.

For several panic-stricken hours yesterday morning, people in Lower Manhattan witnessed the unexpressible, the incomprehensible, the unthinkable. "I don't know what the gates of hell look like, but it's got to be like this," said John Maloney, a security director for an Internet firm in the trade center. "I'm a combat veteran, Vietnam, and I never saw anything like this."

The first warnings were small ones. Blocks away, Jim Farmer, a film composer, was having breakfast at a small restaurant on West Broadway. He heard the sound of a jet. An odd sound — too loud, it seemed, to be

A Somber Bush Says Terrorism Cannot Prevail

By ELISABETH BUMILLER
with DAVID E. SANGER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 — President Bush vowed tonight to retaliate against those responsible for today's attacks on New York and Washington, declaring that he would "make no distinction between the terrorists who committed these acts and those who harbor them."

"These acts of mass murder were intended to frighten our nation into chaos and retreat, but they have failed," the president said in his first speech to the nation from the Oval Office. "Our country is strong. Terrorist acts can shake the foundation of our biggest buildings, but they cannot touch the foundation of America."

His speech came after a day of trauma that seems destined to define his presidency. Seeking to at once calm the nation and declare his determination to exact retribution, he told a country numbed by repeated scenes of carnage that "these acts shattered steel, but they cannot dent the steel of American resolve."

Mr. Bush spoke only hours after returning from a zigzag course across the country, as his Secret Service and military security teams moved him from Florida, where he woke up this morning expecting to press for his education bill, to command posts in Louisiana and Nebraska before it was determined the attacks had probably ended and he could safely return to the capital.

It was a sign of the catastrophic

AMERICAN TARGETS A ball of fire exploded outward after the second of two jetliners slammed into the World Trade Center; less than two hours later, both of the 110-story towers were gone. Hijackers crashed a third airliner into the Pentagon, setting off a huge explosion and fire.

President Vows to Exact Punishment for 'Evil'

By SERGE SCHMEMANN

Hijackers rammed jetliners into each of New York's World Trade Center towers yesterday, toppling both in a hellish storm of ash, glass, smoke and leaping victims, while a third jetliner crashed into the Pentagon in Virginia. There was no official count, but President Bush said thousands had perished, and in the immediate aftermath the calamity was already being ranked the worst and most audacious terror attack in American history.

The attacks seemed carefully coordinated. The hijacked planes were all en route to California, and therefore gorged with fuel, and their departures were spaced within an hour and 40 minutes. The first, American Airlines Flight 11, a Boeing 767 out of Boston for Los Angeles, crashed into the north tower at 8:48 a.m. Eighteen minutes later, United Airlines Flight 175, also headed from Boston to Los Angeles, plowed into the south tower.

Then an American Airlines Boeing 757, Flight 77, left Washington's Dulles International Airport bound for Los Angeles, but instead hit the western part of the Pentagon, the military headquarters where 24,000 people work, at 9:40 a.m. Finally, United Airlines Flight 93, a Boeing 757 flying from Newark to San Francisco, crashed near Pittsburgh, raising the possibility that its hijackers had failed in whatever their mission was.

SECOND PLANE United Airlines Flight 175 nearing the trade center's south tower.

There were indications that the hijackers on at least two of the planes were armed with knives. Attorney General John Ashcroft told reporters in the evening that the suspects on Flight 11 were armed that way. And Barbara Olson, a television commentator who was traveling on American Flight 77, managed to reach her husband, Solicitor General Theodore Olson, by cell phone and to tell him that the hijackers were armed with knives and a box cutter.

In all, 266 people perished in the four planes and several score more were known dead elsewhere. Numerous firefighters, police officers and other rescue workers who responded to the initial disaster in Lower Manhattan were killed or injured when the buildings collapsed. Hundreds were treated for cuts, broken bones, burns and smoke inhalation.

But the real carnage was concealed for now by the twisted, smoking, ash-choked carcasses of the twin towers, in which thousands of people used to work on a weekday. The collapse of the towers caused another World Trade Center building to fall 7 hours later, and several

Awaiting the Aftershocks

Washington and Nation Plunge Into Fight With Enemy Hard to Identify and Punish

By R. W. APPLE Jr.

News Analysis

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 — Today's devastating and astonishingly well-coordinated attacks on the World Trade Center towers in New York and on the Pentagon outside of Washington plunged the nation into a warlike struggle against an enemy that will be hard to identify with certainty and hard to punish with precision.

The whole nation — to a degree the whole world — shook as hijacked airliners plunged into buildings that symbolize the financial and military might of the United States. The sense of security and self-confidence that Americans take as their birthright suffered a grievous blow, from which recovery will be slow. The aftershocks will be nearly as bad, as hundreds and possibly thousands of people discover that friends or relatives died awful, fiery deaths.

Scenes of chaos and destruction evocative of the nightmare world of Hieronymus Bosch, with smoke and debris blotting out the sun, were carried by television into homes and workplaces across the nation. Echoing Franklin D. Roosevelt's description of the attack on Pearl Harbor as an event "which will live in infamy," Gov. George E. Pataki of New York, a Republican, spoke of "an incredible outrage" and Senator Charles E. Schumer of New York, a Democrat, spoke of "a dastardly attack."

But mere words were inadequate vessels to contain the sense of shock and horror that people felt.

As Washington struggled to regain a sense of equilibrium, with warplanes and heavily armed helicopters crossing overhead, past and present national security officials earnestly debated the possibility of a Congressional declaration of war — but against precisely whom, and in what exact circumstances? Warships were maneuvering to protect New York and Washington. The North American Air Defense Command, which had seemed to many a relic of the cold war, adopted a pos-

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This book represents a collaborative effort with dozens of contributors whom I've never met or corresponded with: countless bloggers and independent researchers who, like most of those captivated by the attacks of September 11, 2001, could only grope blindly in the dark and feel a small part of the humongous beast, not realizing its true dimensions—or its true nature.

I am no different—I simply managed to flail around in the darkness longer than most and encounter more, discover more... and begin piecing the together a fuller picture. This is not my book, it belongs to everyone who knows that 9/11 was a dark charade: I am merely the aggregator and interpreter, the storyteller.

Where I have failed to give proper attribution, acknowledgement or credit, know that it was unintentional. Any shortcomings, mistakes, errors, omissions or the like are my responsibility.

I would be remiss not to acknowledge the contributions of two researchers-authors in particular:

William Ramsey, author of Prophet of Evil: Aleister Crowley, 9/11 and the New World Order, whose work provided valuable insights; and Michael Hoffman, author of Secret Societies and Psychological Warfare, whose prescient book helped make sense of the monstrosity that is 9/11.

Thanks to Kris Millegan at TrineDay for taking on this project—for encouraging me to write it, for key editorial suggestions and insights—and for his own writings and other publishing ventures that contributed to the development of this book.

Thanks also to Bobby King for his support and encouragement, and for understanding that just because you're paranoid doesn't mean they're not out to get you. (Well, what would you think if your mother's condominium burned to the ground the very morning you filled out a publishing contract for a book such as this?)

Lastly, I would like to express my deepest regrets to Nermal, the "forever kitten," who didn't survive the writing process due to a massive failure of patience on the part of the author late one night. PETA notice: animals were harmed during the production of this work.

It is my sincerest hope that this book will help bring the true perpetrators of 9/11 to justice, but after researching and writing this material I no longer believe that doing so is a viable possibility. The best we can hope for is to expose and to resist—and even this may play into the hands of those responsible for the attacks.

Abandon all hope, ye who enter here. (Not really, I just wanted to use that line.)

> …the terror state Pollyanna class—blushing moderate, fatuous conservative, meretricious liberal and the theory-fatted poseur who casually squawks 'maybe they let it happen'—cower in their mutually-supporting antagonisms, sissy-slapping each other from their prescribed niches in a cultural circle-jerk necessarily excluding forensic analysis of 9/11. For that would confront each with something they simply don't wish to imagine, an agency whose cold-bloodedness they are not intellectually, emotionally nor spiritually equipped to confront. Thus do our wan Narcissuses parade as skeptics, assuring the fallible conspiracies just don't happen, that they can't be covered up, that people aren't that organized and the world is 'more complicated,' that those who think 'that way' are foolish really, a bit tardy mentally or not up to snuff…often lonely, perhaps deranged, even dangerous sometimes.[1]

Terrorists Hijack 4 Airliners, Destroy World Trade Center, Hit Pentagon; Hundreds Dead

Bodies Pulled From Pentagon; Troops Patrol District Streets

By Steve Twomey and Arthur Santana
Washington Post Staff Writers

Rescuers fought through tons of debris in quest of victims at the Pentagon last night after terrorists seized an airliner outbound from Dulles International Airport and plunged it into the heart of American military power, killing an estimated several hundred people.

Hampered by fires that still raged as evening fell, emergency teams had carried out only six bodies, but they were preparing to remove many more, and rescuers were using dogs and listening devices to search for people they believed might be trapped alive.

Precise figures were hard to come by because portions of the building were under construction, and many of the military and civilian personnel had been temporarily relocated, according to Arlington Fire Chief Edward P. Plaugher.

Coming less than an hour after two hijacked passenger jets slammed into the twin towers of New York's World Trade Center, the assault on the Pentagon began an unprecedented day of office and school closings, panicked phone calls, wild rumor and extraordinary security in the Washington area.

Last night, downtown streets were largely deserted as D.C. National Guard units joined police in patrolling the city. D.C. Mayor Anthony A. Williams (D), Maryland Gov. Parris N. Glendening (D) and Virginia Gov. James S. Gilmore III (R) declared states of emergency that broadened their power to govern without legislative authority.

Most of the region's school systems will be closed today, although President Bush announced that the federal government would reopen, after having shut down within an hour of yesterday's Pentagon attack.

At a late-evening news conference, D.C. Police Chief Charles H. Ramsey said that the attacks here and in New York would forever change security operations in Washington and that there was no longer such a thing as "business as usual" here.

Originally headed for Los Angeles, the American Airlines Boeing 757—carrying 64 people and loaded with 30,000 pounds of fuel for the long flight to the West Coast—

Bush Promises Retribution; Military Put on Highest Alert

By Michael Grunwald
Washington Post Staff Writer

Terrorists unleashed an astonishing air assault on America's military and financial power centers yesterday morning, hijacking four commercial jets and then crashing them into the World Trade Center in New York, the Pentagon and the Pennsylvania countryside.

There were no reliable estimates last night of how many people were killed in the most devastating terrorist operation in American history. The number was certainly in the hundreds and could be in the thousands.

It was the most dramatic attack on American soil since Pearl Harbor, and it created indelible scenes of carnage and chaos. The commandeered jets obliterated the World Trade Center's twin 110-story towers from their familiar perch above Manhattan's skyline and ripped a blazing swath through the Defense Department's imposing five-sided fortress, grounding the domestic air traffic system for the first time and plunging the entire nation into an unparalleled state of anxiety.

U.S. military forces at home and abroad were placed on their highest state of alert, and a loose network of Navy warships was deployed along both coasts for air defense.

The terrorists hijacked four California-bound planes from three airports on the Eastern Seaboard; the airliners were loaded with the maximum amount of fuel, suggesting a well-financed, well-coordinated plot. First, two planes slammed into the World Trade Center. Then an American Airlines plane out of Dulles International Airport ripped through the newly renovated walls of the Pentagon, perhaps the world's most secure office building. A fourth jet crashed 80 miles southeast of Pittsburgh, shortly after it was hijacked and turned in the direction of Washington.

None of the 266 people aboard the four planes survived. There were even more horrific but still untallied casualties in the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, which together provided office space for more than 70,000 people. At just one of the firms with offices in the World Trade Center, the Marsh & McLennan insurance bro-

On Flight 77: 'Our Plane Is Being Hijacked'

By Marc Fisher and Don Phillips

There was not even the grace of instant death. Instead, there was time to call from the sky over Virginia, fingers punching cell phones, terrified passengers talking to loved ones for one final time.

Herded to the back of the plane by hijackers armed with knives and box-cutters, the passengers and crew members of American Airlines Flight 77—including the wife of Solicitor General Theodore Olson, a Senate staffer, three D.C. schoolchildren and three teachers on an educational field trip and a University Park family of four headed to Australia for a two-month adventure—were ordered to call relatives to say they were about to die.

About an hour after takeoff from Dulles International Airport yesterday morning, Flight 77, a Boeing 757 headed for Los Angeles with 64 people aboard, became a massive missile aimed at the White House. The target would change suddenly, but the symbolism was equally devastating.

By about 9:40 a.m., when the diving plane carved out a massive chunk of the Pentagon, its passengers had experienced unspeakable terror, hundreds died, and the nation's greatest symbol of security lay shattered, thick plumes of smoke camouflaging a gaping hole in its heart.

Barbara K. Olson, the former federal prosecutor who became a prominent TV commentator during the impeachment of President Bill Clinton, called her husband twice in the final minutes. Her last words to him were, "What do I tell

U.S. Intelligence Points To Bin Laden Network

By Dan Eggen and Vernon Loeb
Washington Post Staff Writers

The U.S. government has strong evidence from multiple sources that the suicidal terrorists who carried out yesterday's catastrophic attacks in New York and Washington were connected to Saudi fugitive Osama bin Laden, who previously was linked to the 1993 bombing of the World Trade Center, senior officials said.

One senior official said the possibility that bin Laden is behind the deadly assaults is in "the high 90s," while another U.S. official said investigators gathered evidence "strongly suggesting" that bin Laden's organization, al Qaeda, was involved.

The evidence pointing to bin Laden was gathered following the attacks in a joint effort by the CIA and the FBI, with information from domestic and overseas sources, a senior official said.

"It is more than just the analytical surmise that it would take an organization with incredible command-and-control capability, which bin Laden's has, to stage an attack like this," one U.S. official said. "There is other information that has been obtained after the attack against the World Trade Center pointing in the direction of bin Laden."

Unprecedented in scope and sophistication, the coordinated assault on the world's financial and political capitals caught the United States completely off guard—despite a massive intelligence and law enforcement network devoted to detecting and thwarting such attacks. With efforts focused largely on guarding against bomb threats to overseas targets, U.S. authorities conceded they were ill-prepared for hijacked jetliners purposely crashed on American soil.

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch (R-Utah), a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said he was told in a briefing that electronic intercepts yesterday showed "representatives affiliated with Osama bin Laden over the airwaves reporting that

'I Saw Bodies Falling Out—Oh, God, Jumping, Falling'

By Barton Gellman
Washington Post Staff Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—Valerie Johnson stared, transfixed, at the inferno a thousand yards to her south and west. Tears streamed furrows through a film of ash on her face. Her mind tried to grasp what her eyes beheld: a blazing gash across the tower of wealth that symbolized New York for her all her life. The fire marched downward, floor by floor, windows bursting out ahead of the flames.

Then Johnson screamed a guttural, wordless wail. A sound like nothing she ever heard—low as thunder, but louder and longer—pressed in on her chest for ten seconds or more, resounding through Centre Street at Foley Square. The northern tower, the taller of the two, was gone. It was 10:29 a.m., an hour and three quarters after the first of two jetliners ripped through New York's twin emblems of global prestige.

"Oh God, oh God, my niece works in that building," Johnson breathed. "Oh God."

Where we stood there now came a rolling cloud—smoke and ash, ten stories tall, building speed as they reached the canyons of Manhattan's southern tip. Survivors streamed, choked and gagging, behind the cloud. Among them, stumbling blindly toward the fountain at Foley Square, were Elizabeth Belleau and Melissa Morales, strangers grasping hands with all their might as they ran. Belleau plunged her head into the cooling waters and retched, coughing out ash and phlegm. The fountain enclosed a sculpture: "Triumph of the Human Spirit."

Belleau had been running for nearly two hours. Her morning commute on the BM5 bus had stalled,

DAZED AND CONFUSED

> "There are so many gaping holes in the official accounts of 9/11 that no plausible coherent narrative remains, and until now we have been staggering forward as if the truth about these traumatic events no longer mattered."
> —Richard Falk, human rights lawyer

A MAZE OF CONSPIRACY THEORIES

There are so many conspiracy theories surrounding 9/11 that it's impossible to keep track of them all, much less sort through and make any real sense of them. Which ones have possible merit? Which ones sound plausible, but have in fact been effectively debunked?

From the patently false statement that "nobody imagined that terrorists would use planes as weapons," to suspicious insider trading in the weeks and days leading up to 9/11; from the inordinate number of military drills taking place on 9/11 (and a much-delayed response from the Air Force), to the unheeded warnings from multiple nations regarding suspiciously high levels of terrorist activity leading up to the event; from Bush family members in key positions in corporations responsible for providing security to the World Trade Center and Dulles Airport, to documented instances of the FBI failing to follow up on field agents' warnings—there are in fact so many suspicious circumstances, unexplained anomalies, misleading statements (official and otherwise), and outright fabrications surrounding 9/11 (the detailed chronicling of which is far beyond the scope of this work) that it is easy to understand why a veritable 9/11-Conspiracy-Theory cottage industry has developed over the last ten-plus years.

"SET UP TO FAIL"

Millions of Americans—and concerned citizens around the globe—have serious questions about the events of 9/11, and why shouldn't they, when even the individuals in charge of the National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States, a.k.a. the 9/11 Commission, have no confidence in the process or its outcome, The 9/11 Commission Report.

WITHOUT PRECEDENT
THE INSIDE STORY OF
THE 9/11 COMMISSION
THOMAS H. KEAN
AND LEE H. HAMILTON
CO-CHAIRS OF THE 9/11 COMMISSION

Thomas Kean, former Republican Governor of New Jersey, was the Commission Chairman, and Lee H. Hamilton, former Democratic U.S. Representative from the 9th District of Indiana, was its Vice-Chairman.

Months after the commission issued its report and ceased functioning, Chairman Kean and other commissioners toured the country to draw attention to their recommendations, claiming that some of their findings and suggestions were being ignored. Co-chairs Kean and Hamilton subsequently co-authored a book about the constraints they faced as commissioners, entitled Without Precedent: The Inside Story of the 9/11 Commission.

Released in 2006, the book chronicles their work, and in it, they charge that the 9/11 Commission was "set up to fail," writing that the commission became so frustrated with repeated misstatements by Pentagon and Federal Aviation Administration officials during the course of the investigation that it considered a separate investigation into possible obstruction of justice by these officials.

John Farmer, Jr., senior counsel to the Commission, stated that the Commission "discovered that...what government and military officials had told Congress, the Commission, the media, and the public about who knew what when—was almost entirely, and inexplicably, untrue." Farmer continues: "At some level of the government, at some point in time… there was a decision not to tell the truth about what happened.... The (NORAD) tapes told a radically different story from what had been told to us and the public." Commission head Kean concurred: "We to this day don't know why NORAD told us what they told us, it was just so far from the truth."[1]

More Questions Than Answers

Former high-level officials have made serious allegations concerning the involvement of elements within U.S. intelligence agencies.

Richard Clarke, who was the White House counter-terrorism czar at the time of the attacks, has accused the CIA of deliberately suppressing information before 9/11, information that might have prevented the attacks. Clarke claimed: "There was a high-level decision in the CIA ordering people not to share information." And who made this decision? "I would think it would have been made by the director (George Tenet)."[2]

Similar accusations have been leveled at federal law enforcement. According to various sources, no fewer than 14 countries attempted to warn the U.S. about the impending attacks, to no avail. Then there's Robert Wright, the top bin Laden financial tracker at the FBI's Chicago office, who through tears of frustration and anger told a National Press Club audience, "The FBI allowed 9/11 to happen." Come again? "FBI management intentionally and repeatedly thwarted and obstructed my investigations into Middle Eastern terrorist financing."[3]

And what could explain the lack of an effective response by the military, the Air Force, in particular, on 9/11? According to Webster Griffin Tarpley, the morning of September 11 saw "the greatest density of drills in US military history." With names like 'Vigilant Guardian', there were reportedly up to 46 military exercises taking place—some involving scenarios uncannily similar to the actual events that would unfold that day (a happenstance that would be repeated in the London 7/7 bombings)—which diverted resources, manpower and attention away from the real threats and resulted in understandably considerable levels of confusion as the actual attacks unfolded.[4]

A range of foreign officials have also questioned the official government version of the events of 9/11.

Andreas von Bülow, a Social Democratic Party member of the German parliament from 1969 to 1994, was on the parliamentary committee on intelligence services, a group that has access to classified information. Von Bülow was also a member of the Schalck-Golodkowski investigation committee which investigates white-collar crime. He has estimated that inside trader profits surrounding 9/11 totaled approximately $15 billion. Von Bülow told The Daily Telegraph "If what I say is right, the whole US government should end up behind bars." Further, he said, "They have hidden behind a veil of secrecy and destroyed the evidence…they invented the story of 19 Muslims working within Osama bin Laden's al Qaeda in order to hide the truth of their own covert operation." He also said, "I'm convinced that the US apparatus must have played a role and my theory is backed up by the [Washington] government's refusal to present any proof whatsoever of what happened."[5]

With domestic intelligence, defense, and law enforcement agencies like these, who the hell needs foreign enemies? Well, one could rightly point out that these agencies do—and one might also point to volumes of evidence that they go to great lengths to ensure the existence of aggressive, well-motivated and sufficiently-funded adversaries…all the better to justify their enormous budgets and scare the pants off the civilian population.

Is it even possible to determine if there were indeed conspirators within our own government, and, if so, their identities? Repeated calls for a new official investigation have been ignored—not that anyone should expect to have any more confidence in the results of a new investigation than the original one. Is there, then, a path on which to proceed, an explanatory framework that can help us make sense of all this?

Psych Warfare

What if the ongoing confusion surrounding 9/11, and the persistent lack of clarity ten years on, is not the residual result of the "fog of war," but rather compelling evidence of something altogether different—psychological warfare.

The U.S. Department of Defense defines psychological warfare as "the planned use of propaganda and other psychological actions having the primary purpose of influencing the opinions, emotions, attitudes, and behavior of hostile foreign groups in such a way as to support the achievement of national objectives." However, psychological warfare tactics can be employed by any adversary against any opponent or intended target, including a domestic population, for instance. Such as in Orwell's dystopian novel, 1984.

In their article "9/11, Psychological Warfare & the American Narrative," authors Elizabeth Gould and Paul Fitzgerald write that "the state's use of psychological warfare to bend the population to war is as old, if not older than the existence of states themselves." They continue, "But it was perhaps Nazi Reichsmarschall Hermann Goering whose statement while on trial at Nuremberg best summed up the cynical simplicity of the logic:

> Of course people don't want war. But after all, it's the leaders of the country who determine the policy and it's always a simple matter to drag the people along whether it's a democracy, a fascist dictatorship, or a parliament, or a communist dictatorship. Voice or no voice, the people can always be brought to the bidding of the leaders, that is easy. All you have to do is tell them they are being attacked, and denounce the pacifists for lack of patriotism and exposing the country to greater danger.

Gould and Fitzgerald explain that "psychological warfare in the form of propaganda comes in all shapes and sizes as well as shades of black, grey or white." The United States government's coordinated use of psychological warfare on its own citizens "began in earnest during World War II and ever since has grown and expanded into public relations, advertising, cinema, radio and television, electronic video games and now social media. Its pro-war boosterism extends over sports, religion, education, news and entertainment (and of course the military) to form a seamless electronic cocoon-like web."

Gould and Fitzgerald conclude that psych warfare "is employed on an ever growing list of those deemed as enemies of America as well as on a confused and agitated American public—whose corporate news networks frame and manage an increasingly shallow narrative while engaging in a kind of Orwellian Kabuki Theatre of fairness and balance." Could this be an accurate assessment of what is taking place within our country, and, if so, does it help explain what happened on 9/11?

In his book, Psychological Warfare and the New World Order, Servando Gonzalez confirms this suspicion, describing "a long, protracted war against the American people. It is not a conventional war waged with tanks, battleships and planes in conventional battlefields—at least not yet." Gonzalez continues, "It is a secret, insidious type of war whose main battleground is the people's minds. Its main weapons are propaganda and mass brainwashing mostly by using disinformation, deception, and lies in a large scale not used against the people of a nation since the end of Nazi Germany. Though important, those elements are just part of a series of carefully planned and executed long- and short-term psychological warfare operations. In synthesis, it is a psychological war."

A 9/11 Black Op?

9/11 is often referred to by conspiracy theorists as a "false flag" operation, which are covert operations designed to deceive a target population in such a way that it appears as though the action is being carried out by an entity other than the one actually responsible. False flag operations are not limited to war and counter-insurgency operations, but are also used in peace-time.[6]

False flag events are a type of black operation (op, for short), a covert action typically involving activities that are highly clandestine and often outside of standard military protocol or even against the law. Black ops missions often fit into the plausible deniability category, in which there is no claim of responsibility for the action, and/or a false flag operation is used to give the appearance that another actor was responsible. Black ops frequently involve extensive arrangements so as to be able to hide the fact that the black operation ever occurred.

The methods used in black operations are also used in unconventional warfare, in which civilian populations and political parties are targeted directly. Black ops may include such things as assassination, sabotage, extortion, spying on allied countries or one's own citizens, kidnapping, supporting resistance movements, torture, use of fraud to obtain funds, use of child soldiers, human experimentation, trafficking in contraband items, as well as false flag operations.[7]

It certainly seems that false flag or black op, or both, might be an apt description of what occurred on 9/11, and that this could well have been part of a broader domestically-focused psychological warfare campaign. But, if true, this raises more questions than it answers.

SOMETHING WORSE?

What if the many conflicting official accounts surrounding the events of September 11, 2001, are not just bureaucratic incompetence, or mistakes made under intense media pressure to produce information quickly, but part of a deliberately designed campaign in which obfuscation, misinformation and disinformation play key roles in deceiving and manipulating the public?

We are bombarded with such volumes of conflicting information that our ability to meaningfully process it is overwhelmed. Out of necessity, we give up trying to figure it out. Self-preservation kicks in and we shut down before we blow a fuse. There are so many things that just don't add up, that don't make sense and are genuinely suspicious, and the lack of any real answers on so many fronts after such an extended period of time might in itself be viewed as evidence of an active and ongoing conspiracy.

Was 9/11 a black op on the American public by their own government, or rogue elements from within? If so, what were the objectives? To build public support for going to war in Iraq and Afghanistan? Was the U.S. government/military manipulated or "hijacked" by extremely sophisticated and powerful international actors?

What if the above were all true, but this wasn't even the half of it? What if the truth were even more disturbing?

STRONG EVIDENCE OF A 9/11 CONSPIRACY

There is an aspect of 9/11 that has largely gone unexplored, and been completely ignored by the mainstream media. It represents a new avenue of investigation, one that has the potential to produce conclusive evidence of the existence of a conspiracy.

Many conspiracy theories have been effectively debunked, while others have seen experts weigh in on both sides of the issue with equal effectiveness and remain an open question—leaving the general public with a sense of unease but precious few hard answers to allay their fears or confirm their suspicions one way or the other.

What would hard evidence of a 9/11 conspiracy look like? If such exists, it would have explosive potential, the power to ignite a furor among 9/11 Truth groups at home and abroad, and among the public at large. Many people already suspect foul play on 9/11, but they don't feel they have proof conclusive enough to warrant action. Others do believe conclusive proof already exists, and new hard evidence would further radicalize their attitudes.

Conclusive proof of a 9/11 conspiracy could possess the ability to ignite a global firestorm, to generate unimaginable levels of public distrust of government, to incite civil unrest and calls for revolution.

A RECONSTRUCTED OCCULT SCRIPT

An as yet unexplored avenue of investigation does in fact exist.

9/11 wasn't simply a black op; it was that, and more. Highly compelling evidence shows beyond a reasonable doubt that the perpetrators of this massive criminal act not only employed a broad range of sophisticated psychological warfare tactics but, even more disturbingly, incorporated a wide variety of occult symbols and other esoteric elements into multiple levels of the event.

This implies the ability to manipulate, to control, on such an enormous scale that it is beyond what most people are prepared to accept. It so strongly conflicts with our perception of reality that we dare not even contemplate it.

Unfortunately the evidence points to a worst-case scenario. In a real-life CSI-meets-Dan-Brown, the picture that emerges is that of 9/11 as an ultra-powerful mind-control and propaganda weapon—a psychological warfare tool of enormous proportions—infused with techno-sorcery and deep-level occult programming. 9/11 was a global MegaRitual, and the painstakingly reconstructed occult script for the event contained herein convincingly shows this.

We instinctively reject such conclusions, even if they are supported by solid evidence. However, we must have the courage to let the evidence tell the story, because, as the reader will learn, what is at stake is not simply our view of reality. Whether or not our worldview is challenged, or shattered, by the revelations in this material, doesn't change the truth of the matter, which is that the conspiracy that generated 9/11 is real, that it is ongoing—and that September 11, 2001, was just a prelude to what they have planned for 2012/2013.

WHAT TO EXPECT

As serious a topic as this is, however, don't expect a dry, academic discourse in the pages that follow. The script for the 9/11 MegaRitual is dripping with the dark humor of its occult authors, and even if one wanted to, there'd be no way to write about it in a serious fashion. What ensues might be compared to a combination of The DaVinci Code and an episode of South Park; unfortunately, it is neither fiction nor fantasy.

Author's Note: Those unfamiliar with the concept of a "New World Order," the "Illuminati," or Freemasonry may want to refer to Appendix A on page 163.

FOREWORD

"Let us never tolerate outrageous conspiracy theories concerning the attacks of September the 11th; malicious lies that attempt to shift the blame away from the terrorists, themselves, away from the guilty."

—President G.W. Bush, at the United Nations, November 10, 2001

If there were an Emmy Awards category for this type of production, it would have swept the nominations that year, and the Academy would have probably created an Unrivaled Achievement Award to bestow further honors, as well. Best Drama, Best Live Action, Best Visual Effects, Best Original Screenplay, Best Technical Direction, Best Choreography—it would have taken them all, and more (including, if dark humor counts, Outstanding Comedy Special).

It was, in fact, the grandest, most sophisticated production of its nature that the world had ever seen. It was an instant global sensation, generating untold amounts of commentary and analysis, and ten years on, the global public still can't seem to get enough of it. Like Elvis, who has long departed the building but whose work only continues to gain in worldwide popularity and influence, this highly-orchestrated event has lost none of its caché with the passing of time—quite the opposite.

ACT ONE, SCENE ONE:
AMERICAN AIRLINES FLIGHT 11 AND THE NORTH TOWER

September 11, 2001. 8:43 a.m. The Boeing 767 descended rapidly through the cloudless sky, its intended target looming larger and larger in the cockpit window. 1500 feet. 1400. 1300. JFK International Airport was 10 miles away—to the southwest. In any case, the plane was moving far too fast to be coming in for a landing. 1200 feet. 1100.

As the plane sped purposefully at the North Tower, the immense concrete-and-steel manifestations of the archetypal Pillars of Hermes topped the Manhattan skyline as they had for three decades. 1000 feet. 900.

The New York Fire Department personnel conducting a hydrant test five blocks from the World Trade Center couldn't see the plane as it flew in, their view was blocked by surrounding buildings. They turned their heads as they heard the roar of jet engines, way too fast, way too low, and way too close.

800 feet … the firefighters whipped their heads around as they heard, then felt, the enormous explosion. "Holy shit!" they yelled in unison.

The top of the tower swayed a full ten feet to the south immediately following impact. Those on the upper floors felt it rock slowly, slowly, finally stop, and then sway gently back in the opposite direction. Perhaps no more than a fifteen-foot swing altogether, but some found themselves wondering, if ever so briefly, whether the tower would simply keep going and fall over on its side.

Many never felt the swaying. Some people were on the lower floors where the motion was less pronounced. Some had died instantly as the jet-fuel laden craft had exploded through the building in a giant ball of flame, glass, metal and fire; others were too busy trying to escape the flames and smoke to notice.

This symbol of America's financial might again stood motionless, clouds of dark smoke billowing upward, a gaping plane-shaped silhouetted maw in its side. Brilliant orange and yellow flames licked the sides of the building, slithering upward.

A tragedy of historic proportions, but merely the first of that day. An attack, but only the initial wave. The assault on America had just begun … and with this act of terror and destruction, the largest occult ritual in the history of the world commenced.

"A HORRIBLE ACCIDENT"

"There's one terrible pilot," President George W. Bush would later claim was his initial response upon seeing the impact of the first plane. Leaving aside whether or not Bush actually saw the impact when and where he claimed (before entering a Florida classroom), how could anyone viewing footage of the incident have concluded—again, as Bush himself claimed to have said—"It must have been a horrible accident."

Bush, a former Texas Air National Guard pilot, was no Top Gun (actually he went AWOL), but even he, upon viewing footage of a jetliner flying directly into a skyscraper in perfectly clear skies, could not have possibly thought that it was the result of pilot error.

Why would America's Commander-in-Chief potentially lie about his first reaction? Perhaps he had more important things on his mind, things he doesn't want to disclose to us. Perhaps he was using humor to divert attention away from this fact. Perhaps he was mocking us.

ACT ONE, SCENE TWO:
UNITED AIRLINES FLIGHT 175 AND THE SOUTH TOWER

Within minutes every major network was covering the scene live: "The North Tower of the World Trade Center has been hit by a commercial airliner." The world watched transfixed as smoke poured out of the building. Very few notice the second plane until almost immediately before its impact into the South Tower.

A huge pyrotechnic display bloomed onscreen, rolling upwards and morphing into a roiling black cloud as the vaporized fuel was consumed. Screams, gasps… "a second plane has just hit the World Trade Center."

The planes that hit the North and South Towers would be identified as American Airlines Flight 11 and United Airlines Flight 175 respectively. Initially, the flight numbers meant nothing to anyone except those who had family members on those planes, but over time the numerical identifiers would come to represent the lost, and become almost synonymous with 9/11.

There were those, however, to whom these numbers, and the ancient symbols represented by the Twin Towers, meant much, much more…those who were waiting, watching, applauding as the grim script for the day's events unfolded brilliantly and flawlessly. These individuals were not Muslim extremists, not motivated by hatred for the "Great Satan," but paradoxically by a love for Satan himself.

Independent researchers and conspiracy theorists would later question whether or not those flights were even scheduled on 9/11, whether they were in fact the planes that struck the towers, whether they ever took off, whether they were in the air long after supposedly crashing into the towers … a swirling stew of unending theories about fake passenger manifests, remote-controlled drones, fictitious passengers, still-living hijackers, and on and on. But the official story, and the script, was all that really mattered. People in fear will believe what they are told to believe.

CHAPTER TWO

MAN AND HIS SYMBOLS

Symbols are oracular forms—mysterious patterns creating vortices in the substances of the invisible world. They are centers of a mighty force, figures pregnant with an awful power, which, when properly fashioned, loose fiery whirlwinds upon the earth.

—Manly P. Hall, Lectures on Ancient Philosophy

In order to understand the occult script for 9/11, one must possess at least a rudimentary knowledge of occult practice, and learn the basic language and grammar of occult communications and operations. Any good investigator will also seek to get inside the criminal mind, to occupy their psychic space, to see the world through their eyes, to understand how they think and why they act as they do.

THE OCCULT SCRIPT FOR 9/11: A GRIMOIRE

The numbers and symbols involved with the 9/11 MegaRitual, as well as the "order of services," constitute a grand Magickal Operation, as the reconstructed script will show. Indeed, the completed script could be thought of as a contemporary grimoire, or textbook of magic.

> Such books typically include instructions on how to create magical objects like talismans and amulets, how to perform magical spells, charms and divination and also how to summon or invoke supernatural entities such as angels, spirits, and demons. It is most commonly believed that the term grimoire originated from the Old French word grammaire, which had initially been used to refer to all books written in Latin.[1]

"Effectively a grimoire is a book of black magic, and just as grammar describes a fixed set of symbols and the means of their incorporation to properly produce well-formed, meaningful sentences and texts, a grimoire describes a set of magical symbols and how best to properly combine them in order to produce the desired effects. True grimoires contain elaborate rituals,"[2] which, as will be seen, 9/11 most certainly was.

OCCULT PRACTICE

In Chapter 18 of Manly P. Hall's The Secret Teachings of All Ages, entitled "Ceremonial Magic and Sorcery," he states that "Ceremonial magic is the ancient art of invoking and controlling spirits by a scientific application of certain formulæ." 9/11 was the largest-scale occult ritual in history, a globally-televised hideous act of ceremonial magic.

Powerful numbers and symbols played key roles in this global ceremony. Co-founder of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, William Wynn Westcott (1848-1925), writes, "The followers of Pythagoras ... referred every object, planet, man, idea and essence to some number or other, in a way, which to most moderns

Symbol Illiteracy

In an insightful piece entitled "Symbolic Literacy," author Michael Tsarion observes that we suffer from "chronic symbol illiteracy" and are subjected to subliminal and subtextual persuasion that constitutes what he refers to as a psychic dictatorship. This dictatorship, Tsarion says, "involves the deliberate and subversive manipulation and public purveyance of words, images, numbers, colors, rhythms, and symbols which are subsequently directed, via ubiquitous media oracles, toward the limbic areas of the human brain," which, he continues, "produces an elaborate and insidious cryptic language specifically designed to stimulate conflict between fantasy and reality."

Tsarion rightly believes that we will remain subject to mass manipulation until we "become lucidly cognizant and profoundly educated concerning the power of symbols, not only as transcendental portals, or mathematical devices, but as weapons in the hands of plutocratic elites, with occult agendas, laboring to arrest the mental, emotional, and spiritual maturation of the underclasses."

"Subliminal messages," writes Tsarion, "permeate television programs, computer games, magazines, billboards, products, and musical productions," foisted upon us by "technological witch-doctors and cyber-space sorcerers." He continues, "Their particular concoction of spells are cast via techniques that go by names such as Tele-hypnosis, Metacontrast, Hemisync, Synaesthenia, and Embedding. New techniques, yes, but with the same deadly effect as any past voodoo, sorcery, or telepathy."

Tsarion also reminds us of the high stakes:

> Cynics who continue to doubt whether symbols and images have any lasting negative affect on consciousness should remember and study the most recent example of mass control, that of Nazi Germany. The Nazis openly used ritual choreography, ancient symbols and rallying chants, powerful mystical logos and regalia, and so on, to force men into a hive mentality. We now know that Hitler and his cronies were deeply involved with powerful occult societies and were fascinated by ancient mysticism. Hitler sent agents throughout the world, to visit tribes and sects in order to procure occult works and doctrines, and to learn how to employ magical arts.

must seem curious and mystical in the highest degree.… ‘The numerals of Pythagoras,’ says Porphyry, who lived about 300 A.D., ‘were hieroglyphic symbols, by means whereof he explained all ideas concerning the nature of things.’”

Reinforcing the importance of numbers in occult thought, Helena Petrovna Blavatsky (1831-1891), one of the founders of the Theosophical Society, writes in Isis Unveiled, “Numbers are a key to the ancient views of cosmogony—in its broad sense, spiritually as well as physically considered and to the evolution of the present human race; all systems of religious mysticism are based upon numerals. The sacredness of numbers begins with the Great First Cause, the One, and ends only with the naught or zero—symbol of the infinite and boundless universe.”

“Numbers,” echoes Carl Gustav Jung in Man and His Symbols, “are not concepts consciously invented by men for purposes of calculation. They are spontaneous and autonomous products of the unconscious.”

CHAPTER THREE

PLAYBILL

"We stand for things."

—George W. Bush, Davenport, Iowa, 2004

11: "The essence of all that is sinful, harmful and imperfect"

ACT ONE, SCENE ONE INTERPRETED

September 11th, American Airlines Flight 11 … Of the number 11, William Wynn Westcott writes, "This seems to have been the type of a number with an evil reputation among all peoples. The Kabalists contrasted it with the perfection of the Decad, and just as the Sephirotic number is the form of all good things, so eleven is the essence of all that is sinful, harmful and imperfect" [emphasis added]. Thus, we can understand the repeated incorporation of the number 11 into the ritual. As "the essence of all that is sinful, harmful and imperfect," 11 was the number of choice with which to initiate the ritual and declare its true nature.

PILLARS OF HERMES

The 11 could also be seen as symbolizing the Twin Towers, which were themselves powerful modern versions of the ancient Pillars of Hermes.

> These splendorous columns are mentioned by numerous credible sources down through history. The Greek legislator, Solon, saw them and noted that they memorialized the destruction of Atlantis. The pillars were what the historian Herodotus described in a temple he visited around 450 BC: "One pillar was of pure gold," he wrote, "and the other was as of emerald, which glowed at night with great brilliancy." In Iamblichus: On the Mysteries, Thomas Taylor quotes an ancient author who says the Pillars of Hermes dated to before the Great Flood. The mysterious pil> lars are also described by Achilles Tatius, Dio Chrysostom, Laertius, and other Roman and Greek historians."[1]

In addition to being known as the God of Trade and Commerce, the Greek god Hermes was the patron of roads and boundaries, and rectangular pillars of stone or bronze, called herma, were often used as road and boundary markers. The Twin Towers were not only modern concrete-and-steel re-creations of the famed Pillars of Hermes, but also symbolically marked the boundary between this realm and the next—between our world and that of the dead. Associated with the crossing of boundaries, Hermes, also the god of doorways, was a fitting psychopomp, or conductor of the dead to the Underworld, as he was known—a role that was certainly invoked on 9/11.

> Homer and Hesiod portrayed Hermes as the author of skilled or deceptive acts; in the Iliad, he was said to be "excellent in all the tricks." The Homeric hymn to Hermes invokes him as the one "of many shifts (polytropos), blandly cunning, a robber…a thief at the gates." Among the functions commonly linked to him in Greek literature are intrigues and covert reasons, fraud and perjury, wit and ambiguity. Thus he was a patron of speakers, heralds, ambassadors and diplomats, messengers and thieves.
> In mythology, and in the study of folklore and religion, a trickster is a god, goddess, spirit, man, woman, or anthropomorphic animal who plays tricks or otherwise disobeys normal rules and conventional behavior.[2] According to prominent folklorist Yeleazar Meletinsky, Hermes is a deified trickster.[3]

A Gateway

Whether as the god of commerce, the psychopomp, or deified trickster, multiple aspects of Hermes' character were invoked on 9/11 by those conducting the ceremony, and the destruction of these modern representations of the fabled Pillars of Hermes, signified—fittingly for the god of doorways—the opening of a metaphysical doorway.

The Twin Towers, and the space between them, represented a gateway and their destruction signified the rending of the barrier between worlds, the symbolic tearing of the Veil of Isis—creating a portal, unveiling the Holy of Holies. The idea of the Twin Towers as gateways further links to the Zodiacal sign of Gemini, the Twins, and its position as a celestial/heavenly gateway (see page 83 for additional discussion on this topic), a prime example of the key principle of "As Above, So Below."

THE TWO PILLARS OF FREEMASONRY, SACRIFICIAL ALTARS

Not to be ignored is the tradition of the Freemasons in regard to the two pillars, which are a prominent emblem of their Craft. They represent the pillars Jachin and Boaz, which Hiram of Tyre made for Solomon, and set one on either side of the entrance to the Temple, to commemorate the pillar of cloud by day and of fire by night which guided the Israelites in their forty years' wanderings in the wilderness.[4]

Thus, the Twin Towers not only represented the Pillars of Hermes, but also evoked the Freemasons' Jachin and Boaz. Beyond what they represented, however, is what the towers became on 9/11—altars, massive sacrificial altars, for sacrifice by fire.

"THE NUMBER OF MAGICK IN ITSELF"

Before moving on to interpret Scene Two, there is one other occult authority we must meet, one who considered the number 11 as "the number of Magick in itself… [and] therefore suitable to all types of operation," as well as "the sacred number par excellence of the new Aeon [the Aeon of Horus]." This person is Aleister Crowley. In his best known writing, entitled The Book of the Law, Crowley states "My number is 11, as all their numbers who are of us." (Crowley used the spelling "magick" to distinguish ceremonial magic from ordinary sleight-of-hand trickery.)

The repeated use of the number 11 (and it will make further appearances throughout the script), then, not only characterized the nature of the act, but also signaled the commencement of a magical operation.

"THE WICKEDEST MAN IN THE WORLD"

"I was not content to believe in a personal devil and serve him, in the ordinary sense of the word," Aleister Crowley once said about Satan. "I wanted to get hold of him personally and become his chief of staff."

> Born Edward Alexander Crowley, Aleister Crowley (1875-1947), also known as both "Frater Perdurabo" and "The Great Beast," was an influential English occultist, astrologer, mystic, poet and ceremonial magician, responsible for founding the religious philosophy of Thelema. In this latter role, Crowley came to see himself as a prophet entrusted with informing humanity that it was entering the new Aeon of Horus.

Aleister Crowley, proponent of a New World Order

To the eyes of a god, mankind must appear as a species of bacteria which multiply and become progressively virulent whenever they find themselves in a congenial culture, and whose activity diminishes until they disappear completely as soon as proper measures are taken to sterilize them.

—Aleister Crowley

> Crowley's vision of a New Aeon coincides with the Illuminati's age-old plan for a secular world order ruled by an enlightened elite. The wording might be different, but the hermetic philosophical background is the same. Crowley and the Establishment see eye-to-eye on the subject—and this eye is the Eye of Horus.[1]

Author William Ramsey observed that Crowley "wrote numerous books detailing his vision of the ideal society: the strong over the weak, the maintenance of a patriarchal aristocracy ruling over a slave state, and the Darwinian killing of the unfit. According to the Great Beast, a small elite must rule over the masses: 'You will observe that I am advocating an aristocratic revolution. And so I am!'"

1. http://secretarcana.com/influentialfigures/aleister-crowley-and-his-legacy/

Born into a wealthy upper-class family, as a young man he became an influential member of the esoteric Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. Subsequently believing that he was being contacted by his Holy Guardian Angel, an entity known as Aiwass, while staying in Egypt in 1904, he "received" a text known as The Book of the Law from what he believed was a divine source, and around which he would come to develop his new philosophy of Thelema. He would go on to found his own occult society, the A:.A:., and eventually rose to become a leader of Ordo Templi Orientis (OTO), before founding a religious commune in Cefalù known as the Abbey of Thelema, which he led from 1920 through 1923. After being evicted from Cefalù he returned to Britain, where he continued to promote Thelema until his death.

Crowley was a bisexual, a recreational drug experimenter and a social critic. In many of these roles he was in revolt against the moral and religious values of his time, espousing a form of libertinism based upon the rule of "Do What Thou Wilt." Because of this, he gained widespread notoriety > during his lifetime, and was denounced in the popular press of the day as "the wickedest man in the world."

> Crowley has remained an influential figure and is widely thought of as the most influential occultist of all time. A Cambridge-educated world traveler, Crowley associated with the artistic and cultural luminaries of his era, including such noted figures as Ernest Hemingway, W. B. Yeats and H. L. Mencken.[5]

References to him can be found in the works of numerous writers, musicians and filmmakers, and he has also been cited as a key influence on many later esoteric groups and individuals.[6]

> Today, Crowley is regarded as either a misunderstood mystical genius or a depraved charlatan, a prophet for an era of spiritual enlightenment or a Satanic harbinger of the Anti-Christ, an agent for the sexual liberation of mankind or drug-addicted pederast. As a youth, Crowley wished to become a celebrity and to change the course of history and, in his own way, he accomplished both objectives. Not only did his peculiar character make him something of a cult icon, his philosophic and esoteric works are today a major force influencing mainstream culture, values and spirituality.
> Unlike most historical figures who lose their relevancy as the years go by, Crowley's influence is steadily increasing in the 21st century. This is not only a result of luck or natural evolution, however. Crowley and his OTO maintained ties with high-level members of the British and American governments, as well as with influential figures in science, law and culture. The world's elite, predominated by Illuminist values, are in perfect accord with Crowley's Thelema. These connections facilitated the dissemination and acceptance of his works in popular culture. Crowley not only predicted society's abandonment of traditional religions and the embrace of the Aeon of Horus, he was part of the motor that made these changes happen.[7]

Excerpt from Hymn to Pan by Aleister Crowley

Goat of thy flock, I am gold, I am god,
Flesh to thy bone, flower to thy rod.
With hoofs of steel I race on the rocks
Through solstice stubborn to equinox.
And I rave; and I rape and I rip and I rend
Everlasting, world without end.

Deciphering the 9/11 MegaRitual Script

Seen by some as the "Godfather of Modern Satanism," Crowley is the key to deciphering the script for the 9/11 global megaritual, because on one level, the entire day's events are an 'Ode to Aleister Crowley', as will be clearly demonstrated in the next section and subsequent sections.

Two towers, two planes, the first aircraft bearing "the number of Magick in itself," signaling the commencement of the ritual. And the second plane? "There are three main methods of invoking any Deity…The 'First Method' consists of devotion to that Deity … a perfect instruction exists in Liber 175," writes Aleister Crowley in "Magick" from Liber ABA.

"This is the book of Uniting [Oneself] to a particular Deity by devotion," reiterates Crowley in Liber 175 itself. "Concerning the ceremonies… prepare a powerful Invocation of the particular Deity… let it be known that this method is adaptable to the necessities of all. … let him take anything soever, and consecrate it … let him consecrate each thing that he useth to the service of that particular Deity."

Meaning: This is a ceremonial invocation (the act of invoking or calling upon a deity, spirit, etc., for aid, protection, inspiration, or the like). Flight 11, consecrated with the number of magic and declaring the commencement of a magical operation; Flight 175, invoking Liber 175, stating the intent and purpose of the operation, ie. invoking and uniting with "a particular deity."

Few deities would approve of such cruel and destructive methods of invocation, but Crowley provides direction to the supplicant on that very point: "Yet also may he deliberately practise cruelties, where the particular Deity manifests His love in that manner; as in the case of Kali, and of Pan." Crowley also provides a warning, which clarifies the intent of those engaged in this ritual: "Nevertheless, forget not that this practice is dangerous, and may cause the manifestation of evil things, hostile and malicious."

A Powerful Combination

The act of combining a number of power with a potent symbol will be repeated in Act Three, but before we learn of this, we continue to Act Two, which is really an extension of this Act—or, more precisely, a partial fulfillment of the invocation. The 11 marks the commencement; the 175 states that the entire ceremony is an act of devotion, unity and invocation; and very soon we learn to whom the orchestrators of the 9/11 MegaRitual sought to bind themselves. Do I smell sulphur and brimstone?

CHAPTER FOUR

THE PET GOAT

In the end, what we have is a highly symbolic, ritual working broadcast to millions of people, a Satanic inversion; a Black Mass, where the "pews" are filled by the entire nation and through which humanity is brutalized and debased.

—Michael Hoffman, Secret Societies and Psychological Warfare

ACT TWO: BUSH AND THE PET GOAT

On the morning of September 11, 2001, President Bush waits outside at Emma E. Booker Elementary School in Sarasota, Florida, and by his own account (on two separate occasions, no less) says he sees Flight 11 hurtle through clear skies, slam into the North Tower and then remarks, "There's one terrible pilot."

Minutes later, Bush sits before a group of predominantly African-American second-grade school children listening to a recitation of The Pet Goat, when Chief of Staff Andrew Card whispers in his ear, "A second plane hit the second tower. America is under attack." Bush continues to sit in front of the class listening to the reading for an additional seven minutes.

FAIR ENOUGH

Andrew Card's recollection of the sequence of events that morning varies from Bush's. He recalls a National Security Council staffer telling himself and the president, "Sir, it appears there's been a small twin-engine plane crashed into one of the World Trade Center towers in New York City." If this version of events is accurate, and Bush did not in fact see the crash of the first plane on television before entering the classroom, this would explain why he initially assumed pilot error (but not why he failed to accurately recall the correct sequence of events on two separate occasions or subsequently clarify the issue for posterity). He didn't see footage of a passenger jet, or visibility conditions in New York City at the time, and having been told it was a small twin-engine plane, assumed it was a minor incident, probably accidental. Fair enough.

But why did Bush sit there for a full seven minutes after being told that "America is under attack"? He would later claim in his own book that he didn't want to alarm the children by getting up abruptly during their reading. A bit weak, but fair enough.

In the end, however, these may be about the only things concerning Bush's presence in Sarasota that fateful day which can potentially be explained away.

The Pet Goat Black Mass in Paradise

> Let him say: "I read this book that I may study the nature of my Deity, that further knowledge of Him may inspire me with deeper devotion to Him."

The Satanic Bible

The Satanic Rituals
Companion to The Satanic Bible
Anton Szandor LaVey

When Anton Szandor LaVey published his Satanic Bible in 1969, he wrote that: "A black mass is essentially a parody on the religious service of the Roman Catholic Church, but can be loosely applied to a satire on any religious ceremony." He went on in Satanic Rituals (1972) to present it as the most representatively satanic ritual in the book.[1]

A satirical ceremony, a Commander-in-Chief that wouldn't leave his seat until the reading of a story about a pet goat was completed ("I read this book that I may study the nature of my Deity"), during which time hundreds of his fellow Americans were in harm's way, many of them meeting horrific ends as they burned alive or plunged to their deaths from the towers ("Yet also may he deliberately practise cruelties")—conjuring the image of The Tower tarot card (variously referred to as "the Devil's house," "the house of the damned" and "Inferno," or "Hell")—all taking place in … "Paradise," the city of Sarasota's unofficial yet widely-used and acknowledged nickname. Well, how about that?

PARADISE LOST

Of course, the reference here is not to the Biblical paradise of heaven, and not simply to the Devil's paradise, Hell, although that is certainly part of it. There is a more serious occult-philosophical point they're aiming at: that of a Man-made/Masonic Paradise, their version of paradise on earth, created by them, ruled by them, and not-altogether too different from hell for the masses who have to live there.

This speaks to the heart of their enterprise, "perfecting creation": taking God's imperfect creation and, through their human wisdom bringing it into a state of perfection. Historian John Michell states: "…it is their immediate concern, having eaten of the tree of knowledge, to apply all their newly acquired arts to constructing a facsimile of the Garden, a model paradise." Echoing this, Michael Hoffman writes in his book Secret Societies and Psychological Warfare (the subject of Chapter Six), "If Chronos-Saturn destroyed a divine Eden, Saturn being the force of time, decay and the progress of matter… man will recreate a true Theleme, a better Eden than God. And that, in sum, is the masonic cover story that maintains cachet to this day."

Serious stuff for a parody, you may be thinking. True, and unfortunately there's more weighty discussion ahead, because although a black mass may be a satire on a religious ceremony, the underlying precepts are deadly serious, and in this context a story about a pet goat is no laughing matter.

GET YOUR GOAT

According to a research monograph on the Dionysian Artificers and Early Masonry edited by mystic Manly P. Hall, the symbolism of the goat relates to the pre-Christian God Pan, Dionysius. Pan is represented as being half-human, half-goat with horns, and would later be used in medieval times to represent the devil.[2]

Manly P. Hall

The Goat of Mendes, or Baphomet, is a goat-headed deity, being formed of both male and female principles, with Mercury's Caduceus for its phallus. One arm points up and one down, with the Latin "Solve et Coagula" (solution and coagulation) written on them. This is not the Christian devil but a symbol of the ancient alchemists representing the fact that nature and nature's God is a combination and balance of male and female forces, light and darkness, moisture and dryness. The very principle of Hermes Trismegitus, "As Above, So Below," is symbolized by Baphomet.[3]

SOLVE
ELIPHAS

Since 1855, the name Baphomet has been associated with a "Sabbatic Goat" image drawn by Eliphas Lévi. Lévi called his image "The Goat of Mendes," presumably following Herodotus' account that the god of Mendes—the Greek name for Djedet, Egypt—was depicted with a goat's face and legs.[4]

Eliphas Lévi

The Baphomet of Lévi was to become an important figure within the cosmology of Thelema, the mystical system established by Aleister Crowley in the early twentieth century. In Magick (Book 4), Crowley asserted that Baphomet was a divine androgyne and "the hieroglyph of arcane perfection":

> This serpent, SATAN, is not the enemy of Man, but He who made Gods of our race, knowing Good and Evil; He bade 'Know Thyself!' and taught Initiation. He is 'The Devil' of the Book of Thoth, and His emblem is BAPHOMET, the Androgyne who is the hieroglyph of arcane perfection... He is therefore Life, and Love. But moreover his letter is ayin, the Eye, so that he is Light; and his Zodiacal image is Capricornus, that leaping goat whose attribute is Liberty.[5]

A Child's Guide to the Luciferian Doctrine

Ostensibly a children's story about a girl and her goat, The Pet Goat was in reality a strategically employed device used to introduce this key occult element into the 9/11 MegaRitual; yet, it is more than this. A deeper reading of the text reveals that this children's story is an allegory of the Luciferian Doctrine: The Father is an overbearing hyper-authoritarian, and the goat—whose initial poor behavior is, in broader context, relatively benign—saves the day. Praise the Goat.

The goat's aggressive behavior and destructive tendencies at first appear problematic, but in the end render the goat uniquely qualified to serve as savior …the All-Devouring is not the bad guy after all. It is Lucifer, the light-bearer, who seeks to set humanity free.

> Luciferianism constitutes the nucleus of the ruling class religion and represents a radical reevaluation of humanity's ageless adversary: Satan. It is the ultimate inversion of good and evil: Luciferian mythology caricatures Jehovah as an oppressive tyrant; Satan, who retains his heavenly title of Lucifer, is the liberator of humanity.
> Masonry, which acts as the contemporary retainer for the ancient Mystery religion, reconceptualizes Satan in a similar fashion. In Morals and Dogma, 33rd degree Freemason Albert Pike candidly exalts the fallen angel:
> > LUCIFER, the Light-bearer! Strange and mysterious name to give to the Spirit of Darkness! Lucifer, the Son of the Morning! Is it he who bears the Light, and with its splendors intolerable blinds feeble, sensual, or selfish Souls? Doubt it not.
> He makes man aware of his own innate divinity and promises to unlock the god within us all.[6]

FULL OCCULT INTERPRETATION

In the class's reading of The Pet Goat, the Direct Instruction method was utilized. The teacher pounded out the syllables with a pen on her book and read in unison with the children, the overall effect being not unlike the ritualistic chanting of a religious ceremony. (You really need to see the YouTube video to get the full effect.)

So, there sits Bush as the Satanic High Priest in Devil's Paradise, listening to little black children (yes, skin color does matter to the occultists…what, you thought they were politically correct?) chant out a humorous story about a pet goat—which is actually a thinly-veiled simplification of the Luciferian Doctrine—while people burn to death in the North Tower and UA175 slams into the South Tower in New York City. Crowley's Liber 175, "the book of Uniting to a particular Deity by devotion," outlines precisely what the perpetrators are seeking to accomplish at that exact moment through their sadistic, homicidal ritualistic acts—unite themselves with Satan. And although the locations for these two events are separated by hundreds of miles, the two acts are bound together in an ingenious and sophisticated manner by a cohesive ritual unity.

ATTA BOY

There is yet another, potentially more disturbing aspect to the selection of Sarasota as the backdrop for the Bush-Baphomet Black Mass. Roughly ten miles south of Sarasota is Venice, Florida, and the Venice Municipal Airport, home to Huffman Aviation, where Mohamed Atta and another purported 9/11 conspirator allegedly undertook flight training. Subsequently, both individuals trained for a brief time at Jones Aviation in … Sarasota.

Of the hundreds of flight schools in the United States, Mohamed Atta, the ringleader of the 9/11 terrorists and the hijacker-pilot of the first plane to hit its target on the morning of September 11, 2001, attended a school located in the very city President Bush was visiting that same fateful morning, where he was presiding over the Pet-Goat Ritual Reading. Bush was in his Devil's Paradise while Atta (so we are led to believe) was busy gaining entry into the Islamic Paradise of Martyrs.

This is neither coincidence nor synchronicity; rather, it is yet another example of the twisted humor and sophisticated logistics employed in the 9/11 MegaRitual.

WELCOME TO TERRORLAND

There is, however, even more to the Sarasota-Bush-Atta story. Venice Municipal Airport is reported to be a long-time base of operations for the CIA, with allegations of a 60+ year history of "Company"-sanctioned drug running. In fact, some investigative reporters refer to Florida as "Terrorland" (see Welcome to Terrorland: Mohamed Atta & the 9-11 Cover-up in Florida by Daniel Hopsicker) and tell of CIA training camps, banks used to launder drug money, and flight schools/airports used for discreet arms-drugs-cash transfers.

There are obvious implications here that the CIA (or elements within in) was involved on some level with the events of 9/11—a theory supported by many other pieces of evidence. Bush's presence in Sarasota on 9/11 could then be viewed as a tip-of-the-hat to the CIA's historical activity in that area (keep in mind, too, that Bush Sr. was head of the Agency in 1977-78). And let's not forget that on 9/11 the governor of Florida—where the 2000 Presidential election was allegedly "stolen"—was none other than Jeb Bush. (For more on this topic, see Appendix C, "The Mohamed Atta Myth," on page 175.)

Mohamed Atta's Flying Circus of Death: The Greatest Show on Earth

Yet another highly attractive aspect of Sarasota from an occult perspective is that, in 1919, Ringling Brothers Circus established its winter home there, and performers and staff members began to settle in Sarasota, as did some of the seven Ringling Brothers, all of whom were Masons. Decades later in 1968, the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Clown College located there, as well, and new CIA recruits were reportedly sent to the college from Langley to learn sleight-of-hand.

Clowns are modern incarnations of the trickster deity—of which Hermes, Pan and Satan are all prime examples. The trickster-clown is a Jungian archetype, and the most ancient clowns have been found in the Fifth dynasty of Egypt.

Through inverted speech, illogical actions, mimicry of spirits and animals, and ludicrous acrobatic stunts, clowns perform functions attributed to Tricksters in mythology, blurring boundaries, toying with social and sexual rules, and mixing the obscene with the sacred.[7]

There has emerged a much darker contemporary image of the clown, however—the evil clown, in which the playful trope of the clown is rendered disturbing through the use of horror elements and dark humor. Cultural critic Mark Dery has theorized the postmodern archetype of the evil clown in "Cotton Candy Autopsy: Deconstructing Psycho-Killer Clowns."

Tracking the image of the demented or deviant clown across popular culture, Dery analyzes the "Pogo the Clown" persona of the serial killer John Wayne Gacy; the obscene clowns of the neo-situationist Cacophony Society; the Joker (of "Batman" Fame); the grotesque art of R.K. Sloane; the sick-funny Bobcat Goldthwaite comedy Shakes the Clown; and Stephen King's It.

Using Mikhail Bakhtin's theory of the carnivalesque, Jungian and historical writings on the images of the fool in myth and history, and ruminations on the mingling of ecstasy and dread in the Information Age, Dery asserts the evil clown is an icon of our times.[8]

Clowns, especially evil clowns, are often depicted as murderous psychopaths, an apt description of the occult perpetrators of the 9/11 MegaRitual, who used pseudo-Islamic-extremist patsies to pilot planes full of terrified passengers through the skies into buildings (and into the ground, where Flight 93 disappeared completely in an astonishing vanishing act), in what one could call a Flying Circus of Death—the Greatest Show on Earth, with performances in New York, Washington and Shanksville, and 'ringleader' Mohamed Atta as ringmaster.

THE INFAMOUS SEVEN MINUTES REVISITED

In light of all we have learned about Bush's seemingly innocent little trip to Sarasota, we return to those troublesome seven minutes. Film maker Michael Moore observed that, "Not knowing what to do—with no one telling him what to do—and no Secret Service rushing in to take him to safety, Mr. Bush just sat there and continued to read 'My Pet Goat' [sic] with the children," the obvious implication being that Bush was simply too stupid and/or indecisive to do anything else. Bush himself would have us believe that he simply didn't want to startle the little tykes, and most people readily accepted that explanation, as if in collective agreement that the entire classroom of second-graders would have all shit their pants if he'd gotten up and walked out.

Now, however, Bush's actions, or rather his temporary inaction, makes more sense. Andrew Card's timely delivery of the message regarding the impact of the second plane may or may not have been a scripted element of the MegaRitual (although having the High Priest visibly acknowledge the receipt of news confirming the successful execution of a companion ritual hundreds of miles away is a nice touch), but in any case, Bush sure the hell wasn't going to get up and interrupt an ode to the Goat.

Bush's immobility even caught the eye of his arch nemesis, Osama bin Laden, whose alleged comments on the matter are reproduced below from the full transcript of a videotaped monologue sent to Al Jazeera in 2004:

> And for the record, we had agreed with the Commander-General Muhammad Atta, Allah have mercy on him, that all the operations should be carried out within 20 minutes, before Bush and his administration notice. It never occurred to us that the commander-in-chief of the American armed forces would abandon 50,000 of his citizens in the twin towers to face those great horrors alone, the time when they most needed him. But because it seemed to him that occupying himself by talking to the little girl about the goat and its butting was more important than occupying himself with the planes and their butting of the skyscrapers, we were given three times the period required to execute the operations—all praise is due to Allah.[9]

"…the goat and its butting was more important than occupying himself with the planes and their butting of the skyscrapers"… Osama had a sense of humor? Who the hell knew? He has the world's largest military and most-formidable intelligence services scouring the earth for him, and he's cracking jokes on Al Jazeera. Or, perhaps those who say that Bin Laden was a CIA asset/scapegoat/boogeyman are right, and it's not Osama mocking us, but the Shadow Government and the orchestrators of the 9/11 Global MegaRitual.

It is certainly worth noting that Bin Laden initially denied involvement with the attacks. On September 16, 2001, three years before turning comedian, Bin Laden issued a statement that was broadcast on Al Jazeera in which he said emphatically, "I stress that I have not carried out this act, which appears to have been carried out by individuals with their own motivation." (Last time I checked, terrorist masterminds weren't in the habit of denying responsibility for acts of violence.)

Whatever the case may be, strap yourselves in, because you've only gotten a taste of the mockery that lies in store.

CHAPTER FIVE

ACTION!

> Mystical toponomy and alchemical cant language are part of a process which hinges on a marriage between action in time [or recorded history] and physical locations on the earth regarded as "places of power" by the cryptocracy's magical-geographical vision of the earth as a giant chess board, symbolized by the tessellated floor of Solomon's Temple and the masonic lodge.

ACT THREE: AMERICAN AIRLINES FLIGHT 77 AND THE PENTAGON

The floor in the right half of her office disappeared beneath her. Along with it, a large section of the exterior wall in her third floor Pentagon office simply vanished as the sunlight burst in, only for a moment, as it was immediately followed by a rush of intense heat, fire and thick smoke. She knew she would die. She could feel her skin melting, then, blackness.

A FLYING DUNCE HITS THE JACKPOT

In order to hit the west face of the Pentagon, American Airlines 77 performed what more than one experienced pilot has called an extremely difficult, if not almost impossible, aerial maneuver—despite the fact that, according to his former flight instructors, hijacker-pilot Hani Hanjour of the Flying Circus of Death could barely perform the most basic tasks.

Writing in Newsday on September 23, 2001, in "Tracing Trail of Hijackers," Thomas Frank reported, "Hanjour began making cross-country flights in August to test security, and tried to rent a plane from Freeway Airport in Maryland; though he was declined after exhibiting difficulty controlling and landing a single-engine Cessna 172."[1] Arizona JetTech flight school managers reported him to the FAA at least five times because his English was inadequate for the commercial pilot's certificate he had already obtained … a JetTech manager said, "He could not fly at all."

Interestingly enough, on September 10, 2001, Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld had announced that huge sums in Pentagon spending could not be accounted for. “According to some estimates we cannot track $2.3 trillion in transactions,” Rumsfeld admitted. And where was DoD’s accounting division located? In the west wing, which was in the final stages of renovation at the time, and into which those responsible for conducting the related investigation had recently been relocated.

Now, to some crackpot types, this might all sound a tad suspicious—throw in the fact that the groundbreaking ceremony for the Pentagon was held on September 11, 1941, 60 years to the day before 9/11, and we’ve got ourselves a genuine conspiracy theory.

77: “Magical Power in Perfection”

Flight 77 strikes the Pentagon, which sits on the 77th Meridian West and is 77 feet tall.

Anton Szandor LaVey, founder of the Church of Satan and author of The Satanic Bible, lists the 77 “infernal names” of the “Gods and Goddesses called upon, which make up a large part of the occupancy of the Royal Palace of Hell.” The number 77 is also a Masonic signal, the number of the Revenge of Lamech, ancestor of Hiram Abiff the Master Mason.

Written in 1941 and originally entitled “the Book of the Goat” (The Pet Goat, anyone?), Aleister Crowley’s Liber OZ (or Book 77) is a single page purporting to declare mankind’s basic and intrinsic rights according to Crowley’s philosophy of Thelema, and he considered it as a sort of manifesto for OTO.

And in The Book of Lies, Crowley writes:

> The sublime and supreme septenary in its mature magical manifestation through matter…
> 7, the septenary; 11, the magical number; 77, the manifestation, therefore, of the septenary. Through matter, because 77 is written in Hebrew Ayin Zayin (OZ), and He-Goat, the symbol of matter, Capricornus, the Devil of the Tarot; which is the picture of the Goat of the Sabbath upon an altar, worshipped by two other devils, male and female.

Aleister Crowley

And in Crowley's Gematria we find:

> 77. OZ, the Goat, scil. of the Sabbath of the Adepts. The Baphomet of the Templars, the idol set up to defy and overthrow the false god—though it is understood that he himself is false, not an end, but a means. Note the 77 = 7 x 11, magical power in perfection.

Again we discover, as in Act One, a number of supreme occult significance, ceremonially coupled with a potent super-sized occult symbol, in this case, the Pentagon.

PENTAGON: POWERFUL SYMBOL

Symbols don't kill people; people with symbols kill people. The pentagram is not universally held to be a symbol of evil—some cultures have considered it as a sign of protection and good fortune. However, it also has a long history of association with the dark arts. As with firearms, the difference is the intent of the user.

The antiquity of the pentagon's use as an occult symbol is well demonstrated by the following quote from Friedrich Nicolai (1733-1811), a bookseller, Freemason and member of the Bavarian Illuminati. Writing in 1782, he stated:

> What properly was the sign of the Baffomet, 'figura Baffometi,' … cannot be exactly determined... I believe it to have been the Pythagorean pentagon (Fünfeck) of health and prosperity ... It is well known how holy this figure was considered, and that the Gnostics had much in common with the Pythagoreans … it appears that these serpent-worshippers believed they must produce a token that they had been clean on earth. I believe that this token was also the holy pentagon, the sign of their initiation.

However, the idea of causing damage to a symbol of protection is also attractive to practitioners of the dark arts. Writing in Magic: White and Black, Franz Hartmann, writing about the pentagram, observes, "The spiritual knowledge of the Five-pointed Star is identical with its practical application. Let us beware that the figure is always well drawn, leaving no open space, through which the enemy can enter and disturb the harmony existing in the Pentagon" [emphasis added].

According to The Donning International Encyclopedic Psychic Dictionary, the pentagram is the "most powerful symbol of all ceremonial rites," and among the powers ascribed to it is the notification of "etheric world intelligences." The pentagram, which contains a pentagon at its heart, is widely used to evoke spirits, and the inverted pentagram, a universal Satanic symbol, to summon demons and even the Devil himself.

The pentagon and the 77 go together like a lock and key—and, actually, this is more than a simile. A number of power combined with a symbol of power … a ceremonial vessel numerically consecrated and filled with living sacrifices violently penetrates into the inner sanctum of a five-ring jumbo-sized heart-of-a-pentagram in a spewing eruption of flame, glass, steel, flesh and blood … this diabolical ceremonial act was designed as a key to unlock the powers of hell (symbolically, or perhaps more literally than we care to imagine), unleashing them on the denizens of earth.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, MR. OLSON

Theodore Olson served as United States Solicitor under President George W. Bush from June 2001 to July 2004. Previously, Olson had successfully represented then presidential candidate George W. Bush in the Supreme Court case Bush v. Gore, which ended the Florida recount in the 2000 Presidential election, effectively handing Bush the Presidency.[2]

As fate would have it, Mr. Olson was born on September 11, 1940, and, as fate would also have it, Olson's third wife, Barbara, just happened to be a passenger on hijacked American Airlines Flight 77—which, on September 11, 2001, crashed into the Pentagon, for which the groundbreaking ceremony was held on September 11, 1941.

A string of Satanic synchronicities? A cruel cosmic joke played on a poor soul unfortunate enough to have been born on September 11th? Or, perhaps, something altogether different…

On 9/11, Barbara Olson—a lawyer and conservative commentator who worked for CNN, Fox News, and other outlets—was on her way to Los Angeles for a taping of Politically Incorrect, on which she was a regular guest. Under normal circumstances, she would have departed the previous evening, but stayed home to be with her husband on the morning of his birthday.

According to Ted Olson, his wife phoned him after the hijacking had commenced and informed him that the hijackers had knives and boxcutters (shanks), a key detail in the overall 9/11 scenario. Again according to Ted Olson, this call was cut off, as was a second call, during which Olson claimed to have informed his wife of the two crashes at the Twin Towers.

Those researching this incident on the internet will find claims that Ted Olson's version of events reportedly changed several times, with him first claiming that his wife had called him from her cell phone, and later, a seatback phone. Researchers will also find conflicting reports regarding whether or not 757s had seatback phones in 2001, and whether or not it was possible to make cell phone calls from an airplane in flight.

Then there are related claims that the calls Mrs. Olson placed from the seatback phone were collect calls, and also that an official FBI report stated that there was only one call placed to the Justice Department and it lasted 0 seconds.

There is even online speculation that Ted Olson's fourth wife (but who's counting), Lady Evelyn Booth, is actually a still-very-much-alive Barbara Olson after plastic surgery, which, given all of the other "peculiarities" surrounding this incident, is in fact quite intriguing, as is the following little detail.

Lady Evelyn Cobbold (1867-1963) achieved celebrity at the age of 65, in 1933, when she became the first British-born Muslim woman to perform the pilgrimage to Mecca. Taking into consideration the radical-Muslim cover story employed by the orchestrators of the 9/11 MegaRitual, as well as their propensity towards dark humor and outright mockery of the victims and general public (as well as the remarkable facial and other physical similarities between Barbara and Lady Evelyn), one could draw the conclusion that the entire incident was a ruse.

The 9/11 birthday boy may or may not have knowingly and selflessly endured the sacrifice of his beloved third wife (but who's counting) so that America, nay, the world, could have a play-by-play via cell phone of Flight 77's doomed journey to the Pentagon, and learn the method by which the hijackers took control of the plane(s). Barbara may or may not in fact have been on that plane, and Lady Evelyn may or may not be Ted's third and fourth wife.

Was what happened, whatever that may be, all simply the cruel hand of fate? Or, was this the case of a Washington insider chosen for a special task in the 9/11 MegaRitual because of a personal connection to this highly-significant occult date? And, perhaps, one helluva reward—in the form of a major supporting role in the star-studded cast of the Greatest Show on Earth—for his participation in what many believe to be the theft of the American Presidency in 2000?

As Below, So Above …

On the morning of 9/11, a white "mystery plane" was spotted in the skies over Washington, DC. In the minutes immediately following the attack on the Pentagon, it was seen circling in the restricted airspace above the White House, further alarming already tense Secret Service agents.

As Mark Gaffney details in his book, The 9/11 Mystery Plane, the aircraft turned out to be an E-4B, the world's most advanced communications platform and state-of-the-art airborne command center. The $800 million aircraft is a modified Boeing 747-200, and is characteristically painted white with its most distinguishing feature being a pronounced pod located directly behind the cockpit.

Mark H. Gaffney
The 9/11 Mystery Plane and the Vanishing of America
Foreword by
Dr. David Ray Griffin

Let's put this bit of information in context: the Air Force, which couldn't manage to get a single interceptor fighter-jet in the air that morning until it was too late, had its aptly-named "Doomsday Plane" aloft in the skies above Washington at the very moment the Pentagon was supposedly struck with pin-point accuracy by a flying dunce (after he performed a 330-degree downward spiral that lasted over 3 minutes, mind you).

Even though the airspace above Washington is the most heavily monitored on the entire planet, the Pentagon never ordered an evacuation of the building, and as a result 125 servicemen and women died—again, as with the victims in the Twin Towers, amidst flame and smoke. "The Pentagon was simply not aware that this aircraft was coming our way," one official is quoted as saying in David Ray Griffin's foreword to Gaffney's book—which is a patently absurd statement given the blanket, overlapping ground radar coverage of the area, and even more so considering the presence of the E-4B.

We are to believe, then, that not only did Hani Hanjour perform one hell of a feat of kamikaze barnstorming, but snuck up on the nerve center of the most formidable military in the world as well, right under the watchful eye of its most sophisticated surveillance aircraft? (Any suggestion that bureaucratic paralysis or lack of real-time information or adequate threat analysis or protocol was to blame strains credibility to the breaking point.)

And just when you think that you've heard it all, that the entire scenario couldn't get any more ridiculously suspicious (or suspiciously ridiculous), this little fact emerges: in information obtained from the FAA in 2008 under a FOIA request, we learn the call sign of the doomsday plane circling in the skies above DC on 9/11 …VENUS77.

That's right. Yet another 77 (apparently you just can't have too many), and, wouldn't you know it, yet another pentagram reference: the successive inferior conjunctions of the planet Venus against the Zodiac form a pentagram, thus in occult thought this geometric form represents Venus, and Venus invokes the pentagram…just Google it. (The Romans designated the morning aspect of Venus as Lucifer, literally "Light-Bringer": Venus = Lucifer.)

Here again, the 77 and the pentagram/pentagon, in the air, combined together in magical union. We knew that they're big on the As-above-so-below thing, but sheesh.

It's more, more of the amazing Flying Circus of … oh, hell, nevermind.

Just Typical

As a case study in the purposely-generated information fog that exists around all aspects of 9/11, the Flight 77-Pentagon element is particularly instructive. The obviously conflicting theories are typical of the entire event. There are claims that the doomed flights of 9/11 were never in fact scheduled for that day; that they never took off; that there were fake passenger manifests and/or fictitious passengers; that the planes which were claimed to have crashed were airborne well after the time they were reported down; that some of the hijackers are still alive, and on and on.

One report claims that Flights 11 and 175 appeared to have crossed paths at precisely the same time over Stuart Air Force Base, but in actuality they shut off their transponders, landed and were replaced by already-airborne drones which then began broadcasting counterfeit signatures and were then used in the attacks on the Twin Towers.

Many, if not all, of the components of the 9/11 script were designed to confuse, to distract, to mesmerize, to appear suspicious on second glance and thus suck investigators and conspiracy theorists alike down a bottomless rabbit hole of misinformation and disinformation.

GIMME FIVE: THE HOUSE OF DEATH

As has been far more than duly noted, occultists believe that numbers contain inherent spiritual and temporal power, and that to launch a plan without incorporating the proper occult power numbers could doom the plan to failure.

The Pentagon is a 5-sided building, with 5 concentric rings and 5 above-ground floors (5-5-5), and a 5-acre central plaza, which, interestingly enough, is also referred to as "ground zero," a nickname that originated during the Cold War with the logical assumption that the USSR would target the Pentagon in the event of nuclear war. According to the official version of events, there were 5 hijackers onboard Flight 77, and the Pentagon sits just across the Potomac River from the Washington Monument, which is 555 feet tall (a fact mentioned four times in Dan Brown's The Lost Symbol).

If this last sentence strikes you as over-zealous piling on, recall the intentional (and zealous) piling on of the number 77, and consider this: modern occultists hold 5 to be the Number of Death, and the number five, according to some, is sacred to the hoariest of secret societies —the Illuminati.

In basic terms, the number five symbolizes the five points of the pentagram and all that it connotes—death, in particular, in this instance. Some occultists would contend that the greatest intensification of a number of power is its triplicate, with 555 thus yielding "Highest Death"; the U.S. Military may disagree slightly with this interpretation, however, as the rank of their most senior operational commanders is that of "five-star" (five 5-pointed stars).

So, as many would argue is the case even without reference to five as the number of death, the Pentagon is a House of Death (or, if you take this line of reasoning to its logical extent, The House of Highest Death, and who could really argue with that)—as it most certainly was to those soldiers who lost their lives within its walls on 9/11 in what by all appearances was a self-inflicted wound.

WHEN EVERYTHING CHANGED

STORY BY JOEL ACHENBACH

For Karen Hughes, counselor to the president of the United States, Sept. 10, 2001, was a day of celebration and relief. It was her wedding anniversary. She and husband Jerry dined at a favorite restaurant in the Watergate and reviewed the drama and chaos of the previous months.

There'd been the long presidential campaign, the disputed election, the move to Washington. They had to move a second time when the first house didn't work out. Then a freak summer rainstorm had flooded their basement, soaking their possessions.

All that was finally behind them. And so she could say: "We've survived the worst."

And: "Things can only get better from here."

That Monday — call it 9/10 — was the last day of a certain kind of American innocence.

"Eye on America investigates danger in the air — hot-dog military pilots in civilian airspace," CBS News anchor Dan Rather said in his introduction that evening.

The top story of the night: Senate investigators crack down on scams involving dietary supplements.

The nation perceived itself to be at peace, unchallenged as the world's only superpower. There were, to be sure, bad guys lurking here and there. There were random fanatics and Unabomber types. Pennsylvania Avenue had been closed in front of the White House to prevent truck bombs like the one that hit the federal building in Oklahoma City.

At the airport, travelers were asked: Did you pack your bags yourself? Has your bag been in your possession at all times?

X-ray machines at the security checkpoint were calibrated to detect a gun or large knife. A computer program flagged suspicious travelers, and their checked baggage would get extra screening. The bags wouldn't be loaded onto the plane until the travelers had boarded the flight. The system assumed that no one would blow up a plane while flying on it.

There was a template for terror, a paradigm for how an attack would unfold. An airline hijacker would want to divert the plane to some unintended destination. Flight attendants were trained to discourage passengers from attempting heroic acts in a hijacking.

America was good at preparing for the imaginable.

Monday the 10th was the start of Acquisition and Logistics Excellence Week at the Pentagon. Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld used the occasion to give a barnburner of a speech in which he declared war on the Pentagon itself — on its bureaucracy, its waste, its crusty

Turkey seeks to host U.S. drone base

REQUEST COMES AS IRAQ WITHDRAWAL NEARS

Ankara depends on American planes to fight Kurdish group

BY CRAIG WHITLOCK

The Obama administration is considering a request from Turkey to base a fleet of Predator drones on Turkish soil for counterterrorism operations in northern Iraq, a decision that could strengthen a diplomatic alliance but drag the United States deeper into a regional conflict.

The U.S. military has flown the unarmed Predators from Iraqi bases since 2007 and shared the planes' surveillance video with Turkey as part of a secretive joint crackdown against fighters from the Kurdistan Workers' Party, or PKK. Unless a new home for the Predators is found, however, the counterterrorism partnership could cease by Dec. 31, when all U.S. forces are scheduled to withdraw from Iraq.

The Obama administration has not yet made a decision on the Turkish request, according to senior U.S. military officials.

Previously undisclosed diplomatic cables show Turkey has become highly dependent on the Predators, U-2 spy aircraft and other U.S. intelligence sources in its conflict with the PKK. The Kurdish group, which is fighting to create an autonomous enclave in Turkey, has launched cross-border attacks from its hideouts in northern Iraq for years. Turkey has responded with airstrikes and artillery attacks but has also sent ground troops into Iraq, further destabilizing an already volatile area.

Turkey's request to host the Predators on its territory is an unexamined consequence of the U.S. withdrawal from Iraq, which some countries fear could leave a power vacuum in an unstable region. It also underscores how U.S. unmanned aircraft have swiftly become the leading tactical weapon against terrorist groups around the world, as well as a favored instrument of foreign policy.

In addition to deploying armed drones in Afghanistan, Iraq and Pakistan, the United States is expanding drone missions over Yemen and Somalia. It has sent surveillance drones into Mexico for counternarcotics operations and supplied small surveillance drones to the Colombian military for counterterrorism missions.

Crying out for a historic role

With tricorn hats and hand bells, eager Alexandria contestants shout 'Oyez!'

BY J. FREEDOM DU LAC

Gentle mistresses and most distinguished gentlemen:

Whereas the people of Alexandria, in the Commonwealth of Virginia, in these United States of America, are generally obsessed with their city's long history; and

Whereas Alexandria, founded in 1749, celebrates its heritage like there is no tomorrow; and

Whereas a bellowing bell-ringer in a tricorn hat, breeches, jabot and waistcoat almost always gets the party started right, or at least with a Colonial flair;

Now, therefore, the Office of Historic Alexandria does declare that the time is nigh to name a new town crier.

And so it was that Wednesday night, in the historic Lloyd House on historic Washington Street in historic Old Town, a dozen wannabe Founding Father types — most in period clothing, some holding scrolls, one even wearing proper period spectacles — proffered their best oyezes at an open tryout for the unpaid position of Alexandria town crier.

Security crackdown in Egypt tests new government's hold on streets

BY MICHAEL BIRNBAUM AND JOEL GREENBERG

CAIRO — Israel scrambled its diplomatic staff out of Egypt early Saturday after protesters tore down a wall and broke into the Israeli Embassy. As thousands more protesters torched police vehicles and clashed with security forces, an Egyptian commando squad rescued six embassy guards trapped inside the building.

Israeli officials who tracked events during the night described tense hours in which Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu spoke by phone with President Obama and the chief of Egyptian intelligence while monitoring events over a direct link to the besieged guards.

Israel's defense minister, Ehud Barak, also called his U.S. counterparts during the night to ask them to press the Egyptians to do more to protect the embassy.

"Our assessment was that they had 20 minutes to hold out, and in those 20 minutes the Egyptian commandos would arrive," Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman said in a television interview Saturday. "Those were perhaps the longest minutes."

In response to the crisis, Egypt's ruling military council announced a security crackdown Saturday, saying it would make full use of the country's emergency law to ensure safety. It was a move that exposed the fragility of the new government's control of the streets.

Under President Hosni Mubarak, Egypt's police force kept a tight lid on the population, and improved civil liberties were a key demand for protesters who ousted their leader in February. Since then, much of the police force has remained off the streets, and other security forces have sometimes struggled with how to respond to protests. On Friday, a small crew of soldiers stood back as crowds massed outside the embassy.

The incident underlined the altered relationship between Israel and post-rev-

RITUAL MURDER AS MIND CONTROL

> … a clown-like, grinning mockery of the victim(s) as a show of power and macabre arrogance. When this is performed in a veiled manner, accompanied by certain occult signs and symbolic words and elicits no meaningful response of opposition or resistance from the target(s), it is one of the most efficacious techniques of psychological warfare and mind-rape.
> —Michael Hoffman, Secret Societies and Psychological Warfare

Before moving on to Acts Four, Five and Six (and then on to the 'framework' of the 9/11 MegaRitual), we're going to pause and consider whether we're really on the right track. Could this really be what it appears to be? Is there any historical precedent for this type of thing?

THE PROPHET OF 9/11

Michael Hoffman is a former reporter for the New York bureau of the Associated Press, and the first edition of his Secret Societies and Psychological Warfare was published in 1989, well before September 11, 2001. His work was prescient not in that it actually predicted 9/11, but in that it clearly defined the motives and modus operandi of those ultimately responsible for the terror attacks—and this would not be Osama bin Laden or Al Qaeda.

SECRET SOCIETIES
Psychological Warfare
Michael A. Hoffman II

Much of Secret Societies reads as though it were written specifically about 9/11, and Hoffman notes in particular the difficulty we have accepting the idea that we could be manipulated on a mass scale:

> The issue of controlling humanity with esoteric words and symbols encoded within a play, a media spectacular or a > ritual is one of the most difficult for people to comprehend.… Even as [modern man] dances to the tune of the elite managers of human behavior, he scoffs with great derision at the idea of the existence and operation of a technology of mass mind control emanating from the media and government.[1]

Hoffman further observes that "ritual murder is mind control," and refers to the machinery of manipulation as "a technological tyranny so immense it is difficult to grasp. It is both a physical, technological tyranny as well as a tyranny of the mind."[2]

Like Clockwork

Hoffman describes modern existence as "life in an open-air mind control laboratory":

> In the study of mind control and psychological warfare, it is not enough to simply review the latest technology of coercion, the most recent gadgetry and techno-junk littering the hardware and supply depots of governments and cults.
> Far more dangerous than these appliances is the praxis behind them, the underground current which informs the modern project and this modern era. For life in our modern era is little more than life in an open-air mind control laboratory where a form of human alchemy has emerged to transform the mass of targeted percipients—targeted merely by virtue of their being urban dwellers plugged into the electronic and digital pageantry of the Establishment's system-of-things.[3]

"The induction of terror into the mass mind of Americans in association with certain key-words and key-symbols or 'sigils' in connection with control-symbols" Hoffman states, "is the most efficacious means of ensuring a brain-dead and mind-controlled, subject population."[4] He continues, asserting that "ritual murder is mind control…symbolism embedded within terrorism and achieved with seeming invincible accomplishment by 'invisible' principals, is a great way to control and process people."[5]

Hoffman explains that it is the subconscious mind that is being targeted in occult ritual. "In occult crimes the objective is not linear," he states, "that is to say, is not solely bound to the achievement of the immediate effects of the attack on the victim, but may in fact be a part of a larger, symbolic ritual magnified by the power of the electronic media, for the purpose of the alchemical processing of the subconscious Group Mind of the masses." Hoffman continues, telling us that "it is the subconscious that is being addressed in occult ritual, in a process CIA behavioral scientist Dr. Ewan Cameron termed, 'psychic driving.'"[6]

"The Black Arts adepts," he concludes, "are not simply 'crazed', nor are such intensely publicized ritual murders merely superstitious sacrifices to some kooky devil-god." They are in fact "a brilliantly orchestrated ritual whose ceremonial aspects were as precise and detailed as the internal workings of a clock."

UNITED FLIGHT 93
SEPTEMBER 11, 2001

CHAPTER SEVEN

“LET’S ROLL”

… humor is all-important and the most appalling crimes may be committed under its cloak … ghoulish murders with a Puckish sense of fun.

—Stephen Knight, Jack the Ripper: The Final Solution

ACT FOUR: UNITED AIRLINES FLIGHT 93 AND SHANKSVILLE

“Let’s roll,” were the last words she heard him say as he put down the phone and joined a group of fellow passengers as they prepared to attempt to regain control of the airplane from the hijackers. As the heroes of United Airlines Flight 93 fought to break into the pilot’s cabin, the cockpit voice recorder captured the hijackers chanting, “Allah is the greatest!” Moments later, in Shanksville, Pennsylvania, the aircraft struck the ground with such force that the only thing visibly remaining was a smoking crater.

NO GUTS, NO GORY

The official version of the crash of Flight 93 is that the aircraft was traveling at such a high speed and steep angle as it struck the ground at a reclaimed coal mine in Pennsylvania that it was completely swallowed up by the earth. One could surmise that the soil itself might have been loosely compacted as a result of excavations, and thus would have been a contributing factor in the total disappearance of the plane.

ATTACK ON AMERICA
AP: BLACK BOX FOUND IN PENNSYLVANIA CRASH SITE
MSNBC

As the local coroner surveyed the impact site shortly following the crash, he found scarce evidence of the aircraft or its occupants: the largest human remains he initially recovered was a section of five vertebrae.

"Disappearing Act"

Conflicting reports swirled around the crash. The Vice-President had authorized the Air Force to shoot down the aircraft: was that what actually brought the plane down? There were reports of a wider debris field, with wreckage strewn about in other locations. If the entire plane had gone in nose first at such a high rate of speed that it left a practically wreckageless Wile-E.-Coyote silhouette in the ground, how could there be debris elsewhere?

So, here again, before we even get started dissecting this component of the MegaRitual to expose its grisly innards and occult inner-workings, something already stinks to high heaven.

Shanksville

According to official accounts, on the morning of 9/11, Islamic radicals forced their way into the cockpits of four separate airplanes using box-cutters, with which they injured or killed a number of persons. In colloquial terms, the victims were "shanked" (see the Dictionary of American Slang and Colloquial Expressions, published by McGraw Hill), and the whole affair might be insensitively referred to as "shanksville."

Now, if even after all of the other instances of the use of morbid humor that have been elucidated thus far (and remain to be exposed in further chapters) you still find it difficult to accept this idea—the notion that the orchestrators of the MegaRitual engineered the real-or-faked crash of a jetliner in a specific location because its name provided another instrument for the mockery of the victims and of the public at large—well, it won't come as any comfort to you to learn that manipulating the circumstances surrounding rituals so as to create "meaningful coincidences" (involving place names, the names of victims, etc.) is a common practice among occultists.

And it may further disrupt your sense of reality to learn the following: one Bill Crowley was the field director in the Pittsburgh Office of the FBI, which has jurisdiction at Shanksville. Certainly, you may be thinking at this point, the author is not insinuating what he appears to be: that the planners of 9/11 somehow pre-positioned an individual (either uninvolved and unsuspecting or complicit in some fashion) with the Crowley surname in this law enforcement position so that the name Crowley would be connected with the event in media reports. That would be absurd…

Perhaps, except for the fact that they turn right around and do almost exactly the same thing in Act Five, ingeniously engineering circumstances so that the Crowley surname appears in numerous media reports connected with the incident. And, on top of that, the name of the location for the next component of the MegaRitual is, like Shanksville, slang—and to top it all off, slang famously connected with Aleister Crowley himself.

As Michael Hoffman astutely observes, "Coincidence can be summoned. It's a matter of attention and timing." All too true, and we haven't even gotten to the numbers, symbols and other occult elements yet, where we'll find more Crowley and more mockery.

FLIGHT 93: AN AIRMAIL GREETING TO THELEMITES WORLDWIDE

It shouldn't surprise the reader at this stage in the reconstruction of the script to learn that 93 is of great significance in Aleister Crowley's Thelema. The central philosophical concepts of Thelema are encapsulated in two phrases from Crowley's Liber AL: "Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the Law" and "Love is the law, love under will." The two key terms in these sentences are "Will" and "Love"; in Greek, Thelema and Agape. Employing isopsephy, which is the Greek practice of assigning a numerical value to the letters of a word and then adding them to obtain their sum (similar to gematria), the value of both these words equals 93.

It is common for Thelemites to greet each other with "93" in person as well as in the opening and closing of written correspondence. This custom derives from Crowley's instruction that Thelemites should greet each other with the Law of Thelema by saying, "Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the law." Since saying the entire Law can be cumbersome, using 93 has become a kind of shorthand.

In informal written correspondence, one often finds the number singularly at the head of a letter and in the form "93/93" at the end. In this case, the initial "93" stands in for "Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the Law," and

"93/93" stands for "Love is the law, love under will." Crowley often used this form within his own letters, and wrote thusly on the matter:

> I am often asked why I begin my letters this way. No matter whether I am writing to my lady or to my butcher, always I begin with these eleven words. Why, how else should I begin? What other greeting could be so glad? Look, brother, we are free! Rejoice with me, sister, there is no law beyond Do what thou wilt![1]

The Confessions of
Aleister Crowley

Writing in The Confessions of Aleister Crowley, he further states that, "The matter is of extreme importance; because Aiwass in dictating The Book of the Law repeatedly makes use of correspondences in Greek, such as Thelema, Will, 93 – Agape, Love, 93 … his own name spelt in Hebrew has the value 93." Elsewhere in Confessions, Crowley adds, "93 is also the number of the Secret Word of the Neophyte of A:. A:., a word indicating symbolically the whole course of existence."

Well, son of a bitch. Flight 93 was a flying airmail greeting to Thelemites around the globe… and they're not even done yet.

Let's Roll (or, maybe not)

Just as alleged Flight 77 passenger Barbara Olson's supposed call to husband Ted gave us the crucial detail concerning the hijackers' use of box-cutters, Flight 93 passenger Todd Beamer's supposed in-flight phone call to customer service supervisor Lisa Jefferson at GTE Airfone's Chicago call center gave us the battle-cry for 9/11.

According to Jefferson, these were the last words she heard Beamer say after he laid the phone down to join a passenger revolt against the terrorists. As the Washington Post reported, by May 2002 "Let's roll" had been "embraced and promoted by President Bush as a patriotic battle cry," and was "now emblazoned on Air Force fighter planes, city fire trucks, school athletic jerseys, and countless T-shirts, baseball caps and souvenir buttons." The Post further noted, "It's also commemorated in popular songs."

The London Evening Standard called Beamer's final words "a symbol of America's determination to fight back," and Rowland Morgan, author of the book Flight 93 Revealed, concluded: "Truly, the Let's Roll slogan had become a call to arms—just at a time the White House needed it most."

LET'S ROLL!
Ordinary People, Extraordinary Courage
LISA BEAMER
WIFE OF 9-11 HERO TODD BEAMER
with Ken Abraham

Beamer was able to talk to Jefferson for 13 minutes, even though many calls were being dropped due to high call volume. In her 2002 book, Let’s Roll!: Ordinary People, Extraordinary Courage, Todd’s wife Lisa Beamer revealed that Jefferson had informed her that “it was a miracle that Todd’s call hadn’t been disconnected.” Due to the incredible number of calls being placed that morning, Lisa explains, “the GTE systems overloaded and lines were being disconnected all around [Jefferson] as she sat at the operator’s station outside of Chicago, talking to Todd. [Jefferson] kept thinking, This call is going to get dropped! Yet Todd stayed connected … all the way to the end.”

In her own 2006 book, Called (now that’s funny, I don’t care who you are), Jefferson wrote, “[H]is voice was devoid of any stress. In fact, he sounded so tranquil it made me begin to doubt the authenticity and urgency of his call.” Jefferson told Beamer’s wife: “If I hadn’t known it was a real hijacking, I’d have thought it was a crank call, because Todd was so rational and methodical about what he was doing.”

This would be an observation echoed by Lyz Glick, wife of another Flight 93 passenger Jeremy Glick, who, in describing a call from her husband recalled, “He was so calm, the plane sounded so calm, that if I hadn’t seen what was going on on the TV, I wouldn’t have believed it.” She continued, “I was surprised by how calm it seemed in the background. I didn’t hear any screaming. I didn’t hear any noises. I didn’t hear any commotion.”

Similarly, concerning passenger Lauren Grandcolas’ voice message to her husband Jack, journalist and author Jere Longman recounts, “It sounded to Jack as if she were driving home from the grocery store or ordering a pizza.” Jack Grandcolas later states, “She sounded calm. There is absolutely no background noise on her message. You can’t hear people screaming or yelling or crying. It’s very calm, the whole cabin, the background, there’s really very little sound.”

An entire plane-load of cool, collected frequent flyers and hijacker-battling heroes, one of whom just happens to utter forth the phrase that becomes the rallying cry for the all-hell-unleashed, shock-and-awe retribution heaped upon the heads of Islamic radicals and their supporters, enemies far and wide, real and imagined? Certainly not impossible, but in context of everything else we know (and suspect) about the falsehoods of 9/11, this very much sounds like more of the same old chicanery and force-fed propaganda.

Bizzaro-world

Several witnesses in and around Shanksville reported seeing a white corporate jet flying low and fast in the vicinity of the crash site immediately before and after the stated time of impact. Eye-witnesses were very clear that what they saw was not the doomed Flight 93—which yet other witnesses claimed to have seen flying not at the steep angle that would've been required for the craft to disappear entirely into the soil, but at a much lesser angle.

Compellingly, USGS aerial photography of the mine site dating to well before 9/11 shows a narrow trench in the landscape of exactly the same width, depth and length, and in precisely the same location, as the supposed Flight 93 crash site. The only difference in the before and after images—the central crater where the fuselage reportedly burrowed completely out of sight, a simple round feature easily enough added with a bomb, missile or other explosive device.

There was an additional eyewitness report, however, that added even further intrigue to the incident. One local resident stated on camera that while stopped at an intersection in a rural area near the location of the crash, her van was overflown by what appeared to be a white aircraft so low to the ground that she dove to the floorboard of her vehicle.

The most interesting aspect of her account, though, was that she claimed that the "plane" made absolutely no noise whatsoever, had no markings whatsoever (as well as no distinguishable details, such as would be readily visible from that distance, appearing to have been created as a solid unit, the result of a molding process perhaps), flew underneath telephone wires, and, as the flying vehicle banked hard upwards to avoid the tree line, produced no discernible wake. That's either some really creative b.s. generated by psyop experts or evidence that the orchestrators of 9/11 have access to some mind-blowing technology and are using it against the American public.

Adding (Further) Insult to Injury: "The Crescent of Embrace"

According to the official government version of events, Islamic terrorists bring down Flight 93, killing all aboard … and the memorial designers propose a crescent-shaped design highly evocative of the Islamic crescent and named "The Crescent of Embrace." There are even claims that the Crescent of Embrace, as it was originally proposed and would have been oriented in the landscape, pointed directly to Mecca, a common practice in Islamic architecture. (One researcher has taken this concept a major step further by making a quite compelling case that the entire memorial was actually designed as the world’s largest open-air mosque.)

This is either further mockery of the victims of the tragedy, or the damndest instance ever of tone-deafness and insensitivity in the design process of a major American memorial.

The approach at Whitehorse.

CHAPTER EIGHT

MOVING MOUNTAINS

There is a sense of existing in a palace of marvels manipulated by beautiful but Satanic princes possessed of so much knowledge, power and experience as to be vastly superior to the rest of humanity. They have been everywhere. They have done everything.

—Michael Hoffman, Secret Societies and Psychological Warfare

ACT FIVE: KOREAN AIRLINES FLIGHT 85 AND WHITEHORSE

The confusion in the pilot's voice was audible as he asked the air traffic controller to repeat the request. The orders had come directly from Washington, and were so out of the ordinary that the controllers had waited more than 20 minutes before relaying them to the plane…

A LOUD SQUAWK

The pilot of Korean Airlines Flight 85 was being instructed to change its transponder code to 7500, an unequivocal hijacking distress signal. Just before the plane entered Canadian airspace, FAA controllers in Alaska ordered it to squawk a code that only hijacked planes would broadcast—even though ground control had spoken to the plane's pilot, who reported all was well.

At 8:09 a.m. on September 11, 2001, a text message containing HJK, the international code for hijacking, had passed between the cockpit of Flight 85 and Korean Air's ground control—although it was, and still is, unclear which end was sending the message. The Boeing 747 was on its way to New York City, and FAA officials had been informed of the HJK text message, the only such message sent that fateful day.

NORAD, the North American Aerospace Defense Command, was tracking KA Flight 85, and the 230 souls on board had no idea that they were being shadowed by two fighter jets with shoot-down authorization. NORAD officials rerouted the plane from Anchorage, Alaska, and directed the airliner to land at Whitehorse International Airport, over 1,000 miles further east, even though the plane was running low on fuel.

On the morning of 9/11, no other community in the world was under an evacuation order, and in no other community were emergency authorities instructed to prepare for a mass casualty incident involving a hijacked airliner. Parents in Whitehorse who had learned of the attacks in New York and Washington that morning and thought to themselves, “Thank God we live in the Yukon,” were now rushing to pick up their children at school and fearing the worst was about to happen to their families.

Suspicious Minds

Again, from the outset, suspicious circumstances, unanswered questions, and we haven’t even begun peeling the onion. Once we do, we will of course find Crowley (both Aleister and Tim), as well as the Egyptian god Thoth, whom you’ve actually already met in his other incarnation as the Greek god Hermes. But before that, let’s listen to a little Ozzy Osbourne.

“White Horse”

John Michael “Ozzy” Osbourne’s 40+ year career was launched when he rose to prominence as lead singer of the pioneering English heavy metal band Black Sabbath, during which time he became known as the “Prince of Darkness” (he has since become known as the “Godfather of Heavy Metal” if that’s any improvement).

SPEAK OF THE DEVIL
OZZY OSBOURNE

Recording albums with titles such as “Speak of the Devil” in his subsequent solo career, Osbourne was accused of Satanism, and more than one commentator has compared the controversy surrounding Osbourne to accusations leveled against Aleister Crowley. Both men were certainly demonized by the media and religious groups and enjoyed the infamy associated with being labeled Satanists.

In 2002, Osbourne and wife Sharon were invited to the White House Correspondents’ Association dinner, where President Bush noted his presence by joking: “The thing about Ozzy is, he’s made a lot of hit recordings—‘Party with the Animals’, ‘Sabbath, Bloody Sabbath’, ‘Facing Hell’, ‘Black Skies’ and ‘Bloodbath in Paradise.'" He continued (again jokingly one would hope, but after all we've learned here, who knows), "Ozzy, Mom loves your stuff."

Osbourne abused drugs and alcohol most of his life, and his excesses led to, among numerous other things, getting himself banned from the city of San Antonio for an entire decade for drunkenly urinating across from the Alamo while wearing his future wife's dress.

Likewise, Crowley had been a notorious heroin addict, and in his 1980 song, "Mr. Crowley," Osbourne made reference to this fact, singing, "Mr. Crowley, won't you ride my white horse? Mr. Crowley, it's symbolic of course." White horse—slang for heroin. You fooled all the people with magic, (Yeah) You waited on Satan's call… Mr. Crowley…

Three for the Price of One

Leaving the mouth of a metal god, we now turn to the mouth of an Egyptian god. Thoth, Hermes and the Roman god Mercury were all held to be one-and-the-same. Of particular relevance in relation to 9/11 is that Thoth is heavily associated with the art of magic and the judgment of the dead (Certain of Thoth's other aspects, particularly as the God of Time, will come into play later.)

Various scholars hold Egyptian religion to be primarily henotheistic, where all the gods and goddesses were aspects of the sun god Ra, similar to the devas in Hinduism. In this view, Thoth was considered to be the heart—which, according to ancient Egyptians, is the seat of intelligence or mind—and tongue of Ra, the means by which his will was translated into speech.

The Opening of the Mouth Ceremony

Described in various funerary texts, the Opening of the Mouth ceremony was an ancient Egyptian ritual involving the symbolic animation of a statue or mummy by magically opening its mouth so that it could breathe and speak. The Book of the Dead also contains a spell for this process, and this text reads in part, "Thoth has come fully equipped with spells, He looses the bonds of Seth from my mouth…" This ritual essentially gives life after death, focusing on the mouth in order to allow the spirit to spring forth from the body.

The Number 85

Gematria is a system of assigning numerical value to a word or phrase, in the belief that words or phrases with identical numerical values bear some relation to each other, or bear some relation to the number itself as may apply to a person's age, the calendar year, etc.

According to Strong's Concordance, the transliteration of the Hebrew word for mouth is "peh." Peh is the 17th letter of the Hebrew alphabet, and as symbolic of the mouth, Peh represents the capacity for speech and self-expression. The letter Peh spelled in full, Peh Heh, equals 85 through gematria and correlates with the tongue as an organ of speech. The sound "peh" is made by the air bursting forth from the mouth, and is thus related to the Opening of the Mouth ceremony.

Peh and the Tower Card

Peh is attributed to The Tower by the Golden Dawn, in which the card symbolizes the destruction of old structures and could be thought of as a form of purification. The illustration for The Tower in Aleister Crowley's Book of Thoth shows the eye of Shiva opening at the top: reality is the dream of Shiva, and when he awakens, all is destroyed.

XVI
LA·MAISON·DIEV

In "Gematria," from 777 and Other Qabalistic Writings of Aleister Crowley, we find: "85. PH, the letter P, 85 = 5 x 17: even the highest unity, if it move or energise, means War." Flight 85, the 85 in motion, engergized—9/11 would indeed be used to facilitate war, multiple wars. Further, Peh is connected to The Tower, to destruction, and is thus a reference to the demolition of the Twin Towers, the basis for those wars … and all of this takes place under the auspices of Thoth-Hermes, in Whitehorse.

Yet Another Crowley

Black Sabbath, Ozzy (Liber Oz, anyone?), Egyptian gods, magic spells—what else could you ask for in one act? How about one more big fat Crowley reference, just like the Bill Crowley connection in Act Four? We don't have to search far for it, because there he sits in the tower at Whitehorse International Airport on the morning of 9/11: one Tim Crowley, air traffic controller, on duty and at his post, yet again insuring the name Crowley is connected with this component of the MegaRitual in media reports far and wide. Shanksville, Whitehorse; Bill Crowley, Tim Crowley—hey, baby, if it works for you, go with it.

KANSAS?

"The sum of the square roots of any two sides of an isosceles triangle is equal to the square root of the remaining side. Oh, joy! Oh, rapture! I've got a brain!"

ACT SIX: WORLD TRADE CENTER 7

Some conspiracy theorists see the collapse of WTC 7 as the smoking gun of 9/11. The building was not hit by an aircraft, yet, just like both towers, collapsed into its own footprint in what for all the world looked like a classic controlled demolition. The footage most commonly seen of the building's implosion shows what appears to be a fully intact structure dropping downward at free-fall speed in a huge cloud of dust.

However, this footage shows the side of the building that faced away from the Twin Towers—the opposite side of WTC 7 sustained major damage from falling debris during the collapse of the North Tower. Due to the severity of the damage and low water pressure in the vicinity, firefighting efforts were greatly hampered and fires on multiple floors burned uncontrolled for hours.

The North Tower had collapsed at 10:28 a.m., and WTC 7 remained standing until 5:21 p.m. Writing in the New York Times in November of 2001, journalist James Glanz said of WTC 7: "By 11:30 a.m., the fire commander in charge of that area, Assistant Chief Frank Fellini, ordered firefighters away from it for safety reasons." End of story? Not hardly.

GIULIANI'S SKYBOX BUNKER

After the 1993 World Trade Center attack, an Emergency Operations Center (EOC) was created to coordinate local, state and federal efforts in the event of a disaster like 9/11. Naturally, the EOC was located in 7 World Trade, directly adjacent to the target of the 1993 attack. Even better, the EOC was housed on the 23rd floor.

Numerous parties, including George Marlin, then executive director of the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which owned the WTC, urged Rudolph "America's Mayor" Giuliani not to locate the EOC at the Trade Center. And in 1998, New York Times columnist Bob Herbert called Giuliani's EOC a "skybox bunker"—with a heckuva view on 9/11, one might add—and questioned the wisdom of locating a supposedly secure facility 23 stories above ground in a building shared by numerous private tenants and requiring elevators to reach.

But that wasn't the half of it. To keep the EOC and elevators operational in the event of a power outage, backup generators were installed along with large storage tanks for the diesel fuel needed to run them. Yep, that's right—the Emergency Operations Center for the City of New York was not only located yards from one of the most attractive terrorist targets in the entire world, was not only 23 floors in the air, but was sitting on top of thousands of gallons of flammable liquid.

As the New York Times reported, "Fire Department officials warned the city and Port Authority of New York and New Jersey in 1998 and 1999 that a giant diesel fuel tank for the mayor's $13 million command bunker in 7 World Trade Center…posed a hazard and was not consistent with city fire codes." Ya think?

Investigators would later determine that the burning fuel weakened a transfer truss that allowed the skyscraper to be built atop multistory underground electrical transformers and was critical to the structural integrity of the building. (Interestingly, a failure of the same type of truss contributed to the partial collapse of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City when it was bombed in 1995.)

Dr. John Osteraas with Exponent Failure Analysis Associates in Menlo Park, California, was quoted in the Times in 2002 concerning the collapse: "Without the fuel, I think the building would have done fine."

"PULL IT"

A high-rise Emergency Operations Center that provided front-row sky box seats to the most spectacular terrorist attacks in history…fuel storage tanks to run backup generators and elevators that, according to various assessments, were at least partially responsible for the collapse of the building itself…one can begin to understand why some have theorized that the EOC was in fact the command center for the attacks on the Twin Towers, and take more seriously the idea that WTC 7 was intentionally brought down after all.

Ironically, weighing in in apparent support of the latter notion was none other than the owner of the building, Larry Silverstein, who stated in a 2002 PBS documentary entitled 'America Rebuilds': "I remember getting a call from the, er, fire department commander, telling me that they were not sure they were gonna be able to contain the fire, and I said, 'We've had such terrible loss of life, maybe the smartest thing to do is pull it.' And they made that decision to pull and we watched the building collapse."

After two years of stonewalling, Silverstein Properties finally responded to numerous questions concerning what Mr. Silverstein meant when he used the phrase "pull it," which most people would assume to mean "bring down by controlled demolition." Their explanation? He meant pull the firefighters from the building. And exactly which firefighters would those be?...the ones that had withdrawn at 11:30 a.m., over five hours earlier?[1]

Déjà Voodoo

On September 11, 2001, WTC 7 and the entire staff of the EOC were evacuated after United Airlines Flight 175 struck the South Tower. The director of the EOC at the time made the poignant observation that the center was out of commission "at the moment when it was needed most." The evacuation of the EOC further hampered communication and rescue coordination efforts, which had been already compromised by a malfunctioning radio system that had been known to be faulty as early as March 2001. The deaths of some 121 firefighters in the North Tower, which collapsed second, were attributable to their not being able to hear the evacuation orders.

If the primary objective in selecting the location for the EOC had been to create additional chaos and confusion in the event of a disaster, with regards to 9/11 specifically, they sure couldn't have made a better choice than the 23rd floor of WTC 7 … hey, wait a minute…

Here we are again, confronted with circumstances that are beyond suspicious—absurd seems to be the norm—and we haven't even begun to consider what occult kookiness may be waiting around the corner for us. But it's there all right, you can count on it.

SALOMON'S TEMPLE

Completed in 1987 and constructed with a trapezoidal design, the 47-story World Trade Center 7, situated directly beside the Twin Towers, was known as the Salomon Brothers building. Recalling from Chapter Three that the Twin Towers represented the Two Pillars of Freemasonry, Jachin and Boaz, it shouldn't surprise you to learn (if you didn't already know) that according to tradition these pillars were located on the porch of, you betcha, King Solomon's Temple.

Noted English scientist, mathematician and theologian Sir Isaac Newton studied and wrote extensively about the Temple of Solomon, dedicating an entire chapter of The Chronology of Ancient Kingdoms to his observations regarding the temple. Newton was intrigued by the temple's sacred geometry and believed that it was designed by King Solomon with divine guidance.

Solomon's Temple is intimately intertwined with the story of Hiram Abiff, who some consider to be the Freemason's Messiah. According to Masonic legend, Hiram Abiff was a man of Tyre, the son of a widow, and the chief architect of King Solomon's Temple. Abiff, Masonry teaches, was the only person on Earth who knew the secrets of a Master Mason, including the most important secret of all, the "Grand Masonic Word," the ineffable name, the name of God. To make a long story short, Hiram was killed for refusing to reveal this word, and then brought up out of the grave and restored to life.

There is a Hiram from Tyre mentioned in the Bible in connection with the construction of the Temple, but not as chief architect: scripture is actually quite clear that God Himself was the designer and architect of the Temple. But that's really neither here nor there, because the legend of Hiram Abiff is not based on an historical character but rather on the myth of the Egyptian Sun-god Osiris.[2]

Writing in The Secret Teachings of All Ages, Manly P. Hall tells us that

> The efforts made to discover the origin of the Hiramic legend show that, while the legend in its present form is comparatively modern, its underlying principles run back to remotest antiquity. It is generally admitted by modern Masonic scholars that the story of the martyred CHiram is based upon the Egyptian rites of Osiris, whose death and resurrection > figuratively portrayed the spiritual death of man and his regeneration through initiation into the Mysteries.

Hall continues, stating, "CHiram is also identified with Hermes through the inscription on the Emerald Table. From these associations it is evident that CHiram is to be considered as a prototype of humanity; in fact he is Plato's Idea (archetype) of man. As Adam after the Fall symbolizes the Idea of human degeneration, so CHiram through his resurrection symbolizes the Idea of human regeneration."

Pretty deep stuff, and there's more where that came from, but you get the point: Solomon's Temple and Freemasonry go together like terrorists and hijacked airplanes.

THE 47TH PROBLEM OF EUCLID

According to the Bible, the Lord gave King David very exact measurements and specifications for Solomon's Temple, an idea that must have struck the fancy of those responsible for the design of WTC 7, because the building was a deceptively-simple yet powerful modern occult-Masonic construct. Its trapezoidal shape and 47 stories were an architectural embodiment of the 47th Problem of Euclid, more widely known as the Pythagorean Theorem.

The Pythagorean Theorem has attracted interest outside mathematics as a symbol of mathematical abstruseness and intellectual prowess; popular references in movies, literature, plays, musicals, songs, stamps and cartoons abound. There are a range of mathematical proofs for the theorem, but one is of particular interest: it was published by future-U.S.-President and Mason James A. Garfield, and instead of the customary square it utilized a trapezoid.

The essence of the Pythagorean Theorem concerns the importance of establishing an architecturally true or correct foundation based on use of the square, an ability of great value to real masons, but there are of course deeper related symbolic meanings as well (one having something to do with the Philosophical Male, Female, Offspring and the Theosophy of the Trinity…if you want to know any more than that, you will need to look it up yourself).

Writing of the significance of the Pythagorean Theorem to Freemasonry in general, this unnamed Masonic author states that "The 47th Problem of Euclid represents such a perfect symbol of Freemasonry... encompassing both art and science, that the simple knowledge of it demands a breathtaking awe to which we may only bow our heads in reverence at the perfection, the universality and the infinite wisdom of that which has been given to us by God."[3]

One really couldn't put it any more strongly than that, and it'd be a waste of time to try. But before we leave Salomon's Temple, it'd be negligent to fail to note the following: In the 1960s, Church of Satan founder Anton LaVey formed a group which later became the governing body of the church. Its name? The Order of the Trapezoid.

Reprise: Author! Author!

It's getting late in the day, and with the fall of WTC 7 we come to the end of the final act and the 9/11 MegaRitual proper. One might consider the collapse of the tower as the dropping of the curtain at the close of the production.

With the swift disappearance of Salomon's Masonic-Luciferian Temple of the Trapezoid in a cloud of smoke and dust, it is finished. But to whom is the credit for this spectacularly-diabolical production owed? Might the very nature of the object of the last act bear testament to the authors of the work? We shall see.

Choke on it

"As caustic and alkaline as Drano" is how EPA scientist Dr. Cate Jenkins described some of the dust at Ground Zero in a 2006 interview on CBS, claiming that EPA officials had known about the toxicity of the air and lied about it.

On September 13, 2001, then-EPA head Christine Todd Whitman told reporters at Ground Zero, "We have not seen any reason—any readings that have indicated any health hazard." And on September 18, Whitman told the public via press release, "We are very encouraged that the results from our monitoring of air-quality and drinking-water conditions in both New York and near the Pentagon show that the public in these areas is not being exposed to excessive levels of asbestos or other harmful substances," and that "given the scope of the tragedy from last week, I am glad to reassure the people of New York … that their air is safe to breathe and the water is safe to drink."

Time magazine's 2001 "Person of the Year" Rudy Giuliani echoed this assessment, claiming shortly after the attacks that "the problems created…are not health-threatening" and that "the air quality is safe and acceptable."

Yet, an August 2003 report by the Office of the Inspector General of the EPA said the Bush administration pressured the EPA to remove cautionary information from statements about the air quality at Ground Zero. Language used to describe excessive amounts of asbestos in the area was altered drastically to minimize the dangers it posed.

Described by one air pollution expert as "wildly toxic," the thousands of tons of dust and debris from the collapsed towers contained more than 2,500 contaminants, included asbestos, lead, mercury and a range of carcinogens, as well as other substances that can trigger kidney, heart, liver and nervous system deterioration.

Back to Work

The Giuliani administration seized control of the cleanup operation from federal agencies and subsequently failed to enforce federal requirements requiring use of respirators, simultaneously threatening companies with dismissal if cleanup work slowed. New York Committee for Occupational Safety and Health industrial hygienist David Newman said, "I was down there watching people working without respirators." He continued, "Others took off their respirators to eat. It was a surreal, ridiculous, unacceptable situation."

Critics assert that government officials—notably Bush, Whitman, and Giuliani—downplayed health risks and rushed to reopen the area around Ground Zero, although this posed a grave danger to emergency personnel and cleanup workers. Subsequent investigations would suggest that the Bush administration pressured Whitman and Giuliani to provide reassurances ostensibly in order to allow Wall Street to resume business-as-usual.

It is certainly worth noting that on September 12, 2001, Christie Whitman issued a memo directing that "All statements to the media should be cleared through the NSC (National Security Council in the White House) before they are released," and that the following sentence was added by White House officials to a September 16 EPA news release: "Our tests show that it is safe for New Yorkers to go back to work in New York's financial district."

A Legacy of Misery

Several square miles were blanketed by the fine dust resulting from the collapse of the Twin Towers, dust which, as previously noted, contained asbestos fibers from pulverized fire-proofing material as well as numerous other contaminants. An ever-increasing number of first responders (reportedly as high as 70% for this group), recovery workers and members of the public are developing debilitating illnesses, serious respiratory ailments in particular. Some estimates indicate that as many as 70,000 people might have long term health problems due to the dust. Hundreds of rescue workers are now on "permanent respiratory disability," and there are ongoing concerns regarding negative effects on fetal development.

Hell of a price to pay just to make a buck…but, then again, maybe all this misery was not just "collateral damage" but rather a desired outcome, adding to the purposefully-inflicted suffering and death on 9/11 itself and in the wars that followed.

AD

EPILOGUE: OVER BUT NOT FINISHED

With the close of Act Six, the production mercifully comes to an end, and although the show may be over, there will be spin-offs ("Where in the World is ~~Carmen Sandiego~~ Osama bin Laden?") and reruns (A gazillion 9/11 History Channel-National Geographic-Discovery Channel documentaries and counting) for years to follow.

And what a script it was: heroin-addicted Aleister "The Great Beast" Crowley (and his long lost relatives Bill and Tim), Baphomet the Pet Goat, the 9/11 Birthday Boy and Lady Evelyn-Barbara, black comedian Osama, Thoth, a monumentally insulting memorial, ancient Egyptian spells, the House of Death, Salomon's Temple and, tah-dah, the Flying Circus of Death, featuring a Flying Dunce, a magically-disappearing airplane that doubled as the world's largest ever piece of airmail, a plane with no hijackers aboard ordered to squawk the international code for hijack while trailed by armed fighter jets with shoot-down orders, and … the Doomsday Plane. The Greatest Show on the Face of the Earth, all as a mercurial tribute to the Prince of the Power of the Air. Not to be forgetten, also, were the props and sets: super-sized Pillars of Hermes, the Holy Pentagon, "Paradise," Shanksville and Whitehorse, with special appearances (Sesame Street style) by 11, 77, 93, 85 and 175.

But don't get out of your seat, because we aren't closing the pages of this grimoire yet—this awards ceremony for the biggest occult production in history isn't finished. We've met the characters, seen the sets and grimaced through all six acts, but there are more props and backdrops to look at, as well as the performance date itself—which, ingeniously and diabolically is part of the production.

Stay tuned, because if you didn't think the plot could get any thicker or any uglier, you're in for a big surprise.

PIÈCE DE RÉSISTANCE: 9/11—“EVIL MAGIC”

All systems of religious mysticism are based upon numerals.

—Helena Blavatsky, Isis Unveiled

9-1-1: PRE-PROGRAMMING FOR 9/11

September 11, 2001—“9/11” has become shorthand for not only the date, but for the acts of terrorism themselves and all they involved and implied: death, fear, uncertainty. On a profound level, the numerical combination 9/11 has become synonymous with “terror” over the last decade.

Given the scope and scale of the Global MegaRitual and the mind-numbing level of planning that obviously went into scripting the occult aspects of the event, it is of far more than passing interest to note that, in the thirty years prior to 9/11, 9-1-1 had become the universal code in the United States for “emergency.”

In light of all else that has been revealed, and the supreme importance of numbers in this megaritual, it strains credibility to suggest that this is mere coincidence. Other than being an “engineered synchronicity” designed to make people do a double-take and scratch their heads before falling back into a media-induced trance, though, what would the purpose be? One might suppose that the intended meaning or message is that 9/11 was a gigantic 9-1-1, an emergency of global proportions, which it was intended to be perceived as.

However, this would be the conscious message—the intended subconscious message was one designed to inflict further psychic and emotional injury on the public, and was thus the true motivation behind this aspect of 9/11. The number sequence 9-1-1 had come to mean help is on the way. The sudden reversal of meaning, which is a key tactic of occultists, was designed to induce psychic stress and mental anguish, to create additional inner conflict and fear.

“9/11,” then, was a weapon used to inflict further trauma on an unsuspecting public. By pre-programming the public consciousness for decades with the formulation that 911=help, a form of subconscious injury was inflicted through the abrupt reversal of 911=terror.

As diabolically ingenious as it may be, in the end, this is just one of numerous pieces of evidence indicating that elaborate and sophisticated psychological warfare tactics were employed against the American public on 9/11. Yet, there's a deeper level still…

THAT OLD BLACK MAGIC

WYNN WESTCOTT

In his book Numbers: Their Occult Power and Mystic Virtues, William Wynn Wescott writes that the number nine holds great significance among many secret societies. "The number nine is the number of the earth under evil influences," he states. Our constant companion in the exploration of this megaritual, Aleister Crowley, concurs with Wynn, revealing in Gematria: "9. Most Evil, because of its stability. AVB, witchcraft, the false moon of the sorceress."

Yet, as with many occult matters, the meaning of the number nine is multi-layered. Crowley continues in Gematria, "9. The Ennead, Stability in Change." The Ennead (derived from Greek, meaning the nine) is a grouping of nine related deities, most often used in the context of Egyptian mythology, including Osiris, Isis and Set, whose lineage and functions were arranged and explained by the theologians of Heliopolis. As three threes, the number was considered of great carnal power, and the groupings of the nine gods were very significant. The term is also used to describe the great council of the gods as well as a collective term for all the gods.

Nine, then, is not simply "most evil," but further invokes deities of supreme importance to occultists. Eleven, as we already know, has a bit of an evil reputation in its own right, but, more importantly in this context, is "the number of Magick in itself," and "the sacred number par excellence of the new Aeon," as well as "My number" according to Aleister Crowley, to whom the entire 9/11 MegaRitual is in part dedicated. Writing again in Gematria, Crowley reiterates, "11. The great magical number, as uniting the antitheses of 5 and 6 etc. and the magic force itself."

Thus, the Crowleyian formulation—9, "Most Evil," 11, "the magic force itself"—yields: 9/11 = Evil Magic. Not simply numerical shorthand for the day or its proceedings, but communicating the nature of the event itself, a digital combination whose very meaning is "Evil Magic."

The untold number of times that the phrase "nine eleven" has been spoken or written in the past ten plus years…that it has appeared in print or on screen, been uttered on the airwaves in news reports and documentaries, been said by countless millions in private conversation—every time it is used, we unknowingly participate in the MegaRitual, repeating "Evil Magic" over and over. That old black magic…

But you don't even have time to catch your breath after this nauseating revelation, because there's more you must understand to fully comprehend the hideous occult monstrosity that is 9/11, to fully contextualize the Six Act Theatre of Cruelty. September 11, 2001, was not simply a special date or a day of infamy, it was an auspicious occasion. Next, it's the astrology of 9/11.

CHAPTER TWELVE

THE ASTROLOGICAL FOUNDATIONS OF THE 9/11 MEGARITUAL

As a method for securing blessings for their undertakings, occultists employ the practice of selecting favorable dates and times for their endeavors, which is called electional astrology. This is a branch found in most traditions of astrology in which a practitioner decides the most appropriate time for an event based on its "astrological auspiciousness." The most commonly used and distinctive form of election is the ephemeral election, which involves selecting a date based on the position of the celestial bodies in the sky at the moment of the event. The horoscope for any given moment shows the general trends, alignments, planetary strengths and weaknesses, etc., and whether success or failure is indicated.

Astrology-speak sounds like absolute gobbledygook to most people, but many occultists swear by the use of astrology for their purposes. Saying, then, that on the day of the attacks "transiting Pluto was within seventeen minutes of an exact conjunction to the U.S. ascendant at 12 degrees Sagittarius" doesn't mean jack-shit to most people, and fortunately we don't have to figure out what this statement means. But we do have to push forward into the astrology of 9/11 and try to make some sense of it.

THE LORDS OF DEATH

Apparently, astrologers, bless their hearts, had worried for months in advance about the opposition of Saturn to Pluto that was in effect at the time of the attacks.

Saturn and Pluto are both considered 'Lords of Death', with Saturn having played that role alone before the planet Pluto was discovered. Indeed, Saturn has been associated with death since ancient times, and related to Saturn are the color black and the element lead. Writes one observer, “Where there is light Saturn brings darkness, where there is heat Saturn brings cold, where there is joy Saturn brings sadness, where there is life Saturn brings death, where there is luck Saturn brings misfortune, where there is unity Saturn brings isolation, where there is knowledge Saturn brings fear, where there is hope Saturn brings skepticism”…you get the picture.

The god Pluto was known in both the Greek and Roman traditions as the ruler of the underworld, and became casually interchangeable with Satan as an embodiment of Hell. The planet of the same name is thus viewed as a fairly nasty character.

Modern astrologers don’t find Saturn as evil as the more traditional astrologers do, but “the stress between the restriction of Saturn and the transformative power of Pluto can be difficult at best,” whatever the hell that means.

One gathers that when these two guys get close to each other, it means something bad is going to happen. And on 9/11, where they had their confrontation apparently wasn’t a good thing, either, as there was a “sensitive and critical placement of the Pluto/Saturn opposition,” with Pluto, “the planet of death/rebirth/transformation” in the 12th house, “which rules darkness, secrets, imprisonment” and Saturn, “the planet of death and limitation” in the 7th house, “which rules our country’s relationship with others.”[1]

The astrological interpretation, then, would go something like this: the two Lords of Death came too near each other in a couple of astrological houses that amplified their malevolent characters (or whatever), which made it a great day to sacrifice 3,000+ people to the Prince of Darkness (and I don’t mean Ozzy).

UP NEXT

As bad as dealing with the Deadly Duo may have been, there's still more astrology to absorb—in fact, we haven't even gotten to the best part yet. But before we continue with the stars, let's visit a star of another sort, the nation's largest and most beloved public monument, the Statue of Liberty.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

SILENT OVERSEER OF THE 9/11 MEGARITUAL

9/11—Evil Magic carried out under the auspices of Saturn-Pluto, Lords of Death. If you're a child-sacrificing cultic globalist freakshow, it don't get no better than this. Or, then again, maybe it does, considering that the Twin Towers weren't the only massive "ceremonial objects" involved at the ritual at Ground Zero. For overwatching the slaughter at the towers was a colossal statue, not of Libertas, but of Lucifer.

THE STATUE OF LUCIFER

"This gigantic gilded figure, with its crown of solar rays and its upraised torch, signified occultly the glorious Sun Man of the Mysteries, the Universal Savior," wrote Manly P. Hall in his book, The Secret Teachings of All Ages. Hall was not writing about the Statue of Liberty, however, but rather the Colossus of Rhodes, an enormous bronze statue of the Greek god of the sun, Helios, and one of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World.

With its own crown of solar rays and upraised torch, the Statue of Liberty, the original name for which was "Liberty Enlightening the World," signifies occultly the Light Bearer, Lucifer, the Illuminati savior. (Worth noting is the title of the sonnet by Emma Lazarus mounted inside the Statue of Liberty: "The New Colossus.")

THE TORCH OF ILLUMINATION

"Thus Lucifer—the spirit of Intellectual Enlightenment and Freedom of Thought—is metaphorically the guiding beacon," writes Helena Blavatsky in The Secret Doctrine, v. II, "which helps man to find his way through the rocks and sand banks of Life, for Lucifer is the Logos in his highest."

Lucifer as the guiding beacon is symbolized by the "torch of illumination," one of the key symbols of the Illuminati, representing the illumination of Lucifer—a fact that French Freemason Frederic Bartholdi, designer of the Statue of Liberty, would have been well aware of.

TEACHER IN EVERY ART BROUGHT

Prometheus: the Original Torch-Bearer

The torch is an ancient symbol: in Greek mythology, the original "torch-bearer" was Prometheus, the Titan who stole fire from the gods in order to give it to humanity. Writing in The Secret Doctrine, it is again Blavatsky who tells us of "the allegory of Prometheus, who steals the divine fire as to allow men to proceed consciously on the path of spiritual evolution, thus transforming the most perfect of animals on Earth into a potential god, and making him free to take the kingdom of heaven by violence." She continues, "Hence also, the curse pronounced by Zeus against Prometheus, and by Jehovah against his 'rebellious son,' Satan."

Master Freemason Manly P. Hall makes similar observations in Lectures on Ancient Philosophy: "Man wandered hopelessly in the gloom of mortality, living and dying without light or understanding in his servitude to the Demiurgus and his host of spirits. At last the spirit of rebellion entered the creation in the form of Lucifer, who in the guise of a serpent tempted man to revolt against the mandates of Jehovah (the Demiurgus). In Greece this character was known as Prometheus, who brought from the gods the impregnating flame that would release the life latent in this multitude of germlike potentialities."

IDENTITY "DECODED"

Brad Meltzer's investigative series, Decoded, which airs on the History Channel, devoted an entire episode in its 2010 season to the occult identity of the Statue of Liberty. In the end, the investigators discovered that, in fact, the statue has a strong historical occult association with Lucifer—but in a good way. The last interviewee in the program reported that, indeed, the statue does represent Lucifer, but purely as light-bringer, as the illuminator and savior of humanity—asserting a non-existent uniformity of thought within the historical and contemporary occult communities. Again we hear, That Lucifer, he's not such a bad guy after all.

In reality, the Decoded investigative team demonstrated a truly profound ignorance of occult beliefs and traditions, and missed some of the most compelling evidence pointing to the statue's true occult identity.

A POWERFUL LUCIFERIAN PRESENCE

There is in reality much evidence to support the contention that occultists view the Statue of Liberty as a representation of Lucifer—not exclusively so, to be sure, as there are also esoteric connections to Isis, among others. But in the final analysis there is little doubt that the deity invoked on 9/11 was Lucifer, and that the Statue of Liberty was intended to serve as a powerful manifestation of the Luciferian Presence during the 9/11 Occult MegaRitual.

In the end, though, the concept of Liberty is in fact applicable—but only in a very narrow sense. To the engineers of 9/11, liberty means the freedom to do whatever they wish, to whomever, whenever they so desire. Liberty to them is freedom from all constraints, moral, legal and otherwise. Recall Aleister 'Do what thou wilt is the whole of the Law' Crowley writing on Baphomet, "that leaping goat whose attribute is Liberty"—it's that Liberty they're invoking.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

CONNECTING THE DATES: A SIRIUS AFFAIR

INDEPENDENCE DAY?

The tablet held by the Statue of Liberty is inscribed in Roman numerals with July 4, 1776, which is widely recognized as the date of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence. The year 1776 is also the year that the Illuminati was founded; however, there is an even deeper significance behind the date on which our Independence Day falls, as we will soon discover.

A COMMON FOUNDATION

The cornerstone for the pedestal of the Statue of Liberty was laid in a Masonic ceremony on August 5, 1884; eighty two years later, on August 5, 1966, the groundbreaking ceremony for the World Trade Center was conducted. Was this merely a means employed to connect the two locations through time and space in preparation for the 9/11 MegaRitual? Or is there even more to the story?

A COMMON DENOMINATOR

The birthday of the United States of America and the date inscribed on the Statue of Liberty's tablet; the cornerstone laying for the Statue of Liberty's pedestal and the groundbreaking for the World Trade Center; the groundbreaking ceremony for the Pentagon and the attacks in New York and Arlington/Washington—why were these dates used by occultists in repeated fashion, and what do they have in common?

The dates in question are all connected to the brightest object in the occult pantheon (as well as the brightest star in the night sky), Sirius, the Dog Star. "It would be difficult to exaggerate the fanatical degree of attachment the priesthood of Egypt and all subsequent related Hermetic traditions had for Sirius," writes Michael Hoffman in Secret Societies and Psychological Warfare. "The entire calendar year of the Egyptians was based upon the rising times of this star."

Indeed, Sirius was of unique importance to the Egyptians, and is recorded in the earliest astronomical records. During the Middle Kingdom, Egyptians based their calendar on Sirius' heliacal rising, the date on which a star or other celestial body first becomes visible above the eastern horizon just before sunrise after a period of being absent from view. In ancient Egypt, Sirius' heliacal rising originally occurred just before the annual flooding of the Nile River and the summer solstice, after a 70-day absence from the skies.[1]

Sirius in Antiquity

The Greeks and Romans knew Sirius well. Writing in the Iliad, Homer, the greatest ancient Greek epic poet, said this concerning Sirius:

Sirius rises late in the dark, liquid sky
On summer nights, star of stars,
Orion's Dog they call it, brightest
Of all, but an evil portent, bringing heat
And fevers to suffering humanity.

Homer elaborates, referring to Sirius as the star "whose beams blaze forth in time of harvest more brilliantly than those of any other that shines by night; brightest of them all though he be, he yet bodes ill for mortals, for he brings fire and fever in his train."[2]

Sirius is part of the constellation Canis Major, which Roman myth referred to as Janitor Lethaeus, the watchdog of Hell. Canis Major (Latin for 'greater dog') is one of the dogs following Orion the hunter, and Sirius is recognized as the dog's nose.

"An evil portent," the nose of the watchdog of Hell—now there's a pretty bad historical reputation.

The Blazing Star

Sirius occupies a unique position in more contemporary occult thought, as well. Writing in Morals and Dogma concerning the preeminence of the star within Freemasonry, Albert Pike states, "The Ancient Astronomers saw all the great Symbols of Masonry in the Stars. Sirius glitters in our lodges as the Blazing Star." He continues:

> In Freemasonry, it is taught that the Blazing Star is a symbol of deity, of omnipresence (the Creator is present everywhere) and of omniscience (the Creator sees and knows all).

> Sirius is therefore the “sacred place” all Masons must ascend to: It is the source of divine power and the destination of divine individuals.
> To achieve perfection, the initiate must successfully understand and internalize the dual nature of the world (good and evil; masculine and feminine; black and white, etc.) through alchemical metamorphosis. This concept is symbolically represented by the union of Osiris and Isis (the male and female principles) to give birth to Horus, the star-child, the Christ-like figure, the perfected man of Freemasonry—who is equated with the Blazing Star.

Here, again in Morals and Dogma, Pike reiterates the last point: “The sun and moon … represent the two grand principles … the male and the female … both shed their light upon their offspring, the blazing star, or Horus.”

Elsewhere in the book, Pike states, “[The Blazing Star] originally represented SIRIUS, or the Dog-star, the forerunner of the inundation of the Nile; …It was HERMES, also, the Master of Learning, whose name in Greek is that of the God Mercury.”

Writing in her Theosophical Glossary, Helena Blavatsky records a similar observation:

> The dog-star: the star worshipped in Egypt and reverenced by the Occultists; by the former because its heliacal rising with the Sun was a sign of the beneficient inundation of the Nile, and by the latter because it is mysteriously associated with Toth-Hermes, god of wisdom, and Mercury, in another form. Thus Sothis-Sirius had, and still has, a mystic and direct influence over the whole living heaven, and is connected with almost every god and goddess.

Sirius, the Freemasonic Blazing Star, their ‘sacred place’, equated with the perfected man, Horus; yet, also representing Thoth-Hermes-Mercury, exercising “a mystic and direct influence over the whole living heaven.”

However, as many are aware, there are various levels within Freemasonry, and there is often more to a story than first meets the eye. Helena Blavatsky, in her book Isis Unveiled, provides a crucial clue to Sirius' occult alter-ego: "... Hermes, the god of wisdom, called also Thoth, Tat, Set, Set, and Sat-an; and that he was, furthermore, when viewed under his bad aspect, Typhon, the Egyptian Satan, who was also Set." The plot thickens…

The "Silver Star" of Aleister Crowley and others

Sirius was called the "Argentinium Astrum," or Silver Star, by the Masons and Rosicrucians, and in 1907, Aleister Crowley started his own occult order, called the A:.A:.. British occultist, novelist and poet Kenneth Grant met Aleister Crowley in 1944 and was initiated into the A:.A:. in 1946. In his book, The Magical Revival, Grant writes,

A∴A∴ SIGILLUM SANCTUM FRATERNITATIS

> First and foremost is the energy or force emanating from the sun Sirius. If it might be so expressed, the energy of thought, or mind force, in its totality, reaches the solar system from a distant cosmic centre via Sirius. Sirius acts as the transmitter, or the focalising centre, whence emanate those influences which produce self-consciousness in man.

But in his 1973 book, Aleister Crowley & the Hidden God, Grant provides a decidedly different perspective, informing us that "The Silver Star (A:.A:.) is Sirius. …the key to the present aeon of Horus, for it represents the energy of Satan that will permeate the earth during the present cycle."

Ah, yes, the energy of Satan … Sirius, then, according to sources ranging from Homer to Crowleyite Grant, is a fairly nasty character, a fact that others will readily attest to.

The Devil of Darkness, the Dwelling of Lucifer

In her 1971 book, Woman's Mysteries: Ancient and Modern, New Age author M. Esther Harding states that Sirius is portrayed by Black Magick Satanists as the "Devil of Darkness" and the "Lord of the Underworld."

In addition to this sinister characterization of Sirius, Christian author Texe Marrs reveals that Sirius is also viewed as the dwelling of Lucifer, stating in his 1990 Book of New Age Cults and Religions: "Throughout the centuries, Sirius has been recognized by most occultists and esoteric teachers as the location where Lucifer and his hierarchy dwell. In Christian terminology, Sirius is simply a secretive codeword for 'hell.'"

A SIRIUS AFFAIR

So now we've come to it … Although certainly not viewed as purely evil by all cultures and esoteric traditions, it has been well established that a considerable consensus exists across a broad spectrum of occult thought regarding Sirius' malign influence. At this point in the examination of the occult script for the 9/11 MegaRitual, it would be safe to assume that the orchestrators of the event were, to put it mildly, intently focused upon Sirius' negative aspects.

Confirming this suspicion, the late James Shelby Downard argues in "Sorcery, Sex, Assassination, and the Science of Symbolism" that a Sirius cult exists today at the highest levels of US military intelligence. Downard goes so far as to say that the viewing chamber of the Palomar Observatory is used for its rituals, which evoke those of ancient Egypt, and are performed in the star's focused light.[3]

But how, exactly, does this relate to Independence Day, the Twin Towers, the Pentagon and the Statue of Liberty/Lucifer? Recall the discussion in an earlier chapter on auspicious dates, electional astrology and ephemeral elections, and make sure you're properly strapped in, because just when you think that there couldn't possibly be anything else left to learn, the bottom drops out of the ride and you can see there's still a long way to go.

More of Sirius in Antiquity: Hesiod, Virgil, Statius and Manilius on the Dog Star

"Their souls passed beneath the earth and went down into the house of Haides; but their bones, when the skin is rotted about them, crumble away on the dark earth under parching Seirios."

—Hesiod, Shield of Heracles

"And now Sirius (the Dog Star), fiercely parching the thirsty Indians, was ablaze in heaven, and the fiery Sun had consumed half his course; the grass was withering and the hollow streams, in their parched throats, were scorched and baked by the rays down to the slime."

—Virgil, Georgics 2

"Twas the season when the vault of heaven bends its most scorching heat upon the earth, and Sirius the Dog-star smitten by Hyperion's [the sun's] full might pitilessly burns the panting fields."

—Statius, Silvae 3.1.5 (trans. Mozley)

"The brilliant constellation of the Dog: it barks forth flame, raves with its fire, and doubles the burning heat of the Sun. When it put its torch to the earth and discharges its rays, the earth foresees its conflagration and tastes its ultimate fate. Neptune lies motionless in the midst of his waters and the green blood is drained from leaves and grass. All living things seek alien climes and the world looks for another world to repair to; beset by temperatures too great to bear, nature is afflicted with a sickness of its own making, alive, but on a funeral-pyre: such is the heat diffused among the constellations, and everything is brought to a halt by a single star. When the Dogstar rises over the rim of the sea, which at its birth not even the flood of Ocean can quench, it will fashion unbridled spirits and impetuous hearts; it will bestow on its sons billows of anger, and draw upon them the hatred and fear of the whole populace.

—Manilius, Astronomica

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

NEW YEAR'S DAY AND THE MALEVOLENT MEGA-TALISMANS

9/11—HAPPY NEW YEAR!

The Egyptians' New Year was originally marked by the first dawn rising of Sirius, which at that time occurred in June on the summer solstice. However, over time the heliacal rising of Sirius drifted forward from the solstice.

Today's Coptic calendar (also called the Alexandrian calendar) is based on the ancient Egyptian calendar and is still used in Egypt, and also by the Coptic Orthodox Church. The first month of the year is named Thout, after Thoth, and thus the first day of the New Year is the 1st of Thout.

On the Gregorian calendar, this date coincides with September 11th—so that date is not only New Year's Day, but, more importantly, it is the symbolic, or observed, date of Sirius' heliacal rising. (September 11 = 1/1; yet another 11, of sorts.)

We already know Thoth as the Egyptian God of Magic and as the precursor/counterpart to the Greek God of Commerce, Hermes—with the pair having jointly played key roles thusfar in the MegaRitual—yet Thoth was also known as "the reckoner of times and seasons," a god of the measurement and regulation of events and of time itself. Thoth was credited with making the calculations for the establishment of the heavens and everything in them, and was said to direct the motions of the heavenly bodies.

Thus, the entire 9/11 Global MegaRitual unfolded on the first day of the New Year on a calendar derived from the ancient Egyptian calendar, in a month named for Thoth, the Egyptian God of Time (the full significance of which will be made clear soon).

Even more significantly from an occult perspective, this date is tied directly to Sirius in a most powerful fashion, with the intent being to bring the entire day's events under the dark energies of Sirius, and to invoke the blessings of Lucifer, who resides there.

However, the utilization of this malign occult strategy wasn't confined to September 11, 2001…

MAGICAL ELECTIONS

Talismans represent the logical extension of a spiritual world view and have been a part of Western culture for thousands of years. Renaissance Magi like Marsilio Ficino and Cornelius Agrippa saw the entire Cosmos as one great, interconnected Being, a system based on intricate harmony, sympathy and correspondence, both spiritual and material. Astrology, alchemy and magic were seen as the preparatory studies for Hermetic Gnosis, a practical way of experiencing the unity of the Cosmos.[1]

Talisman comes from the Greek telesma, meaning consecrated or sacred object, and unless a talisman is created at an astrologically auspicious time and ritually consecrated, it is nothing more than a piece of jewelry with astrological designs, lacking any magical or spiritual charge.

The key to astrological talismans, then, is the timing of their creation as determined by electional astrology. Although astrology is not inherently connected with magic, ephemeral elections have been used in ancient and modern times to make talismans and seals (in such instances, the term "magical elections" is used). These items are seen to be imbued with the qualities of the auspicious date on which they are made… [2]

Armed with this last little bit of information, let's revisit two dates: July 4th, and August 5th.

THE FOURTH OF JULY

"Conjunction" is a term used in positional astronomy and astrology, and means that, from a particular geographic location (say, New York, for instance), two celestial bodies appear near one another in the sky. In the modern era, the date on which Sirius conjuncts with the Sun, which esoterically is considered the embrace of our physical and spiritual Suns, is … July 4th. The inscription on the Statue of Liberty's tablet is not, then, simply a reference to the founding of America (or even of the Illuminati), but, far more importantly, is an encoded tribute to Sirius.

AUGUST 5TH

If 9/11 is the observed date of Sirius' heliacal rising, then the date of the "initiation" of both the Statue of Liberty and the Twin Towers corresponds with … wait for it … the actual date of Sirius' heliacal rising. Writing in Secret Chamber: The Quest for the Hall of Records, researcher Robert Bauval notes, "Precession has since caused that date to shift 45 days, and now the heliacal rising of Sirius occurs on the 5th August." (August 5 = 8/5 … Flight 85 … just sayin')

Best Wishes

In light of the significance of August 5th, you have to wonder if the following widely-known quote from President George W. Bush—taken from remarks he made in Washington, D.C., on August 5th, 2004—is just another Bushism, or perhaps something much more intentional and deliberately spoken: "Our enemies are innovative and resourceful, and so are we. They never stop thinking about new ways to harm our country and our people, and neither do we." Making the comment even more compelling is that he was reading closely from prepared remarks when he made it, during a speech at the signing ceremony for a $417 billion defense spending bill (The Department of Defense Appropriations Act of 2005). Interesting, too, is that no one in the audience of military brass or Pentagon chiefs reacted in the slightest. Maybe Bush wasn't quite the bumbler everyone thought he was, and maybe he meant it when he said in 2009: "I'm telling you there's an enemy that would like to attack America, Americans, again. There just is. That's the reality of the world. And I wish him all the very best."

MALEVOLENT MEGATALISMANS

September 11th, July 4th, August 5th—all directly connected with the abode of Lucifer—and we now see that the Statue of Liberty, the Twin Towers and the Pentagon were all intended to be imbued with the seething energies of Sirius/Lucifer—and are/were, in effect, malevolent MegaTalismans.

Work on the Pentagon mega-talisman started on September 11th, and then the structure was attacked on that very same day exactly 60 years later in an act of synergetic magickal destruction saturated with Sirian/Luciferian energies. In similar fashion, the August 5th commencement date for the Statue of Lucifer and the Twin Towers mega-talismans brought them under the spell of the Silver Star, with the towers being born on 8/5 and destroyed on 9/11 under the watchful eye (and torch) of the Illuminated One.

Indeed, marked with both August 5th and July 4th, we can be doubly assured that our beloved Statue of Liberty has a dual identity, and that its hidden occult persona is that of none other than Lucifer.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

ARE YOU SIRIUS?

Satire is quite important in the occult scheme, especially as epilogue. Mockery is the ne plus ultra of ceremonial murder.

—Michael Hoffman, Secret Societies and Psychological Warfare

This installment of the 9/11 occult script falls squarely into the you-can't-make-this-stuff-up category…

We've met Sirius, the Dog Star, the shining light of the occultists, whose pernicious presence is ubiquitous throughout the 9/11 MegaRitual. Now, meet Sirius, the Police Dog, the only such animal to be killed in the attack on the Twin Towers, who died in his kennel in the basement of Tower Two when it collapsed.

Sirius, a four-and-a-half-year old, ninety pound yellow Labrador Retriever, was an Explosive Detection Dog with the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey Police Department. It just so happens that Sirius' badge number was 17, and the 17th card in the Tarot is…wait for it…The Star, which, according to many occultists, depicts (what else?)—Sirius.

Adding to the occultists' delight is that K is the 11th letter of the alphabet (hooray, another 11), thus K-9 is the reverse of 9/11: K-9, 9/11…oh, who cares.

The intended outcome of the death of this specially-named creature was, of course, that through all of the related news coverage, memorials and tributes, the name Sirius would be heavily intermingled with 9/11, spreading like a memetic virus into people's consciousness…9/11→Evil Magic, Sirius…9/11→Evil Magic, Sirius…

SOMEWHERE OVER THE RAINBOW BRIDGE…

The memorial website created for Sirius featured the following tribute (with "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" from the Wizard of Oz soundtrack playing in the background):

Sirius ...

Dazzling sparkle in the distance
Brightest star on earth
Closest to our heart.

You came and shared your light for such a little while Brought such brightness, gave such joy ...
Now you shine above and watch from distant skies
As the guardian you were, as the guardian you are still.
Companion, guide, protector, friend
Partner and pal on constant alert.
Courageous and cautious,
Patient and obedient,
Strong in spirit, gentle in design,
Quick to defend, eager to follow,
Disciplined for action, poised for careful command.

Sirius ... Brilliant in the night,
Star of the first magnitude,
Hero of the same
Nine light years away,
Held here in our hearts for eternity.

Run free across the Rainbow bridge and in green pastures;
You have done your job well, friend!

One might be tempted to think that, beyond being offensively sappy, the poem is an essentially harmless tribute to a dead dog—until, that is, you learn that the "rainbow bridge" is an essential occult concept referring to the psychic connection between the heart, where the emotions lie, and the mind, where spirituality and intellect reside. (It's also the name of a 1972 New Age hippie film starring rock legend Jimi Hendrix.)

The rainbow bridge, also called the Antahkarana, can refer to this internal connection, or to the bridge between Heaven and Earth—which, apparently, is still under construction—and some New Age spiritualists believe that Sirius is a major guiding force in the building of this bridge between worlds.

One could, then, draw the conclusion that those inclined to do so, such as the occult scripters of 9/11, would pervert the concept and envision the building of a Rainbow Bridge to Lucifer (and you'd be correct). So, whether the author intended it or not, this seemingly innocent little tribute has Luciferian colorings, and, intentionally or inadvertently, before or after the fact, this becomes yet another element of the occult script for 9/11.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

THE GATES OF HELL: SATANIC SACRIFICIAL MEGA-ALTARS

> The secret services of all nations are directed or influenced by personalities which are marked by a criminal, a perverted, a criminal-pathological, or in any case, an exceedingly vulgar imagination. … But the worst perversion of the secret services—and how could there be a worse one—is that of human sacrifice.
> —Hans Habe, Agent of the Devil

Even though the Twin Towers no longer exist, we are methodically and painstakingly reconstructing them, not literally of course, but as the gigantic occult monstrosities they were—a reality that is just now beginning to come into plain view. The full hideousness of these diabolical constructs, however, has yet to be revealed.

THE TWINS AND THE GATES OF DEATH

The idea of the Twin Towers as dual Siriusly-consecrated mega-talismans only does partial justice to their true nature. Into our magical formulation we must combine The Tower of the tarot as the Devil's House, the House of the Damned, the Fire, Inferno—Hell. As we ritually prepare these immense Pillars of Hermes, we invoke his presence as the god of gateways.

XVIIII
LE · SOLEIL

And it isn't until this moment that we see our old friend Saturn, the Planet of Death, in Gemini on 9/11: Gemini, the Twins, one of two celestial gateways where the ecliptic intersects the Zodiac, gateways that represent entrances to the Otherworld. Thus we have Gemini, not only symbolized in the Twin Towers, but through a powerful sympathetic As-above-so-below correspondence, energizing the towers as the mundane counterpart of the celestial gateway to the Next Realm, as earthly representations of heavenly gates—or, far more appropriately in this instance, as the Gates of Death.

The Lord of Death, Saturn, in Gemini, in conjunction with Pluto (Hades), all bathed in the Luciferian energies of Sirius: under these potent astrological conditions sit the Twin Towers, as the Devil's House, as the Gates of Death … but not simply of death. What emerges from this esoteric construction process are the very Gates of Hell, with this dreadful occult creation being birthed into existence on the morning of September 11, 2001, as the towers and their occupants were engulfed in flame and smoke, as victims burned alive or jumped to their deaths in the streets below, and as the airwaves around the globe became saturated with these images.

Yet, the Twin Towers were not merely imbued from their beginning with evil energies, or transformed through astrological and magickal means into symbolic, then literal, Gates of Hell. The very buildings themselves were constructed of symbols, symbols of steel that stated plainly and on a monumental scale to whom these towers were dedicated, and, in hindsight, foreshadowed the ultimate use to which they would be put on 9/11.

THE KEY ARCHITECTURAL ELEMENT OF THE TWIN TOWERS

So immense that they were simply overlooked, or seen by eyes unaware—either way, hiding in plain sight—there they were, massive tridents, the primary architectural element of the Twin Towers. Dr. Cathy Burns, writing in Masonic and Occult Symbols Illustrated, illuminates us as to the significance of this fact: "Mythologist Joseph Campbell reminds us that the 'trefoil or trident is the symbol of Shiva, Poseidon, Satan'. The Trident is also a fire symbol."

Indeed, in Christian iconography, the trident is the weapon of the Devil. It might come as a surprise to some, but that's not a pitchfork ol' Pip is carrying—and the Twin MegaTalismans were literally wrapped in a Satanic symbol. (Just for the record, Dealey Plaza in Dallas, where President Kennedy was assassinated, is laid out as a trident. More on this other great American megaritual later.)

Super-sized Sacrificial Altars

As you attempt to process the implications of this revelation, consider this: combined with the other evidence, it now becomes extremely difficult to escape the conclusion that these buildings were designed and constructed with their ultimate purpose in mind. It seems that these structures were preordained to become twin towering infernos, the gates of Hell, Hell on earth—filled with tormented victims, innocents, heroes, whole sacrifices, human sacrifices, sacrificed by fire. They were, unmistakably, Satanic MegaAltars.

Fresh What?

If the idea of the victims of the attacks on the Twin Towers as living sacrifices is as offensive to you as it should be, this next bit may leave you retching on the floor.

After 9/11, about two million tons of material from Ground Zero was taken to a nearby landfill for sorting, where thousands of detectives and forensic evidence specialists worked for over 1.7 million hours to recover remnants of those killed in the attacks. More than 1,600 personal effects were retrieved, and over 4,000 human remains recovered, and from those remains, 300 people were identified. The remaining debris, which in all likelihood contains fragmentary human remains, was buried in the landfill.

And the name of this place where the pieces of what we now understand to be sacrificial victims were taken? (Prepare yourself for the most egregious instance of mockery in the entire script for the 9/11 MegaRitual…) Fresh Kills Landfill on Staten Island.

GARBAGE BARG
FRESH KILLS

And Don't You Forget It…

On 9/11, the day of "Evil Magic," the Statue of Lucifer overlooked the ritual sacrifice of thousands of innocents and heroes in twin vessels built, consecrated and symbolically marked for that very purpose. And just in case you didn't get the point, two remaining tridents from the towers are being prominently incorporated into the WTC Memorial. (For future reference, some of the steel from the Twin Towers was used in the building of the USS New York, which, given the perverse innerworkings of the minds of these evil sorcerors, may at some time be destroyed in another false flag attack.)

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

A MASSIVE CEREMONIAL COMPLEX

The connections between the Statue of Liberty and the Twin Towers have been fully explored: there's the obvious geographical proximity, as well as multiple esoteric ties. However, there is more at Ground Zero and in the general vicinity than first meets the eye—much more. Stepping back and taking a look at the broader environment, we discover the presence of other objects of occult/ritual significance.

Consider the temple complexes of the Greeks and Egyptians, with their many buildings, statues and ceremonial and sacrificial areas: these individual elements are properly viewed as working parts of a collective whole.

The ancients honored their deities with monumental architecture, and modern practitioners of the Great Mysteries have done no less, only their honorific constructs are hidden in plain view. Could it be that the entire area around Ground Zero is a massive ritual occult ceremonial center?

THE WORLD FINANCIAL CENTER: ELEVATED SYMBOLS

The World Financial Center lies directly adjacent to the World Trade Center on the west side, and atop its four tallest buildings are four incredibly powerful occult symbols: 1.) an unfinished pyramid; 2.) a stepped pyramid; 3.) a square pyramid; and, 4.) a dome.

There is no way to know for certain what these symbols represented to the planners of the 9/11 MegaRitual, or whether they served an active role in the ritual or simply were a part of the ceremonial setting. What is for certain is that they are all of significance to occultists, and their presence at this location cannot be a coincidence.

THE UNFINISHED PYRAMID

Each of these four symbols has multiple meanings. The unfinished pyramid might be said to superficially represent our ongoing pursuit of perfection as individuals and as a species; or, the Founders' still-incomplete task of building America. Writing in The Secret Destiny of America, Manly P. Hall states, "On the reverse of our nation's Great Seal is an unfinished pyramid to represent human society itself, imperfect and incomplete. Above floats the symbol of the esoteric orders, the radiant triangle with its all-seeing eye."

That which is not present, the capstone, also has significance. Again, Manly Hall, in The Secret Teachings of All Ages: "As a rough and unfinished block,

Photo By
Det.Greg Semendinger
NYC Police Aviation Unit

man is taken from the quarry and by the secret culture of the Mysteries gradually transformed into a trued and perfect pyramidal capstone." Hall continues, "The temple is complete only when the initiate himself becomes the living apex through which the divine power is focused into the diverging structure below."

Referring back to the "radiant triangle" Hall mentioned, James Davis Carter, in Masonry in US History—Background, History and Influence to 1846, observes, "The triangle also represents the capstone of the unfinished pyramid and reminds the Mason of the immortality of the soul and that in eternity he will complete the capstone of his earthly labors according to the designs on the trestle-board of the Supreme Architect of the Universe." Davis concludes, "The unfinished pyramid cannot fail to remind him of the unfinished condition of the Temple when tragedy struck down its Master architect."

Interpretations with darker meanings exist, however, and are more applicable in this context. If the capstone could in a positive sense represent the transformation of the initiate into a perfected being, under a more sinister interpretation the unfinished pyramid represents the mass of humanity, as "a rough and unfinished block ... taken from the quarry and by the secret culture of the Mysteries gradually transformed" into their image of perfection—into a posthuman, transhuman collective hive awaiting the bidding of its masters.

The orchestrators of 9/11 would not have had a utopian vision of the physical and spiritual evolution of mankind in mind. To them, the unfinished pyramid infers an artificially-accelerated, technologically-and-pharmacologically-induced synthetic evolution of humanity, directed by their hand for their own nefarious purposes.

The 9/11 MegaRitual was indeed part of that very process, one designed to utilize fear and terror to force the transmutation of human society, of our very consciousness, individual and collective.

The Stepped and Square Pyramids

Pyramids are viewed as "stairways to heaven," symbolic stairways to the stars, and the stepped pyramid of the World Financial Center might well represent a Stairway to the occult-Masonic heaven, Sirius.

The square pyramid is symbolic of a mountain, with its corners representing the four corners of the world and the four cardinal directions. More significantly, it is a path between Heaven and Earth, with its peak rising into the sky. In occult lore, the pyramid is considered to be the ultimate symbol of the Mysteries, representing the transition from the material plane to the spiritual world. From the square base of the pyramid, representing the material world, rises—in mathematical perfection—four triangles, representing divinity. According to many occult researchers, the pyramids of ancient Egypt were used for the purposes of initiation, where candidates were led to the path of illumination.

Albert Pike, writing in Morals and Dogma, concurs, stating that "The more the great Hierophants were at pains to conceal their absolute Science, the more they sought to add grandeur to and multiply its symbols. The huge pyramids, with their triangular sides of elevation and square bases, represented their Metaphysics, founded upon the knowledge of Nature."

There may be no singly-important meaning of the pyramid in this context, as it is "the ultimate symbol of the Mysteries." For certain, it represents the path of illumination, and we have well seen that the inspired source of illumination from the perspective of the 9/11 script writers is the Light-Bearer, Lucifer.

The Dome

Last but certainly not least, the dome is often associated with both Isis and Sirius, and is in fact a component of the hieroglyph for Sirius. The image invoked is of a womb, birthing a new humanity, giving rise to a new aeon, Aleister Crowley's Aeon of Horus.

Interpreting the Complex

The Twin Towers were sacrificial altars or vessels, and were themselves 'sacrificed' as part of the 9/11 MegaRitual. The mass human sacrifice and the destruction of the sacrificial vessels (recalling the burning of the Wicker Man) were performed in the presence of these four over-sized occult symbols—each of which bears its own significance and meaning.

More than one of these symbols invokes the Blazing Star, Sirius, and it is also possible that these four symbols together constitute a coherent occult statement. Perhaps they are a three-dimensional explication of what could well be the ultimate goal of the MegaRitual itself: the transmutation of human consciousness through fear and terror.

As nasty a thought as this is, though, we won't dwell on it any longer, because there is yet another element of the massive 9/11 Satanic Ceremonial Complex that we've thusfar ignored.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

THE MILLENIUM HILTON: AN INSPIRED CREATION

Directly east of the World Trade Center lies the Millenium Hilton (the misspelling of "millennium" was intentional on the part of the hotel owner). Google this phrase and on one of the many New York travel pages that are returned on the search, you'll likely find the following statement:

"The hotel is a high-rise black glass building which pays homage to Arthur C. Clarke's vision of the Monolith in 2001: A Space Odyssey."

This sentence apparently once appeared on the Millenium Hilton's website (although it's no longer there), and in looking at the building there's no question that the fictional monolith was the inspiration for it. It is certainly a striking piece of architecture, but surely it's just a harmless architectural tribute to an iconic piece of science fiction…

A Monolithic Presence

In the film 2001, the black monolith not only stood witness to, but facilitated the creation of a new world. On September 11, 2001, this massive facsimile sat directly to the side of the Twin Towers as they were destroyed, and the Millenium Monolith likewise stood witness to the creation of a new world: fear of terrorism in the homeland as a new part of daily life in America; the erosion of civil liberties and the establishment of a domestic police state; wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

That's all, though, right?, we want to tell ourselves. We're exhausted—No more dark secrets, no more mockery. Yet, as with every other ugly aspect of 9/11, wishing it weren't true doesn't make it so.

The Sentinel

Clarke's film was based on an earlier short story he'd written, entitled "The Sentinel," which is precisely what the Millenium Monolith was intended to represent. It was an intentional occult construct, an over-sized real-life dark sentinel designed to stand witness to a monumental act of Evil Magic.

Oh…no… Oh, yes, says trusty guide Michael Hoffman, again in Secret Societies and Psychological Warfare: "The mute monolith of 2001 is harbinger of what Clarke calls…the Overlord. It is the ashlar of the secret societies. The monolith represents the shaping function of the occult magus, who tames and tampers with the natural world." No, no, no… Shut up, replies Hoffman, continuing, "This Freemason's radiating ashlar, this transmitter monolith, is a sentinel that we allegedly trigger with our awareness—a 'progressive development' which is in turn conveyed by the sentinel to the 'higher powers' ('dark gods')."

9/11, 2001—Evil Magic…and this massive black evil big brother of the monolith from 2001 has ringside seats to the Greatest Show on Earth, sitting there, in plain view, conveying all that he sees to the dark powers, and mocking us… YOU CAN'T SEE ME!

Wrapping Up

Surely that's all, surely we're done with this place… Yes, we're done with Ground Zero (although those with the stomach for it can revisit this locale in Bonus Chapter Twenty Eight to see what is going on there now.)

You can't get out of your seats, yet, though, because we still have to bring everything together and reconstruct the full occult script for the 9/11 MegaRitual and reflect upon it, in all of its hideous glory.

But before we do that, we need to look at a couple of logical suspects, and afterwards we'll ask the question, "How long was this maniacal production in the works?"

CHAPTER TWENTY

PIKE'S PALLADIAN RITE AND DEM BONES

If you tell a lie big enough and keep repeating it, people will eventually come to believe it. The lie can be maintained only for such time as the State can shield the people from the political, economic and/or military consequences of the lie. It thus becomes vitally important for the State to use all of its powers to repress dissent, for the truth is the mortal enemy of the lie, and thus by extension, the truth is the greatest enemy of the State.

—Dr. Joseph Goebbels, chief propagandist for the Nazi Party

See, in my line of work you got to keep repeating things over and over and over again for the truth to sink in, to kind of catapult the propaganda.

—President George W. Bush, Greece, N.Y., May 24, 2005

This is not a whodunit and we're not here to figure out how the conspiracy that generated the 9/11 occult script worked, or precisely who (with an exception or two) was involved.

The world of conspiracy theory is a dark, murky place, and when it comes to the usual suspects in these sorts of affairs (of which 9/11 is just the grandest example thus far, but by no means the only one), it is easy to get mired down in a bubbling stew of unsubstantiated rumor, disinformation, hogwash and bullshit.

The New World Order, Illuminati, Freemasons, Council on Foreign Relations…there are plenty of books available on these and many related topics, and good luck to you if you decide to spend half your life trying to determine which authors and sources are credible and which are not. The truth may be out there, but it's encrusted in a layer of crud a mile thick. (See Appendix A, "The Usual Suspects in the Quest for World Domination.")

However, before moving on, we are going to take time to look at two possible suspects, the first entity for what it appears to be but is not, and the second because the organization in question and those affiliated with it fit the 'criminal profile' in this case so well that it's almost comical.

THE PALLADIAN RITE

Albert Pike, who lived from 1809 to 1891, was a prominent Freemason and author of Morals and Dogma of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry. Pike was elected Sovereign Grand Commander of the Scottish Rite's Southern Jurisdiction in 1859, a position he held for the remainder of his life.

Pike was also reportedly the Grand Master of an organization known as the Order of the New and Reformed Palladian Rite, which was a resurrected version of an earlier group founded in Paris in the 1700s called the Order of the Palladium. According to legend, the Order had been brought to Greece from Egypt by Pythagoras in the fifth century, and it was said that this "cult of Satan" was aligned with the Palladium of the Templars and introduced to the inner circle of the Masonic lodges.

Pike's Palladium Rite was said to be an international Luciferian alliance of key Masons, and in her book, Hidden Secrets of the Eastern Star, Dr. Cathy Burns writes, > Knowing of Pike's admiration for Lucifer, we shouldn't be astonished to find out that Pike created a Palladium Rite which was a secret rite that openly worshipped Lucifer and practiced blatant occultism. This rite was to be kept secret at all costs and only a chosen few were selected. The Palladium, we are told, would be an international alliance of key Masons. It would bring in the Grand Lodges, the Grand Orient, the 97 degrees of Memphiz-Mitzraim (the Ancient and Primitive Rite) and the Scottish Rite. The name, Palladium, was taken from a Masonic order founded in 1720 which died out, only to re-emerge in Charleston under Pike.

> The Palladian Rite was to be a supreme, universal rite of Masonry that would over-arch all of the other rites, and centralize all high Masonic bodies in the world under one head, that head being Lucifer with Pike as his human agent.

The "H" Word

As described, the Palladian Rite certainly sounds like a logical suspect on which to pin the blame for the 9/11 Global Occult Monstrosity. An ultra-powerful, ultra-secretive (okay, perhaps not so secretive given that you're reading about it here) Luciferian core of worldwide Freemasonry? Man, that fits the bill—that's it, cased closed, get the torches and pitchforks.

There's just one problem. Pike's Palladian Rite probably doesn't even exist, and was almost certainly a hoax perpetrated by one Léo Taxil (originally Marie Joseph Gabriel Antoine Jogand-Pagès). Taxil, a French writer and journalist, wrote a series of pamphlets and books in the 1890s denouncing Freemasonry and charging their lodges with worshipping the devil—which, as it turned out, was only one of a series of hoaxes he'd concocted.

The ultimate truth of the matter may be more complicated than that, and just because Taxil's writings may have been a hoax, doesn't mean there's not a Luciferian core at the heart of Freemasonry—but good luck proving it. Regardless, our next suspect, although it may be a familiar one to some, certainly warrants closer scrutiny in light of what we've learned about the 9/11 occult framework.

Dem Bones

The 9/11 Occult MegaRitual was by all appearances the work of extremely powerful Black Magick Satanic secret societies, and the President at that time, George W. Bush, is a publicly-acknowledged member of Skull & Bones, a Yale undergraduate society that has been characterized by conspiracy theorists as, well, a Black Magick Satanic secret society … what a coincidence.

President Bush on Meet the Press, February 8, 2004:

> Russert: You were both in Skull and Bones, the [Yale] secret society.
> President Bush: It's so secret we can't talk about it.
> Russert: What does that mean for America? The conspiracy theorists are going to go wild.

"Skull and Bones has the characteristics of a death cult," writes John W. Whitehead of the Rutherford Institute in his 2004 article, "The Secrets of Bush and Kerry: What Are They Hiding from Us?," in which he continues, "and most of the lore surrounding it centers on its death fixation. In fact, the entire secret society revolves around death-centered imagery. The initiates are told that they must 'die to the barbarian world' and be born again in the company of the elect or, as they call it, The Order."

Whitehead also tells us that,

> Some critics point to the fact that Skull and Bones is similar to other powerful secret societies such as the Thule Society, which emerged in Germany in the early 20th century. Much like its modern counterpart Skull and Bones, the German Thule Society initiated its members with elaborate rituals that mimic those of black magic—replete with sexual practices, blood orgies and communicating with spirits such as the devil. And, in fact, both groups use identical symbols to identify their respective group—the nefarious skull with two crossed bones.

Skull & Bones is a regular feature in many conspiracy theories, some of which assert that the society plays a key role in a global cabal bent on world domination. It has been alleged, for example, that the society—informally referred to as "Bones" (and its members as "Bonesmen")—is a branch of the Illuminati and controls the Central Intelligence Agency.[1]

"Bonesmen are like a cross between Forrest Gump and Zelig," writes Washington Post Staff Writer Don Oldenburg in a 2004 article, "always in the picture at major historical crossroads: Bonesmen oversaw development of the atomic bomb and influenced the decision to use it on Japan. They managed the postwar occupation of Germany. They helped shape U.S. Cold War policies. They were pol-

A Skull & Bones Calling Card

In 2000, the year in which Bonesman G.W. Bush was elected, the Republican logo was changed from its original configuration, left, to the one shown on the right—with three inverted pentagrams—which is still in use.

It took them a while (2008), but hell, even Mother Jones took note.

POLITICAL MOJO

Is There Satanic Symbolism in the GOP's Log

By Mother Jones

Something's wrong with the Republican logo. The stars are upside down. Five-sided stars that point upwards—like those on the Democratic donkey and the American flag—traditionally symbolize the forces of good. An overturned pentagram, however, represents the goat's head of Satan and the forces of evil—and there are three on the Republicans' elephant.

The GOP's stars weren't always upside down; some say the change occurred around icymakers during the Vietnam War. They have ties to the Council on Foreign Relations and the Trilateral Commission—two hot-button organizations for conspiracy theorists." Oldenburg continues, saying that conspiracy theorists "have a field day over the fact that Bonesmen were among the founders of the Central Intelligence Agency. They love to point out that statues of the patriot spy Nathan Hale, Yale 1773, stand on both the university's campus and the CIA's headquarters in Langley."

John Whitehead adds further detail: "Known for its celebrity membership, Skull and Bones' alumni include numerous power-wielding individuals such as former President William Howard Taft, Henry Luce—the founder of Time magazine, U.S. Supreme Court justices, mega-corporation founders and leaders and such recent luminaries as former President George H.W. Bush, President George W. Bush and Sen. John Kerry."

MULTI-GENERATIONAL BUSH BONESMEN

George W. certainly wasn't the first or only member of the Bush family to join Skull & Bones. Writing in the May 2000 issue of the Atlantic magazine, Alexandra Robbins states, > Bush men have been Yale men and Bonesmen for generations. Prescott Bush, George W's grandfather, Yale '17, was a legendary Bonesman; he was a member of the band that stole for the society what became one of its most treasured artifacts: a skull that was said to be that of the Apache chief Geronimo.[2] Prescott Bush, one of a great many Bonesmen who went on to lives of power and renown, became a U.S. senator. George Herbert Walker Bush, George W.'s father, Yale '48, was also a Bonesman, and he, too, made a conspicuous success of himself. Inside the temple on High Street hang paintings of some of Skull and Bones's more illustrious members; the painting of George Bush, the most recently installed, is five feet high.

> There were other Bush Bonesmen, a proud line of them stretching from great uncle George Herbert Walker Jr. to uncle Jonathan Bush to cousins George Herbert Walker III and Ray Walker. So when George W.

was "tapped" for Skull and Bones, at the end of his junior year, he, too, naturally became a Bonesman.

THE SMELL OF SULFUR

A proud line of Bush family Bonesmen, steeped in black magic ritual—author and publisher Kris Millegan, in his definitive book Fleshing Out Skull and Bones, asks, "Do we find in New Haven a multi-generational cult that uses conspiratorial tactics and ritualistic magic in its drama for control...that believes in the power of death to bring about change, a group of Zeitgeist initiates believing that the ends justify the means, and using massive deaths to feed their necromancy"?

Maybe George W. Bush himself provided a partial answer of sorts to this question when he remarked in 2008, "I'll be long gone before some smart person ever figures out what happened inside this Oval Office."

Or, perhaps Venezuela's President Hugo Chávez was more on target than anyone realized in a 2006 address to the United Nations General Assembly when he made the following remark concerning President Bush's presence there the day before (and then made the sign of the cross, brought his hands together as if in prayer and glanced toward the ceiling):

> El diablo está en casa. Ayer estuvo el diablo aquí, en este mismo lugar. Huele a azufre todavía.
> The devil is in the house. The devil was here yesterday, in this very place. Smell the sulfur even now.

(Not that it matters, but the New York Times translated this: "Yesterday, the devil came here. Right here. Right here. And it smells of sulfur still today, this table that I am now standing in front of.")

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

THE RECONSTRUCTED SCRIPT FOR THE 9/11 OCCULT MEGARITUAL

> "I think we are farmed," Charles Fort said of humanity. It was Fort who also suggested that man deliberately invented the dogma of materialism in order to shield himself from the evidence of what was being done to him by means of psycho-spiritual warfare methods hyped by "coincidence," symbolism and ritual.
> —Michael Hoffman, Secret Societies and Psychological Warfare

> Never allow anyone the luxury of assuming that because the dead and deadening scenery of the American city-of-dreadful-night is so utterly devoid of mystery, so thoroughly flat-footed, sterile and infantile, so burdened with the illusory gloss of "baseball-hot dogs-apple-pie-and-Chevrolet" that it is somehow outside the psycho-sexual domain. The eternal pagan psychodrama is escalated under these "modern" conditions precisely because sorcery is not what 20th century man can accept as real.
> —James Shelby Downard with Michael A. Hoffman II, "King Kill 33"

2001: September 11—a most auspicious date for a ritual undertaking, New Year's Day on the occult calendar, a date connected to the heliacal rising of the occultists' Spiritual Sun, Sirius, the Dog Star; a date that also pays homage to the Egyptian Lord of Time, Thoth, through the name of the first month of the new year, Tout, highly fitting for a ceremony focused heavily on timing and time itself…

On this date imbued with occult meaning, winged Mercurial messengers of death take to the skies, filled with sacrificial victims unknowingly awaiting their fate. Nineteen individuals believing themselves to be Islamic jihadists (evidence suggests that perhaps not all of them were true believers)—soon-to-be-martyrs receiving their rewards in Paradise—readied themselves to take control of four airliners with boxcutters.

Let the Games Begin

The ceremony officially commences as American Airlines Flight 11 (AA11), ritually marked, consecrated with the number of magic itself, slams into the North Tower of the World Trade Center, declaring the initiation of a magical operation.

President and Bonesman George W. Bush arrives at Booker Elementary School in Sarasota, Florida, the state which had given him the presidency in 2000 and where his brother Jeb is governor—and where the 9/11 ringleader and hijacker-pilot of AA11, Mohamed Atta, had received part of his flight training. The Commander-in-Chief as High Priest is in "Paradise," presiding over a Black Mass, complete with little black children chanting out the words of "The Pet Goat" (about which Osama bin Laden will later crack jokes on Al Jazeera, saying that Bush was more occupied with "the goat and its butting" than "the planes and their butting of the skyscrapers"), invoking Baphomet, even as United Airlines Flight 175 slams into the South Tower, an act designed to invoke Aleister Crowley's Liber 175, the "book of Uniting…to a particular Deity by devotion." They are stating their intentions and declaring their devotion, not simply to Satan, but also to Crowley—as has been made evident, the entire day's proceedings constitute no less than an "Ode to Aleister Crowley" (not to be confused with Ozzy Osbourne's literal ode to Crowley).

Thus, the two concrete and steel re-creations of the fabled Pillars of Hermes, the God of Commerce and Trade (and also of thieves and robbers), stand mortally wounded, as Hermes himself prepares to undertake his traditional role as psychopomp, escort of the souls of the dead to the Underworld. In the Tarot, the Tower card has been known as the House of the Damned, and the Twin Towers have become enormous sacrificial altars. Very soon, the doorway between the two pillars will be opened and the veil of Isis will be symbolically torn asunder as the towers come crashing to the ground and a gateway to hell esoterically created.

More Public Sorcery

In Arlington, Virginia, American Airlines Flight 77 (AA77)—piloted by a hijacker who according to one flight instructor "couldn't fly at all"—performs near-impossible aerial acrobatics in order to hit the west face of the Pentagon. This part of the building had been recently renovated and the Office of Naval Intelligence had just been moved in. The direct pin-point strike on their office conveniently destroys records related to the investigation regarding $2.3 trillion in transactions which Donald Rumsfeld had announced on September 10, 2001, could not be accounted for.

A massive version of an ancient and powerful occult symbol, the Pentagon sits on the 77th Meridian West and is 77 feet tall. AA77 was marked with this same number, which according to Aleister Crowley is the number of "magical power in perfection," and also conjures the 77 infernal names from Anton Lavey's Satanic Bible. And what is that in the sky? It's a bird, it's a plane, it's the Doomsday Plane to be exact—call sign VENUS 77.

Groundbreaking for the Pentagon began 60 years to the day prior to 9/11/2001, which also happens to be former U.S. Solicitor General Ted Olson's birthday. Olson supposedly receives two cell phone calls that fateful morning from his third wife Barbara, who was enroute aboard AA77 to a taping of Politically Incorrect—and who may also be one-and-the-same as Olson's fourth wife, Lady Evelyn.

THE FINAL THREE ACTS

In Shanksville—shank, shanks-ville, get it?—United Airlines Flight 93 is an air mail greeting to Thelemites around the world, and in this installment of the Flying Circus of Death, the plane performs a perfect disappearing act, leaving not much more than a Wile E. Coyote silhouette in the loose soil of an abandoned strip-coal mine. The investigation is overseen by one Bill Crowley from the Pittsburg office of the FBI, and the initial design for the Flight 93 Memorial, the "Crescent of Embrace"—shaped as an Islamic crescent—creates such an uproar that it is finally changed.

A less commonly known aspect of the MegaRitual involves Korean Airlines Flight 85— with the number 85 invoking both Thoth and the Tower tarot, as well as conveying "this means war" (which, of course, 9/11 did). Flight 85 was directed to land in Whitehorse, Yukon, and "white horse," as Ozzy Osbourne could tell you (and did, in his 1980 song "Mr. Crowley"), is slang for heroin, to which Aleister Crowley was painfully addicted. And speaking of Crowley (yet again), one Tim Crowley, air traffic controller, was on duty in the control tower on the morning of September 11, 2001, at the Whitehorse International Airport.

Rounding out the MegaRitual proper—the closing of the curtain, one might say—was the dramatic late-in-the-day collapse of Salomon's Temple, otherwise known as the trapezoidal-shaped 47-story World Trade Center building 7 (a massive three-dimensional reference to the 47th Problem of Euclid, sacred to Freemasons), home to Rudy G's skybox bunker. Let's have a couple of minutes (or years) of silence while Larry "Pull It" Silverstein tries to come up with a plausible excuse for using controlled-demolition terminology, and last but not least we bid adieu to Anton Lavey and his Order of the Trapezoid.

SOME SIRIUS BLACK MAGICK

If all of this strikes you as some sort of Evil Magic, you're on the right track, as 9 is almost universally recognized as a number of evil, and the number 11 as, well, you know—yielding 9/11 as a mathematical sigil for Evil Magic. And no, it's not coincidence that in the U.S. the universal number for emergency services is 9-1-1. The diametrically opposed meanings are intended to create psychic distress; it's all part of the psychological warfare programming for 9/11.

Astrologically, the Lords of Death and Hades, Saturn and Pluto, stand watch over 9/11, as does the Statue of Lucifer/Liberty in a much more literal fashion. References to the Masonic Blazing Star (and Crowley's Silver Star), Sirius, abound, invoking in particular the role of this star as the abode of Lucifer.

Sirius was also the name of the only police/search-and-rescue dog killed on 9/11, who died during the collapse of one of the towers, which, incidentally, were literally wrapped in massive steel tridents, marking them as Satanic MegaAltars. The towers were, at the time, the key features in a broader Occult Ceremonial Complex, complete with a gigantic replica of the Monolith from 2001 and other massive occult symbols on the rooftops of the World Financial Center buildings.

CONCLUSION

As an overview of the overview, then, Bush the High Priest sits in Paradise on New Year's Day overseeing a Global Satanic MegaRitual which features winged messengers of death as a tribute to the Prince of the Power of the Air. These flying harbingers of doom deliver their payloads of human sacrifices to their MegaTalisman targets, invoking all sorts of astral hell in the process. The number of magic is everywhere, including an 11-year countdown to 9/11 (see next chapter), and the entire MegaRitual takes place "in plain sight."

(For another humorous overview of the events of 9/11, see Appendix D on page 181.)

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

TWO FINAL 11S, AND THE QUESTION OF TIME

"Boy, they were big on crematoriums, weren't they?"

—President George H.W. Bush, during a tour of Auschwitz in 1989

Given the breadth and depth of the occult script underlying 9/11—and the amount of time, energy and resources that it took to pull the entire production off—the question logically comes to mind, My God, just how old is the 9/11 Conspiracy, how far back does it extend?

A 30-YEAR-OLD CONSPIRACY?

Former U.S. Senator and 9/11 Commission Member Bob Kerrey has stated in an online interview that 9/11 is a "30-year-old conspiracy."

> Kerrey: "…the problem is it's a 30-year-old conspiracy."
> Interviewer: "No, I'm talking about 9/11."
> Kerrey : "That's what I'm talking about."

And although that notion may come as a surprise to some (hopefully not after reading this material), Kerrey may actually be off only by a millennia or two.

Michael Hoffman informs us that "the process of Hermetic cryptocracy is not stagnant. It is engaged in a remarkable project set into motion millennia ago, an operation which has accomplished most—if not all—of its chief goals with masterful dispatch." Synchromystic blogger Mark LeClair expands on this point, writing,

> Any open-minded meditation upon Sept. 11, 2001, floods the mind with at first incomprehensible riddles. The brave seek answers and begin to connect the dots. A shape begins to appear. The seeker can stop with > a complete hypothesis: evil men, shadow men, bankers and oilmen, a secret one-world power. Some seekers go deeper into the woods: Satanic Goofball Cultists and their midnight rituals. Nazi connections. The Fourth Reich steps out from behind the American Flag. Not satisfied, a few scrabble onward: an at least rudimentary knowledge of Occult Technology is a must have. Occult science is that of metaphor and the big truth of 9/11 is that it is a Heirophantic event, planned for two-thousand years by the priests of On and Tibet and altogether inevitable. Beyond this third degree, aspirants court the Abyss itself, gaze into the yawning yaw of Yah-weh and cry out: More Light!

Whether the truth is a conspiracy that's decades old, or centuries old, or millennia old, the reality is one that blows to smithereens the notion of 9/11 being merely an "inside job" by the Bush administration. (The involvement of members of the administration seems a foregone conclusion, but the weight of the evidence doesn't support the idea that they were the masterminds ... not by a long shot.)

The 11-year Countdown to 9/11

It should, then, come as no surprise that there would have been a countdown to 9/11—an 11-year countdown, as you might have guessed—which was initiated by none other than President George H. W. Bush in an address to a joint session of Congress on September 11, 1990, in which he referenced the "new world order" that 9/11 would be highly instrumental in bringing about:

> We stand today at a unique and extraordinary moment. The crisis in the Persian Gulf, as grave as it is, also offers a rare opportunity to move toward an historic period of cooperation. Out of these troubled times, our fifth objective—a new world order—can emerge: a new era—freer from the threat of terror, stronger in the pursuit of justice, and more secure in the quest for peace. An era in which the nations of the world, East and West, North and South, can prosper and live in harmony. A hundred generations have searched for this elusive path to peace, while a thousand wars raged across the span of human endeavor. Today that new world is struggling to be born, a world quite different from the one we've known.

George Sr. announces and, 11 years later to the day, George Jr. presides: another episode of our All in the Family Bush special.

AN 11-YEAR COUNTDOWN TO THE END OF THE AGE

September 11, 2001, not only marked the culmination of one 11-year countdown, but also marked the initiation of a second 11-year countdown—to one of the most significant dates on the occult calendar and one of the most auspicious dates in human history, December 21st, 2012.

This date marks the end of the current age and the beginning of a New Age—a perfect date on which to bring into full view their New World Order. They have been constructing the foundations of this new order for decades/centuries/millennia, and 12/21/2012 is the End of the Age—there could be no better time than 2000+13 to fully implement their "New Order of the Ages."

Thus, we go one level deeper still, with the destruction of the Pillars of Hermes-Thoth on Thout 1 invoking Thoth as the Lord of Time and initiating an 11-year countdown to the End of Time…

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

THE RED PILL

> "Thousands of lives were suddenly ended by evil, despicable acts of terror. The pictures of airplanes flying into buildings, fires burning, huge structures collapsing, have filled us with disbelief, terrible sadness and a quiet, unyielding anger."
> —George W. Bush, September 11, 2001

The Pentagon was attacked to cover up evidence of financial crimes, and, as it turns out, so were the Twin Towers (if you want to read more on this topic, see page 183). The locations/floors of the companies involved? You guessed it—right where the planes hit.

Flight 11 hit the north face of the North Tower directly above floor 93, and Flight 175 hit the south face of the South Tower directly above floor 77. But wait, those aren't just the areas where the companies in question were located—north face, North Tower, south face, South tower... more seemingly-purposeful repetition... 93, 77... the presence of all four key numbers in the first act alone... how could there possibly be more to discover about this 9/11 techno-sorcery?

There is more to learn, but this may be all you can handle right now (if you think otherwise, head on over to the Bonus Chapters beginning on page 145). You've just swallowed the red pill, which, in the 1999 motion picture The Matrix allows the main character Neo to see the world as it really is, to see past the illusory digital creation in which his mind is entrapped. You need time to adjust, to come to terms with your new reality and the implications (and responsibilities) associated with your new-found knowledge.

THE UGLY TRUTH

We can now grasp the enormity of the conspiracy and understand the conspirators' almost omnipotent power—power to manipulate our reality, to manipulate us, to manipulate the institutions of government and media and to suppress official inquiry at any level.

Those with the ability to successfully play out such an ambitious multi-act occult script on a global stage under our very noses without fear of detection obviously possessed the logistical and technical expertise to accomplish all of the related practical tasks necessary to make it "The Greatest Show on Earth."

This would include the controlled demolition of the Twin Towers—not that we have to show one way or the other whether they were in fact destroyed in this manner. The occult script proves the existence of a massive conspiracy beyond a shadow of a doubt. Exactly who did it is another matter, and exactly how they did it yet another still. And while the former question remains open and screams for further investigation, the latter—how—doesn't matter anymore (except in determining who-all's asses to execute or put in jail).

The ugly truth is that the conspirators could have done—and did—anything and everything they wanted to. Bringing down two skyscrapers under our noses? Child's play, easily enough accomplished from a technical perspective, however it was done. The beautiful truth, however, is that we can now basically ignore all the pesky little details because we can see the big picture.

The apparently-fireproof jet-fuel-soaked passport of one of the Twin Towers hijackers that supposedly survived the crash and was found on the ground by a passerby? Who cares. Mohamed Atta's luggage—reportedly containing the 9/11 hijackers' names, assignments and al-Qaeda connections—which conveniently failed to make it onto his plane and not only allowed the FBI to quickly identify the hijackers but also amounted to "the Rosetta stone of the investigation"? Who cares. The airline passenger manifests that strangely didn't include any of the hijackers' names? Who cares. The Bush family member on the board of directors of Securacom/Stratesec, the company that provided security for the World Trade Center and Dulles Airport? Who cares. The power outages in the towers in the weeks leading up to the attacks? Who cares. The presence of nanothermite in the dust at Ground Zero and the discovery of pools of still-molten steel more than a month after 9/11? Fuhgedaboud-it. To use a slightly modified cliché, Don't miss the MegaRitual for the burning buildings.

A Total Fabrication

In the context of the occult script, all of the inconsistencies, suspicious facts and blatant lies make perfect sense—it was a huge multi-faceted operation involving so many different working parts that the conspirators never expected to be able to cover it all up, or even cared about doing so. In many instances, they didn't even try, or, worse still, were so bold and arrogant that they mocked us to our faces by leaving clues in plain sight.

All of the maddeningly suspicious details and inconsistent official accounts that merely left us confused and befuddled now lose their power over us. In context of the MegaRitual, we see that it was all theatre. In many instances, they didn't even attempt to hide their stagecraft, because they know we can't see something that we don't believe exists.

We can now explain why everything about 9/11 seemed suspicious—the entire event was engineered and the entire official story is a fabrication. Every official explanation for every aspect of 9/11 is now suspect, and, in fact, we can and should assume that the official explanation for every single element of 9/11 is a falsehood.

But what can we do about it, against unseen actors with practically omnipotent power? Is it even possible to hold such people accountable—are they not untouchable?

With certain knowledge of conspiracy, we must act, and Michael Hoffman tells us why: if we don't, we enable our own enslavement.

The Hoffman Lens

Hoffman reminds us of the purpose of the 9/11 MegaRitual: "This theater of death began as a ritual for the cult members themselves and ended as a giant magical ceremony for the processing of the entire nation… This is the alchemical psychodrama for the transformation of humanity. We are processed just by reading or watching 'the news.'"[1] Hoffman continues,

> The French adept Antonin Artaud, architect of the "Theater of Cruelty" with its transformative power, and the prophet of the extreme sex-and-death media of our time, had this to say about the processing of the Group Mind:
>> "Aside from trifling witchcraft of country sorcerers, there are tricks of global hoodoo in which all alerted consciousnesses participate periodically…That is how strange forces are aroused and transported to the astral vault, to that dark dome which is composed above all of…the poisonous aggressiveness of the evil minds of most people…the formidable tentacular oppression of a kind of civic magic which will soon appear undisguised."
> "… which will soon appear undisguised." Artaud wrote those words in the 1940s. The public sorcery he forecast is here, now.

Theater of death, global hoodoo, civic magic, public sorcery… "What we are witnessing in the wake of the public enactment of these alchemical psychodramas," writes Hoffman, "whose spiritual consequences for mankind are far more momentous than most have thus far guessed, is a process of global occult initiation. These are open-air masonic ceremonies which produce awe in the wake of the physical and technical accomplishment of their time-lost objectives."[2]

Alchemical psychodrama, global occult initiation, open-air masonic ceremony—the 9/11 Global Occult MegaRitual was all of these, and more. But the secrets contained therein, the "secrets of the script," were not meant to be kept secret forever.

Hoffman describes how the occult secrets buried within the rituals are meant to be revealed eventually, and calls this

> … "the Revelation of the Method"…the process wherein murderous deeds and hair-raising conspiracies involving wars, revolutions, decapitations, secret archaeo-astronomic deity cult-worship, and every manner of horror show are first buried beneath a cloak of secrecy…and then, when finally accomplished and secured, slowly revealed to the unsuspecting populace who watch…deep-frozen…as the hidden history is unveiled.[3]

Hoffman explains the Method further, and reveals its purposes:

> The alchemical principle of the Revelation of the Method has as its chief component, a clown-like, grinning mockery of the victim(s) as a show of power and macabre arrogance. When this is performed in a veiled manner, accompanied by certain occult signs and symbolic words and elicits no meaningful response of opposition or resistance from the target(s), it is one of the most efficacious techniques of psychological warfare and mind-rape.
> This ceremonial nose-thumbing, this perverse jesting and clowning is taken to the highest level of intensity by the Truth or Consequences principle which ultimately hinges upon the issue of consent.
> It is one thing for the media, the police, the judiciary and the killers themselves to commit terrible acts without our knowledge or consent. It is quite another matter, with grave repercussions in the realm of psychodrama, public ritual and advanced mind control, when these crimes are committed with our consent. It is an ancient rule of both the moral > and common law that silence connotes consent—silence and a lack of meaningful action constitute consent in the face of these crimes.

> They brag to us about what they've gotten away with and we're thrilled by it. That's our only significant response, that and the anticipation of the next thrill.[4]

ALL PART OF THE PLAN

A clown-like, grinning mockery; a show of power and macabre arrogance; ceremonial nose-thumbing; perverse jesting and clowning…sound remotely familiar? This is exactly what we found throughout the 9/11 MegaRitual script, and now we must face the conclusion that the conspirators in fact wanted us to eventually discover what they'd done.

Hoffman shares further insight into the Revelation of the Method, and explains the "game plan operant":

> …the after-the-fact revelations are as much a part of the…plot as the murder and its initial cover-up. It's a deliberate psychological process they're taking us through, a psychodrama of enormous scale.[5] … The following is a statement which comes from within the British-intelligence wing of the Cryptocracy:
> > This demonstrates one of our simpler methods. Realizing that our activities will sooner or later come to light, we structure our activities so that as conspiracy researchers unravel them, they will release information into the public consciousness in such a way that it mirrors our initiatory procedure. In this way, the more we are investigated, the more masses of people are psychologically processed by the very people who seek to expose us. The meme that constitutes our essential structure is then successfully mimicked within the consciousness of those who investigate us. Success can then be measured precisely to the extent that our work is "exposed."
> …the one-two punch repeatedly conveyed in these highly symbolic murders, which transmit alchemical cant language command phrases and trigger-words over the airwaves and into the news racks.
> One: the ritual murders are successfully accomplished. The principals get away, the scapegoat conveniently takes the blame. Two: later we learn the truth but no one is prosecuted. We are mocked, disoriented and demoralized. Occult prestige and potency is heightened.

> This is what simplistic researchers miss: the function of macabre arrogance thumbing its nose at us while we do nothing except spread the tale of their immunity and invincibility further. That is the game plan operant here.

Enabling Our Enslavement

So, is that all we're doing here, is this all we've accomplished: spreading the tale of their immunity and invincibility? Hoffman goes on to discuss the motive behind the Method, and reminds us that ""silence and a lack of meaningful action constitute consent in the face of these crimes." And the consequences of consent?...

> Why would the perpetrators want their secrets revealed after the fact—even if it is years later? …secrets like this were rarely revealed in the past because traditional people had not yet completed the alchemical processing. To make such perverse, modern revelations to an unprocessed, healthy and vigorous population possessed of will, memory, adherence to their deepest inner intuition and intense interest in their own salvation… [would] have proved fatal to them.
> But to reveal these after-the-act secrets in our modern time, to a people who have no memory, no will-power and no interest in their own fate except in so far as it may serve as momentary titillation and entertainment actually strengthens the enslavement of such a people. [6]

We strengthen our own enslavement? Hoffman reiterates, repeating that consent is key:

> If the truth of what the cryptocracy has perpetrated is grasped and acted upon, the consequences for the conspirators will be annihilation. But if the people fail to perceive the truth or fail to act on their perception, thus rendering unto the Process a kind of tacit consent born of apathy, amnesia and abulia, the consequence for the conspirators will be a giant step in the advancement of their system of control, that is to say, ever tighter bonds of enslavement for humanity.
> Why does the cryptocracy bother to gamble so much by going public with what it is doing to us? Because consent fuels their control like no other form of energy.[7]

If we fail to act on our perception, thus rendering tacit consent, we are complicit in our own bondage—and merely spread the tale of their immunity and invincibility. Knowledge is power, and with power comes responsibility.

Twin Towers Demolition Multiple Choice

The Twin Towers were completely destroyed on 9/11:

a) For dramatic effect
b) All the better to sell you the deadly-Islamic-terror-attacks cover story with, my dear
c) To fully execute this critical component of the MegaRitual
d) To destroy evidence of financial wrongdoing housed in the Towers
e) To get rid of the aging, asbestos-infested structures and avoid costly environmental remediation
f) To get Larry Silverstein his damn insurance money
g) All of the above (and then some)

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

A FINAL INSULT

I will screw him in the ass.

—President George W. Bush, according to Israel's 11th Prime Minister, Ariel Sharon, who, in speaking to Israeli reporter Uri Dan, claimed that Bush said this when asked what he would do if he caught Osama bin Laden. See Uri Dan, Ariel Sharon: An Intimate Portrait

After all we've learned, after reconstructing the occult script and contemplating the incredible time, energy and effort that the orchestrators of 9/11 put into creating their Occult Masterpiece, there's yet another potentially devastating blow—the possibility that they do not actually believe what they've invested so much treasure in convincing us they do believe.

Again, it's Michael Hoffman guiding us through the maze: "Aleister Crowley, in a statement to OTO initiates concerning one of his books, describes the underlying epistemology behind the glamour and enchantment which causes the occult con-game to become the weird reality we inhabit in America today:

> 'In this book it is spoken of the Sephiroth, and the Paths, of Spirits and Conjurations; of Gods, Spheres, Planes, and many other things which may or may not exist. It is immaterial whether they exist or not. By doing certain things certain results follow; students are most earnestly warned against attributing objective reality or philosphic validity to any of them.'"

Hoffman concludes, "Here Crowley admits that the OTO is a vehicle for imposing an artificial reality based on nothing but lies and promoted by liars initiated into the art and science of illusion."

So, in the end, is Aleister Crowley himself delivering the most devastating blow of all? Is this the final insult added to massive injury: despite all the symbols and astrology and hocus-pocus, it's all just a game?

Hoffman once more confirms our fears: "According to Fortean philosopher William Grimstad: 'It is the implantation of this illusory picture of the world into our minds… (a) process of widespread—indeed, virtually universal—hallucination emerging from extremely circumscribed and elusive sources…that forms the major activity of the hidden powers.'"

They may or may not be true believers in their own occult system, and this may be the biggest psyop of all—that we'll never know for sure whether they're Satanically-empowered practitioners of evil, or just damn-smart hucksters using our own ignorance and fears to help them facilitate their goals and consolidate their power.

Chapter Twenty-Five

The Face of Ahriman

A Physical Manifestation of Evil ... or Photoshop?

Did the face of Evil appear in the smoke billowing from the Twin Towers on 9/11? While it is certainly true that anthropomorphic images can appear in clouds and smoke, given all of the other trickery that went into creating the 9/11 MegaSpectacle, it is unlikely that the appearance of the image above is mere coincidence.

The likelihood of it being coincidence is even smaller when one compares the face in the smoke to a famous carving of Ahriman by Austrian esotericist Rudolf Steiner (1861-1925).

The head of Ahriman carved by Dr. Rudolf Steiner.

Ahriman was the god of evil and darkness in Persian mythology and in Zoroastrianism, a religion that attracted a large following in Persia around 600 B.C. Often called Druj ("the Lie"), Ahriman was the force behind anger, greed, envy, and other negative and harmful emotions. He also brought chaos, death, disease, and other ills into the world. In the Islamic religion, he is identified with Iblis, the devil.[1]

Ahriman is the all-destroying Satan, the source of all evil in the world. Rudolph Steiner, the initiator of the anthroposophy movement, has published detailed and elaborate studies on the Zoroastrian Ahriman. He claims that Ahriman and the Hebrew demon Mephistopheles can be considered as the same spiritual entities, with the biblical demons Mammon and Beelzebub as his associates. Ahriman's assignment is to alienate humanity from its spiritual roots and to inspire materialism and heartless technical control. As such, his influence is highly relevant to present-day Western culture.[2]

Ahriman's acolytes seek a kind of "immortality" in the slag-earth-surrounded-with-Old-Moon-forces, but an immortality with egotistic, earthly consciousness instead of the cosmic consciousness of the individualized spiritual Ego. The deeper, Ahrimanic aim of the Anglo-Americans is to defeat the Gods' plan for Earth-evolution, by turning the earth into a heap of dark, frozen, cosmic slag, haunted by an earth-bound mankind of ghostly homunculi — and to secure for themselves a privileged place in this Ahrimanic world-order: an Ahrimanic immortality, with earthly consciousness and with power over the uninitiated.[3]

A DIGITALLY-CREATED TRIBUTE

It is most certainly possible that the 'face in the smoke' was created using digital image editing software such as Adobe Photoshop, and intended to be not simply "The Face of Evil" (providing yet further evidence of occult psychological warfare tactics) but also a tribute to Ahriman and Steiner for those in-the-know.

Ahrimanic Purpose

The central rite of "Satanism" or "black magic"—sometimes crude, sometimes sophisticated—is the deliberate, ritual torture and killing of animals and, at a more advanced level, of humans. When done in a precise way, this practice confers knowledge and power upon the practitioner; also, it affects the whole earth, hardening and rigidifying it, to the characteristic Ahrimanic purpose.[4]

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

YET MORE 9/11 CROWLEY REFERENCES?

"I hope you leave here and walk out and say, 'What did he say?'"

—George W. Bush, Beaverton, Oregon, Aug. 13, 2004

Given the level of planning that went into the other elements of the MegaRitual, the following is worthy of consideration…

SIGILS

A sigil (lat. sigillum, diminutive of signum, "sign") is a symbol designed for a specific magical purpose. They are designed to represent a glyph, composed of a variety of symbols or concepts with the intent and inherent iconic meaning. Essentially, sigils are symbolic icons that are condensed representations of more complex ideas or information.

A sigil may have an abstract, pictorial or semi-abstract form. It may appear in any medium, physical or virtual, or only in the mind. Visual symbols are the most popular form, but the use of audial and tactile symbols in magick is not unknown.[1]

"9/11" is not technically a sigil, in that it is not purely a symbolic icon (it can be read at "face value")—unless you consider numbers themselves as symbols and assign ultimate importance to the character of these symbols. 9 is evil and 11 is magic; further, the 11 simultaneously represents the Pillars of Hermes and the Twin Towers.

Language	Possible Name	Translation
Latin	Argentium Astrum	silver star
Greek	Ἄστρον Αργυρόν (transliteration: Astron Argiron)	silver star
Latin	Arcanum Arcanorum	secret of secrets
Aramaic	ןיפנא ךירא, (transliteration: Arikh Anpin) countenance (meaning Kether)	vast countenence
English	Angel and Abyss	Angel and Abyss

[2]

The planners of 9/11 were highly intentional and very sophisticated in developing their "occult script" for the events of that day. They chose specific things for very specific reasons, as has been well documented.

It is indeed possible that they chose American Airlines for a specific reason, i.e., knowing that the name of the airline would in many instances be shortened to AA and linked with the flight numbers: AA11 and AA77.

These alphanumeric combinations have appeared over and over in print and on the web in relation to 9/11. Those knowledgeable about Aleister Crowley and his legacy are fully familiar with AA as an acronym for his order, and AA11 and AA77—especially considering the well-established significance of the 11 and 77—appear to constitute yet two additional "hidden" symbolic references to Crowley. In light of all the other Crowley elements in the 9/11 MegaRitual, it seems unlikely that this one would be unintentional or purely coincidental.

A∴A∴

The seal of the A∴A∴. Note the AA and 77.

What about United Airlines Flights 175 and 93, UA175 and UA93? The significance of the 175 and 93 having been thoroughly elucidated, consider this:

> The name Crowley may derive from the Irish or the English. The Irish Crowleys are more numerous and are known in Irish as "O Cruadhlaoich" or "Ua Cruadhlaoich," a Gaelic name meaning "descendant of the hard hero" or "descendant of the hardy warrior," and which was anglicised to "Crowley" or "O'Crowley." The English "Crowley" means "wood of crows."[3]

Although Crowley was English, his distant ancestors may have been Irish, but it really doesn't matter—it's the association that's important. "Ua" is connected with the surname Crowley, and UA175 and UA93, the latter in particular, would carry deep significance for Crowleyites and Thelemites the world over.

If real, these "sigils" would constitute one of the more sophisticated, subtle and obscure tributes to Crowley—but in the realm of the occult, major points are awarded for exactly this type of thing.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

"HISTORICAL PRECEDENTS" FOR THE 9/11 MEGARITUAL

I call upon all nations to do everything they can to stop these terrorist killers. Thank you. Now watch this drive.

—George W. Bush, in a statement to reporters on a golf course, August 4, 2002

Have the occult symbols and practices found in the 9/11 Occult MegaRitual been used in other rituals? You bet they have.

DALLAS-WACO-OKLAHOMA CITY AND U.S. ROUTE 77

There is an historical precedent of sorts for certain aspects of the 9/11 MegaRitual, keyed to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

President Kennedy was shot on Elm Street, which forms one of the forks of the trident design of Dealey Plaza, site of the first Masonic Lodge in Dallas (the site also features an obelisk and a reflecting pool). The significance of the trident and the number 77 having already been discussed, one should not be terribly surprised to learn that, upon leaving Dealey Plaza, Elm Street runs directly under US Route 77 (John Hinkley bought the .22 caliber pistol he shot President Reagan with at Rocky's Pawn Shop on this same Elm Street, but that's another story). In some of the amateur footage and photographs taken on November 22, 1963, road signs bearing the number 77 are clearly visible.

From Dallas, Route 77 extends almost due North to Oklahoma City and passes within several hundred yards of the former site of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, which was partially destroyed by a blast from a truck bomb on April 19, 1995. Route 77 also travels South from Dallas, and passes within miles of the site of the Waco Massacre, which took place on April 19, 1993.

The Mount Carmel Center, referred to by the media as the Branch Davidian compound, was originally a 941-acre property, but by the time of the massacre, it had been reduced to (I'm not making this up) 77 acres.

Mount Carmel is west of US77, and only a short distance to the east of the roadway is Crawford, Texas. George Bush's Prairie Chapel Ranch is located seven miles northwest of Crawford and was acquired by Bush in 1999.

In case you were wondering, April 19 is a Satanic holy-day, requiring sacrifice by fire, most preferably involving the sacrifice of children, and, indeed, multiple children perished in both Waco (more than 20) and Oklahoma City (19 under the age of 6). So, to summarize, in this instance we have three separate geographic locations, physically connected by a roadway bearing the number 77, and also linked by a highly-important occult date—on which, in two of those locations, mass ritual sacrifices appear to have been performed (if you've never examined the suspicious circumstances surrounding both the OK City bombing and the Waco massacre, you should).

We would do well to remember Michael Hoffman's wisdom on this point: "Mystical toponomy and alchemical cant language are part of a process which hinges on a marriage between action in time [or recorded history] and physical locations on the earth regarded as 'places of power' by the cryptocracy's magical-geographical vision of the earth as a giant chess board, symbolized by the tessellated floor of Solomon's Temple and the masonic lodge."

Mr. 77

Apparently the Bushes have a great affinity for the number 77 (or it has a great affinity for them, or both). The USS George H.W. Bush is the U.S. Navy's tenth and final Nimitz-class supercarrier, and Bush's daughter Dorothy Bush Koch was the ship's sponsor. The ship's designation is CVN-77. (Bush Sr. was director of the CIA in 1977, and was 77 years old on 9/11/01 ... Pleased to meet you, Hope you guess my name ... ?)

Kennedy, again, and Crowley, again

A second "historical precedent" connected to the Kennedy assassination and involving the integration of Aleister Crowley references into a national occult MegaRitual is outlined in Peter Levenda's Sinister Forces:

> One of the most mysterious of the many Aleister Crowley mysteries is that of a section of his famous Book of the Law, specifically Book Two Verse 76. This verse reads,
> 4 6 3 8 A B K 2 4 A L G M O R 3 Y X 24 89 R P S T O V A L
> What meaneth this, o prophet? Thou knowest not; nor shalt thou know ever.
> The verse is commonly referred to—by Thelemites—as "R P Stoval" after the last group of letters. No one knows what it means, although many have claimed to decode the enigmatic phrase.
> A photograph found at Ruth Paine's home—a photograph of a '57 Chevrolet in the driveway of General Walker, the man Oswald is supposed to have fired upon and missed in the weeks leading up to the assassination—was mutilated. The license plate had been removed from the photo so that it would be impossible to identify. The Dallas detective who seized the photo from the Paine home and put it into evidence claimed that it was already mutilated; Marina Oswald denied this and later evidence—a photo of the photo, to be precise—shows that Marina was telling the truth. The photograph when it came into custody of the Dallas police was intact; someone in the department must have chopped the license number out of the picture.
> The Dallas police detective who confiscated the photo and who subsequently lied by stating that it arrived in his possession in its mutilated state was one R. B. Stoval. In addition, Oswald worked for a photographic firm in Dallas that had Defense Department contracts: Jaggers-Chiles-Stovall. The job had been arranged for Oswald by George de Mohrenschildt.

> In de Mohrenschildt's entire existence, as with so much else surrounding Oswald, we seem to be looking at a kind of voodoo.
> —Dick Russell, The Man Who Knew Too Much

Is any of this data meaningful in a forensic sense? Does it reveal the truth about what happened in Dallas in 1963? Perhaps, perhaps not. But if, in some future decade, the evidence given above is shown to be not > relevant to the actual murder of the President, then to what is it relevant? For it challenges every definition of cause and effect to ignore the above relationships and call them "coincidence." The point is that these mechanisms cannot be ignored: they are the spoor of some darker mechanism of history, of what we call reality; and an understanding of world events is impossible without acknowledging their existence and seeking their underlying meaning.

Indeed, one could view the Crowley connection related to 9/11 as almost a form of voodoo, but we must also keep in mind Michael Hoffman's astute observation: "Coincidence can be summoned. It's a matter of attention and timing."

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

After the 9/11 MegaRitual, the Twin Towers were commemorated with twin pillars of light, and, finally, the Ground Zero Memorial has opened. (There is most likely occult significance tied to the twin pillars of light, as well as to the memorial itself, but at this point, I don't care.)

The site has not gone inactive as a ritual center, however—far from it. The former Freedom Tower, now called One World Trade, is an architectural alchemical statement, a concrete-steel-and-glass expression of transformation and unification.

The two four-sided towers were destroyed in part to make way for a single hexagonal creation, the design of which also conveys that most singular of occult principles, As above, so below. The alternating upward and downward triangular sides—pointing symbolically toward heaven and earth—unify the previously separate rectangular twins and esoterically symbolize the merging of Heaven and Earth, spirit and matter, signifying the union of opposites (male-female, positive-negative, yin-yang, franks-and-beans; if you really have a lot of extra time on your hands and are not already sick-to-death of this crap, Google "the middle pillar"... there are also the Three Great Pillars of Freemasonry if you're a real glutton for punishment).

Computer rendering of the completed One World Trade Center.

Not to be overlooked is the height of the completed One World Trade building: 1776 feet, recalling the year of the founding of the Illuminati. God only knows what they have planned for us next.

"Let us never tolerate outrageous conspiracy theories concerning the attacks of September the 11th. … There's one terrible pilot … They never stop thinking about new ways to harm our country and our people, and neither do we. … There's an enemy that would like to attack America, Americans, again—and I wish him all the very best. … I call upon all nations to do everything they can to stop these terrorist killers. Thank you. Now watch this drive."

THE END

(FOR NOW.)

APPENDIXES

APPENDIX A:

THE USUAL SUSPECTS

Enterprises, organizations and individuals suspected of involvement in 9/11.

THE NEW WORLD ORDER

Conspiracy theorists claim that a group of elite globalists continue to aggressively pursue the creation of a New World Order (NWO), an enterprise that has been underway for decades, perhaps centuries (if not millennia). The conspiracists further claim that these globalists planned 9/11 and used it to further their NWO agenda, to implement key components of their strategy for global domination by: facilitating wars in Iraq and Afghanistan; decreasing civil liberties through the enactment of the Patriot Act; and enabling the development of a domestic police state and massive new domestic surveillance infrastructure (the Washington Post did a major investigation and published a series of articles on this infrastructure, which include numerous "threat fusion centers" and so on); etc.

The Wikipedia entry for the New World Order reads in part:

> In conspiracy theory, the term New World Order or NWO refers to the emergence of a totalitarian one-world government. The common theme in conspiracy theories about a New World Order is that a secretive power elite with a globalist agenda is conspiring to eventually rule the world through an authoritarian world government—which replaces sovereign nation-states—and an all-encompassing propaganda that ideologizes its establishment as the culmination of history's progress. Significant occurrences in politics and finance are speculated to be orchestrated by an unduly influential cabal operating through many front organizations. Numerous historical and current events are seen as steps in an on-going plot to achieve world domination through secret political gatherings and decision-making processes.

In his book Psychological Warfare and the New World Order, Servando Gonzalez describes the NWO as > "… a sort of neo-feudalism incorporating some characteristics of totalitarian fascist and communist regimes as well as modern techniques of mass mind control. … New World Order…conspirators…are mostly Wall Street bankers, oil magnates, CEOs of transnational corporations, and senior members of the military-industrial-academic complex…. Most of them are members of the Council on Foreign Relations or some of its parasite organizations like the Trilateral Commission, the United Nations…the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund, just to mention a few.

THE ILLUMINATI

Many conspiracy theorists believe that a group called the Illuminati is behind the push for a New World Order. Again, from Wikipedia:

> The Illuminati (plural of Latin illuminatus, "enlightened") is a name given to several groups, both real (historical) and fictitious. Historically the name refers to the Bavarian Illuminati, an Enlightenment-era secret society founded on May 1, 1776. In more modern contexts the name refers to a purported conspiratorial organization which is alleged to mastermind events and controls world affairs through governments and corporations to establish a New World Order. In this context the Illuminati are usually represented as a modern version or continuation of the Bavarian Illuminati.

It's hard not to be at least a tad suspicious of the group, given the following quote attributed to Illuminati founder Adam Weishaupt: "By this plan we shall direct all mankind. In this manner, and by the simplest means, we shall set all in motion and in flames [emphasis added]. The occupations must be so allotted and contrived, that we may, in secret, influence all political transactions."

Some researchers assert that not only are the Illuminati incredibly secretive and powerful, but also inherently evil. In The Illuminati Conspiracy Against God, Henry Makow writes:

> The Illuminati consist of the Jesuits and some of the world's richest families, including the Rothschilds, the Rockefellers and the Windsors. While they pay lip service to religion, they worship Lucifer. Their agents > control the world's media, education, business and politics. These agents may think they are only pursuing success, but success literally means serving the devil. Prisoners of their wealth, the Illuminati prefer hatred and destruction to Love… They pretend to be moral while working behind the scenes to degrade and enslave humanity in a "new world order." Hiroshima, Dresden, Auschwitz, Cambodia and Rwanda were sacrifices to their god Lucifer. They are responsible for the two World Wars, the Depression and the Cold War. Sept. 11, the War on Terror and the Iraq War are their latest achievements.

THE FREEMASONS

Freemasons are a standard fixture in New World Order conspiracy theories, and are often associated with the Illuminati. The Wikipedia entry reads:

> Freemasonry is a fraternal organisation that arose from obscure origins in the late 16th to early 17th century. Freemasonry now exists in various forms all over the world, with a membership estimated at around six million, including approximately 150,000 under the jurisdictions of the Grand Lodge of Scotland and Grand Lodge of Ireland, over a quarter of a million under the jurisdiction of the United Grand Lodge of England and just under two million in the United States. … Conspiracy theorists have long associated Freemasonry with the New World Order and the Illuminati, and state that Freemasonry as an organization is either bent on world domination or already secretly in control of world politics. Historically, Freemasonry has attracted criticism—and suppression—from both the politically extreme right (e.g. Nazi Germany) and the extreme left (e.g. the former Communist states in Eastern Europe).

Stephen Knight, in his book, Jack the Ripper: The Final Solution, gives us the following very compelling insight:

> Freemasons applaud violence, terror and crime providing it is carried out in a crafty manner. One section of the (masonic) notes says humor is all-important and the most appalling crimes may be committed under its cloak…ghoulish murders with a Puckish sense of fun. If Masonic supremacy appears in jeopardy, it is re-established by a show of strength, by crimes of violence, perpetrated to demonstrate... the far-reaching power of Freemasonry to initiates the world over.

And writing on Infowars.com, Mark Dice observes:

> It is often doubted that the Illuminati are still operating within the cover of Freemasonry. It is often dismissed that any kind of "inner circle" exists within Freemasonry, but Manly P. Hall, one of Freemasonry's greatest philosophers and recognized as such by the official magazine of Scottish Rite Freemasonry, wrote in his book, Lectures on Ancient Philosophy on page 433, that,
> > "Freemasonry is a fraternity within a fraternity—an outer organization concealing an inner brotherhood of the elect…the visible society is a splendid camaraderie of 'free and accepted' men enjoined to devote themselves to ethical, educational, fraternal, patriotic, and humanitarian concerns. The invisible society is a secret most august fraternity whose members are dedicated to the service of a mysterious arcanum arcanorum (secret of secrets.)"

The "Bible" of Freemasonry, Morals and Dogma, written by Albert Pike, explains Masonic philosophy, and is read primarily only by dedicated Freemasons. Part of this philosophy, Pike explains, is,

> Masonry, like all the Religions, all the Mysteries, Hermeticism and Alchemy, conceals [emphasis in original] its secrets from all except the Adepts and Sages, or the Elect, and uses false explanations and misinterpretations of its symbols to mislead those who deserve only to be mislead; to conceal the Truth, which it [the Mason] calls Light, from them, and to draw them away from it.

Council on Foreign Relations (CFR)

The CFR and its members make frequent appearances in NWO conspiracy theories. "The Council," reads Wikipedia, "has been the subject of debate…partly due to the number of high-ranking government officials (along with world business leaders and prominent media figures) in its membership, its secrecy clauses, and the large number of aspects of American foreign policy that its members have been involved with."

Former member of the FBI Headquarters staff Dan Smoot writes in The Invisible Government,

> I am convinced that the Council on Foreign Relations, together with a great number of other associated tax-exempt organizations, constitutes > the invisible government which set the major policies of the federal government; exercises controlling influence on government officials who implement their policies; and, through massive and skillful propaganda, influences Congress and the public to support its policies. I am convinced the objective of this invisible government is to convert America into a socialist state and make it a unit in a one-world socialist system.

Carroll Quigley, in Tragedy and Hope, elaborates, writing,

> There does exist, and has existed for a generation, an international Anglophile network which operates, to some extent, in the way the radical Right believes the Communists act. In fact, this network, has no aversion to cooperating with the Communists, or any other groups, and frequently does so…. The Council on Foreign Relations is the American Branch of this network … and … believes national boundaries should be obliterated and one-world rule established.

And in Psychological Warfare and the New World Order, we find:

> In 1975, Admiral Chester Ward, a former Judge Advocate General of the U.S. Navy and a member of the CFR from 1959-1977 who broke with the organization, wrote that the CFR's stated goal is the "submergence of U.S. sovereignty and national independence into an all-powerful, one-world government." Furthermore, Admiral Ward warned, "… this lust to surrender the sovereignty and independence of the United States is pervasive throughout most of the membership."

THE ROCKEFELLER BROTHERS

The Rockefeller Brothers are by no means the only individuals implicated in the New World Order scheme, but they are certainly worthy of being singled out for special attention.

David Rockefeller was chairman of the Council on Foreign Relations from 1970 to 1985 and the founder of the Trilateral Commission. In his 2002 autobiography Memoirs, he writes,

> For more than a century, ideological extremists at either end of the political spectrum have seized upon well-publicized incidents…to attack the Rockefeller family for the inordinate influence they claim we wield over American political and economic institutions. Some even believe we are > part of a secret cabal working against the best interests of the United States, characterizing my family and me as 'internationalists' and of conspiring with others around the world to build a more integrated global political and economic structure—one world, if you will. If that's the charge, I stand guilty, and I am proud of it.

And in an address to the Trilateral Commission in 1991, David Rockefeller stated:

> We are grateful to the Washington Post, the New York Times, Time magazine and other great publications whose directors have attended our meetings and respected the promises of discretion for almost forty years. It would have been impossible for us to develop our plan for the world if we had been subject to the bright lights of publicity during those years. But, the world is now more sophisticated and prepared to march towards a world-government. The supranational sovereignty of an intellectual elite and world bankers is surely preferable to the National auto-determination practiced in past centuries.

Peter Levenda, writing in his book Sinister Forces: A Grimoire of American Political Witchcraft, shares the following:

> In 1976, Congressman Larry P. McDonald pointed to the true source of the conspiracy:
>> The drive of the Rockefellers and their allies [is] to create a one-world government combining super capitalism and Communism under the same tent, all under their control … .the Rockefellers and their allies have, for at least fifty years, been carefully following a plan to use their economic power to gain political control, first of America, and then the rest of the world. Do I mean conspiracy? Yes I do. I am convinced there is such a plot, international in scope, generations old in planning, and incredibly evil in intent.

Again from Psychological Warfare and the New World Order:

> In 1973, [John D. Rockefeller III] described the coming "humanist revolution" in great detail in a book he titled The Second American Revolution in which he disparaged "old fashioned nationalism." …
> Contrary to the overt, violent communist revolution advocated by Marx and Lenin, or the coup d'etats preferred by fascists, the new Amer> ican Revolution has been a disguised, covert one. The new American Revolution has not used (at least, not yet) rifles and cannons to enforce its rule, but stealth, cunning, deception, lies and psychological warfare. The ideology of the new American revolutionaries who conspire behind our backs to impose it upon the rest of us is a mixture of fascism and communism, which they euphemistically call the New World Order. However, the techniques they are using to implement it are not the ones preferred by Fascists or Communists, but have been copied from the British Fabians and the Italian Marxist intellectual Antonio Gramsci.

> The British Fabians advocated communism as conceived by Karl Marx, but contrary to Marx, Lenin, Trotsky and other Communist ideologues, they believed that the right way to do it was gradually, by infiltration, capturing the existing institutions from inside and putting them to work for their goals.

Writing in their article "9/11, Psychological Warfare & the American Narrative," authors Elizabeth Gould and Paul Fitzgerald share insights that are particularly compelling in context of the discussions in this book:

> The creation of the World Trade Towers by Rockefeller brothers Nelson and David had been steeped in psychological symbolism from their start in the early 1960s. As the most well known scions of American business, the Rockefeller family brought more than just money to their endeavors, they brought a vision for the future of the planet and a philosophy to guide it.
> Begun as a massive undertaking to revitalize lower Manhattan, Chase Manhattan Bank Chairman David and New York Governor Nelson pushed hard for the project and each tower stood as a symbol of their respective power. As metaphor, the towers were more than just two of the tallest buildings in the world. It might be said they were as important as the two pillars Joachim and Boaz which stood at the entrance to Solomon's Temple; mystical gates to a Cathedral of wisdom in which all could worship under one religion; the religion of business, Capitalism.
> The Rockefellers were no strangers to the power of psychological warfare and its impact on American opinion. During World War II Nelson had headed the U.S. government's intelligence agency for Latin America, the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs (CIAA). CIAA's film division guided the 1942 production of Walt Disney's Saludos Amigos to promote pro-American sentiment in South America. In 1954 Nelson was appointed as President Eisenhower's White House special assistant on Cold War tactics and psychological warfare. Nelson Rockefeller played a central role in formulating domestic propaganda programs throughout the 1950s as chairman of the Planning Coordination Group which, in addition to its propaganda work, oversaw all CIA covert operations. His 1956 Special Studies Project directed by Rockefeller protégé Henry Kissinger produced many of the domestic policy recommendations that came to be known as President Kennedy's New Frontier. His family's philanthropic support of the arts had been carefully coordinated with the CIA and was both overtly and covertly propagandistic.

APPENDIX B:

EXCERPT FROM "SYMBOLIC LITERACY"

(PART TWO)

By Michael Tsarion

Due to chronic symbol illiteracy, we live our lives largely unaware of a great poison in our midst, something that has a profoundly negative effect on our conscious and unconscious selves. This is the use of subliminal persuasion in media and advertising. Subliminal and subtextual persuasion of this pernicious kind constitutes nothing less than a psychic dictatorship. It involves the deliberate and subversive manipulation and public purveyance of words, images, numbers, colors, rhythms, and symbols which are subsequently directed, via ubiquitous media oracles, toward the limbic areas of the human brain.

The artifice of the Media Persuaders produces an elaborate and insidious cryptic language specifically designed to stimulate conflict between fantasy and reality. It also serves to stimulate the compulsive urges of man's base appetites, and a plethora of mundane and dissonant drives that conflict with our higher aspirations and intentions. Constant exposure to subliminal content serves to undermine man's healthy drives. It subverts our natural moral sensibility and ultimately arrests our spiritual maturation. The devastating effects of such subversion on our selves, as well as on our children, has rarely been explored in great depth. It has yet to be recognized by the public at large, who, being victims of chronic "symbol illiteracy," are unshielded against the constant barrage of subliminal information entering their minds causing, over time, a nightmare list of physical and psychic disorders.

In the mind of this author, there can be no question of positive social change, no question of national or global healing, until human beings (particularly those in the western world) become lucidly cognizant and profoundly educated concerning the power of symbols, not only as transcendental portals, or mathematical devices, but as weapons in the hands of plutocratic elites, with occult agendas, laboring to arrest the mental, emotional, and spiritual maturation of the underclasses.

The alarming existential chaos which the young presently experience, though mostly deplored and ignored, serves as a direct indictment of the symbolic subversion I seek to expose. The young are, by definition, closer to the creative force than the average adult. They are also more influenced by the limbic brain and, therefore, respond with greater zeal to the erotic and even perverse symbolic messages which have become increasingly pervasive in their life- and think-space. The invasive, clandestinely directed, content has been adroitly designed to bypass their moral conscience and rational filters. The results of this psychic dictatorship are devastating.

Subliminal messages permeate television programs, computer games, magazines, billboards, products, and musical productions. They are, however, not limited to the ambience of the young. They are just one of the weapons in the arsenal of psychopathic corporations whose entire modus operandi concerns profit and dehumanization. All that is truly aesthetic, traditional, cultural or substantial, merely stands in the way of their monopolistic stratagems, their aggressive, relentless efforts at reducing the entire human race to a body of narcissistic, sense-infatuated, desensitized, amoral, immoral or actively criminal "smiling depressives."...

We have technological witchdoctors and cyber-space sorcerers. Their particular concoction of spells are cast via techniques that go by names such as Tele-hypnosis, Metacontrast, Hemisync, Synaesthenia, and Embedding. New techniques, yes, but with the same deadly effect as any past voodoo, sorcery, or telepathy.

> The man who understands a symbol not only opens himself to the objective world but at the same time succeeds in emerging from his personal situation and reaching a comprehension of the universal...thanks to the symbol, the individual experience is "awoken" and transmuted into a spiritual act.
> — Mircea Eliade

In fact, the only way to really comprehend the complete ramifications of their insidious work, is for each person to become familiar with the manner in which symbol affect the mind. Eventually, the student must also begin to study occult subjects. He must study subjects such as Tarot, Alchemy, Astrology, and Astro-Theology.

By studying the nature of consciousness and how it is affected or disaffected by colors, symbols, numbers, and words, we discover what is going on around us. We are also able to take back the power that was stolen from us.

Symbols have been used by all major cultures and, naturally, there could be no true advance to higher forms of language and communication without them. Symbols are higher forms of communication. They transmit archetypal ideas that words are unable to convey.

> Among the ancients, who dealt largely with psychical sciences, there seems to have been a common language which could be used to explain the invisible world and its inhabitants; but we of this age have not yet developed such a language. Consequently, men who deny human immortality, as well as men with religious faith who have not… transformed that faith into a fact, nowadays… in attempting to explain psychic fact, call it mysticism
> W. Y. Evans Wentz (Fairy Folklore in Celtic Countries)

Cynics who continue to doubt whether symbols and images have any lasting negative affect on consciousness should remember and study the most recent example of mass control, that of Nazi Germany. The Nazis openly used ritual choreography, ancient symbols and rallying chants, powerful mystical logos and regalia, and so on, to force men into a hive mentality. We now know that Hitler and his cronies were deeply involved with powerful occult societies and were fascinated by ancient mysticism. Hitler sent agents throughout the world, to visit tribes and sects in order to procure occult works and doctrines, and to learn how to employ magical arts.

> The twenty-first century will be the era of the World Controllers… The older dictators fell because they could never supply their subjects with enough bread, enough circuses, enough miracles, and mysteries. Under a scientific dictatorship, education will really work… most men and women will grow up to love their servitude and will never dream of revolution. There seems to be no good reason why a thoroughly scientific dictatorship should ever be overthrown
> Aldous Huxley (Brave New World Revisited)

Tragically, that which man consumes also consumes him. Sickened and desperate in his own soul, and knowing next to nothing about his own essence, he charges back and forth vainly with a thousand and one ideas and plans, pathetically administering to the maladies of his equally debilitated neighbors and fellow humans. His mind is plagued with "media viruses" and his libido rages within from all kinds of toxic programming. By divorcing ourselves from our center and losing our once natural sense of interior life, we become a generation who must have but cannot be, who know what but not how to think. Persona-drives and limbic-drives predominate and compel us to live on the periphery of Being, on the surface of ourselves. We do not own our own thoughts and yet believe ourselves capable of "independent" thought and choice. True, thought can be creative, but thoughts can also be created and implanted by agencies that seek to enslave the soul and confound the natural intelligence. Pestilence and injustice ride their steeds through our world, but they go unseen, sowing the seeds of doom among the innocent and pure, within hearts and minds unprotected and without awareness of what is happening to them.

The subversive forces that operate as described, and which deal so contemptuously with the underclasses they fear, can be sanctioned, penalized, and even overthrown, once we return to the "Symbolic Literacy" that was natural to our forebears. When the "inner eye" is opened and when Pattern Recognition becomes as natural as breathing, the tables will be turned on the subversive malefactor and tyrants.

The Mohamed Atta Myth

http://www.911truth.org/article.php?story=20050519154200725

Of the four alleged 9/11 suicide-pilots, three had been in attendance at two flight schools at the tiny airport in Venice, Florida: Huffman Aviation and Florida Flight Training. Both were owned by Dutch men who purchased the schools within months of each other, in 1999. Soon after they took over, the schools began training unprecedented numbers of Arab flight students. Yet Huffman Aviation and Florida Flight Training, along with the dubious characters who ran them, have so far avoided any serious investigation or media attention. One man who has tried to make up for this is investigative reporter Daniel Hopsicker, who spent two years following the attacks in Venice, examining the training of the alleged hijackers. He reports his findings in his book Welcome to Terrorland: Mohamed Atta & the 9-11 Cover-up in Florida. As well as describing evidence of large-scale illegal activity going on in and around the Venice Airport, this book casts serious doubt upon the official account of who the hijackers really were.

We have all heard how these 19 alleged hijackers were Islamic extremists. Yet evidence uncovered by Hopsicker, particularly regarding alleged ringleader Mohamed Atta, depicts unlikely personalities and lifestyles for a bunch of religious fanatics. For example, almost totally ignored by the mainstream press is that Atta had an American girlfriend for over two months whilst in Venice, with whom he would go out clubbing almost every night. At the time, this attractive young woman—Amanda Keller—had spiky pink hair and was working as a "lingerie model" for an escort service called Fantasies & Lace. Atta is known to have been a heavy drinker who snorted cocaine. Local newspapers reported how in February 2001, along with Keller, he went on a three-day binge of drinking and drug taking in Key West.

ATTA
& THE 9-11 COVER-UP IN FLORIDA
DANIEL HOPSICKER

Just days before 9/11, Atta and Marwan al-Shehhi (another of the alleged suicide-pilots) spent the evening drinking heavily at a bar in Fort Lauderdale. The bar's manager later told reporters that the men "got wasted," drinking "Stolichnaya and orange juice, and Captain Morgan's spiced rum and Coke." Bartender Patricia Idrissi concurred, saying: "Atta drank Stoli vodka for three straight hours. They were wasted." Amanda Keller describes a typical night out at a club with Atta: "Marwan [al-Shehhi] was in the reggae room drinking with a bunch of women at the bar, there were a lot of women around him, and he was just flaunting money." As Hopsicker points out: "It's one thing to hear Atta described as living it up with wine, women and song. But Marwan flaunting money at the bar pretty much puts the lie to the 'Islamic fundamentalist' tag."

Hopsicker suggests that, rather than being a fundamentalist Muslim, Mohamed Atta better fits the profile of a member of Arab society's privileged elite and also a spy. Amongst many oddities contradicting the 'fundamentalist' label is the fact that his e-mail list included the names of several employees of U.S. defense contractors. More alarming, he and as many as six of the other alleged 9/11 hijackers appear to have trained at U.S. military bases. Hopsicker writes:

"On the Saturday following the Tuesday attack, the Los Angeles Times broke the story in a long article on their front page.

"A defense official said two of the hijackers were former Saudi fighter pilots," reported the paper, "who had studied in exchange programs at the Defense Language School at Lackland Air Force Base in Texas and the Air War College at Maxwell Air Force Base in Alabama."

The story went wide the next day, Sunday, September 15th. Newsweek, the Washington Post and the Miami Herald all reported as many as seven of the terrorist hijackers in the September 11th attacks received training at secure U.S. military installations.

"Two of 19 suspects named by the FBI, Saeed Alghamdi and Ahmed Alghamdi, have the same names as men listed at a housing facility for foreign military trainees at Pensacola. Two others, Hamza Alghamdi and Ahmed Alnami, have names similar to individuals listed in public records as using the same address inside the base," the Washington Post reported.

"In addition, a man named Saeed Alghamdi graduated from the Defense Language Institute at Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio, while men with the same names as two other hijackers, Mohamed Atta and Abdulaziz Alomari, appear as graduates of the U.S. International Officers School at Maxwell Air Force Base, Alabama, and the Aerospace Medical School at Brooks Air Force Base in San Antonio, respectively," the Post said.

Newsweek detailed how U.S. military facilities routinely trained pilots for other countries: "A former Navy pilot told Newweek that during his years on the base, 'we always, always, always trained other countries' pilots. Whoever the country du jour is, that's whose pilots we train.' Candidates begin with 'an officer's equivalent of boot camp,' he said. 'Then they would put them through flight training.'"

Hopsicker explains how this crucial story came to be dismissed:

"Someone was going to have to answer for a lot.

"But Atta is a fairly common surname in the Middle East," the Post quoted Laila Alquatami of the Arab-American Anti-Discrimination Committee as saying, and the suspected hijacker's first name is "probably the No. 1 name that is given to babies, in honor of the prophet Mohamed."

The Boston Globe reported the Pentagon's denial: "Some of the FBI suspects had names similar to those used by foreign alumni of U.S. military courses," said the Air Force in a statement. "Discrepancies in their biographical data indicate we are probably not talking about the same people."

How easy was it to tell the Pentagon was lying? Think about it. It is neither plausible nor logical that the reports were false because of seven separate cases of mistaken identity. One or two, maybe. But seven? No way.

None of the newspapers retracted the story, yet it disappeared. One person who sought answers was Senator Bill Nelson, who faxed Attorney General John Ashcroft, demanding to know if the story was really true. However:

"The Senator has still not received a reply, we heard from his spokesman, when we called his office eleven months later.

"In the wake of those reports, we asked about the Pensacola Naval Air Station but we never got a definitive answer from the Justice Department," stated the Senator's press spokesman.

"So we asked the FBI for an answer 'if and when' they could provide us one. Their response to date has been that they are trying to sort through something complicated and difficult."

Deciding to investigate for himself, Hopsicker phoned the Pentagon and spoke with the public information officer who helped write and disseminate their original denial of the story:

"Biographically, they're not the same people," she explained patiently, using the same language contained in the Air Force's press release. "Some of the ages are twenty years off."

Was she saying that the age of the 'Mohamed Atta' who had attended the Air Force's International Officer's School at Maxwell Air Force Base was different than that of 'terrorist ringleader Mohamed Atta?'

Not exactly, she admitted. She could not confirm that—in this specific instance—they had different ages. What she could do was once again deny that the International Officer's School attendee named Mohamed Atta had been the Mohamed Atta who piloted a passenger plane into the World Trade Center.

However, she could offer no specifics for her assertion, and repeatedly declined requests for biographical details about the Mohamed Atta who had trained at Maxwell Air Force Base.

After Hopsicker's persistent questioning, she finally said in exasperation: "I do not have the authority to tell you who attended which schools." Hopsicker reflects: "It was hard to read this as anything other than a back-handed confirmation. When she said that she didn't have the authority, the clear implication was that someone else does? Somewhere in the Defense Dept. a list exists with the names of Sept. 11 terrorists who received training at U.S. military facilities. She just didn't have the authority to release it." Furthermore, Hopsicker spoke to a woman who works at the Maxwell Air Force Base in Alabama:

"I have a girlfriend who recognized Mohamed Atta. She met him at a party at the Officer's Club," she told us.

"The reason she swears it was him here is because she didn't just meet him and say hello. After she met him she went around and introduced him to the people that were with her. So she knows it was him."

Saudis were a highly visible presence at Maxwell Air Force Base, she said. "There were a lot of them living in an upscale complex in Montgomery. They had to get all of them out of here.

"They were all gone the day after the attack."

Despite it being a key 9/11 crime scene, there has been a surprising absence of investigations into the goings on in Venice, Florida. In fact, to the contrary, "the FBI's full attention seemed to have been engaged—not in investigating what had happened—but in suppressing evidence and even intimidating the witnesses who had seen and heard things that fly in the face of the 'official story.'" For example, Mohamed Atta's former girlfriend Amanda Keller says that even after she left Venice, the FBI called on her every other day for several months, telling her not to talk to anybody. Similarly, a woman called Stephanie Frederickson who lived next-door to Atta and Keller in Venice reported how she and other residents at the same apartment building were harassed and intimidated by FBI agents, to prevent them from talking to reporters. According to Frederickson:

"The question [the FBI] asked was always the same. You aren't saying anything to anybody, are you?

"At first, right after the attack, they told me I must have been mistaken in my identification. Or they would insinuate that I was lying. Finally they stopped trying to get me to change my story, and just stopped by once a week to make sure I hadn't been talking to anyone."

What is more, the FBI arrived in Venice just hours after the 9/11 attacks. A former manager from Huffman Aviation said: "They were outside my house four hours after the attack." He added: "My phones have been bugged, they still are. How did the FBI get here so soon? Ask yourself: How'd they get here so soon?" Within 24 hours of the attacks, records from Huffman Aviation, where Atta and al-Shehhi attended, were escorted aboard a C-130 cargo plane to Washington by Florida governor and brother of the president Jeb Bush. Similarly, according to a sergeant with the Venice police, the FBI took all their files and flew them to Washington with Jeb Bush aboard. (Presumably this was on the same flight as the Huffman records.) Hopsicker notes: "The important point was that taking files was a lot different than copying them. The FBI wasn't taking any chances." He concludes: "There is a demonstrable, provable, and massive federally-supervised cover-up in place in Florida."

As this and my previous evidence shows, there are countless unanswered questions about 9/11 that at some point are going to have to be properly examined. Even an investigation into just a few of these questions, such as those around the war games on 9/11, could be enough to start a major scandal. However, as numerous writers and independent researchers have found, there are so many suspicious circumstances that the truth could be very different to what we have been led to believe. The human rights lawyer Richard Falk has written: "There are so many gaping holes in the official accounts of 9/11 that no plausible coherent narrative remains, and until now we have been staggering forward as if the truth about these traumatic events no longer mattered." But if the mainstream press start investigating properly, it could lead to a completely unprecedented '9/11 scandal.'

9/11: A CONSPIRACY THEORY (A SATIRE)

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=yuC_4mGTs98&feature=colike
Uploaded by corbettreport on Sep 11, 2011

TRANSCRIPT: On the morning of September 11, 2001, 19 men armed with boxcutters directed by a man on dialysis in a cave fortress halfway around the world using a satellite phone and a laptop directed the most sophisticated penetration of the most heavily-defended airspace in the world, overpowering the passengers and the military combat-trained pilots on 4 commercial aircraft before flying those planes wildly off course for over an hour without being molested by a single fighter interceptor.

These 19 hijackers, devout religious fundamentalists who liked to drink alcohol, snort cocaine, and live with pink-haired strippers, managed to knock down 3 buildings with 2 planes in New York, while in Washington a pilot who couldn't handle a single engine Cessna was able to fly a 757 in an 8,000 foot descending 270 degree corskscrew turn to come exactly level with the ground, hitting the Pentagon in the budget analyst office where DoD staffers were working on the mystery of the 2.3 trillion dollars that Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld had announced "missing" from the Pentagon's coffers in a press conference the day before, on September 10, 2001.

Luckily, the news anchors knew who did it within minutes, the pundits knew within hours, the Administration knew within the day, and the evidence literally fell into the FBI's lap. But for some reason a bunch of crazy conspiracy theorists demanded an investigation into the greatest attack on American soil in history.

The investigation was delayed, underfunded, set up to fail, a conflict of interest and a cover up from start to finish. It was based on testimony extracted through torture, the records of which were destroyed. It failed to mention the existence of WTC7, Able Danger, Ptech, Sibel Edmonds, OBL and the CIA, and the drills of hijacked aircraft being flown into buildings that were being simulated at the precise same time that those events were actually happening. It was lied to by the Pentagon, the CIA, the Bush Administration and as for Bush and Cheney…well, no one knows what they told it because they testified in secret, off the record, not under oath and behind closed doors. It didn't bother to look at who funded the attacks because that question is of "little practical significance." Still, the 9/11 Commission did brilliantly, answering all of the questions the public had (except most of the victims' family members' questions) and pinned blame on all the people responsible (although no one so much as lost their job), determining the attacks were "a failure of imagination" because "I don't think anyone could envision flying airplanes into buildings " except the Pentagon and FEMA and NORAD and the NRO.

The DIA destroyed 2.5 TB of data on Able Danger, but that's OK because it probably wasn't important.

The SEC destroyed their records on the investigation into the insider trading before the attacks, but that's OK because destroying the records of the largest investigation in SEC history is just part of routine record keeping.

NIST has classified the data that they used for their model of WTC7's collapse, but that's OK because knowing how they made their model of that collapse would "jeopardize public safety".

The FBI has argued that all material related to their investigation of 9/11 should be kept secret from the public, but that's OK because the FBI probably has nothing to hide.

…Osama Bin Laden lived in a cave fortress in the hills of Afghanistan, but somehow got away. Then he was hiding out in Tora Bora but somehow got away. Then he lived in Abottabad for years, taunting the most comprehensive intelligence dragnet employing the most sophisticated technology in the history of the world for 10 years, releasing video after video with complete impunity (and getting younger and younger as he did so), before finally being found in a daring SEAL team raid which wasn't recorded on video, in which he didn't resist or use his wife as a human shield, and in which these crack special forces operatives panicked and killed this unarmed man, supposedly the best source of intelligence about those dastardly terrorists on the planet. Then they dumped his body in the ocean before telling anyone about it. Then a couple dozen of that team's members died in a helicopter crash in Afghanistan.

This is the story of 9/11, brought to you by the media which told you the hard truths about JFK and incubator babies and mobile production facilities and the rescue of Jessica Lynch.

If you have any questions about this story…you are a batshit, paranoid, tinfoil, dog-abusing baby-hater and will be reviled by everyone. If you love your country and/or freedom, happiness, rainbows, rock and roll, puppy dogs, apple pie and your grandma, you will never ever express doubts about any part of this story to anyone. Ever.

This has been a public service announcement by: the Friends of the FBI, CIA, NSA, DIA, SEC, MSM, White House, NIST, and the 9/11 Commission. Because Ignorance is Strength.

APPENDIX E:

EXCERPT FROM "THE BUSH FAMILY'S 'PROJECT HAMMER'"

By Deanna Springola

In September 1991, George H. W. Bush and Alan Greenspan… financed $240 billion in illegal bonds to economically decimate the Soviet Union and bring Soviet oil and gas resources under the control of Western investors, backed by the Black Eagle Trust and supported later by Putin who, for the right price, purged certain oligarchs. The $240 billion in illegal bonds were apparently replaced with Treasury notes backed by U.S. taxpayers. …

SEPTEMBER 11 — BLACK OP COVER-UP

Three top securities brokers had offices in the World Trade Center, Cantor Fitzgerald, Euro Brokers and Garbon Inter Capital. Flight 11 struck just under the floors where Cantor Fitzgerald was located. Cantor Fitzgerald, with possible connections to the U.S. Intelligence apparatus, was America's biggest securities broker and apparently the main target. Within minutes, an explosion in the North Tower's vacant 23rd floor, right under the offices of the FBI and Garbon Inter Capital on the 25th floor caused a huge fire from the 22nd through the 25th floors. At the same time, there was an explosion in the basement of the North Tower. A vault in the North Tower basement held less than $1 billion in gold, much of which was reportedly moved before 9/11. However, the government had hundreds of billions of dollars of securities which were summarily destroyed. The Federal Reserve, untouched by the crisis at its downtown offices (as they had everything backed up to a remote location), assumed emergency powers that afternoon. The $240 billion in securities were electronically cleared. Then, at 9:03, Flight 175 slammed into the 78th floor of the South Tower just below the 84th floor where Euro Brokers were located. Brian Clark, the manager at Euro Brokers, heard numerous explosions, apparently unrelated to what he referred to as the oxygen-starved fire caused by the plane crash.

The September 11 attacks related to the financial improprieties during the preceding ten years which spurred at least nine federal investigations which were initiated in 1997-1998, about the same time that Osama bin Laden, after twenty years as a CIA asset, announced a fatwa against the U.S. The records of many of those investigations were held in the Buildings Six and Seven and on the 23rd floor of the North Tower. … Building Seven, not hit by a plane, collapsed at 5:20 p.m. but was vacated as early as 9:00 when evacuees claimed to see dead bodies and sporadic fires within the building.

By 2008 and even earlier the covert securities were worth trillions. The securities used to decimate the Soviets and end the Cold War were stored in certain broker's vaults in the World Trade Center where they were destroyed on September 11, 2001. They would have come due for settlement and clearing on September 12, 2001. The federal agency investigating these bonds, the Office of Naval Intelligence, was in the section of the Pentagon that was destroyed on September 11. Renovations at the Pentagon were due to be completed on September 16, 2001. However, the Office of Naval Intelligence (ONI), the entity that often monitors war games, was hurriedly moved. If they were monitoring the simultaneous war games that morning, they would have realized that the games were used as a distraction from the actual assault. Whatever hit the pentagon struck the Navy Command Center and the offices of the Chief of Naval Operations Intelligence Plot (CNO-IP). There were 125 fatalities in the Pentagon; thirty-one percent of them were people who worked in the Naval Command Center, the location of the Office of Naval Intelligence. Thirty-nine of the forty people who worked in the Office of Naval Intelligence died.

On September 10, 2001 Rumsfeld announced that the Pentagon couldn't account for $2.3 trillion, "We are, as they say, tangled in our anchor chain. Our financial systems are decades old. According to some estimates, we cannot track $2.3 trillion in transactions. We cannot share information from floor to floor in this building because it's stored on dozens of technological systems that are inaccessible or incompatible." It was forgotten the following morning. Accountants, bookkeepers and budget analysts who were in the section of the Pentagon being renovated met their unexpected deaths. The destruction of accounting facts and figures will prevent discovery of where that money went.

…hundreds of innocent people were in the World Trade Center towers and the Pentagon. Their deaths were presumably required to conceal the existence of the Black Eagle Trust, along with the numerous illegal activities it had funded for over 50 years. This massive destruction, and the lost lives, constitutes a massive cover-up and continued lawlessness by the brotherhood of death, Skull and Bones, and their accomplices, the Enterprise. The Enterprise was established in the 1980s as a covert fascist Cold Warriors faction working with other groups like Halliburton's private security forces and the Moonies. Citibank is connected to the Enterprise, along with all the CIA front banks, Nugen Hand and BCCI.

THE ADDENDUM FROM HELL …

THE NEXT 9/11?

A Work of Predictive Fiction

The Most Dangerous Book in the World lays bare the real 9/11. Now, S.K. Bain takes the occult script developed in that book and uses it as a criminal profile to predict the next mass ritual. However, he doesn't play "What If?" He doesn't write in hypothetical terms about this attack—he's so confident in his prediction that he's written about it in past tense. Just as Most Dangerous was a backward look at September 11, 2001, "The Next 9/11?" is an after-the-fact, in-depth analysis of an event that could well come to pass before the end of this year (2012).

A BACKWARD LOOK

Completed in August 2012, "The Next 9/11?" takes readers into the not-too-distant future for a hypothetical look back at December 2012—in order to describe a reality that appears all-too-unlikely to unfold—and exposes what by all indications are the machinations leading up to a nuclear 9/11.

September 11, 2001 was merely a warm-up for December 25th, 2012. Forget the Mayan Apocalypse of 12/21/2012—it's Christmas Day you should be worried about. Although written as a backward look from a future vantage point, dissecting this hypothetical event and piecing together the occult script for "Black Christmas," this is no Dan Brown novel but rather a hard-hitting, true-to-life pre-crime exposé of the predictive programming and sophisticated psychological warfare tactics employed before, during and after the attack.

The hulking machinery of tyranny constructed upon the foundations of 9/11 only needs one thing to roar to life: a spark of ignition. Author S.K. Bain predicts what this source of ignition will be, and it's far more than a mere spark to be sure. And even if he's wrong in his prediction, "The Next 9/11?" is still a highly-informative exercise in analyzing occult-driven false-flag terrorism. The long march toward global tyranny ends on Christmas Day 2012.

PROLOGUE

ARE WE THERE YET?

by Peter Levenda

This is like no story of 2012 you have ever read.

The Mayans gave us the year 2012 as a deadline, a drop-dead date if you will. Now there has been a lot of mystification about 2012, an insistence that it signals the end of an era, or the end of the world. But we've been through this before.

We had the Y2K phenomenon, when everyone "knew" that the computer systems of the world—including those running power grids, nuclear plants, and military defences—would go off-line at midnight on December 31, 1999/ January 1, 2000 to accompanying global chaos.

It didn't happen.

And we have had generations of believers in various Christian denominations believing that the world would end—and that Jesus would return—on all sorts of dates throughout the last two thousand years of history. Apocalyptic cults have been with us for centuries, and they always make for interesting reading. Of course, maybe the Rapture did happen and we are all that's left.

I wouldn't be surprised.

But why should we pay attention to the Mayans culture no one really knows very much about, and whatever they had to say about the end of their own calendar?

The short answer is: we shouldn't.

After all, the Mayan End-of-the-World-2012 meme may be the most potent form of misdirection on the planet right now. It implies that if there is some kind of major disturbance in December 2012 that it was inevitable, that it was cosmic, that it was written in our stars.

In other words, that it wasn't the act of some power-mad, insanely megalomaniacal political or military or corporate cabal bent on driving the last nail into the coffin of all that is right and good with the world, the hemisphere, the country.

The Mayan astronomers created their elaborate calendrical system—one of the most sophisticated in history—in the employ of the state. This was a time when church and state were one, as they have been for millenia of western and eastern history. We in the United States of America have grown up believing that there is no crossover between these two institutions: that our political lives and our religious lives are separate and do not "bleed" over from one side to the other. That, of course, is nonsense. You don't need to be a forensic analyst with a can of Luminol to see that the blood is everywhere.

While the legal separation of church and state—enshrined in our Constitution and most specifically in our Bill of Rights—is a fact, it is one of those things that looks better on paper than it does in real life. We live in one of the most spiritually frantic eras of all time, when abortion rights, gay marriage, and other "social" issues divide the country along what seem to be political lines but which are, in reality, purely religious boundaries. For instance, the arguments concerning abortion rights and gay marriage really boil down to the question of the soul and its relation to the human body: when does the soul enter the developing foetus? Does that make it a person? If gay people cannot procreate—and thus provide material basis for more souls—should their unions be blessed? Or even tolerated?

But these are questions for philosophers, theologians and talk radio hosts. The manipulation of religious sentiments for political purposes is a mainstay of American life. We know that. But right now the survival of our individual human bodies may seem more immediately important than fuzzy theories about the nature of the soul, the spirit, or life after death. The New Age Mayan "prophecies" answer both needs, by framing human survival in almost mystical terms. The rebirth of the planet. The illumination of the masses. Cosmic consciousness.

Which is not to say that some form of spiritual advice—some Kabbalah, for instance—would not be relevant (and welcome) to the matter at hand.

Which brings us to this, the addendum to S.K. Bain's Most Dangerous Book in the World. It is, in a sense, the climax to the long build-up in volume one. It's the punch line, but no one is laughing.

Readers will be shocked at what Bain has to say about 2012. This has nothing to do with Mayan prophecy or Biblical millenialism, which are only window-dressing for the actual event. It has everything to do with political events as mega-rituals, and with the conscious application of ritual technology to the manipulation of mass psychology. Isn't that what the Mayans were all about? If the Mayan astronomers painted the veil in the millenial Temple full of stars, Bain's book is about the Man Behind the Curtain. (This seemingly gnomic statement will make a great deal of sense to those who have already read volume one and who are eager to rush through volume two to see what Bain—not the Mayans—predicts for us all.)

I just hope that Bain is wrong. I pray that he is just another millenialist in a long tradition of millenialism, chiliastic panic and eschatological angst.

But I have my doubts.

Bain's Konspiracy Kabbalah is internally consistent, and the numbers are infernally insistent. He knows that we are being worked up into some kind of fever over the end of 2012, with everything from History Channel documentaries on aliens and ancient astronauts to New Age mystics and their groupies burning sage bundles in airless New York City apartments. Everyone is pointing everywhere else … except at where it matters. For if the world is coming to an end in 2012 do we have any doubt at all that the Powers That Be—that Freemasonry of fratricides, homicides and genocides—have already fueled their space shuttles and wire-transferred their Cayman Island account holdings to a Savings and Loan on Mars?

More likely, according to Bain, they have orchestrated a magnificent tragedy for us to witness on the winter solstice, some cinematic devastation that will finish what 9/11 only started. It will be an event replete with arcane symbols and ritual gestures, something that would make a semiotician blush with shame or lust: Earth-shattering explosions. Destruction of biblical proportions.

Human sacrifice.

Martial law.

This is not a book for the nervous. It is, after all, the Most Dangerous Book in the World. It should come with a warning, like a pack of cigarettes or an R-rated movie. But aren't we tired of being protected by the state? Haven't we finally realized that taking our shoes and belts off at airports is nothing more than theater? And isn't the root of theater ritual itself?

So throw caution to the radioactive winds. Open this book and start in. Unless, that is, you move your lips when you read. In which case close the book now. We don't need another voice chanting the evocations that will bring Apocalypse even closer than the December 25, 2012 drop-dead date.

And let the Powers That Be realize that Bain is on to you. He knows where the bodies will be buried. He has counted the numbers of the Beast—all of them—and has calculated the odds and hedged our bets with a view towards balancing the books. So no matter what happens on December 25, 2012 … you're screwed.

Stand down.

Peter Levenda – August 2012

FOREWORD

If only … The criminal profile established in Most Dangerous is employed herein to uncover and reveal the grotesque innerworkings of the recent Mega-9/11 ritual carried out on 12/25/12. As with the events of September 11, 2001, nothing is what it seems nor what it is claimed to be, and the longer you look at it, the uglier it gets.

This newly-reconstructed Occult Script is every bit as twisted, every bit as sophisticated as that for the 9/11 Global Luciferian MegaRitual—yet, the horrific nature and global scope and scale of 12/25 pushes this MegaRitual to an entirely new level altogether.

In hindsight, we can see that 9/11 was just a warm-up for the Main Event, just a preview, a foretaste of what was to occur in 2012. If only we had been able to use the occult script from 9/11 to decode their plans sooner, in advance… maybe, just maybe, this might have allowed us to stop their next act of false flag terror. If only…

SECTION ONE

BLACK CHRISTMAS

CHAPTER ONE

HO, HO, HOLY SH*T

DECEMBER 25, 2012. PHOENIX, ARIZONA. The unmarked white lorry-style delivery van traveled south down Interstate 17, taking the Capitol exit and then turning onto 17th Street, again traveling south until it stopped directly in front of the Arizona State Capitol building at 1700 West Washington Street. The driver sat motionless, eyes tightly closed, repeating "Allahu Akbar"—"God is Great"—over and over to the 9-1-1 operator…

In Paradise Valley and in other communities all across the Valley of the Sun, as the Phoenix metropolitan area is often referred to, children and their parents were awakening to a beautiful Christmas morning. The sun had risen about forty-five minutes earlier and was slowly warming the crisp morning air. Children were unwrapping their presents, families anticipating a day full of gifts, fellowship and food—the joys of Christmas. Peace on earth and goodwill toward men.

8:15 A.M. The sun glinted off the circular stainless-steel band that was the primary element of Arizona's 9/11 Memorial, situated in the park directly in front of the Capitol. Then, a brilliant instantaneous flash, appearing as a second sun, superheating the air around it. The fireball travelled outward at unimaginable speed, incinerating almost everything in its path. Less than ten miles away, the windows at the Hall of Flame Fire Museum and the National Firefighting Hall of Heroes shook violently as the blastwave hit them and the intense light reflected off their tinted glass.

The first new reports began to appear only minutes later on Fox and CNN, soon followed by footage from local stations showing the specter of nuclear terror realized, a mushroom cloud towering over a major American city.

The nation, the world, was in a state of complete shock, far beyond anything experienced on 9/11. Some screamed in fear for loved ones in Phoenix, many sat stupefied staring at their televisions, repeating "Oh my God" again and again. Parents shouted at children to leave the room or clutched them close to comfort them.

Those living in towns surrounding Phoenix could look out their windows and see the massive pillar of smoke rising into the sky. Many were awestruck, unable to move; others, realizing the danger they were in, rushed to their basements or began packing frantically.

There was no hope for those at ground zero … in the surrounding blast zones, the horror was unspeakable: the suffocating heat, the smoke-filled air; the screams of the injured, the moans of the dying. Those nearest the blast who had survived and managed to make their way out of the burning buildings couldn't get their bearings—all familiar landmarks had disappeared. They wandered aimlessly in a choking sea of smoke, a literal hell on earth.

Who would do this to America, on Christmas Day?

A Christmas to Forget

As the morning wore on, many couldn't pull themselves away from the non-stop coverage of the disaster, while others were forced by emotional fatigue to turn away.

When news anchors first began breaking in with other news alerts, many of those glued to their televisions initially thought, What the hell could be important enough to interrupt this for? But it quickly became clear that although this was the biggest story of the day, it was not the only major breaking news that morning.

More attacks, not nuclear, thankfully, but clearly related, clearly part of a pattern—a truly global new 9/11. The Church of the Holy Sepulchre in Jerusalem—the traditional site of Jesus' crucifixion, burial and resurrection—destroyed by a massive blast. Reports from the Vatican in Rome of an assassination attempt on the Pope.

It was becoming obvious to many that the terrible events of that morning were something new altogether—not simply a new 9/11 or a Mega-9/11, not simply a nuclear terrorist attack or a globally-coordinated attack—but a worldwide assault on Christendom itself. An attack on the United States and Israel, the Muslims' "Great Satan" and "Little Satan," as well as on the head of the Catholic church, God's representative on earth to the faithful…an attack on one of Christianity's holiest sites, on the most holy day of the year … this was clearly the launch of an all-out Islamic jihad against Christianity.

This was no "New Pearl Harbor," as 9/11 had come to be known—this was the American Hiroshima, an American holocaust, and there would be hell to pay. Iraq? Afghanistan? These would look like humanitarian missions compared to the New Crusades that were sure to follow.

The celebration of the birth of Christ had been brought to an abrupt halt that morning, the holiday seemingly forever marred by the carnage. The day of the Savior's birth had in an instant been transformed into a day of death—Black Christmas. The long nightmare was just beginning … and, as on 9/11, all was going according to plan, but not the plans of Muslim extremists.

CHAPTER TWO

UNHOLY WAR

AN ATTRACTIVE TARGET

Although not New York City or Washington, DC, Phoenix was certainly a logical and attractive terrorist target by any measure. The largest city in Arizona and the largest capital city in the nation, Phoenix was at the time of the attack the sixth most populous city in the United States, home to almost 1.5 million people according to the 2010 U.S. Census—the only state capital with over 1,000,000 residents. The Phoenix metropolitan area was the 14th largest in the nation by population, with about 4.2 million people in 2010, and Phoenix itself one of the largest cities in the U.S. by land area. (To top it all off, Phoenix is also the county seat of Maricopa County.)

Arizona's 389-mile-long border with Mexico had long made it a point-of-entry into the U.S. for illegal immigrants, drug runners and gangs, as well as terrorist organizations. Mexican gangs, including the notorious MS-13, had reportedly been cooperating with al Qaeda and Hezbollah in moving equipment and personnel across the border. With its resources stretched thin, the U.S. Border Patrol couldn't begin to keep up with the ever-increasing volume of cross-border incursions.

THE TRIGGER

The immediate response to the attacks had been predictable for anyone who had access to the History Channel in the last decade: Americans had been fed a steady diet of programming on "continuity of government" and nuclear-disaster-response protocols. The declaration of emergency powers and martial law had come as a surprise only to those who had no idea what these phrases meant. A substantial number of Executive Orders put in place by President Obama and past Democratic and Republican administrations were invoked, and the majority of Americans welcomed these measures: Do anything, just keep us safe.

Dramatically-restricted civil liberties, drastically-increased domestic surveillance and police powers? Don't let another Phoenix happen! Muslim internment camps? A small price to pay for increased security. The burning of Mosques by vigilante mobs? That's what happens when you mess with America.

After several months had passed and no additional attacks had occurred, one might have expected the usual calls for a full Congressional investigation. With the billions spent on increased intelligence gathering and threat analysis capabilities since 9/11, how could this have happened?

There was no new 9/11 Commission, though, no Patriot Act II. They were unneeded. The government's power was absolute, and it exercised that power fully. The apparatus of control that had been constructed in the wake of 9/11 had been so complete, so all-encompassing, all that was needed to bring this vast machinery to full power was a new and improved terrorist attack, and Phoenix was just that—the trigger that activated a massive engine of domination.

THE OFFICIAL STORY

The official government story was that, with the assistance of Iranian-Guard-backed terror cells already in the U.S., al Qaeda and Hezbollah operatives smuggled a nuclear device containing Iranian-enriched uranium across the Arizona-Mexico border and transported it to Phoenix.

There was no variation of Bush's patently-absurd "We never imagined that terrorists would use planes as weapons," no need for the President to say "We never imagined that terrorists would bring nuclear weapons across the Mexican border." If 9/11 had been a failure of imagination, as it was repeatedly asserted, then Phoenix was a failure of intelligence—the government needed more information, more power, more authority and it needed it now. No questions asked, no excuses offered: If you want us to keep you safe, give us everything we demand, give us the rest of your freedoms.

Despite the post-9/11 creation of the massive Department of Homeland Security, despite the numerous new threat fusion centers and hundreds of private corporations devoted to "national security"—chronicled in the Washington Post's 2010 investigative reporting series, "Top Secret America"—Phoenix happened. The problem was obviously not a lack of intelligence-gathering infrastructure or analytical capacity, it was a lack of actionable information, a result of too many protections of privacy and personal information. Big brother can't protect you if you don't feed him.

HOLY WAR

Questioning the government under these circumstances was not just tantamount to treason—it was treason. Conspiracy theories weren't just subversive, they threatened national security. George W. Bush's admonishment to "never tolerate outrageous conspiracy theories" had been taken to heart, and they were no longer tolerated.

The official version of Black Christmas was the Gospel Truth, used to evangelize at home and abroad. There was no questioning it, this bedrock upon which old freedoms were sacrificed and new wars of righteous reprisal were launched. A new civic "religion" was born, this one much more powerful than the 9/11 Testament, the pages of which had worn thin and the masses had begun to question.

Tens, hundreds of thousands of Americans had lost their lives in this vicious unprovoked attack rooted in religious hatred, hatred of the faith of our fathers. Doubting the government's official story was far beyond unpatriotic, it was unChristian. There was no room in America for those who had any question about the justness of our cause and the rightness of our actions. This was a new Holy War, and you'd better make perfectly clear where your loyalties lie. If you're not with us, you are the enemy.

CHAPTER THREE

THE NEW GROUND ZERO

THE PEOPLE'S HOUSE: SOLD (AND BOUGHT BACK)

Trying to look on the bright side (if there is such a thing in the wake of a nuclear terrorist attack), the destruction of the Arizona State Capitol buildings, all things considered, hadn't been that much of a loss. The Old Capitol Building, which had been converted into a museum in the 1980s, had been built on the cheap in the first place and was one of the least impressive state capitols in the entire nation. Arizona was the last of the 48 contiguous states admitted to the Union; perhaps this had somehow dampened their enthusiasm when it came to the construction of their capitol.

The two identical Senate and House annexes that had been added in the '60s were the typical featureless architectural garbage common to the era, and were inadequate in practically every way. So little affection had lawmakers for the buildings that they in fact sold them in 2010 to raise money (under a 99-year lease-back arrangement)—only to turn around and consider buying them back 2 years later just in time for the state's centennial celebration in 2012. (One supposes they figured that it'd be better to have a capitol that no one could be proud of than no capitol at all.)

Although no one ever said as much, state officials, who had been looking at proposals for a new capital complex for some time, probably experienced somewhat the same sense of relief that Twin Towers owner Larry Silverstein felt upon realizing that he wouldn't have to pay for costly asbestos remediation on the aging buildings.

YET ANOTHER MONUMENTALLY-INSULTING MEMORIAL

Truth be told, the annihilation of the Arizona 9/11 Memorial was no great loss, either. Like the original design for the Flight 93 Memorial in Shanksville, Pennsylvania, initially entitled "The Crescent of Embrace" you might recall, the design of this memorial generated controversy from the very beginning. Some took offense to its distinctly crescent shape (sound familiar?), others to several of the self-flagellating blame America inscriptions, such as “Foreign-born Americans afraid,” “You don’t win battles of terrorism with more battles,” and “Fear of foreigners.”

Although she had no say in the final design, former Arizona Governor Janet Napolitano heartily endorsed the monument, stating, “This Memorial is unique, bold, dynamic, educational and unforgettable. The thoughts and remarks etched in stone will serve as learning tools for all of us, our children and our children’s children.” Or, maybe not.

Aside from being offensive, the memorial was just plain ugly, although it did complement the plain-Jane Old Capitol in a weird sort of way. Viewed from above, the memorial looked like a big zero, which, in terms of its aesthetics, it certainly was. Ironically, it was as if this oversized symbol had somehow marked that spot as the next Ground Zero…

Okay, here we go.

CHAPTER FOUR

THE OCCULT SCRIPT FOR BLACK CHRISTMAS

Christmas Morning, 2012. Giant smiles crept over their faces, Grinch-like, as they stared transfixed at their TV screens, their adult diapers barely containing the expressions of glee issuing forth from their bowels. They'd done it, again, bigger and better, and the only thing that made the moment any more enjoyable was the certainty that they'd get away with it, again. For sure, 9/11 had changed the world, but it was simply preparation for this blow—September 11, 2001 had merely been the warm-up routine for a really Big Show.

INDUSTRIAL-STRENGTH IMMOLATION

As with the Occult Script for 9/11 (discussed in The Most Dangerous Book in the World), we will show level upon level of subterfuge, designed to draw us hoi polloi into a never-ending three-dimensional maze of dead-end questions and all-too-suspicious clues left tantalizingly out in the open. Make no mistake, though, this was no 9/11-Part II, no mere occult ritualistic theatrical production with a few thousand sacrificial innocents thrown in for good effect—this was major-league mass sacrifice, industrial-strength immolation, the likes of which would make Moloch pass out from ecstasy.

DON'T TELL ME

Not understanding that their government had been co-opted by globalist bankers and multinational corporations, most people couldn't grasp the concept of the United States Government and its institution as a weapon wielded against them, or as merely public theatre shielding the wholesale looting and pillaging taking place backstage.

The very notion that their institutions of government could be manipulated like so many hand puppets scares average folk to such an extent that they simply wouldn't look any closer—they refuse to see the strings and obvious props, refuse to acknowledge the contrived plotlines and out-in-the-open insults to their intelligence. Don't tell me that, I don't want to know.

For those who pick up on and manage to process the not-so-subtle hints, the message is abundantly clear: Yes, we did it, do what you're told, or else. But most people simply lack the ability to grasp who they are dealing with: fantastically powerful psychopaths who view the vast bulk of humanity as a bunch of useless eaters, as sacrificial pawns to be disposed of at their pleasure, slain to honor the god of the week.

STILL HIDING IN PLAIN SIGHT

The horror of the event—the sheer magnitude of the loss, suffering and terror—made a more elaborate public cover story completely unnecessary. The elite programmers knew that the average citizen couldn't see past the scenes of mass devastation to even begin to look for clues that didn't fit into the official story, for the signs and symbols through which they communicate in plain sight—and take much pleasure in doing so.

They had ruled the past decade with the spectre of a few passenger airplanes crashing into buildings and a couple of imploding skyscrapers—they would likely dominate the next half-century with the non-stop replay of images of a mushroom cloud rising into the skies over American soil.

The Occult Script for Black Christmas was in no danger of being exposed, least of all in any way that could pose any sort of serious threat to them. Even if some armchair-conspiracy-theorist jackass happened to piece together any part of it, what was he going to do? Put up a website? He'd be thrown in the Guantanamo Bay detention camp so quickly it'd make his head spin.

Just like on 9/11, there was real destruction, there were real dead people, real Muslims (or at least Muslim-looking) involved—it didn't matter who the actual producers of the show were, the production itself was reality, end of story…but not for us.

CHAPTER FIVE

17 REPRISED, WASHINGTON'S SURPRISE, THE TRIDENT (AGAIN) & THE SHOCKER

Rather than start off with the pièce de résistance, we're going to follow a trail of lesser clues to the heart of this MegaRitual, and because there exists such definitive evidence—revelations so jaw-dropping, so astounding—that to start with it would do the reader a great disservice, leaving them feeling as if the rest of the book were all downhill. To reveal all at the outset would erase any misgivings in the reader's mind, eliminating the essential element of uncertainty that drives one forward in search of the answer to the most essential question—could this really be true?

So, we start off following threads, loose ends, and drawing comparisons to that other infamous MegaRitual performed on September 11, 2001. Don't think you're going to get off easy or be spared the torment of exploring the deepest recesses and innerworkings of the perverse occult-driven elitist mind. And don't fool yourself that, at the end of it all, you won't find yourself back in that same familiar place, head in hands, muttering "My god, what have they done?"

BACK TO THE BEGINNING

Of course, the New Ground Zero had in fact been purposely marked by the Big Zero Memorial, and, as with the Flight 93 Memorial, it was intentionally designed to be not just offensive but insulting as well … hot damn, it's that same old mockery, right off the bat.

Our old friend 17— recall the 17th tarot ("The Star") and Sirius the Police Dog's badge #17—returns for a reprise role, making a special appearance at the outset in Interstate 17, 17th Street and 1700 West Washington Street, constituting a triple-marking of the Arizona Capitol with a number whose occult significance we know from Most Dangerous. Not to be overlooked however, are these additional facts: 1717 was the year of the formation of the first Freemason Grand Lodge, and, according to tradition, Osiris was killed on the 17th of Athyr (this last point will make more sense later on). Another Sirius affair. The Washington reference is not a coincidence, either, as our first President was himself a Freemason, and his own surprise attack on Christmas Day, at Trenton, New Jersey, is such a delicious historical connection that it's difficult to put into words.

The Trident Returns

Approaching Arizona's capitol from the east, West Washington Street (before it was vaporized) became part of a roadway configuration directly in front of the capital complex that was tantalizingly similar to a classic trident design—such as that found at Dealey Plaza in Dallas or encasing the Twin Towers—and although it fell short of the mark, one has to believe that the similarity sent a shiver up the spine of more than one globalist freakazoid. Such an important symbol would never be shortchanged in this fashion, though, and indeed the trident was employed in all its full glory in the weeks and months following Black Christmas.

Arizona State University's downtown Phoenix campus had been obliterated by the nuclear blast, and the Sun Devil Stadium—aptly named "The House of Heat"—located on the main campus at Tempe less than ten miles away, had become a primary triage point for the tens of thousands of wounded.

ASU's mascot, Sparky the Sun Devil, carries a trident, and the indelible image of this trident-toting imp became engrained in the public consciousness as the character was included in all manner of national and international media coverage surrounding Black Christmas.

The icing on the cake was that the general public began using the hand sign for the trident—a tradition with fans of the school's athletic teams—as a show of sympathy and support for the Sun Devils, and over time, this practice expanded and became a means of demonstrating support for the residents of Phoenix and the recovery effort in general, and rapidly exploded into a national phenomenon. (With the trident hand gesture, the three extended fingers are said to represent the three prongs of the trident, or, alternatively, the index finger and middle finger form the horns of the Devil, with the pinky finger representing the tail.)

Americans of all walks of life flashed the sign en masse at events of every sort, from football games to Black Christmas fundraising concerts. Huge, shouting hordes of people, all over the nation, yelling patriotic slogans, chanting "USA, USA!" or "Phoenix will rise!," all enthusiastically throwing the trident hand sign … to the occultists, these were scenes of incredible meaning and beauty, bringing a tear to the eye.

A Real Shocker

Now, it's not quite clear if this next aspect was somehow intentionally engineered as part of the MegaRitual, or just happened, a fortuitous byproduct of the elitists' devotion to the black arts—perhaps a reward for being bad.

As Americans are wont to do, many never paid too much attention to the details involved with forming the hand sign, with significant numbers of well-intentioned folk throwing around sloppy facsimiles. And it just so happens that the trident hand sign is very, very similar to one called "the shocker" and known colloquially as "two in the pink, one in the stink."

To make the shocker, the thumb is used to fold the ring finger downward while the other fingers are extended, as with the trident. The only difference between the trident and the shocker is that with the latter, the index and middle fingers are kept together and the back of the hand faces outwards, away from the gesturer. This gesture of course has a sexual connotation, referring to the act of inserting the index and middle fingers into the vagina and the little finger into the anus—hence the shock. (Alternate phrases that refer to the shocker include "two in the goo, one in the poo," "two in the mush, one in the tush," and "two in the gum one in the bum.")

An unfortunate percentage of Americans persisted in enthusiastically mis-forming the trident, with the result that at any given event, hundreds if not thousands of persons in the crowd would be unknowingly slinging around this pornographic hand gesture, with everyone else flashing the trident—the sign of the devil himself. Such scenes surely sent many a globalist into near cardiac arrest with glee.

CHAPTER SIX

ROUTE 93,
THE RETURN OF MR. CROWLEY, AND BLACK RAIN
IN THE LAND OF AZ

Following the shock of that last revelation, we'll clean things up a bit, but just for a while, because there's more perversity where that came from.

CALLING NUMBER 93

Given the massive (and well-documented in Most Dangerous) importance of the number 93 to Thelemites—particularly to those involved with creating the occult script for 9/11 and subsequently Black Christmas—we would naturally expect it to make a prominent re-appearance in this latest and greatest production, and indeed it does.

Various roadways served as key evacuation routes following the attack, and connecting Phoenix with Las Vegas—one of the key initial evacuation destinations (all the hotels were filled to capacity and beyond) and temporary relocation cities—is none other than US Route 93.

"Route 93" was repeated over and over again in wall-to-wall media coverage…news alerts, news bulletins…verbally and visually it was 93, 93, 93. Mmm, hmm.

And for a nice little historical connection involving 93 (sort of): 8:15 a.m., the precise moment that Christmas in America died, was the exact time that the atomic bomb "Little Boy" was dropped on Hiroshima by the 393rd Bombardment Squadron's Enola Gay.

Victor 77

Bockscar, sometimes called Bock's Car or Bocks Car, is the name of the United States Army Air Force B-29 bomber that dropped the "Fat Man" nuclear weapon over Nagasaki on August 9th, 1945. The name is a pun on "boxcar" after the name of its aircraft commander, Captain Frederick C. Bock. The airplane's Victor number, painted on the tail: 77.

HELLO AGAIN, MR. CROWLEY

Speaking of gay, it seemed somewhat strange, even at the time that, of all the affected businesses in Phoenix, of all those that were completely or partially destroyed or deeply impacted in one way or another, the media focused such an inordinate amount of attention and reporting time on the OZ Gay & Lesbian Bar.

Now a nuclear blast isn't good for anyone's business, but the bar was well outside the secondary blast zone and hadn't received that much actual damage. It certainly wasn't a vital public service or critical to the proper functioning of the community (well, that would depend on who you asked). The bar did sponsor several small support rallies after it reopened, but nothing that would warrant the amount of coverage devoted to it.

The bar seemed to become somewhat of a cause célèbre, which, given the media and popular culture's obsession with all things homosexual, wasn't really that big of a surprise, but still, if one suspected that there was perhaps a deeper agenda at work, well, they'd have been dead on the money.

Not only was this component of the occult script a tribute of sorts to the star of the 9/11 MegaRitual, Aleister Crowley, and his favorite sexual activity, which involved the "infernal entrance," but obviously it was also a quite crafty means of repeatedly blasting out "Oz" to the entire planet—which, of course, further invokes Crowley, 77 and all the other crap. (There's an even deeper reference here to the act of sodomy as a means of accessing hidden spiritual power, particularly in young boys, but that's about all I care to say on the matter.) However, that's not all…

THE LAND OF AZ

As any sixth grader can tell you, the two-letter postal abbreviation for Arizona is AZ, which when pronounced is "ahz," as in the Land of Oz. And if you think that it was just a coincidence that the bar was named the OZ Gay & Lesbian Bar or that it's just some sort of gay thing, think again. There's a strong association between the Land of AZ (and Phoenix specifically) and The Wizard of Oz, as evidenced by the U.S. theatrical run of the motion picture "Dorothy and the Witches of Oz" having been launched at a premiere event in Phoenix on February 17, 2012. Prior to that was the Arizona Broadway Theatre's 2010 production of "Christmas in the Land of Oz" (the theatre itself being located at 7701 West Paradise Lane), and making his anticipated appearance in this latest MegaRitual is none other than our old pal Ozzy Osbourne, who held the very first Ozzfest in Phoenix in 1996. The Land of Ozz.

Ah, yes, and it would be remiss, and just poor form in general, not to make reference at this point to Ozzy's 2007 single "Black Rain" from his ninth studio album of the same name. When asked by an interviewer who came up with the song, he replied:

> Me. I was watching—I like to watch the news channels. I like to watch the documentary channels. And I got this—somebody gave me a DVD of when we dropped the atom bomb on Hiroshima. And after it blew up and killed everybody like that, it carbon—it evaporized (ph) some people, but it carbonized other people, not unlike charcoal and when the bomb—it sucked all these things up in a cloud, and it rained black rain, but they thought it was just regular rain there. And there were people catching it on their tongues and it kind of stuck on my head. I go, wow, I hope we never see black rain, you know?[1]

Yeah, Oz, we know.

CHAPTER SEVEN

SECRETARY OF HOMELAND INSECURITY

We've been forcibly reintroduced to some familiar faces and symbols, but before proceeding into uncharted territory—new symbols, new numbers—or delving deeper into the occult underpinnings of the event, we're going to take a bit of a breather and meet the cast of this MegaRitual, and in the process begin to get a feel for just how extensive the pre-programming for Black Christmas was.

In hindsight, it is plain to see the main characters and plotlines being established well in advance of the attack. The pre-programming/pre-scripting was everywhere, in fact, so obvious and brazen it's amazing that we didn't see it—right there, under our noses, just like in the lead-up to 9/11.

THE POLITICS OF FEAR

Playing the lead female role was of course Janet Napolitano, head of the Department of Homeland Security (DHS), who was the governor of Arizona when President Obama tapped her for the position (and it must be said here at the outset that the notion of having the capital of the home state of the top dog at DHS play host to Black Christmas possesses an unmistakable twisted beauty).

The creation of DHS in response to the attacks of September 11th constituted the most significant government reorganization since the Cold War, and the most substantial reorganization of federal agencies since the National Security Act of 1947, which placed the different military departments under a secretary of defense and created the National Security Council and Central Intelligence Agency. DHS also constitutes the most diverse merger of federal functions and responsibilities, incorporating 22 government agencies—including the U.S. Coast Guard and Secret Service—into a single organization.

DHS is the third largest Cabinet department, with more than 200,000 employees and a fiscal year 2011 budget allocation of almost $100 billion, and its stated goal is to prepare for, prevent, and respond to domestic emergencies, particularly terrorism.

In addition to having served as Governor, Napolitano had been a lawyer (serving as attorney for Anita Hill) and Arizona's Attorney General, and in 1993 was appointed by President Bill Clinton as United States Attorney for the District of Arizona, in which capacity she was involved in an investigation connected with the Oklahoma City bombing.

Despite having that level of experience, though, Napolitano, in retrospect, may not have been the best pick to head a massive federal agency whose single greatest responsibility and challenge was thwarting another major attack on the United States by Muslim extremists.

From the outset, Napolitano seemed far more concerned about right-wing extremism (which in her opinion might well have been fueled by the election of the first African-American president) than Islamic terrorism. Worse still, displaying an almost insane politically-correct mindset, she even refused to use the word "terrorism," telling the German news site "Spiegel Online" in a 2009 interview that she preferred the term "'man-caused' disasters." She continued, "That is perhaps only a nuance, but it demonstrates that we want to move away from the politics of fear toward a policy of being prepared for all risks that can occur."[1] Move away from the politics of fear…into the reality of a nuclear holocaust. Nice job!

In what should have been viewed as an equal cause for concern, Napolitano, again in 2009, trying to defend her plans to strengthen U.S.-Canadian border security, claimed incorrectly that September 11 perpetrators had entered the United States from Canada—her comments understandably provoking an angry response from the Canadian ambassador, media, and public.

Despite having been governor of a state that borders Mexico and seeing first-hand the immediate and growing threats presented to national security by a porous southern border, in response to the above criticism Napolitano stated, "Nonetheless, to the extent that terrorists have come into our country or suspected or known terrorists have entered our country across a border, it's been across the Canadian border. There are real issues there." In other words, Watch the little birdie…

SEE SOMETHING, SAY SOMETHING

Perhaps we should have known better than to expect more from someone whose big ideas for protecting Americans were a feckless "See something, say something" Big-Brother-style campaign, complete with a "partnership" with Wal-Mart, and "enhanced pat downs," which effectively amounted to federally-sanctioned groping, practiced with particular enthusiasm on small children, quadruple amputees and grandmothers with colostomy bags.

We might also have been clued into Napolitano's self-blinding and zealous adherence to the religion of radical political correctness by her actions as governor of Arizona, where she: (as governor-elect) instituted interfaith prayer breakfasts before the start of every session; gracefully accepted the sprinkling of holy water from the Ganges on her forehead along with blessed garlands from Hare Krishna; stopped by to greet Hare Krishna devotees who were singing the Holy Names of the Lord during the Sankirtan in Phoenix; and, became the first-ever government official in the world to issue a proclamation for Krishna Janmashtami, the largest Hindu festival celebrating the appearance of Lord Krishna.

SYSTEM FAILURE

Despite the only thing preventing Northwest Airlines Flight 253 from being blown out of the sky on Christmas Day 2009 having been Umar Farouk "Fizzlepants" Abdulmutallab's inability to ignite the explosives hidden in his underwear, Secretary Napolitano initially asserted that "the system worked" (we won't even get into the suspicious "sharp-dressed man" observed by other passengers who apparently possessed enough authority to get Umar on the plane without a passport). In an interview with CNN's Candy Crowley (oh yeah, baby), Napolitano stated:

> What we are focused on is making sure that the air environment remains safe, that people are confident when they travel. And one thing I'd like to point out is that the system worked. Everybody played an important role here. The passengers and crew of the flight took appropriate action. Within literally an hour to 90 minutes of the incident occurring, all 128 flights in the air had been notified to take some special measures in light of what had occurred on the Northwest Airlines flight. We instituted new measures on the ground and at screening areas, both here in the United States and in Europe, where this flight originated. So the whole > process of making sure that we respond properly, correctly and effectively went very smoothly.

Napolitano later appeared on NBC's Today Show with host Matt Lauer and admitted the truth, sort of. Napolitano said that her earlier statement had been, ahem, "taken out of context," but acknowledged that "our system did not work in this instance" and that no one "is happy or satisfied with that." When asked by Lauer whether the system failed up until the moment the bomber tried to blow up the plane, Napolitano answered, "It did."

SYSTEM FAILURE 2.0

Our fearless Secretary of Homeland Security—focused on the wrong enemy, the wrong border—ignoring and denying a critical system failure on 12/25/09 that foreshadowed an exponentially more massive system failure on 12/25/12 … did we really ever stand a chance? Well hell no, because this was all part of the mockery-laden script for Black Christmas.

CHAPTER EIGHT

CAPTAIN AMERICA

Starring in the lead male role was, naturally, Arizona's own U.S. Senator John "Maverick" McCain, war hero, ranking member of the Senate Armed Services Committee and Barack Obama's opponent in the 2008 Presidential race.

ALL THE RAGE

The Phoenix Can John McCain Keep Rising?

"I am older than dirt and have more scars than Frankenstein," John McCain used to joke about himself on the campaign trail. McCain was well known for his sense of humor, which sometimes went spectacularly awry, as with the following 1998 joke widely deemed unfit to print: "Do you know why Chelsea Clinton is so ugly? Because Janet Reno is her father." Ouch.

McCain was also known for his temper, profanity and fits of shouting, to the extent that long-time colleague Thad Cochran, senior U.S. Senator from Mississippi and a fellow Republican, once remarked about the possibility of a McCain Presidency: "The thought of his being president sends a cold chill down my spine." Not wishing to be misunderstood, Cochran added, "He is erratic. He is hotheaded. He loses his temper and he worries me." Ouch.

In his bid to become the Republican nominee in the 2000 Presidential contest, an anonymous smear campaign was initiated against McCain, delivered by push polls, faxes, e-mails, flyers, and audience plants. The smears claimed that McCain had fathered a black child out of wedlock (the McCains had adopted a daughter from Bangladesh), that his wife Cindy was a drug addict, that he was a homosexual, and that he was a "Manchurian Candidate" who was either a traitor or mentally unstable from his North Vietnam POW days (or both).

Although George W. Bush's campaign strongly denied any involvement with the attacks, McCain would say of the rumor spreaders, "I believe that there is a special place in hell for people like those." (Not to worry, John, the Bushes already have reservations.)

Unbelievable

If you wanted to create a character for a novel to serve as arch nemesis for the pre-ordained President of the World and champion of a state devastated by nuclear terrorist attack, you couldn't invent a character like McCain—he'd be too unbelievable. The man is practically a real-life "Captain America."

McCain had been a ubiquitous presence inside the beltway—and a household name—for decades, but especially so in the years leading up to Black Christmas, from his participation in the historic first Presidential Debate to include an African American—fittingly held in Oxford, Mississippi, where Civil Rights hero James Meredith's bid to enroll at the University of Mississippi resulted in riots and the mobilization of the National Guard—to the endless interviews following the Phoenix attack.

In the wake of the national tragedy, Captain America McCain was everywhere, much like Rudy "America's Mayor" Giuliani after 9/11. But if anybody ever earned a role in a MegaRitual, it was McCain.

American Hero

After surviving a major conflagration on the USS Forestall that nearly cost him his life, John McCain was subsequently shot down and held as a prisoner of war in North Vietnam for five and a half years, two of those during which he was in solitary confinement. McCain turned down an offer of early release from captivity and suffered years of brutal torture as a result.

McCain's capture and resulting imprisonment began when his A-4E Skyhawk was shot down over Hanoi. During ejection from the aircraft, both of McCain's arms and one of his legs were fractured, and he nearly drowned after parachuting into Truc Bach Lake. The North Vietnamese pulled him ashore, then crushed his shoulder with a rifle butt and bayoneted him before transporting him to the infamous "Hanoi Hilton."

Although he was badly wounded, McCain's captors refused to treat his injuries, beating and interrogating him, only providing medical care after discovering that his father was a top U.S. admiral. McCain spent six weeks in the hospital receiving marginal care: entombed in a chest cast, he lost 50 pounds and his hair turned white.

In December 1967, McCain was transferred to a different camp on the outskirts of Hanoi, where he was placed in a cell with two other Americans who didn't expect him to live out the week. Beginning in August 1968, McCain was subjected to a program of severe torture, forced to endure rope bindings and repeated beatings every two hours—during this same time he was also suffering from dysentery. His extensive injuries eventually led to a suicide attempt, and he later wrote, "I had learned what we all learned over there: Every man has his breaking point. I had reached mine."

McCain and other POWs cheered the 1972 "Christmas Bombing" campaign carried out by the US Seventh Air Force and US Navy Task Force 77 (yes 77), believing it to be an effective means of forcing North Vietnam to end the conflict. McCain was released in 1973.

LISTEN, PAL

After returning to the states and settling in Phoenix, McCain went to work for Hensley & Co., his new father-in-law's large Anheuser-Busch beer distributorship. In 1982, McCain ran as a Republican for an open seat in Arizona's 1st congressional district. A newcomer to the state, McCain was accused of being a carpetbagger. Responding to one voter making such an allegation, McCain replied with what a Phoenix Gazette columnist would later describe as "the most devastating response to a potentially troublesome political issue I've ever heard":

> Listen, pal. I spent 22 years in the Navy. My father was in the Navy. My grandfather was in the Navy. We in the military service tend to move a lot. We have to live in all parts of the country, all parts of the world. I wish I could have had the luxury, like you, of growing up and living and spending my entire life in a nice place like the First District of Arizona, but I was doing other things. As a matter of fact, when I think about it now, the place I lived longest in my life was Hanoi.

Ouch.

CHAPTER NINE

THE RADIOLOGICAL TECHNOLOGIST GOVERNOR

COMIC-IN-CHIEF

"We all know what happens in Arizona when you don't have ID—adios, amigos," President Obama joked at the 2010 White House Correspondents' Dinner. Arizona Governor Jan Brewer failed to find the humor in the remark, elsewhere responding, "It's fair to ask whether he intends to be the Commander-in-Chief or the Comic-in-Chief." She continued, "Since the president's joke was so inappropriate, I suppose, if I wanted to join in the comedian game, I could suggest that he should not give up his day job." Then she added the punch line: "Unfortunately, though, he isn't doing very well at that one, either."

Brewer was likewise unamused when President Obama stood at the U.S.-Mexico border and joked that Republican lawmakers who wouldn't support an overhaul of the immigration system until the border was secured weren't going to be satisfied until they got a moat with alligators along the border:

> All the stuff they asked for, we've done. But even though we've answered these concerns, I've got to say I suspect there are still going to be some who are trying to move the goal posts on us one more time.
> You know, they said we needed to triple the Border Patrol. Or now they're going to say we need to quadruple the Border Patrol. Or they'll want a higher fence.
> Maybe they'll need a moat. Maybe they want alligators in the moat.

"I think he should get back to business being the president of the United States," Brewer responded on Fox News.

FORGET WHAT I SAID

Before becoming governor, Brewer was elected as Arizona's Secretary of State, and prior to this she served in both the state's House of Representatives and Senate. As state senator, she'd sought legislation to create an office of lieutenant governor, arguing that holding the office of Secretary of State does not qualify one to become governor, and that the office should be filled by a member of the same party, should a vacancy arise. Despite her earlier objections to the line of succession, however, Republican Brewer was readily sworn in after Janet Napolitano resigned from her position to become Secretary of Homeland Security. (Brewer was elected to a full term in 2010.)

ARIZONA V. UNITED STATES

The "Support Our Law Enforcement and Safe Neighborhoods Act" (introduced as Arizona Senate Bill 1070 and referred to as SB 1070) was at the time of its passage in April 2010 the broadest and strictest anti-illegal immigration measure in recent U.S. history, receiving national and international attention and sparking considerable controversy.

Thousands of people staged protests in Phoenix after Governor Brewer signed the bill into law, with some calling the measure racist, and tens of thousands demonstrated against the law in over 70 U.S. cities on May 1, 2010, International Workers' Day. (Some demonstrators, however, used the opportunity to express their frustration with what they saw as President Obama's lack of action on immigration reform, carrying signs displaying messages such as, "Hey Obama! Don't deport my mama.")

The legislation drew sharp criticism from civil rights groups, who asserted that it would encourage racial profiling. President Obama called the law "misguided" and warned that it could be applied in a "discriminatory fashion." Obama's Justice Department filed suit to stop the law from being implemented, which prompted a countersuit by Brewer, who alleged that the federal government had failed to protect her state from an "invasion" by illegal immigrants. As the Arizona Republic reported,

> The countersuit alleged that the federal government has failed to gain "operational control" of the border, is not enforcing federal immigration law, has not adequately reimbursed Arizona for more than $760 million in costs for the state to incarcerate illegal immigrants, and has tried to pre-empt the state from protecting its citizens by filing a lawsuit to halt the enactment of SB 1070.

> The state asked the court to require the federal government to finish building 700 miles of fence along the U.S. border with Mexico, provide enough federal immigration officers in Arizona to respond to local law-enforcement needs, allow Arizona to enforce federal immigration laws, and fully reimburse states for incarcerating criminal illegal immigrants.
> Arizona also argued that because the federal government isn't adequately enforcing immigration laws, the state incurs additional costs to provide public services such as education and health care.

The countersuit was later dismissed and the matter eventually wound up at the Supreme Court in Arizona v. United States, where in late June 2012 three out of four provisions of the Arizonia law were held to be preempted by federal law.

Sound Strike

In response to SB 1070, boycotts of various types were organized, including a boycott by various musicians called the Sound Strike, which failed to gain much support within the industry. Some musicians even opposed the boycott, with singer Elton John remarking at a concert in Tucson: "We are all very pleased to be playing in Arizona. I have read that some of the artists won't come here. They are #@!%wits! Let's face it: I still play in California, and as a gay man I have no legal rights whatsoever. So what the #@!% is with these people?"

Fingergate

The ongoing feud between Obama and Brewer erupted into full public view as Gov. Brewer "welcomed" Obama upon his arrival at the Phoenix-Mesa Gateway Airport on January 25, 2012. Meeting on the tarmac, the two immediately engaged in an intense conversation, talking over each other, the President abruptly walking off with Brewer in mid-sentence.

During the exchange, Brewer pointed her finger in Obama's face, and photos of the encounter immediately went viral and dominated TV news and the blogosphere for days, with some referring to the incident as "Fingergate."

FINGER-POINTING

"He was a little disturbed about my book," Brewer told a reporter after the incident. Obama reportedly objected to a description in Brewer's book of a prior meeting at the White House, which at the time Brewer had referred to as "very cordial," whereas in print she had described Obama's behavior during the meeting as patronizing and condescending. "I felt a little bit like I was being lectured to, and I was a little kid in a classroom, if you will, and he was this wise professor and I was this little kid, and this little kid knows what the problem is and I felt minimized to say the least."

KEEP YOUR FINGER

Naturally, the Rev. Jesse Jackson saw fit to weigh in on the matter, calling on Brewer to apologize and "put her hand in her pocket." "Even George Wallace never put his finger in Dr. King's face," Jackson said. "She should not get away with that. She knew the cameras were rolling. She knew what she was doing."

Jackson encouraged people to flood Brewer's office with calls and emails, calling her gesture "the ultimate insult." He gave out an 800-number for Brewer's office and urged those calling to say, "We don't need her finger," and later reiterated, "Tell Ms. Brewer, 'Keep your finger in your pocket.'"

Whether at Jackson's urging or otherwise, Brewer's office did receive more than 12,000 letters and emails from people across the nation, most of them condemning the governor's actions. While many of the writers were upset with the governor, some calling her "trashy" and "tasteless," others offered etiquette tips on welcoming a head of state.

"If you approached me like you did the president I would have taken great comfort by poking you in the nose," wrote Eleanor Tafolla from Cathedral City, Calif. "You might want to work on you (sic) prissy attitude you project. Whoa lady you did not deserve a talk with the president or anyone else for that matter." Chuck Bower of Indiana, meanwhile, congratulated the governor, writing, "The only thing you did wrong was wave the 'wrong' finger in his face."

Brewer herself attempted, unsuccessfully, to downplay the incident, telling Greta Van Susteren on Fox, "When I talk I am animated and I talk with my hands," continuing, "The picture was probably shot when I was moving my hands around."

CAPTAIN AMERICA TO THE RESCUE

Senator John McCain defended Brewer by saying that she had a "legitimate point" to make concerning the president's immigration policies. "He has been to Arizona on many occasions," McCain said. "He's never been to the U.S.-Arizona border where Fast and Furious took place, where we had a Border Patrol agent killed, where we've got drugs are flowing into Arizona, into Phoenix, and around the country.... The cartels have people sitting on mountaintops in Arizona, guiding the drug runners up to Phoenix, which are distributed all over the country. It's a big issue with our governor, and it should be."

McCain's former Vice-Presidential running mate Sarah Palin was a little more blunt in expressing her views on Obama's border policy, saying that he lacked "the cojones" to deal effectively with illegal immigration and border security.

SCORPIONS FOR BREAKFAST

While campaigning for President in 2008, former Arkansas governor Mike Huckabee adopted a lighter tone on the border issue in one of his commercials, saying, "My plan to secure the borders—two words: Chuck Norris." Norris later recalled this in a column he wrote for World Net Daily, following up with, "Well, I join millions of others by saying that Arizona's remedy for securing the borders is three words: Gov. Jan Brewer."

Chuck also commented in his column, "I commend Gov. Brewer not only for her courage and tenacity, but for doing what the federal government refuses to do: protect Americans from more border invasion," and shared several of his favorite "Jan Brewer facts," including these two:

> Jan Brewer flosses her teeth with barbed wire from the border.
> Jan Brewer eats scorpions for breakfast and burps up rattlesnakes.

Thanks for sharing, Chuck. As it happens, "Scorpions for Breakfast" is the title of Brewer's 2011 book, the subtitle for which was "My Fight Against Special Interests, Liberal Media, and Cynical Politicos to Secure America's Border." Released in November, the book ranked 276,665th in sales on Amazon.com before the airport showdown, but quickly shot to No. 21 on the "Best Sellers in Books" category and No. 2 on the site's "Movers and Shakers." Asked whether the spat with Obama had been a ploy to sell more books, Brewer told CNN, "Absolutely not, that's absolutely ridiculous."

HITLER'S DAUGHTER

Inevitably, Brewer became the focal point of much of the criticism of the SB 1070's opponents, with an unfortunate percentage of the personal attacks directed against her attempting to paint her as a Nazi, to which Brewer responded, "Knowing that my father died fighting the Nazi regime in Germany, that I lost him when I was 11 because of that... and then to have them call me Hitler's daughter. It hurts. It's ugliness beyond anything I've ever experienced."

Very unfortunate indeed, except for the fact that her father died ten years after World War II ended from lung cancer, believed to be the result of his exposure to chemicals while working as a civilian supervisor at the Hawthorne Army Depot in Nevada. But that wouldn't have made as good of a comeback now, would it?

SNUBBED

Governor Brewer also felt insulted at having not been invited to a 2011 White House meeting on immigration reform, even though the guest list didn't include any current governors or members of Congress. "You would have thought one of the governors would have been invited, since we are on the front lines fighting for security there," Brewer observed, a fair comment given that the Rev. Al Sharpton and former Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger had been in attendance. "I wish I would have been invited," Brewer told Fox News. "It was a little bit of a snub, if you will," she continued, later clarifying her feelings with, "not having been invited today was truly a snub. It was a snub."

Perhaps this was one reason Brewer skipped a White House dinner honoring the nation's governors—considered a highlight of the annual National Governors Association conference—saying that she didn't want to participate in a "social" event.

CRYING WOLF

Speaking on illegal-immigration-related crime in 2010, Brewer made the statement that "law enforcement agencies have found bodies in the desert either buried or just lying out there that have been beheaded."

A Fox News team subsequently investigated this claim, and concluded that in the previous two years only one human skull had been found, and it had been determined to be related to animal activity. Medical examiners in six of the southernmost Arizona counties confirmed that they had no records of decapitated bodies.

Brewer later retracted her previous statement, saying, "That was an error, if I said that. I misspoke, but you know, let me be clear, I am concerned about the border region because it continues to be reported in Mexico that there's a lot of violence going on and we don't want that going into Arizona."

ANNIE GET YOUR GUN

The Obama-Brewer feud made for tantalizing political theatre and helped accomplish in effective fashion a key objective of focusing national and international attention on Arizona and Phoenix in the years leading up to the attack. It helped put firmly in place the terrorists-crossed-the-border scenario, and engrained this specific location and the public leaders associated with it firmly in the global public consciousness.

Governor Brewer had been transformed into a national political figure through her famously-antagonistic relationship with President Obama, becoming the "Wicked Witch of the West" for the Left and a modern-day Annie Oakley for the Right, blasting away at the Usurper-in-Chief. (Brewer is after all a member of the National Rifle Association as well as the Arizona Rifle and Pistol Association.)

Not bad for someone who only attended community college (Glendale), where she received a certificate (but not a degree) as a—and this a really nice touch, mind you—radiological technologist.

"I LOVE THIS COUNTRY"

Once when asked what she would have hoped to address during a potential meeting with Obama (that ended up not taking place), Brewer replied, "I thought we probably would've talked about the things that were important to him and important to me, helping one another," continuing, "I know again that he loves this country and I love this country." Don't we all, Jan, don't we all.

CHAPTER TEN

AMERICA'S TOUGHEST SHERIFF

When the one law enforcement official in the entire country willing to investigate the Obama eligibility question—an issue of vital importance to the whole nation, and to the world as well—turns out to be a sheriff from the Old Wild West, who assembles a "Cold Case Posse" to look into the matter at the request of the Tea Party of Surprise, Arizona, if you're not already at least a tad suspicious that there might be a staged "real-life" sitcom unfolding before your eyes, well, then, you might as well have them shut. You just can't make this stuff up—well, actually, they can, and did.

While the American citizenry (and ever-bourgeoning non-citizenry) were completely, and by design, absorbed in race politics, and taking themselves so seriously that they couldn't see out of the corners they'd been goaded to paint themselves into, the globalists and their minions were having so much fun out in the Arizona desert mocking everyone that you would think someone would have noticed. But, as the perpetrators suspected, no one did.

ARPAIO V. OBAMA

Depending on your politics, Sheriff Joe Arpaio was either a modern-day Wyatt Earp, representing "America's last line of defense against illegal immigration" as the organization "Americans for Sheriff Joe" sought to brand him, or a real-life Buford T. Justice, the bungling foul-mouthed sheriff in Smokey and the Bandit played by Jackie "I'm gonna barbeque yo' ass in molasses" Gleason, engaged in yet another grand publicity stunt (which was simultaneously an attempt to divert attention away from a Justice Department investigation into allegations of racial profiling) by launching an official inquiry into the supposedly long-settled question of President Obama's eligibility.

CERTIFICATE OF LIVE BIRTH

As is generally the case in these situations, the truth would likely have lain somewhere in between, except for the fact that the Arpaio-vs.-Obama plotline was a highly-intentional component of an even larger script, one designed to captivate the American public and focus their attention on Phoenix, all part of a sophisticated subconscious psychological preprogramming regimen.

Still, even given that it was all part of the lead-up to a nuclear attack on innocent civilians, one has to admit that, in retrospect, this second ongoing feud between an Arizona official and the President of the United States made for damn fine entertainment.

Elvis has left the police station

Sheriff Joe once told the listening audience during an interview on a Las Vegas radio station that "my best arrest was Elvis Presley," a story he is ever-so-fond of repeating, "but I let him go. I took him down to the police station. I guess he conned me out of giving him a ticket. That was in 1957." When asked by the interviewer if Elvis had comped him some tickets to The King's Vegas act, Arpaio retorted, "No, but he gave 10 Cadillacs to narcotics detectives around the country, but I never got one."

The arrest reportedly happened when Arpaio was a rookie cop with the Las Vegas Police Department, Joe recalling that he stopped Elvis for speeding on his motorcycle, with a beautiful blonde on the back of the bike hanging on to the King.

"Maybe because I was young… I let him talk me out of giving him a ticket," Joe relates. Then, as the story goes, Presley followed Joe down to the station house where he signed autographs and even asked if the police garage could tune up his bike.

Interestingly, there are no photos of the incident (maybe all of the cameras in the police station were broken), and since Elvis didn't get a ticket, there's no paper trail. And although Arpaio's fellow officers supposedly got autographs, Arpaio didn't. When asked about this at one of his book signings, Joe snapped, "Why did I need his? He should've asked me for my autograph." Alrighty, then.

Jailhouse Rock

Fast forward over half a century from 1957 to 2011, and we find Sheriff Joe in what many Arizonans could only wish were another Elvis tall-tale, with Maricopa County's top law enforcement officer—and an Elvis impersonator (actually it was one of the detention officers dressed as Elvis)—singing

Frank Sinatra's "My Way" as a duet to female inmates in "Tent City," at a ceremony celebrating the makeshift jail's 18th year, all the while being pelted with the pink panties that are standard issue at the facility.

In a statement that just about tells you all you need to know, the Phoenix New Times observed,

> If you'd told us last week that one day we'd be sweatin' it out in a makeshift, outdoor jail in the Arizona desert as the 79-year-old sheriff of one of the largest counties in the country sang a duet with an Elvis impersonator—as female inmates threw pink panties at him—we honestly wouldn't have been too surprised; this is Maricopa County under the Joe Arpaio regime/reality show.

Arpaio naturally took the opportunity to point out that he'd once busted the real Elvis in Las Vegas, and, as the story in the New Times continued,

> At first glance, the inmates seemed to be having a blast—several served as dancers who swayed behind "Elvis" as he sang "Jailhouse Rock" and many laughed along as the sheriff joked about the heat. However, when the inmates lined up to get a piece of cake and a cup of ice cream (the ice cream cups expired a year ago, as one deputy nervously pointed out. "That's alright, though" he then said) we had a chance to speak to some of the gals when they weren't under the sheriff's watchful eye.

"We don't want cake and ice cream," one inmate then told the New Times, "we want some f*cking air conditioning." Hunka hunka burnin' love.

SHUT YOUR MOUTHS

Living conditions were certainly an ongoing concern in Tent City, which Arpaio himself described as a concentration camp, especially in 2011 when the temperature in Phoenix hit 118 °F and Arpaio measured the temperature inside Tent City at 145 °F. Some inmates complained that their shoes were melting from the heat, which didn't seem to matter much to Sheriff Joe, who had told inmates complaining of the heat in 2003 (when the temperature outside was a mere 110 °F), "It's 120 degrees in Iraq and the soldiers are living in tents, have to wear full body armor, and they didn't commit any crimes, so shut your mouths."

In 1997, Amnesty International published a report on Arpaio's jails which found that Tent City is not an "adequate or humane alternative to housing inmates in suitable … jail facilities," and in 2008, Federal Judge Neil Wake ruled in a lawsuit brought by the ACLU that the Maricopa County jails violated the constitutional rights of inmates in medical and other care-related issues. The suit alleged that "Arpaio routinely abused pre-trial detainees [housed in Tent City] at Maricopa County Jail by feeding them moldy bread, rotten fruit and other contaminated food, housing them in cells so hot as to endanger their health, denying them care for serious medical and mental health needs and keeping them packed as tightly as sardines in holding cells for days at a time during intake."

PINK UNDERWEAR, GREEN BOLOGNA, PLAYBOY AND NEWT

Pink underwear was standard issue not only for women in Sheriff Joe's jails, but for men, as well. The Maricopa County Sheriff's website cited the pink undies as "world-famous," and Arpaio sold customized pink boxers (with the sheriff's logo and "Go Joe" printed on them) as a fund-raiser for his Sheriff's Posse Association.

Limiting meals to twice daily, Arpaio served inmates surplus food (including green bologna)—with meals costing just 40 cents, a fact of which he was most proud—for which each person incarcerated was charged a dollar a day. "It costs more to feed our police dogs than our inmates," Arpaio boasted, continuing, "The dogs never committed a crime, and they're working for a living."

He cut out smoking, and when he eliminated coffee, inmates complained loudly, to which he responded, "This isn't the Ritz-Carlton. If you don't like it, don't come back." He also banned possession of sexually-explicit material, including Playboy magazine, and limited prisoners' viewing to G-rated movies and a select few television channels, including Disney and the Weather Channel. Why the Weather Channel? "I think my chain gang deserves to know how hot it is when they hit the streets."

Arpaio took away weight-lifting equipment and reinstituted chain gangs for men. In 1996, he created the nation's first chain gang for women, saying "I don't believe in discrimination in my jail system. Crime knows no gender and neither should punishment."

In February 2007, the sheriff instituted an in-house radio station called KJOE, which broadcast classical music, opera, Frank Sinatra hits, patriotic music and educational programming. Speaking of which, in 1995 Arpaio purchased then-Republican House speaker Newt Gingrich's 10-part, $150 video lecture series to show to inmates through the prison video system. When asked whether he'd also be providing a lecture series done by a Democrat, he replied in the negative, saying, "For one thing, I don't know of any," then added, "and some people might say these guys already got enough of those ideas."

Round up the Insane Clown Posse

In 2010, Arpaio created an armed "illegal immigration operations posse" to assist his deputies with enforcing immigration law. "Law enforcement budgets are being cut and agencies are losing personnel and yet the battle to stop illegal immigration must continue," Arpaio said in a news release. "Arizona is the busiest port of entry for people being smuggled in from Mexico, Latin and South America. So asking for the public's help in this endeavor makes sense."

Commenting further on the posse, Arpaio said, "People from all walks of life have contacted my office saying they want to help me in this fight in some way." He continued, "This is how they can do that—by being members of a volunteer posse with the specific aim of fighting illegal immigration and lending their particular expertise to the fight." Those sworn in as members of the posse by the sheriff included pilots, attorneys, former law enforcement or military officers, truckers, business owners, computer programmers, financial advisers and real estate experts. "Let's face it," Arpaio said, "my deputies are outnumbered so the more volunteers we can get trained and out on the streets to fight illegal immigration, the better off we will be to fight it."

Interestingly, those joining the posse included one Wyatt Earp, a local resident whose uncle, so it was claimed, was the famous lawman of the same name, and a former Chicago police official who had retired to Arizona, named, no kidding, Dick Tracy.

Also sworn in as illegal immigration fighters and part of the posse: martial-arts master, movie star, and former sheriff's deputy Steven Seagal; body-builder and actor Peter Lupus, best remembered for the role of strongman Willy Armitage on the 1960s Mission: Impossible television series; and, fellow body-builder, actor and deputy with the Los Angeles Sheriff's Office, Lou Ferrigno, best known for portraying Bruce Banner's green muscled-up alter ego in The Incredible Hulk CBS television series … Sheriff Joe's own personal Insane Clown Posse (a hip-hop act from Detroit, also referred to by the acronym I.C.P).

OH, JESUS

In late 2008 and early 2009, Arpaio was featured in the three-episode Fox Reality Channel series, Smile…You're Under Arrest!, in which individuals with outstanding warrants were tricked into presenting themselves to authorities.

Apparently this must've only whetted Sheriff Joe's appetite for reality TV, because in 2011 he found a way to get himself back on the air in an incident best described by Pete Kotz of the True Crime Report (truecrimereport.com). In "Joe Arpaio, Steven Seagal Take Down Cockfighting Ring…With a Tank?," Kotz writes, > Maricopa County, Arizona Sheriff Joe Arpaio fancies himself as "America's toughest sheriff." But he may have outdone himself this time by pulling off a rare politician's trifecta of utter shamelessness, self-aggrandizement, and wholesale government waste...

> When we last left this one-man lawsuit machine, he was busy running up huge settlements against his department, which covers greater Phoenix. He also has a history of using his department to spy on political enemies. But this time Arpaio went for the gold.
> It seems alleged actor Steven Seagal was in town filming for his alleged-reality TV show, Lawman. And since Arpaio is to television cameras what shit is to stink, the good sheriff gladly offered to help him out with some dramatic crime-fighting footage.
> The problem was that when you're more showman than working man, you're not very good at catching actual bad guys. So Arpaio was a little short on quality criminals to film getting bagged. That's when these two dopes came up with the comical idea to raid Jesus Llovera's cockfighting ring.
> Llovera raised chickens at his home. He also has a previous misdemeanor bust for attending a cockfighting match. But there's no record supporting anything that would imply he was armed or dangerous.
> Nonetheless, when the sheriff's department raided his house, they arrived with dozens of SWAT team members, a bomb robot, armored vehicles and, yes, even a tank [actually it's a self-propelled howitzer, not that that's any less absurd]. Deputies blew out the windows of the home and used the tank—commanded by Seagal—to smash down a wall.
> When it was all over, they found 115 chickens—which they mysteriously euthanized on the spot. They also found Llovera, unarmed.
> The sheriff's department claims it had info that Llovera was armed. It just won't say what that info is. But others are suspecting that Arpaio merely staged the entire event to grab some beloved air time on Seagal's > cable show. After all, this kind of manpower is usually only used against terrorists and cartel kingpins.

> The operation is estimated to have cost tens of thousands of dollars. But in the end, all they have to show for it is lowly Jesus Llovera, who was pinched on suspicion of cockfighting.

Oh, Jesus.

DISNEYLAND ON THE PUBLIC DIME

An analysis by the Maricopa County Office of Management and Budget completed in 2011 found that Arpaio had misspent almost $100 million in taxpayer dollars over the previous five years. Among the findings was that Arpaio had used a detention fund to pay for investigations of political rivals, and the analysis also showed a number of inappropriate spending items, including a trip to Alaska where deputies stayed at a fishing resort, and, of course, the obligatory tax-payer funded excursions to Disneyland.

Separate investigations by the Arizona Republic uncovered widespread abuse of public funds and county policies by Arpaio's office, including high-ranking employees routinely charging expensive meals and stays at luxury hotels on their county credit cards.

MAKING HISTORY

In June 2008, the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Department of Justice began an investigation of Arpaio's office amid accusations of discrimination and unconstitutional searches and seizures, in response to which Arpaio subsequently held a press conference to announce that he would not cooperate with the investigation. DoJ then filed suit against him, with a spokeswoman stating that Arpaio's refusal to cooperate was unprecedented and that this was the first time DoJ had been forced to sue an agency to compel access to documents and facilities.

In December of 2011, the Justice Department released the findings of a 3-year investigation of Arpaio's office amid complaints of racial profiling and a culture of bias at the top level of the agency. DoJ accused Arpaio of engaging in "unconstitutional policing" by unfairly targeting Latinos for detention and arrest, and retaliating against critics. The report concluded that Arpaio oversaw the worst pattern of racial profiling in U.S. history. Based on the report, the U.S. Department of Homeland Security revoked the Maricopa County Sheriff's Office's (MCSO) federal authority to identify and detain illegal immigrants.

In a separate action that same December, a U.S. District Court Judge enjoined Arpaio and the MCSO from "detaining any person based only on knowledge or reasonable belief…that the person is unlawfully present within the United States," thereby halting anti-illegal immigration enforcement by MCSO as it was then practiced.

Reign of Terror

In connection with an FBI inquiry, a federal grand jury investigated Arpaio's office on criminal abuse-of-power allegations, and in February 2010 Judge John Leonardo found that Arpaio had indeed "misused the power of his office." The Mayor of Phoenix, himself a target of Arpaio's alleged politically-motivated legal actions, called the sheriff's long list of questionable prosecutions "a reign of terror," with other of Arpaio's targets including: his 2004 and 2008 opponent for the office of Sheriff of Maricopa County; the Arizona Attorney General and Maricopa County Manager; the Maricopa County Board of Supervisors; the current and former Maricopa Superior Court Presiding Judge; an attorney for the ACLU; the former Maricopa County School Superintendent; and the editor of the Phoenix New Times.

Arpaio's partner-in-crime in these matters, Andrew Thomas, Maricopa County's top prosecutor, has since been disbarred, and criminal investigations are ongoing.

Protecting America

News of a corrupt sheriff is about as surprising as stories of an unscrupulous attorney; a corrupt sheriff under investigation by the Department of Justice for charges relating to immigration enforcement who turns around and launches an investigation of the President of the United States for possibly being, well, an illegal immigrant (or constitutionally ineligible to hold the presidency at the very least), now that's a different story altogether.

When Arpaio wasn't singing Sinatra, or serving as a judge for "Maricopa County Jail Idol," or smashing through the gates of chicken farms with Steven Seagal, or having dinner with Motor City Madman Ted Nugent, or filing some bogus legal action against one of his perceived rivals, one would have hoped that he'd have been up to the business of protecting the good citizens of Maricopa County.

Apparently, however, Arpaio felt that his law enforcement duties by extension included the safeguarding of the entire American public from illegal immigrants, and as such, the sheriff saw fit to take action regarding what an ever-growing number of concerned citizens in Arizona and all across the country viewed as President Obama's failure to provide proof of citizenship (natural born or otherwise), and, by extension, his ineligibility to hold the highest office in the land.

BREAD AND CIRCUS

Arpaio launched himself smack into the middle of a side-show tent already filled with too many quirky characters to list, although we really must acknowledge on-again off-again ringleader Donald Trump, who for quite some time seemed no more able to make up his mind whether Obama was eligible/ineligible than whether or not he was going to run for President himself.

For those following the story closely during those years, it certainly seemed probable that, if not for the birther issue in general and Sheriff Joe in particular—a saga complete with suspicion-generating birth certificates and oddly-missing records—internet news site World Net Daily (WND) would have gone slap out of business, as the birther nerve-center featured stories on one related topic after another in a never-ending torrent of coverage. (WND's CEO Joseph Farah even went so far as to encourage people to donate to Arpaio's investigation of Obama.)

There was so much fodder left lying around (Obama's long form birth certificate, for example, released in electronic format supposedly contained all-too-obvious evidence of digital fakery). WND and other conservative alternative media outlets grew fat on the bounty, and provided the faithful with nigh-daily evidences of a usurper in their midst. "Patriots" everywhere were washed in the digital ink of conspiratorial enlightenment and nourished by the truth of subversives revealed.

However, it is all simply scripted entertainment: polarizing the masses.

SHOWDOWN AT THE AZ CORRAL

As one might have expected, Arpaio's Cold Case Posse turned up evidence of forgery, among a number of other issues which in their assessment warranted further investigation, and the only thing less surprising than these results was the mainstream media's complete blackout of the findings—yet more evidence of a vast left-wing elitist conspiracy to protect the Usurper-in-Chief, many would claim.

And thus the showdown was set, the good-ole-boy racist sheriff vs. the minority President, with the fact of Arpaio being the first law enforcement official in the entire county willing to take on the commander-in-chief on this matter qualifying as genuinely newsworthy in itself. But regardless of whose side you came down on, if you were fixated on the fight you missed the bigger picture—the set, the props, the lighting and the cameras, all revealing that it was just one big Wild West extravaganza—and if by now you're not thoroughly familiar with the employment of the profoundly absurd as a cover for clandestine operations, hell, just quit reading, because we can't wait for you to catch up.

Nickel-Bag Joe

A former U.S. Army military policeman, Arpaio served as a cop in D.C. and Vegas before being appointed as a special agent with the Federal Bureau of Narcotics (precursor to the DEA). During his 25-year tenure with the DEA, Arpaio was stationed in Argentina, Turkey and Mexico, advancing through the ranks to become head of DEA's Arizona branch.

While working for the DEA, Arpaio earned the nickname "Nickel Bag" for the small-time drug busts he became well-known for, which, for those with inquiring minds, raises the question of how an agent with such a reputation got to be head of operations for the state of Arizona in the first place.

As we quietly contemplate this conundrum, we spot them, lurking in the shadows, in the dark recesses of the internet—unsubstantiated allegations, rumors that Nickel-Bag Joe was in reality a CIA asset, assigned to the DEA and ushered upward to top management to help insure non-interference with the Company's drug-running operations in Arizona.

The blurry picture becomes a little clearer—Sheriff Joe, former DEA, perhaps not-so-former CIA, a bumbling dupe that could be counted on, as always, to do the bidding of his handlers; or, perhaps, a shrewd operator hiding behind a façade of illicit activity and enshrouded in a veil of corruption (which somehow never seemed to catch up to him), designed to shield covert activities—maybe a combination of the two.

A Walking Smokescreen

Recall from our previous 9/11 investigations that some of the hijackers trained in flight schools in Sarasota ("Paradise") and Venice, Florida (referred to by some as "Terrorland" due to the extent of illicit CIA activity in the state), with the Venice Municipal Airport having well-known ties to CIA drug-running operations. Well, what do we find in Phoenix ("Paradise Valley")—the training-ground of Hani "The Flying Dunce of Flight 77" Hanjour— but CIA drug-running activity yet again (Google "Greycas and CIA" if you want to dig into the subject further).

Sarasota, the location of High-Priest Bush's Black Mass in Paradise, and Phoenix, the New Ground Zero, both at the heart of their respective MegaRituals, both locations where 9/11 hijackers trained, both connected to CIA drug-running operations ... aside from being yet another intentional linkage between these occult rituals, and aside from being a tip-of-the-hat to areas historically connected with illicit Company operations, is there something more going on?

The 9/11 hijackers trained at facilities in areas where the CIA had an established presence, and the two Great American MegaRituals intimately involved these same locations. This drugs-terrorists nexus created a murky black hole where anything and everything could get sucked into the void, each serving to provide cover for the other. And all of this provided perfect cover for the orchestrators of 9/11 and Black Christmas as they

Top Ten Reasons Not to Vote for Arpaio

In stark contrast to "Americans for Sheriff Joe"—of which, by the way, John Philip Sousa IV, the great grandson of "America's March King," was chairman—stood the "Overthrow Arpaio" campaign, started by a former lieutenant in the sheriff's office who was banished to the graveyard shift in an empty office in the basement of the main jail after criticizing Sheriff Joe.

This group polled citizens and employees of the Maricopa County Sheriff's Office and compiled a list of Top Ten Reasons NOT to vote for Arpaio, which included rather obvious—but serious nonetheless—allegations such as, "With Arpaio, real law enforcement takes a backseat to publicity stunts," and, "Millions of tax dollars have been wasted on lawsuits."

Each of the points was backed up with further details, and as support for the contention that Arpaio was "responsible for a critical and dangerous shortage of personnel in both the jails and patrol," the following evidence was given:

> …Arpaio has created a critical and dangerous shortage of deputy sheriffs needed to perform fundamental law enforcement services in the unincorporated areas of the County. Deputies that could be assigned to patrol, are assigned instead as personal bodyguards for Sheriff Arpaio.
> Detention officers, desperately needed in the jails, are assigned to the labor-intensive, publicity-producing chain gangs in order to get Arpaio on more TV news programs. Projects that bolster Arpaio's ego, satisfy his need for publicity, and insure his personal safety are all fully staffed. Unfortunately, at the same time on the streets and in the jails of the county, lives are placed at risk by Arpaio's self-serving abuse of authority.
> Also Sheriff Arpaio has the largest executive staff of any police agency in Arizona and perhaps the United States. By comparison, the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department, the nation's largest, has half as many on the executive staff. The millions spend on excess executive positions should be used to hire employees that could be assigned where really needed.

The list also included the fact that "Hundreds of current sheriff's office employees, represented by a number of employee organizations"—reportedly including the State of Arizona Fraternal Order of Police, Fraternal Order of Police Lodge Five, Maricopa County Deputies Association and others—"have expressed a vote of no confidence in Sheriff Arpaio."

Considering the source, still kinda makes you wonder how he got re-elected four times.

toyed with the nation's national security apparatus like a child with Legos on Christmas morning.

Our infamous Sheriff Joe was, then, not just a circus act, not just part of the entertainment, but, more importantly, part of the smokescreen—and yet another ingenious element in the sophisticated psychological-conditioning campaign preceding the attack in Phoenix.

No Country for Old Men

In the Cohen brothers' screen adaptation of the Cormac McCarthy novel, No Country for Old Men (the title of which was taken from the opening line of William Butler Yeats' poem "Sailing to Byzantium"), Sheriff Ed Tom Bells, played by Tommy Lee Jones, and his deputy come upon a gruesome scene in the desert, with bloated bodies scattered around in the hot sand. "It's a mess, ain't it, sheriff?" remarks the deputy, to which Bells coolly replies, "If it ain't, it'll do till the mess gets here" … not, in fact, a bad way to characterize Arpaio's tenure in the lead-up to Black Christmas.

Let's get ready to rumble! In tonight's bout, we have, in corner one, the tag team of Joe "America's Toughest Sheriff" Arpaio and Jan "The Wicked Witch of the West" Brewer, versus, in corner two, the deadly duo of Barack "No-Denyin'-I'm-Hawaiian" Obama and Janet "The Man-Caused Disaster" Napolitano, refereed by John "I am older than dirt and have more scars than Frankenstein" McCain…

SECTION THREE

THE RITUAL PROPER

CHAPTER ELEVEN

ALEISTER CROWLEY'S LIBER 44: THE MASS OF THE PHOENIX

The phoenix is a mythical sacred firebird found in the mythologies of numerous cultures around the world, including the Egyptians and Greeks. Depending on the myth, the lifecycle of the phoenix varies from 500 to 1,000 years, at the end of which it is fully consumed in a self-generated conflagration (sometimes the bird is said to build a nest, a funeral pyre of sorts, other times not). Up from the ashes, so the cliché goes, a new phoenix arises.

The Phoenix

Although physical descriptions of the creature vary considerably, writing in his book, The Phoenix: An Illustrated Review of Occultism and Philosophy, author and mystic Manly P. Hall describes it thus:

> Among the ancients a fabulous bird called the Phoenix is described by early writers ... in size and shape it resembles the eagle, but with certain differences. The body of the Phoenix is one covered with glossy purple feathers, and the plumes in its tail are alternately blue and red. The head of the bird is light in color, and about its neck is a circlet of golden plumage. At the back of its back the Phoenix has a crest of feathers of brilliant color.[1]

THE BENNU, RA AND MURDER

The Bennu was the Egyptian version of the phoenix, thought to be inspired by the now-extinct Bennu heron. Associated with the rising of the Nile, resurrection and the sun, the Bennu represented creation and renewal and was connected with the Egyptian calendar.

Sic igitur exemplum nob quia auctor

The titles of the Bennu included "Ascending One" and "Lord of Jubilees" (Arizona's 100th anniversary in 2012!), and the name itself is related to the verb "weben," meaning "to rise brilliantly," or "to shine." According to legend, it was the Bennu bird's cry at the creation of the world that marked the beginning of time, and the Bennu helped oversee the regulation of time and its divisions: hours, days and nights, weeks and years (more on the relationship between time and the phoenix in Chapter 22).[2]

Known from the Book of the Dead and other Egyptian texts as one of the sacred symbols of worship at Heliopolis, the "City of the Sun," the Bennu was closely associated with the rising sun and was considered the soul of the Egyptian sun-god Ra. (In some variations of the myth, the reborn phoenix embalms the ashes of its former self in an egg and deposits it in Heliopolis.) Due to its association with rebirth, the Bennu was also believed to be a manifestation of the resurrected Osiris and the bird was often depicted perched in his sacred willow tree.

The Greeks envisioned the bird more as a peacock or eagle—both Hesiod and Herodotus referenced the mythical bird in their writings—and related it to their word for the color purple-red/crimson, phoinix, also meaning palm tree, or its fruit, dates. Other related Greek words include phoinós, "blood-red," and, interestingly, phonós, "murder."

A SYMBOL OF RESURRECTION AND INITIATION

The phoenix became popular in early Christian art and literature as a symbol of Christ, representing resurrection and the life ever-lasting. Christians, however, were not the first or only group to adopt the symbol by any stretch of the imagination: the ancient Mystery Schools also used the phoenix as a symbol of immortality.

Again, writing his book, The Phoenix, Manly P. Hall informs us,

> The Phoenix is generally regarded as representing immortality and resurrection ... The Phoenix is one sign of the secret orders of the ancient world and of the initiate of those orders, for it was common to refer to one who had been accepted into the temples as a man twice-born, or reborn. Wisdom confers a new life, and those who become wise are born again.[3]

A Symbol of Lucifer

During a 1988 interview with Barbara Walters while on the presidential campaign trail, George H.W. Bush seemed caught off guard when asked by Walters if he was a Christian. After fumbling around for a moment, he answered shrewdly, "If by being a Christian, you ask if I am 'born again', then yes, I am a Christian."

Like all Bonesmen, Bush had been reborn during a Satanic initiation rite at Yale, emerging from a coffin after a perverse ritual (during which they reportedly pleasure themselves while recounting their sexual exploits, among other things) in a blasphemous mockery of the Resurrection which signifies the initiates' rising to new life in Lucifer.

Satanists often utilize well-known Christian symbols, inverting their meaning to suit their own dark purposes. The idea of the phoenix as a symbol of Lucifer is not new, and many occultists see the firebird as appropriately representing the fallen angel who was cast down in flames, and who, they believe, will one day rise triumphant (or, perhaps that day was in fact Black Christmas).

Crowley's "Mass of the Phoenix"

The "Official Instructions of the A:.A:." give a basic description of the Mass of the Phoenix, referring to it as "an instruction in a simple and exoteric form of Eucharist" and "A Ritual of the Law." This indicates that the ritual is considered a true Mass by Thelemites in that it celebrates the Blessed Sacrament: this is not, however, your father's (or your Father's) Eucharist.

Liber Aleph
Wisdom or Folly

In Liber Aleph, Crowley puts the Mass of the Phoenix on par with the Gnostic Mass, stating, "Neglect not the daily Miracle of the Mass, either by the Rite of the Gnostic Catholic Church, or that of the Phoenix"—the "Miracle of the Mass" being the process of transubstantiation, in which the bread and wine are held to be transmuted into the literal flesh and blood of Christ/the god of your choice.

Without going into too much unpleasant detail, it can be said that certain ingredients used in the making of the ritual's wafer, or "Cake of Light," are nontraditional to say

LIBER XLIV
THE MASS OF THE PHOENIX

The Magician, his breast bare, stands before an altar on which are his Burin, Bell, Thurible, and two of the Cakes of Light. In the Sign of the Enterer he reaches West across the Altar, and cries:

Hail Ra, that goest in thy bark
Into the caverns of the Dark!

He gives the sign of Silence, and takes the Bell, and Fire, in his hands.

East of the Altar see me stand
With light and musick in my hand!

He strikes Eleven times upon the Bell 333 - 55555 - 333 and places the Fire in the Thurible.

I strike the Bell: I light the Flame;
I utter the mysterious Name.
ABRAHADABRA

He strikes eleven times upon the Bell.

Now I begin to pray: Thou Child,
Holy Thy name and undefiled!
Thy reign is come; Thy will is done.
Here is the Bread; here is the Blood.
Bring me through midnight to the Sun!
Save me from Evil and from Good!
That Thy one crown of all the Ten
Even now and here be mine. AMEN.

He puts the first Cake on the Fire of the Thurible.

I burn the Incense-cake, proclaim
These adorations of Thy name.

He makes them as in Liber Legis, and strikes again Eleven times upon the Bell. With the Burin he then makes upon his breast the proper sign.

Behold this bleeding breast of mine
Gashed with the sacramental sign!

He puts the second Cake to the wound.

I stanch the Blood; the wafer soaks
It up, and the high priest invokes!

He eats the second Cake.

This Bread I eat. This Oath I swear
As I enflame myself with prayer:
"There is no grace: there is no guilt:
This is the Law: DO WHAT THOU WILT!"

He strikes Eleven times upon the Bell, and cries

ABRAHADABRA.
I entered in with woe; with mirth
I now go forth, and with thanksgiving,
To do my pleasure on the earth
Among the legions of the living.

He goeth forth.

the least: blood, preferably menstrual, and semen. As if that weren't bad enough in itself, Crowley, writing of the ritual in Magick in Theory and Practice, includes references to "human sacrifice," and in Chapter 3 of The Book of the Law, in the recipe for the Cakes of Light, he refers to "the fresh blood of a child," although supposedly these are cryptic-symbolic references to bodily fluids … go figure. (Frankly, it's not worth taking the time to figure out for certain what in the hell is being discussed.)

UNHOLY COMMUNION

One can also find instruction on performing the Mass of the Phoenix as a sex magick ritual, which essentially involves the initiate taking steps to add a fresh portion of an aforementioned ingredient to the wafer while visualizing "the proper sign" (many Thelemites prefer the Mark of the Beast, the sigils of the Sun and Moon conjoined).

The bottom line is that the Mass of the Phoenix is designed as a perverse counterpart to the Lord's Supper, one of the most holy sacraments in all of Christendom, and the sick bastards that orchestrated Black Christmas took enormous pleasure in invoking The Mass of the Phoenix through their actions in Phoenix on the traditional day of the celebration of the Savior's birth—in yet another repugnant tribute to the Great Beast, Aleister Crowley. Oh, but it ain't over yet.[4]

FORTY-FOUR

The abominable Mass of the Phoenix was first printed as Chapter 44 in Crowley's The Book of Lies, and later as Liber 44. In the ritual, a bell is rung a total of 44 times, 44 also being the gematria value of the Hebrew word for blood, dam (damn!)—with blood playing, as we're all-too-aware, a major role in the mass, as well as, unfortunately, in Black Christmas.

Liber 44 invokes Ra, the Sun God—with the sun beginning its annual upward journey on December 25th—and wouldn't you know, 44 is also the sacred number of Horus, son of the aforementioned Osiris, the green-skinned Egyptian god of the Underworld. Furthermore, in what might to the uninitiated seem an unrelated coincidence, Barack Obama is the 44th President of the United States, but you'll have to wait until Chapter 16 to learn more about the Illuminati's Sun King.

Make no mistake, however, in the occult worldview, the spilling of blood is absolutely necessary for regeneration and renewal, and the New World Order was born out of the blood, and ashes, of Phoenix—a mass sacrifice to the one true bringer of illumination, Lucifer.

44 MONROE

Naturally, the scripters of Black Christmas sought to tie the number 44 to the MegaRitual in a tangible way, which they were readily able to accom-

A Lament for Black Christmas

"Forty-Four" or "44 Blues" is a blues standard popularized by Roosevelt Sykes in the 1930s. His lyrics played on the differing use of the phrase forty-four: a .44 caliber revolver, train number 44 and, presumably, prison cell number 44:

Well I walked all night long, with my .44 in my hand (2x)
Now I was looking for my woman, found her with another man

Well I wore my .44 so long, Lord it made my shoulder sore (2x)
After I do what I want to, ain't gonna wear my .44 no more

Now I heard my baby say, she heard that 44 whistle blow (2x)
Lord it sounds like, ain't gonna blow that whistle no more

Now I got a little cabin, and it's number 44 (2x)
Lord I wake up every morning, the wolf be scratching on my door.

Speaking of the Wolf, in 1954 Howlin' Wolf recorded his version of the song in the Chicago blues style, with Willie Dixon on the bass and an insistent "martial shuffle on the snare drum plus a bass drum that slammed down like an industrial punch-press." Wolf retained Sykes' handgun reference and added, "Well I'm so mad this morning, I don't know where in the world to go." With Wolf's usual gruff and overpowering vocals, the overall effect was menacing.

Given the repeated use of the number forty-four in this MegaRitual, 44 Blues might not be a bad lament for Black Christmas, particularly considering that "Blue Christmas," most notably performed by Elvis Presley, is out of the running. (In the interests of sensitivity and good taste, we should also rule out the Insane Clown Posse's tunes "Red Christmas," "Santa Claus is a Fat Bitch," "Santa Killers," and "Murder City Christmas.") plish in an ingenious manner that yielded even further insider-baseball jollies.

Located at the northeast corner of Monroe Street and First Avenue in downtown Phoenix, and well within the primary blast zone, 44 Monroe was Arizona's tallest residential structure. Although the building was not toppled by the blast, and didn't collapse from the resulting fires (hmmm, must've been the lack of jet fuel), it naturally sustained massive damage.

Reporters and commentators far and wide used the building's hulking skeleton as a visual reference-point in the alien post-blast downtown landscape, with the phrase "44 Monroe" likely being uttered nearly as many times as "Route 93," although who knows for sure.

What really gave the occultist insiders the giggleshits, however, was the fact that 44 Monroe included a direct reference to President James Monroe, after whom the street was named, Monroe of course being one of a number of Masons to hold the highest office in the land. (If you're really up on your 9/11 fruitcake trivia, you'll recall from Most Dangerous that President James Garfield was a fellow Mason, and submitted a proof for the 47th Problem of Euclid that utilized a trapezoid…oh, go look it up.)

No More Mr. Nice Guy

Pioneer shock rocker (which has nothing to do with the shocker, thankfully) Alice Cooper—whose four-decade-plus career has included stage shows featuring guillotines, electric chairs, boa constrictors and bloodied baby dolls—grew up in Phoenix, AZ, where, interestingly enough, he was a member of the Order of DeMolay.

Also known as DeMolay International, the Order derives its name from Jacques DeMolay, the last Grand Master of the Knights Templar. Founded by a Freemason and modeled after Freemasonry, it is an international organization for young men ages 12-21, and the DeMolay Hall of Fame includes such luminaries as former President Bill Clinton, Walt Disney and John Wayne.

Cooper is regarded as being the first artist to introduce horror imagery to rock'n'roll and is credited with helping shape the sound and look of heavy metal. Cooper's 1976 album "Alice Cooper Goes to Hell" featured the classic tune, "I'm Always Chasing Rainbows," also sung by Wizard of Oz star Judy Garland in the 1941 movie Ziegfeld Girl.

Although the majority of his career was marked by substance abuse and debauchery, in his later years Cooper became a born-again Christian, holding an annual charity event in Phoenix for the Solid Rock Foundation called "Christmas Pudding."

Yet, following Black Christmas, some began to wonder if Cooper's conversion had actually been of the Christian variety, in particular because of the lyrics from one of the songs on his 2000 album entitled Brutal Planet. In his song of the same name, the final lines are as follows:

Down here is where we hung ya
Upon an ugly cross
Over there we filled the ovens
Right here the holocaust.

"Right here the holocaust"— got anything you'd care to tell us, Alice?

Benediction

A city named after a mythical creature used as a symbol for Christ, maliciously destroyed on Christmas Day, and ceremonially connected through a Crowleyian ritual with the Hebrew word for blood, dam—one can't help but feel that the entire affair was, to use the British vernacular, a bloody damn mess (wait, is that redundant?).

We close this chapter with the immortal words of Clark W. Griswold, played by Chevy Chase, from National Lampoon's holiday classic Christmas Vacation, who, in speaking of his yuletide wishes regarding his employer, eloquently expresses sentiments we might wish to direct at the globalist nutjobs responsible for Black Christmas:

> Hey! If any of you are looking for any last-minute gift ideas for me, I have one. I'd like Frank Shirley, my boss, right here tonight. I want him brought from his happy holiday slumber over there on Melody Lane > with all the other rich people and I want him brought right here, with a big ribbon on his head, and I want to look him straight in the eye and I want to tell him what a cheap, lying, no-good, rotten, floor-fleshing, low-life, snake-licking, dirt-eating, inbred, overstuffed, ignorant, blood-sucking, dog-kissing, brainless, dickless, hopeless, heartless, fat-ass, bug-eyed, stiff-legged, spotty-lipped, worm-headed sack of monkey shit he is! Hallelujah! Holy shit! Where's the Tylenol?

Where's the Tylenol, Jesus, where is the thorazine?

BENEDICTION POSTSCRIPT

From Paul Weston's Aleister Crowley and the Aeon of Horus:

> [Robert Anton] Wilson stated that his entry to Chapel Perilous began when he was reading Crowley's The Book of Lies in 1971. It is a work full of codes and riddles, Zen-type epigrams, poetry, jokes and magick. Crowley had stated that somewhere within it was concealed the inner secret of Freemasonry and Illuminism.… Wilson was inspired to make major use of the symbol of the eye in the triangle, treating it as a motif of the secret brotherhood. He knew that its portrayal on the dollar bill had been linked to Freemasonry. Gradually he came to know that it connects with the Egyptian Eye of Horus design and was used on ceremonial headgear by Crowley. The Beast referred to his work as 'scientific illuminism', and occasionally to himself as 'Epopt of the Illuminati.'… On July 22nd Wilson performed a customised Crowleyan ceremony involving 'Tantric sex-trance'. The next morning he 'awoke with an urgent message from Dreamland'. It stated that 'Sirius is very important'. Looking for relevant information in his occult books, he struck gold in Kenneth Grant's The Magical Revival. Wilson was impressed to read that:
> > 'Phoenix was Crowley's secret name in the Ordo Templi Orientis ... The Phoenix was also an ancient constellation in which Sothis, or Sirius, was the chief star.' 'Crowley identified the heart of his magical current with one particular Star. In Occult Tradition, this is "the sun behind the sun," the Hidden God, the vast star Sirius.'

CHAPTER TWELVE

THE 2012 GALACTIC MEGARITUAL

Black Christmas quite obviously involved Phoenix, AZ, but if you think that this city was the sole focus of the megaritual, well, you'd only be off by about 26,000 light years … literally. (Yes, the megaritual also involved Jerusalem and the Vatican; that's addressed in the next chapter.)

THE MAYAN NON-APOCALYPSE

Despite the decade-long best efforts of the History Channel (and too many authors to count) to whip the entire planet into a frenzy, December 21st, 2012, the long-awaited and much-hyped date of the supposed Mayan apocalypse was—apart from the hundreds of hyperventilating New Agers sitting atop stone temples in South America awaiting the return of Quetzalcoatl—as calm a day as the world had seen in the past two millennia.

This was not surprising, given that mainstream Mayan scholars had never supported the notion that the culture had viewed this date as anything other than the end of one block of time and the beginning of another. The Mayans created a sophisticated system of interlocking calendars marking various increments of time, and December 21st, 2012 merely corresponded to the end of "13 baktun," a baktun being a period of 144,000 days.

GALACTIC ALIGNMENT

The Mayans were also highly competent astronomers, and had been able to calculate the dates of solstices far into the future, including the date for winter solstice in the year 2012.

Various researchers, including John Major Jenkins, contended that the Mayans were further aware of an astronomical alignment occurring during this same general timeframe, which Jenkins called "galactic alignment." This term simply refers to the sun's alignment (as viewed from earth, obviously) with the center of the Milky Way Galaxy, which lies some 26,000 light years from our solar system. (Actually, the phenomenon of galactic alignment occurs over about a sixteen-year period, but that doesn't sound very urgent or dramatic, so very few 2012ers pointed this out).

It was thought that, to the Mayans and other ancient cultures, this apparent return of the sun to the heart of the galaxy—viewed as the womb of creation—marked a grand re-birth of the sun, the beginning of a new age; actually, not of a "New Age" (as in "the dawning of the Age of Aquarius"), but rather of a new Great Age.

THE CYCLE RESTARTS ANEW

The cycle of precession is the amount of time, estimated at roughly 26,000 years, that it takes the earth's axis to complete one full rotation as our planet wobbles slightly in its orbit of the sun year after year. During this cycle, the earth's axis is oriented towards, or pointing at, one of the twelve (now thirteen) zodiacal signs for approximately 2,000 years. Each of these 2,000-year periods is viewed as an Age, with the entire cycle being referred to as the Great Age.

In occult thought (not universally so, but certainly for those behind Black Christmas) and on the occult calendar, December 21st, 2012, was not only the annual winter solstice, with the sun at its lowest point in the sky—marking the yearly "death" of the sun—but also marked the end of a Great Age. It was the most auspicious date in human history, or at least in the last 26,000 years of it.

DIES NATALIS SOLIS INVICTI, ON STEROIDS

The Zodiac is a near-universal artifact found in practically every great civilization around the globe, used to keep track of the passage of the ages. For the purposes of this discussion, if you want to think of the earth's axis as one hand (pointing to one of the Zodiacal signs) of a giant cosmic clock, the other hand would be formed by a line running from the earth through the center of the sun. When this hand, sweeping through the heavens, pointed at Galactic Center on the Winter Solstice 2012, this marked the resetting of the Great Clock.

So 12/21/12 was the death, the final setting, of the sun of the prior Great Age; yet, it was not this occasion that the globalists were intent upon commemorating in grand fashion. Rather, the orchestrators of Black Christmas were fixated upon greeting the first rising of the re-born sun of the new Great Age.

After reaching its lowest point in the sky on winter solstice, the sun remains “in the depths of the earth” for three days before beginning its annual journey upward through the heavens on December 25th (previously commemorated by the Roman festival of Dies Natalis Solis Invicti, or “Birthday of Sol Invictus”)—and it was this event, the inaugural appearance of the Sun of the New Great Age, that was the focus of the Great American Holocaust.

The Great Wedding

There is another visual phenomenon (again, solely from earth’s perspective) in which the Milky Way Galaxy has been drifting slowly closer towards the earth’s horizon over the past several thousand years. Supposedly ancient cultures were aware of this astronomical fact, as well, and integrated it into their myth-making as a prophecy of a future time when the Milky Way—which was often viewed as a heavenly abode—would join with earth, i.e. the fabled union of Heaven and Earth, which is indeed occurring in our era.

This, too, informed occult thought on the importance of the 2012 timeframe, making it all-the-more attractive to practitioners of the dark arts as an appropriate period during which to engineer a modern-day slaughter of the innocents.

Lots of Lead Time

Now, we could sit here and discuss this subject all day, or all week, or for as long as you’d like, because there has been so much written on these topics that to produce a reference volume alone would be a monumental undertaking.

If you don’t fully understand all this astronomical-astrological, as-above-so-below stuff, don’t worry. All you really need to take away is that occultists the world over had been looking toward December 2012 for centuries, if not millennia, and thus had one hell of a long time to plan the surprise party.

Nuclear Power

To be sure, the globalists took indescribable pleasure in forever marring Christmas Day for young and old alike, and in the deep dark symbolic value of striking Phoenix on the day of the Savior's birth. Successfully blaming the whole affair on Islamic radicals, well, that was just the icing on the cake.

Yet, despite all the jokes about nuking Christmas and the like, there was, in their black minds, an unmatchable beauty in using the power that fuels the sun to make a most fitting mass sacrifice by immolation to the true Light Bearer upon the dawning of the New Great Age, the Age of Lucifer.

The Bennu, the Shen-shen and the Rech

The ancient Egyptians identified the phoenix, or bennu, with the soul of Osiris, "the rising god." According to tradition, the mythical bird connected the morning star (Venus)—"the heart of the renewed sun"—with the sun itself, which represented light, life and consciousness.

The bennu reflected this synthesis of creative impulses in the form of a bird which is actually two birds. The Theosophical Glossary describes the bennu in terms of both the Shen-shen (heron) and the Rech (a red bird), both of which were sacred to Osiris:

> It was the latter that was the regular Phoenix of the great Mysteries, the typical symbol of self-creation and resurrection through death—a type of the Solar Osiris and of the divine Ego in man. Yet both the Heron and the Rech were symbols of cycles; the former, of the Solar year of 365 days; the latter of the tropical year or a period covering almost 26,000 years. In both cases the cycles were the types of the return of light from darkness, the yearly and great cyclic return of the sun-god to his birth-place, or—his Resurrection.

Hmmm… A 26,000-year cycle, associated with a red bird. Kinda like this one?

Go Big Red! (Oh yes they did, too...headquartered in Tempe, a suburb of Phoenix…playing home games in the University of Phoenix Stadium…now that's funny, I don't care who you are.)

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

A HIDDEN BIBLICAL PROPHECY, THE TRIPLE CROSS AND THE PROPHECY OF THE LAST POPE

> "The Christian religion is a parody on the worship of the sun, in which they put a man called Christ in the place of the sun, and pay him the adoration originally payed to the sun."
> —Thomas Paine

A MOST HOLY PLACE

As the traditional site of Jesus' crucifixion and resurrection, the Church of the Holy Sepulchre in Jerusalem was a logical target for Islamic terrorists—but even more so for the scheming Luciferians who orchestrated the 12/25/12 attack on one of Christianity's most holy sites.

True, there was historical precedent for Muslims attacking the structure, when in the year 1009 Fatimid caliph Al-Hakim bi-Amr Allah ordered the complete destruction of the church—Christian writer Yahya ibn Sa'id reported that everything was razed "except those parts which were impossible to destroy or would have been too difficult to carry away."

And, yes, of course as on 9/11 there were actual Muslims (or at least Muslim-looking people) involved in carrying out the Christmas Day attack, but those for whom the site had an even greater appeal as a target for destruction harbored multiple reasons for selecting this particular site.

There's the quite obvious thrill of blowing up Calvary and the Lord's Tomb to be sure, an act which tore at the hearts of every living Christian soul on the planet; but, deeper yet, were the connections to the Galactic Megaritual…

THE SUN-GOD MYTH

For many occultists and Luciferians (as well as less notorious groups to be sure), it is viewed as common knowledge that the story of Christ is just that, a story—an ingenious anthropomorphic tale built upon the now not-so-secret secrets of the Mystery religions of the East. Christ played the part of the sun, the twelve disciples represented the twelve signs of the zodiac, and the entire yarn unfolded around the Sea of Galilee, with galilee meaning "the circuit" (or path of the earth through the ecliptic).

The writers of the gospels had taken the as-above-so-below correspondence to its ultimate extent, linking every setting in their version of the classic sun-god myth to a real location (Bethlehem, "the House of Bread," Virgo… forget it)—and contending that all of the characters in the story were, in fact, real people, with Jesus Christ as the living Son of God.

Now, for those who don't buy the take-it-on-faith argument that a flesh-and-blood redeemer ever walked the earth, certain facts become obvious during critical analysis of scripture. First is that the early church fathers went to great lengths to strip the canonical books of every last bit of their Jewishness, replacing YHWH with LORD in hundreds of instances, and altering the spelling of names so as to remove references to the Jewish god, Yahwey.

"Yah" was used as a shortened version of the Jewish deity's name, and attached to the beginning and end of many personal names. In numerous instances in the Bible where names today end with "iah," they originally ended in "yah," so that a person's very name referenced their god.

The person referred to as Jesus Christ was, in the original scriptures, called Yahshua Messiah, Yah-shua meaning "Yah saves" and Messiah meaning "the anointed one." (There was even an Old Testament Yahshua. Hint: there was no letter "j" in Hebrew— Yoshua becomes Joshua, the spelling of which, as you might have guessed, was a liberty taken by early translators in the first place.)

Thus do many non-believers contend that not only was there never an historical "Jesus Christ," as the name analysis yields, but that neither did a real "Yahshua Messiah"—the Sun, excuse me, Son of God, excuse me, Son of Yahwey—ever exist.

SKULL HILL

What the hell has all this got to do with the megaritual, you might be thinking. Well, the second fact that becomes obvious in a critical analysis of scripture is that the life of Christ does indeed unfold according to a heavenly design, only not some mysterious "plan of god," but rather according to the life of the sun as it journeys through the sky.

And here is where the tie-in to our Galactic MegaRitual occurs… The cross is an ancient symbol, by no means exclusive to Christianity, and quite often used in connection with the sun. A heavenly cross, or Great Cross, is said to be formed by the ecliptic, or the path of the sun through the sky, and the visible band of the Milky Way, or the Galactic Equator, the plane of our galaxy's rotation around Galactic Center.

Multiple symbols were used for Galactic Center, one being, as previously mentioned, a womb (the Womb of Creation, which, at least in our galaxy, it truly is), and another being a cosmic mountain—both owing to the mounded or domed shape of the center of the Milky Way Galaxy. Yet another symbol used for Galactic Center was, not surprisingly, the skull, with the celestial feature looking very much like a skull cap.

"Calvary" is Latin for "Golgotha," which according to scripture means "Skull Hill." The sun being suspended upon the Great Cross at Skull Hill, then, points to a very specific time: that in which our sun is aligned with the heart or center of the Milky Way—which by the way also has a visual feature that ancients likened unto a cave, or tomb.

Christ's crucifixion at Calvary, and subsequent burial in the tomb, is accordingly viewed by many modern practitioners of the ancient Mystery religions as a mythical anthropomorphic prophecy of Galactic Alignment—that very same phenomenon of which the Maya, and many others, were reportedly well aware.

So at the heart of Christianity, one of the world's greatest religions, is not only a myth, the Black Christmas conspirators would argue, but a prophecy as well, one fulfilled in our time, and which only they could fittingly commemorate. OMG.

THE TRIPLE CROSS

As the Gospels record, two criminals were crucified with Jesus, one on either side, thus the three crosses often associated with Christianity. Astronomically, in addition to the Great Cross, there is: Cygnus (the Latinized Hellenic Greek word for swan), lying on the plane of the Milky Way, which contains the Northern Cross; and, Crux (Latin for cross), with contains the Southern Cross—both of which are in close proximity to Galactic Center and lie on either side of the Great Cross.

Compellingly, the Mayans also recognized two cross-shaped constellations in this same region (although they are not identical with Cygnus and Crux): "Xic," the Hawk (hawk, swan, whatever) and The Thieves' Cross (criminals, thieves, whatever)—both of which figured into Mayan myths focused on telling the unfolding story of the heavens, past, present and future.

Thus, again we find that the basis of the crucifixion story is rooted in the stars, but lest you get the mistaken impression that the ancient Biblical writers and Mayans were the only ones interested in these things, consider that the long-awaited year of 2012 also brought the London Olympic Games, the 30th Olympics, the XXX Olympiad, the Olympiad of the Triple Cross.

XXX Olympiad London 2012

Indeed, just as Black Christmas marked the year of the Sun's Crucifixion on the Great Cross—the middle of the three celestial crosses—so did the XXX Olympics commemorate this once-in-a-26,000-year occurrence. Also, for added effect, the "triple cross" might also be thought of as referring to the alignment of three other "crosses" involved in the alignment process: the three crosses formed by the equators and axes of the earth, sun and Milky Way, which all aligned in 2012. (Don't think for a minute, either, that the triple-X pornographic connotation was overlooked or that great pleasure was not derived from the widespread use of the XXX label on everything from baseball caps to children's lunchboxes.)

Why in the world, then, didn't the globalists roast up several hundred thousand Olympic spectators in honor of the occasion? Well, that would've spoiled the biggest Christmas Surprise in history, now, wouldn't it? Come on, where's your sense of timing, of theatre? (Not that there wasn't a major psyop to convince the public that a nuclear strike on the Olympics was immiment, however, but that's the subject of Chapter 25.)

THE PROPHECY OF THE LAST POPE

The Roman Catholic Church represents one-sixth of the world's population and over half of all followers of Christ, and the assassination of the head of the largest Christian institution on the planet on one of the two most holy days on the church calendar, well, come on, you've got to at least acknowledge the tremendous appeal of the act from the Luciferian perspective.

Lucifer in the Vatican

In Dan Brown's Angels and Demons, protagonist Robert Langdon confronts an Illuminati plot to take control of the Vatican. As it turns out, Brown's plot—minus the anti-matter explosive device—might not have been too far off the mark.

In Apollyon Rising 2012, author Tom Horn writes of "secret satanic 'Illuminati-Masonic' influences" within the Vatican, orchestrated by a "modern multinational power elite, the occult hierarchy operating behind current supranatural and global political machinations."

Horn tells of former Jesuit priest Malachi Martin—retired professor of the Pontifical Biblical Institute, eminent Catholic theologian and close personal friend of Pope Paul VI—who claims that "an Illuminati-Masonic group made up of Western plutocrats called 'The Assembly' or the 'Superforce' had infiltrated the highest levels of Vatican administration and were working to bring about a New World Order."

In The Keys of This Blood, Martin wrote:

> Most frighteningly for John Paul, he had come up against the irremovable presence of a malign strength in his own Vatican and in certain bishops' chanceries. It was what knowledgeable Churchmen called the "superforce." Rumors, always difficult to verify, tied its installation to the beginning of Pope Paul VI's reign in 1963. Indeed Paul had alluded somberly to "the smoke of Satan which has entered the Sanctuary." . .an oblique reference to an enthronement ceremony by Satanists in the Vatican."

According to Horn, Martin had concealed greater detail of this luciferic 'enthronement ceremony' in his novel, Windswept House, in which Martin wrote that "the Enthronement of the Fallen Archangel Lucifer was effected within the Roman Catholic Citadel on June 29, 1963."

Horn further relates that "Martin stated publicly on more than one occasion that the enthronement of Lucifer in Rome was based on fact, and that to facilitate the black magic, a parallel ceremony was conducted simultaneously in the United States in Charleston, South Carolina." Horn continued:

> The reason this location was selected has remained obscure to many, but given what Malachi said about the Masonic connection, it makes sense that South Carolina was chosen: It is the site of the first Supreme Council of the Scottish Rite Freemasonry in the United States, called "the Mother Lodge of the World," where in 1859, champion of luciferian dogma for the Masonic-Illuminatus, Albert Pike became Grand Commander of the Supreme Council, where he served the Order of the Quest until his death in Washington DC on April 2, 1892.

Malachi Martin, again writing in his novel Windswept House, provides further details concerning the parallel enthronement ceremonies:

> Such unobtrusive elements as the Pentagram and the black candles and the appropriate draperies could be part of the Ceremonial in Rome. But other Ruberics—the Bowl of Bones and the Ritual Din, for example, the sacrificial animals and the victim—would be too much. There would have to be a Parallel Enthronement. A Concelebration could be accomplished with the same effect by the Brethren in an Authorized Targeting Chapel. Provided all the participants in both locations "targeted" every element of the Event on the Roman Chapel, then the Event in its fullness would be accomplished specifically in the target area. It would all be a matter of unanimity of hearts, identity of intention and perfect synchronization of words and actions between the Targeting Chapel and the Target Chapel. The living wills and the thinking minds of the Participants concentrated on the specific Aim of the Prince would transcend all distance.

Wow. A Concelebration in which *the living wills and the thinking minds of the Participants concentrated on the specific Aim of the Prince would transcend all distance. Sort of like what President Bush, et al, did with The-Pet-Goat Ritual-Reading Black Mass in Sarasota in conjunction with Flight 175 slamming into the South Tower in New York, thereby invoking Crowley's Liber 175, "the book of Uniting to a particular Deity by devotion." I get it.

However, this wouldn't be the only time that a Concelebration for a major Luciferian event was held in Charleston, SC, home to the "Mother Lodge of the World." . . . you'll have to wait until Chapter 22 to learn more about that.

To be certain, it played brilliantly into the global jihad storyline—payback for the Crusades and all that—but the real genius in the Christmas Day killing of the Pope was that it paved the way for the fulfillment of the "Prophecy of the Last Pope." (Incidentally, the last pope to die on Christmas Day was Pope Adrian I in 795; other individuals of note who passed away on this day include W.C. Fields, Charlie Chaplain, Dean Martin, Denver Pyle and James Brown.)

According to St. Malachy's "Prophecy of the Popes," first published in 1595, the pope following Benedict XVI is the final pontiff, whose reign will mark the beginning of the great apostasy, which will be followed by the great tribulation. So bringing about the conditions which Catholics world-wide anticipate will accompany the apocalypse, or at least the beginning of the end, creates exactly the kind of atmosphere of tremendous fear and anticipation that the globalists are so adroit at exploiting to their great advantage.

And wouldn't you know it, the nuclear strike on Phoenix played directly into the Muslim eschatology involving the return of the 12th Imam and the End of the World—the subject of the next chapter.

One day, three acts of false-flag terror, and two—actually three and counting—of the world's greatest religions are primed for Armageddon and the Great Return. Priceless.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

THE RETURN OF THE MAHDI AND WORLD WAR III

The storyline played out beautifully: them damn Muslims had blowed up Phoenix, blowed up the Church of the Holy Sepacur (as the pronunciation came to be frequently mutilated by the American public), killed that feller that wears the funny hat . . . Jesus must be on his way back, but until he gets here we'll mop the place up with them towelheads.

The Islamic sheeple's response was no less predictable: enthused to the point of insanity by what they believed to be a global victory for Islamic jihad carried out by blessed martyrs of Allah, they took to the streets by the millions to celebrate (only to get mowed down in droves by pissed-off Predator drone operators) and carried out untold acts of violence against Christian churches and businesses worldwide.

Two global groups of religiously-inflamed mouth breathers ready to fight to the death in the name of God, be it Allah or Yahwey—just what the doctor ordered to create absolute chaos and help usher in a New World Order.

THE TWELVERS

What the death of the Pope had signified to Catholics (and Fundamentalist-Christian end-timers) was perfectly paralleled by what the entire set of Black Christmas events meant to radical Islamists—the time of the apocalypse is nigh.

Then-Iranian-President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad belonged to a group known as the "Twelvers," the apocalyptic Hojjatieh sect, a branch of Shia Islam so radical it was banned in 1983 by none other than Ayatollah Khomeini. The Twelvers believed that the return of the Twelfth Imam, or Imam al-Mahdi—the prophesied redeemer of Islam—was imminent, even though he'd apparently gone missing hundreds of years ago.

Twelver eschatology held that global chaos and bloodshed must precede the return of the Mahdi, and that it was their divine responsibility to create these necessary pre-conditions. It was their duty to facilitate the 12th Imam's reappearance, which would bring about the institution of Islamic government worldwide and the annihilation of all competing faiths.

Blood for Peace

Now, whether Ahmadinejad was a true believer—as evidenced by his praying to Allah before the U.N. Assembly to "hasten the arrival of the Imam al-Mahdi"—or simply playing a key role in a carefully orchestrated multi-faith Illuminati psyop, we'll never know for certain, but the fact remains that he played his role as the post-bin-Laden Islamic boogeyman to the hilt, threatening to wipe Israel off the map and flippantly disregarding repeated international demands for Iran to cease its nuclear-weapons development program.

As the Head Twelver, intent on creating planet-wide bloodshed and chaos for the purposes of ushering in the rule of the Imam al-Mahdi and his divine reign of Peace and Justice—blood for peace, baby—the eyes of the enraged Western world immediately fell upon ole Mahmoud, and although it at first appeared that he might pull a bin Laden and initially deny any involvement, he quickly manned up and communicated to the Christian nations, in so many words, *Merry Christmas, Mother F*ckers.*

A (Good) Recipe for Disaster

Depending on whether you believe he was a genuine religious zealot or a globalist-in-wolf's-clothing, Mahmoud had either seized the apocalyptic moment and gone with it, claiming full responsibility regardless of whether he'd actually had a hand in the execution of the plot or not, or, he was simply reciting his lines like a good New World Order puppet, either way further enraging the Western powers and further radicalizing supporters of radical Islam.

It was on, and in this super-charged environment, Christian conspiracy theorists (and others, including Glenn Beck), who had been more-or-less quietly pointing out the striking similarities between the Mahdi and the Biblical anti-Christ in the years leading up to Black Christmas, went ballistic with their warnings of the impending arrival of the Son of Perdition (or Man of Sin, take your pick).

The Biblical and Islamic Apocalypse, the imminent emergence of the anti-Christ and the Mahdi … my, oh my. This isn't just a recipe for World War III, it's got all the makings of the End of the World. But was it all just scripted from the beginning?

PIKE'S PEEK

Giuseppe Mazzini

In a letter purportedly from prominent Freemason Albert Pike (1809-1891), whom you'll remember from Most Dangerous, to Italy's Giuseppe Mazzini (who conspiracy theorists claim was a 33rd-degree Mason and became head of the Illuminati in 1834 and founder of the Mafia in 1860), Pike wrote:

> The Third World War must be fomented by taking advantage of the differences caused by the "agentur" of the "Illuminati" between the political Zionists and the leaders of Islamic World. The war must be conducted in such a way that Islam (the Moslem Arabic World) and political Zionism (the State of Israel) mutually destroy each other. Meanwhile the other nations, once more divided on this issue will be constrained to fight to the point of complete physical, moral, spiritual and economical exhaustion…

> We shall unleash the Nihilists and the atheists, and we shall provoke a formidable social cataclysm which in all its horror will show clearly to the nations the effect of absolute atheism, origin of savagery and of the most bloody turmoil. Then everywhere, the citizens, obliged to defend themselves against the world minority of revolutionaries, will exterminate those destroyers of civilization, and the multitude, disillusioned with Christianity, whose deistic spirits will from that moment be without compass or direction, anxious for an ideal, but without knowing where to render its adoration, will receive the true light through the universal manifestation of the pure doctrine of Lucifer, brought finally out in the public view. This manifestation will result from the general reactionary movement which will follow the destruction of Christianity and atheism, both conquered and exterminated at the same time.[1]

Ah, yes, the true agenda is revealed; unfortunately, however, as with Pike's almost-certainly fictitious Satanic "Palladian Rite," this letter is also a confirmed hoax. Yet, here again we must observe that just because it's fake doesn't mean it's untrue: just because Léo Taxil claimed credit for the Palladian Rite hoax doesn't mean there's not a Luciferian core at the heart of Freemasonry; likewise, just because Pike's letter to Mazzini is a forgery doesn't mean that it does not contain the Illuminati strategy for fomenting World War III, taking control of the entire planet and creating a One World Religion rooted in the worship of Lucifer.

Vigilant Guard

Black Christmas was successfully pulled off in Fortress America, with its bloated, hyper-vigilant, post-9/11 national security infrastructure. Not only that, it took place in the home state of the Secretary of Homeland Security, under the nose of America's Toughest Sheriff, in Captain America's back yard. Even better, Arizona's other U.S. Senator, John Kyl, was the Chairman and Ranking Member of the Senate Judiciary Committee's Subcommittee on Terrorism and Homeland Security.

Not to mention that pre-B.C., Arizona itself ranked eighth of 50 states in the number of domestically-focused counterterrorism and homeland security organizations, and 10th overall in organizations established or newly involved in counterterrorism since 9/11.

Oh, and this should have been a tip off if anyone had been paying attention—remember on 9/11 that multiple military exercises were taking place, with one of the largest being "Vigilant Guardian"? Well, in 2011, Phoenix was the location of a drill simulating a nuclear terrorist attack. Its name? Vigilant Guard. (We won't even get into the pre-9/11 FBI "Phoenix Memo" or the 2010 exhibit sponsored by the Phoenix office of the FBI entitled, "Enduring Eyes: Remembering the Holocaust to Protect the Future.")

Actually, in hind sight, the letter seems pretty spot on, doesn't it?

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

WINNING THE WAR ON CHRISTMAS

Nothing takes place in a vacuum, and Black Christmas was in significant respects the culmination of the perpetual War on Christmas, which was itself but one front in the larger assault on Christianity and in the even-broader global effort to remove God not only from the public square but from the face of the planet.

A SATANIC MASS SACRIFICE IN PARADISE VALLEY

The Phoenix Holocaust had been the Pearl Harbor (the new "New Pearl Harbor," as 9/11 was often referred to) in the world-wide Luciferian war on the Christian faith—the biggest Christmas Day Surprise in history, an unprovoked attack that everyone again blamed on Muslim extremists. For the real perpetrators, it was truly "The Greatest Gift of All," to themselves.

Recalling from Most Dangerous that a black mass is, according to Church-of-Satan founder Anton LaVey, essentially a parody of a traditional religious service, and remembering President Bush's Pet-Goat Black Mass in Paradise, we can better understand Black Christmas as the ultimate inversion of the Catholic Dawn Mass traditionally celebrated on Christmas Day—and see it for what it was, a Satanic Dawn Mass Sacrifice in Paradise Valley on X-Mas morn. It was a red hot Christmas…boy, talking about Santa leaving ashes for the children.

A STROLL DOWN BAD-MEMORY LANE

Flashback from the carnage of Phoenix for a moment to the 2004 White House Correspondents' Dinner, where a slide show featuring quirky photographs from inside the White House accompanies a portion of President Bush's remarks. One photo shows the president looking under furniture in the Oval Office while Bush jokes, "Those weapons of mass destruction have got to be somewhere. Nope, no weapons over there … maybe under here?"

Democrats of course immediately seized upon his remarks, calling them "astonishingly insensitive." Terry McAuliffe, then chairman of the Democratic National Committee, told ABC's "Good Morning America," "It's inappropriate to the thousands of people obviously who have been wounded over there," continuing, "This is a very serious issue. We've lost hundreds of troops, as you know, over there. Let's not be laughing about not being able to find weapons of mass destruction."

The threat posed by Saddam Hussein's alleged WMDs was cited by Bush administration officials, including Colin Powell, as one of the primary justifications for going to war in Iraq—which resulted not only in thousands of American killed, wounded and permanently maimed, but hundreds of thousands of dead Iraqi civilians.

That no weapons were ever in fact discovered was blamed on "faulty intelligence," but the real inside joke was that this supposed bad intelligence had been manufactured in the first place by those who stood to benefit from the war and had orchestrated 9/11 itself.

When Mark Katz, a former speechwriter for President Clinton (who also wrote jokes for the former President's own Correspondents' Dinner appearances), told CNN in response to Bush's comments, "sending American troops to war to find weapons of mass destruction, that's a joke that's playing out on the world stage," he didn't know the half of it.

Bush wasn't just making a highly-insensitive or inappropriate remark, he was mocking the press—and everyone else—to their faces.[1]

"I will win the war on Christmas"

Now fast forward eight years from 2004 to the 2012 White House Correspondents' Dinner in April, a mere eight months before Black Christmas, and we find President Barack Obama engaged in a little mockery of his own, only in this instance it was mockery-in-advance, part of the extensive predictive programming for the American Holocaust.

Although no one at the time took much notice of the comment, in retrospect it was one heckuva hint—actually, it was an outright declaration of his intentions. During his monologue, Obama joked, "Now, if I do win a second term as President, let me just say something to all the — (applause) — let me just say something to all my conspiracy-oriented friends on the right who think I'm planning to unleash some secret agenda: You're absolutely right."

More applause. He continued, "So allow me to close with a quick preview of the secret agenda you can expect in a second Obama administration."

"In my first term," Obama began, establishing the joke's rythym, and followed up with "In my second term," setting up the punch line. After waiting for applause, he cues up another one: "In my first term," Obama began, "we ended the war in Iraq"; then, "In my second term," he paused, "I will win the war on Christmas."

I will win the war on Christmas…

Some Heads Are Gonna Roll

Judas Priest was one of the premiere heavy metal acts of the 1970s and 80s, performing such head-banging classics as "Living After Midnight," one of the bands most popular songs. Starting out with the oft-repeated lines, "Livin' after midnight, rockin' to the dawn. Lovin' till the mornin', then I'm gone, I'm gone," the tune thrilled millions upon millions of leathered-up biker types and tough guys the world over for decades.

It was quite interesting, then, when former lead singer Rob Halford came out of the closet in 1998 as the first openly-gay heavy metal star, and subsequently revealed that "Living After Midnight" had actually been written as a cryptic tribute to San Francisco's gay bar scene.

Halford, who lived in Paradise Valley, AZ, just outside Phoenix, had earlier in his career—and quite deliciously—sung for the bands Lord Lucifer and Hiroshima, and thus it was a logical development that Judas Priest's classic "Some Heads Are Gonna Roll" became a sort of anthem for Black Christmas, a very-much intentional parallel with 9/11's official battle-cry, "Let's roll" (Priest's "Screamin' for Vengeance" came in a close second).

"Some Heads Are Gonna Roll" lyrics excerpt:

The power-mad freaks who are ruling the earth,
Will show how little they think you're worth.
With animal lust they'll devour your life,
And slice your world to bits like a knife.

One last day, burning hell fire.
You're blown away…

You know, though, you sort of get the impression that maybe this song isn't what everyone thought it was, either. It sounds less like the "we're gonna kick some ass" that the title seems to imply and everyone infers, and more like the "you got your ass kicked" mockery we keep getting in one form after another. Shit, yet another perfectly good Judas Priest classic ruined for posterity.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

A COMPANION RITUAL

It was the only good news of the day that fateful Christmas morning: President Obama would live—not only that, he would make a full recovery. He had looked increasingly thin in the months leading up to Black Christmas, and rumors swirled about his health. Was it simply the stress of campaigning for reelection?

Then, on December 21st, 2012, had come the news reports: the President had been rushed to Bethesda Naval Hospital and was in a coma; there was even speculation that he might even be brain dead.

Yet, only three days later, in the midst of wall-to-wall coverage of the Phoenix attack, had come the unexpectedly positive report from Obama's doctors. It was a ray of hope on an otherwise dark day—a miracle some called it. Obama had been resurrected, reborn like the Phoenix … hey, wait a minute… that, too, was part of the Black Christmas Galactic MegaRitual?

AN ELECTION OF BIBLICAL PROPORTIONS

In the lead-up to Obama's 2008 election and immediately afterwards, many seemed to lose all perspective, if not their grip on reality altogether. On MSNBC, Chris Matthews exclaimed, "This is bigger than Kennedy.… This is the New Testament! I felt this thrill going up my leg."

In Politico, Jesse Jackson Jr. remarked that "The event itself is so extraordinary that another chapter could be added to the Bible to chronicle its significance," and in The Free Liberal Micah Tillman predicted: "He won't just heal our city-states and souls. He won't just bring the Heavenly Kingdom—dreamt of in both Platonism and Christianity—to earth. He will heal the earth itself."

With such Messianic rhetoric, it was no surprise when an inaugural parade in Des Moines, Iowa, featured a re-enactment of the triumphal entry of Christ with a facsimile of Obama riding on a donkey and onlookers waving palm branches.

As things would turn out, though, these folks couldn't have been any more mistaken.

THE OBAMA PSYOP

The person of Barack Hussein Obama and his Presidency may have been one of the biggest on-going psyops ever mounted against the American and global public, filled to the brim with that same familiar always-present mockery, more out-in-front than ever. The clues and cues were so robust it's ridiculous, rivaled only by the general public's refusal to even take notice, despite the fact that they were hit repeatedly in the face with one absurdity after another.

From the millions spent on attorneys' fees to keep all his records—kindergarten through college—sealed from public view, to Obama's not placing his hand over his heart during the singing of the National Anthem (on more than one occasion), from the suspicion-generating elements of his birth certificates), to an equally suspicious selective service registration form and the apparent use of multiple social security numbers, one could surmise that the man was, by design, a walking, talking conspiracy-theory generator.

KARMA CHAMELEON

Was the Obama image an ingeniously media-crafted chameleon, created to be many things to many groups? For Christians, there was ample evidence that he was a closet Muslim (in one interview, he supposedly misspoke, using the phrase "my Muslim faith," whereupon the interviewer corrected him, "Your Christian faith," which Obama merely parroted, "My Christian faith"); for patriotic conservatives, ample evidence that he was a socialist-communist subversive; for Christian apocalyptics, evidence that Obama was in fact the long-awaited anti-Christ.

Having been fed a steady diet of political-correctness indoctrination for decades, had Americans been in such a rush to elect an African American as president that they had unwittingly—and with immense enthusiasm and total consent—installed a socialist-communist-Muslim-non-citizen in the highest office in the land?

And then the dark beauty of using a constitutional law professor—especially one held to be closely affiliated with communist, serial-bomber and co-founder of the Weather Underground, Bill Ayers—to destroy the Constitution would be an act of genius unto itself.

COMEDY CENTRAL

If you were fortunate enough to be in on the joke, it was a source of non-stop entertainment:

Shared Inspiration: Obama gave his famous 2008 "The World that Stands as One" speech in Berlin, Germany, in front of the Berlin Victory Column, which was designed as part of Hitler's new World Capital where he had planned to enthrone himself in the Welthauptsadt Germania upon winning World War II. Obama later gave his acceptance speech for the Democratic Party's nomination on a stage that some believed to be inspired by the Pergamon Altar, which Obama had reportedly visited while in Berlin. This altar had been the model for the Zeppelintribüne, the Tribune at Zeppelin Field in Nuremberg that Hitler used for his Nazi rallies.

Take Two: After Chief Justice John Roberts "accidentally" flubbed the words to the oath of office during the swearing-in ceremony, the ceremony was repeated in the Map Room of the White House, only the second time it was conducted without the use of the Holy Bible— and directly in front of a portrait of Freemasonic architect Benjamin Latrobe. (Interestingly enough, the William R. Singleton-Hope-Lebanon Lodge No. 7 in Washington, D.C. held the first-ever Masonic Inaugural Ball in honor of the 44th President of the United States.)

Man o' war: After less than two weeks in office, Obama was nominated for and subsequently received the Nobel Peace Prize, when obviously at the time of his nomination he hadn't done anything to deserve the prize—particularly ironic, given that this Man of Peace proceeded to continue existing wars and order new acts of aggression by the military, not to mention to win the war on Christmas...but that was all ... an inside joke?

A REINFORCING RITUAL

Obama's staged illness and miraculous Christmas day recovery had been a companion ritual to the Mass Sacrifice of Black Christmas. The President of the World, the globalists' Sun King—the earthly counterpart of the sun itself—for all intents and purposes died, mirroring the death of the sun occurring on Winter Solstice (when the sun reaches the lowest point in the sky during its annual journey through the heavens), and he had remained in death for three days before being resurrected on December 25, exactly as the sun remains at its lowest point for three days before beginning its upward journey.

The location of Obama's "death" had been symbolically significant, as well, with his collapse occurring directly underneath the Capitol Dome, which represented the Cosmic Womb of Galactic Center—an earthly reenactment of the heavenly demise of the sun in the heart of creation, prelude to the ultimate regenerative act. And, speaking of regeneration, don't forget the Washington Monument, standing opposite the Capitol, a massive modern-day representation of the phallus of Osiris, magically imbuing the Womb of Isis and the entire ceremony with supernatural procreative vitality. (Another XXX megaritual!)

This was not simply a ritual mirroring the annual rebirth of the sun, and it didn't concern entry into a new Zodiacal house. No, this was the Birth of the Sun of the New Great Age, and the resurrected Obama-Osiris had been reborn in all his full glory as its flesh-and-blood representative.

LUCIFER ASCENDED

Chosen in part for his physical characteristics and looking for all the world like an Egyptian Pharaoh, Obama was on one level transformed into Osiris resurrected. Lest you balk at the idea, recall Obama's own words as he toured Egyptian archaeological sites accompanied by Dr. Zahi Hawass, former Egyptian Minister of State for Antiquities: looking at a hieroglyph of a large-eared individual, who was in fact non-royalty, the President remarked, "That looks like me. Look at those ears."

However, moments later, Dr. Hawass made the key comparison, commenting on Obama's resemblance to the most well-known Egyptian ruler of all: "Mr. President, you look like King Tut," he said, to which Obama replied, "I've been told." Dr. Hawass punctuated his observation—"It's true." (Egyptians were so inspired that they created plaques inscribed with "Obama: New Tutankhamon of the World.")

On a deeper level still, to the hard-core Luciferians behind the B.C. MegaRitual, the New King Tut also represented the embodiment of the spirit of the New Great Age, the Age of Lucifer: the resurrected Obama was on one level the anti-Christ himself. They had ritually accomplished the ultimate sacrilege: The Birth of the Anti-Christ on Christmas Day.

Publicly, of course, the ritual was all perfectly believable for the vast majority of the unwashed masses: Obama's illness had caused a change in his personality, and not for the better.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

AMEN RA IS BACK

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Obama-Osama, Saddam Hussein—if you think it's mere coincidence that Obama's full name mirrors or incorporates the names of the two biggest boogeymen in the 9/11 fiction, well, then you're probably experiencing your own "failure of imagination," as 9/11 was ludicrously claimed to have been. As with the abrupt reversal from Most Dangerous, 9-1-1=help → 9/11=terror, here you have an equally-clever subconscious reversal of meaning intended to create cognitive dissonance: Osama=bad guy → Obama=good guy + Saddam Hussein=bad guy → Barack Hussein=good guy. With this double whammy, our poor little subconscious minds never stood a chance.

Americans' artificially-induced obsessive desire to elect Obama was so blinding, so overwhelming that it not only caused them to ignore heaping, steaming mounds of suspicious circumstances but to overcome the not-insubstantial psychological barrier created by Obama's name itself. And his name was certainly a not-inconsequential aspect of the whole MegaRitual, as we shall find further evidence of next.

WHAT'S IN A NAME, PART II: HE IS WITH US

Writing in his book Apollyon Rising 2012, author Thomas Horn states:

> A Hadith (tradition) sacred to Shiite Islam from the seventeenth century contains a prophecy from Ali ibn Abi-Talib, which predicts that just > before the return of the Mahdi (the end-times redeemer of Islam) a "tall black man will assume the reins of government in the West."

> This leader will command "the strongest army on earth" and will bear "a clear sign" from the third imam, Hussein. The prophecy concludes that: "Shiites should have no doubt that he is with us."
> Does this Islamic prophecy identify Obama as the "promised warrior" who comes to help the savior of Shiite Muslims conquer the world? Amir Taheri asked this very question for Forbes Magazine in October 2008, pointing out how "Obama's first and second names—Barack Hussein—mean 'the blessing of Hussein' in Arabic and Persian" while his "family name, Obama, written in the Persian alphabet, reads O Ba Ma, which means 'he is with us,' the magic formula in Majlisi's tradition."

"He is with us," eh? Very interesting, if true, considering that the name of the Messiah as prophesied by Isaiah was Immanuel, "God is with us." (And worth noting is that Al-Burāq, meaning "lightning," is the name of the mythological steed that carried Muhammad from Mecca to Jerusalem and back during his famed "Night Journey.")

WHAT'S IN A NAME, PART III: AMEN RA IS BACK

In the end, perhaps what awakened the greatest number of people to Obama as the creation of the globalists and his role as their Sun King was the timely revelation of what had obviously been an intentional formulation, one that had clearly played a role in the selection of the name for this CIA-Hollywood-created character in the first place.

Ingeniously, "Barack Hussein Obama" contained an anagram which was an outright statement that he was indeed the occult Sun King reborn:

> "Amen Ra is back BHO USA"

. . . Obama's name was a big, fat joke on all of us.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

THE ASTROLOGY OF BLACK CHRISTMAS, SATURNALIA AND IT'S THE THOUGHT THAT COUNTS

CAPRICORNUS AND THE LORD OF DEATH

For those of you who are really paying attention and who took careful notes on book one, you might find yourself saying at this point, Okay, all this is other stuff is great, but where's the goat? Where's the goat, indeed, as on 9/11 we encountered "The Pet Goat," a veritable ode to Baphomet, whom we might consider as the mascot of the September 11th, 2001 Occult Olympics—and, truly, what good megaritual would fail to utilize such a vital symbol?

Certainly not the Black Christmas Galactic Luciferian MegaRitual, which incorporated the goat in a most creative fashion, as will be detailed in a moment. Of course, the goat was already invoked on one level by virtue of December 25th falling under the astrological sign of Capricorn, which covers December 22nd to January 20th, and originates from the constellation of Capricornus, which is generally depicted as a goat with a fish's tail. (One myth pertaining to Capricornus says that when the goat-god Pan was attacked by Typhon, he dove into the Nile, with his upper body remaining that of a goat while the submerged lower half transformed into that of a fish.)

Capricorn is said to be ruled by the planet Saturn, who you'll recall from book one, along with Pluto, as one of the Lords of Death, and pointing out the appropriateness of this fact as it relates to the American Holocaust would almost seem distasteful at this point—but only almost, given everything else we've been subjected to by now.

IO SATURNALIA

While we're on the subject of Saturn, Saturnalia was the ancient Roman festival honoring the deity of the same name, originally held on December 17th and later expanded with unofficial festivities through December 23rd, the poet Catullus calling them "the best of days."

Characterized overall by social role reversals, behavioral license, drunkenness and gluttony, Saturnalia featured a day of gift-giving on December 23rd, often involving gag gifts, of which Julius Caesar Augustus, the first emperor of the Roman Empire, was particularly fond. Such gifts might be expensive or quite cheap, and included items such as toothpicks, spoons and sausages.

In the spirit of Saturnalia, then, one supposes, and seeking to incorporate the glorious goat into the Galactic Megaritual in some darkly-humorous and fitting manner, the conspirators chose to have delivered anonymously via FedEx on December 24th to the homes of numerous U.S. and Arizona public officials—including Joe Arpaio, Jan Brewer, John McCain, and Jon Kyl—the cutest damn cellophane-wrapped straw Yule Goats you've ever seen.

ATOMIC FireBall

Enclosed with these oversized Christmas ornaments were, quite oddly, thought many of the recipients, packs of Atomic Fireball Hard Candy, boxes of dates (from the date palm tree, Phoenix dactylifera), and boxes of Hanukkah candles (44 to a box).

There had been much discussion about including packets of Phoenix mushrooms, but it was decided that this would just be too damn weird—but they couldn't let the mushroom thing go (had to have a mushroom cloud reference, you know), and ended up throwing in a little miniature red-and-white felt toy mushroom, complete with a silk green bow, with each package. (It was similarly decided that bottles of Vicks Formula 44 would be too peculiar to include, and might be a bit of overkill anyway.)

Also included with each gift set, and this was sheer genius, really, was a CD of Jimmy Buffett's 1996 collection of Christmas-themed music entitled, Christ- mas Island. Now, the first thing that made this such a smart touch was that Jimmy's birthday was December 25th, 1946, (here's a shout out to the 9/11 Birthday Boy, former U.S. Solicitor General Ted Olson) but what made this an absolutely brilliant pick was the CD's title, which is also…you gotta love it…the name of an island in the equatorial Pacific that played involuntary host to a series of nuclear test explosions conducted by the British and U.S. militaries in the late 1950s and early 60s. Badda bing, badda BOOM.[1]

And although the gifts were sent anonymously, they had included a small holiday card; actually, it was a reproduction of a card designed by Aleister Crowley, which read "I bring you season's greetings from" and bore a facsimile of his signature that read "The Beast." It's the small touches that really matter.

DETOUR AHEAD

There's one last really big smelly package left to unwrap—saving the worst for last, one might say—that puts an absolutely unmistakable signature (much like Crowley's monicker on the card above) on Black Christmas, one so plain and bold you could read it from the moon. But before we pull the bow off that box of Christmas jeer, we're going to look at two events, two pre-cursor rituals if you will, which—again, if we'd been paying attention—could have tipped us off as to what was in store for the country, and the world, on 12/25/12.

Before the finale, then, we visit Tucson, Arizona, and Aurora, Colorado, separated by hundreds miles, but connected to both 9/11 and Black Christmas through perverse occult rituals you'll have to pick apart to believe…but, sadly, we're used to that by now, aren't we?

SECTION FOUR

PUBLIC RITUALS 'R'US

Chapter Nineteen

Shifting Gears

I think it's safe to say we're all a little weary in general, and just plain sick of occult symbols, numbers, and everything else to do with rituals, mega or otherwise. So in the chapters that follow, I'll be as concise as possible, which unfortunately will still leave us exposed to the toxic environment for far too long, like so many buck-naked Fukushima cleanup workers.

The truth is that the public occult rituals that we delve into are full-blown ceremonies in their own right, and although they may be merely pit-stops on the road to Phoenix, their orchestrators cut no corners, in fact taking great pride in their dark works, as per usual.

I'll say what needs to be said, but without providing the level of documentation or "proof" presented in Most Dangerous or in the first part of this Addendum, because if by now I haven't built up a little credibility with you—and you don't trust that, generally-speaking, I know an in-plain-sight occult ritual when I see one—well, then, we probably ought to part ways.

There are enough occult elements and references to support quite-lengthy analyses, which I neither want to write nor you to read. What follows are not exactly Cliff Notes, but the main goal in examining these rituals is primarily to cast light on the dark path leading from 9/11 to Black Christmas, and to reveal the occult infrastructure that supported the long march to absolute global tyranny.

How could we possibly have known what was coming on December 25, 2012? Well, if we'd been smart enough to know what to look for, they all but told us what they were going to do. Don't believe it? I hate to tell you, but you will, you will.

CHAPTER TWENTY

KILLING GABRIEL

January 8, 2011. U.S Representative Gabrielle Giffords is holding a "Congress on Your Corner" event in front of the Safeway supermarket located at 7110 North Oracle Road (Arizona Highway 77) in La Toscana Village mall in Casas Adobes, Arizona, an unincorporated town near Tucson.

Approximately 30 people are gathered around the Congresswoman's table or are standing in line to visit with her, when, at 10:10 a.m., 22-year-old Jared Lee Loughner pulls out a 9mm Glock 19 semi-automatic pistol—with a 33-round magazine—shoots Giffords in the head, and proceeds to shoot 18 others, six of whom will die, including Arizona District Court Chief Judge John Roll, Congressional staffer Gabriel Zimmerman and 9-year-old Christina-Taylor Green.

President Obama called the shooting an "unspeakable tragedy," adding that "such a senseless and terrible act of violence has no place in a free society," and Arizona Governor Jan Brewer called the attack "senseless and cruel violence."

Numerous politicians and public figures issued statements, including Arizona's Senators John McCain and Jon Kyl, and U.S. Supreme Court Chief Justice John Roberts, who couldn't accurately recite the Presidential oath of office in 2009, managed to issue a coherent statement of his own, noting, "we in the judiciary have suffered the terrible loss of one of our own," referring to the death of Chief Judge John Roll.

NEVER MIND THAT RIFLE

Various foreign officials, including Fidel Castro, commented on the incident, and the French newspaper Le Monde said that the attack seemed to confirm "an alarming premonition that has been gaining momentum for a long time: that the verbal and symbolic violence that the most radical right-wing opponents have used in their clash with the Obama administration would at some point lead to tragic physical violence."

Thus began yet another scripted round of heated recriminations in the perpetual left-right mock battle for the public's fickle affections (in itself mere theatre, to wit, the whole Sarah-Palin-and-the-crosshairs routine, which, if you're unfamiliar with it, isn't worth going into detail on), and thus was more fuel spewed upon the ever-smoldering gun-control controversy, reigniting it into a full-blown conflagration once again.

With all of the script elements kicking into full play, then, no one really took any notice when, despite the mainstream media's relentless billing of the shooting as yet another senseless lone-wolf killing in America, Pima County Sheriff's Deputy Rich Kastigar told reporters that a rifle with an extended magazine had been found at the scene of the shooting spree.[1]

Details? Who the hell wants details that don't fit into the pre-established storyline? Shut the hell up, Rich.

A DEEPER LOOK

Whether the rifle was a second weapon that Loughner brought to the scene but didn't use (which wasn't part of the reporting, by the way), or a weapon left behind by a second shooter (unconfirmed reports indicated that the weapon had been found on the roof of the Safeway), or a prop planted to generate confusion and suspicion (as we see time and again in our investigations), this detail matters in that it's exactly the kind of incongruent factoid that we have come to recognize as potential-probable evidence of sophisticated psychological warfare tactics being employed against the unsuspecting public. While not definitive in and of itself, it says, Look deeper.

And look deeper we will, but even without the ownerless rifle, if, after everything we've been through together and all the occult-laden mockery we've encountered, you read about an assassination attempt on a U.S. Congresswoman that takes place in a Safeway parking lot along Highway 77 and your Spidey senses aren't already tingling, man, there's just no hope for you.

A TWO-FACED RITUAL

We might as well bring the guest of honor forward in the beginning, because there's no real advantage in concealing his identity until later on, so please join me in welcoming Janus—after whom the month of January is named—the two-faced Roman god, who simultaneously looks backward to the past and forward to the future.

And that's just as fitting as it could possibly be, because, as you'll discover, this is precisely what the Gifford's public ritual is all about—looking backward to 9/11 (a 9/11 redux, of sorts) and forward to Black Christmas, foreshadowing the holocaust in nearby Phoenix.

Indeed, this ritual was a warm-up performance designed to focus national and international attention on Arizona in general and the Tucson-Phoenix area specifically—a means of generating mass sympathy and empathy tied subconsciously, perhaps psychically, to this geographic location, and intended, if it were possible, to compound the psychological trauma of the holocaust to come—a dress rehearsal involving the key players for 12/25/12 (whether all of them knew it at the time or not). It incorporates elements and themes from 9/11 and points symbolically toward Phoenix.

A BEING FROM OF OLD AM I

Janus was the animistic spirit of doorways (januae) and archways (jani), the god of gates as well as the guardian deity of non-physical boundaries, especially the threshold between one year and the next. He was the god of beginnings and endings, transitions and time (recall the similar functions of Hermes and Thoth from the 9/11 Occult MegaRitual).

In Lawful Days (Fasti), Book 1, Ovid quotes Janus as saying "The ancients called me Chaos, for a being from of old am I … all things are closed and opened by my hand. The guardianship of this vast universe is in my hands alone."[2]

Janus is the first of the gods and thus their father. Men must invoke Janus first, regardless of the god they want to pray to or placate. Janus as the Gatekeeper has jurisdiction over every kind of door and passage and the power of opening or closing them. Janus is at the origin of time as the guardian of the gates of Heaven, and possesses mastership over time—he is the initiator of new historical ages.

Nothing could have been more fitting than to invoke Janus at the doorstep of Phoenix on the cusp of the roll-over to the Next Great Age.

JANUARY 8: THE EVE OF AGONY

An Agonalia or Agonia was a religious observance celebrated in ancient Rome several times a year in honor of various divinities, and the January 9th Agonalia was the Festival of Janus, during which sacrifices were made to the god. Also known as the Agonium, it was a celebration of doors and gateways symbolized by Janus in ascendancy after the winter solstice. January 8th (which fell on Saturday in 2011) was the eve of the Agonium (the word agonium also referred to the sacrificial beast or victim, or, in this instance, victims).

THE ARCH OF JANUS AND THE ROYAL ARCH OF FREEMASONRY

THE ROYAL ARCH
G

Befitting of the god of gateways and archways, there is a literal Arch of Janus in the Forum Boarium in Rome, the only remaining example of the quadrifrons triumphal arch preserved there.

The arch is also a highly significant symbol in Freemasonry as evidenced by their Royal Arch (or Holy Royal Arch) degree, which derives its name from the "Royal Arch of the Ages of the Zodiac," where the twelve Zodiacal constellations—representing the twelve ages in the Precession of the Equinoxes (or the Great Age)—appear to arch their way across the sky as if in royal procession.

The Royal Arch ritual purportedly attempts to convey a picture of the life hereafter, of our re-integration with the Supreme Being, but it's highly doubtful that our idea of the Most High is in line with the upper-echelon Freemasons' God (whether that be the Mason's "Jahbulon," who incidentally is depicted looking a lot like Yoda from Star Wars, or Lucifer himself).

January, named for the God of Archways … the eighth day, the eve of the Agonium (the Festival of Janus), invoking Janus' blessings in preparation for the Great Shift of 2012 … and, would you look at that Safeway storefront, it's got more arches than a McDonald's. No, it's certainly not the Twin Towers or the Pentagon—the MegaSymbols of 9/11—but, hey, it'll do as a makeshift sacrificial altar.

And is it just me, or does that Safeway logo look a helluva lot like the Freemasonic Grand Master lapel pin?

WHERE ARE THE TWINS?

Even though this Safeway is no match for the Twin Towers, never fear, because this public ritual has twins alright, identical twins, both of whom are NASA astronauts. Rep. Giffords' husband, Mark Kelly, and his brother Scott are, in fact, the only twins (the only siblings, for that matter) to have both traveled in space.

At the time of the shooting Scott Kelly was serving as commander aboard the International Space Station, from which he led a National Moment of Silence for the victims of the Tucson shooting. At 220 miles above the Earth, this went from being a global public ritual to an Outer Space MegaRitual, quite fitting given that Black Christmas was to be in essence a Galactic MegaRitual.

PAGING DR. BOWMAN

Scott Kelly's first spaceflight was as pilot of the Space Shuttle Discovery, which was also the name of the spaceship on which Dr. David Bowman made his fateful journey in Stanley Kubrick's 2001: A Space Odyssey (recall the Millennium Monolith from the first book) on his way to crossing through the stargate (Janus!) and becoming the Starchild.

Bowman's character appears in the sequel to 2001, entitled 2010: The Year We Make Contact, as well as in two additional books by Arthur C. Clarke, 2061: Odyssey Three and 3001: The Final Odyssey. In the forward to 2061, Clarke points out that the plots of the movies and books do not follow a linear arc and take place in parallel universes. Consequently, there are apparent inconsistencies in Bowman's character throughout the series, and his dual identities are referred to, albeit infrequently, as being "twin astronauts" (identical twins perhaps?).

Speaking of 2001 and twins, be careful not to confuse the fictitious Dr. Bowman with Dr. David Bowman the Tucson physician, who was picking up a few items in Safeway when the shooting began, and rushed out to help tend the wounded. "Bowman," by the way, is an encoded reference to the constellation Sagittarius, the bow-man or archer, one of the guardians of Galactic Center (along with Scorpio), whose arrow points directly at the center of the Milky Way.

THE 9/11 BIRTHDAY GIRL

One of those who unfortunately didn't survive the shooting was 9-year-old Christina Taylor-Green of Tucson, newly elected to the student council at her school.

Christina was the granddaughter of former New York Yankees and Mets manager Dallas Green (who achieved notoriety for his profanity-laced tirades: "I'm a screamer, a yeller and a cusser. I never hold back.") and daughter of John Green, a scout for the Los Angeles Dodgers; she was also the niece of actress Sophia Bush. She had not only been born on September 11, 2001, but was featured in the book, Faces of Hope: Babies Born on 9/11. (Ted Olson, the 9/11 Birthday Boy, and now Christina Green, the 9/11 Birthday Girl.)

As reported in the Arizona Republic, Christina's uncle, Greg Segalini, stated that a neighbor had invited the young girl to the event simply because she thought Christina, new member of the student council and all, would enjoy it.

Turns out that this neighbor who took the 9/11 Birthday Girl by the hand and led her off to her slaughter was one Susan Hileman, a 1973 graduate of Cornell University's College of Human Ecology and member of the Human Ecology Alumni Association Board. (Giffords was also a Cornell alum.) Hileman was shot three times but survived and was one of the main victims treated by Dr. David Bowman.

Also turns out that there are ties between the field of Human Ecology and MK-Ultra/CIA mind-control programs. (There is a Susan Hileman who has assisted with research on the dissociative trauma of young children, but that's a different person.) Interesting link, whether it be an actual coincidence or yet another artificially-engineered nod to the brainwashing maniacs who orchestrate these despicable mass rituals.

Paging Dr. Green

Operation Paperclip was the Office of Strategic Services (OSS) program designed to recruit Nazi scientists to the United States after World War II. Those recruited under this program included rocket engineer Wernher von Braun, the chief architect of the Saturn V launch vehicle that propelled the Apollo spacecraft to the Moon.

Also brought to the United States under Operation Paperclip was Dr. Hubertus Strughold, a German-born physiologist and prominent medical researcher, who played a pioneering role in the study of the physical and psychological effects of manned spaceflight and became known as "The Father of Space Medicine."

Following his death, Strughold's activities under the Nazis came under increased scrutiny, and allegations of involvement in human experimentation—in which camp inmates were immersed in freezing water, placed in pressure chambers and forced to drink seawater—at the Dachau concentration camp greatly diminished his reputation. In May 2006, Strughold's name was removed from the International Space Hall of Fame by unanimous vote of the New Mexico Museum of Space History's board of directors. (Strughold even made a post-humus appearance in The X-Files as the character of Victor Klemper in the 1995 episode "Paper Clip.")

So, as you can see, things didn't always go so well with this Employ-a-Nazi program, and there could be a much worse, yet generally unknown, case involving the U.S. government's utilization of a former Nazi doctor.

Mind-control programming is often called Monarch programming and is sometimes referred to interchangeably as "Green programming." Thousands of mind-control victims in the U.S. report having a "Dr. Green" as their chief programmer, and at least some of these subjects indicate that certain experiments were conducted at facilities in the desert surrounding Tucson (others say Cornell University, as well).

Dr. Green also purportedly went by the names Dr. Greenbaum, Greentree, Greenberg, etc., and may or may not be one-in-the-same with Dr. L. Wilson Greene, the one-time Scientific Director of the Chemical and Radiological Laboratories at the Army Chemical Center. Tad Szulc, in "The CIA's Electric Kool-Aid Acid Test" (Psychology Today, November 1977), writes that the "man whom the CIA documents credit with inspiring the program is Dr. L. Wilson Greene of the Army Chemical Corps, who had long urged the United States to embark upon psychochemical warfare."[1]

Whether Dr. Green is Dr. Greene or not, one very interesting theory surrounding the development of the United States governments' mind-control program is that Dr. Green's true identity is that of ex-Auschwitz doctor and "Angel of Death" Joseph Mengele. Mengele (who incidentally had a particular interest in identical twins) conducted one of the first methodical studies on trauma-based mind control and is thought by some to be one of the principle developers of Monarch Programming and the CIA's MK-Ultra program. Hell, he certainly has the credentials.[2]

Writing in The Relationship Between Mind Control Programming and Ritual Abuse, Dr. Ellen P. Lacter further defines what we're talking about here:

> Trauma-based mind control programming can be defined as systematic torture that blocks the victim's capacity for conscious processing (through pain, terror, drugs, illusion, sensory deprivation, sensory over-stimulation, oxygen deprivation, cold, heat, spinning, brain stimulation, and often, near-death), and then employs suggestion and/or classical and operant conditioning (consistent with well-established behavioral modification principles) to implant thoughts, directives, and perceptions in the unconscious mind, often in newly-formed trauma-induced dissociated identities, that force the victim to do, feel, think, or perceive things for the purposes of the programmer. The objective is for the victim to follow directives with no conscious awareness, including execution of acts in clear violation of the victim's moral principles, spiritual convictions, and volition.
> Installation of mind control programming relies on the victim's capacity to dissociate, which permits the creation of new walled-off personalities to "hold" and "hide" programming. Already dissociative children are prime "candidates" for programming.

To achieve this objective, programmers use a variety of horrific means, including forced sodomy, which in children can produce vaso-vagal shock and aid tremendously in splitting their personality.

And while we're on the subject of the horrible things adults do to children, would it be—given everything else we've discovered about this ritual and the others regarding name games, tributes, tips-of-the-hat, and pure mockery, as well as the use of mind-control techniques—too inappropriate to ask whether Christina-Taylor Green's last name was a purposeful reference to "Dr. Green," and, perhaps, the "Angel of Death" himself, Joseph Mengele?

One argument that absolutely cannot be raised against this line of inquiry is that it's too sick or twisted, because, as we've learned by now, there's nothing these baby-killing, child-raping sadistic Satanists won't do.

LEASHING THE ASSASSIN

On the subject of birthdays, shooter Jared Lee Loughner was born September 10, 1988 (can't have two 9/11 Birthday Boys—oh, wait, yes we can: Columbine gunman Dylan Klebold was born September 11, 1981); Loughner was reportedly obsessed with mind-control, and there might've been a real good reason for this, as we've already encountered solid evidence of psychological warfare tactics being employed throughout other aspects of this public ritual. (Interesting, that in his mug shot following the shooting, Loughner looked like he'd been on the receiving end of a massive dose of some psychotropic drug.)

There is other potential evidence that Loughner might have been the victim of a mind-control operation, but in the interests of keeping this as brief as possible and to avoid the tedium of having to sort through it all—in the end, there's no definitive proof, anyway, as is many times the case in situations like this—ask yourself this: if you were planning an occult public ritual and needed to make sure that your assassin showed up on location, on time and able to put bullets on target, would you not use whatever pharmacological and behavior-modification tools and techniques were at your disposal to insure a flawless performance? You bet your ass you would.

GABE AND GABBY

Another of Loughner's victims that morning was congressional aide Gabriel Zimmerman, Gabby Giffords' community outreach director and the first Congressional staffer killed in the line of duty.

Gabriel and Gabrielle, Gabe and Gabby—now, isn't that cute? And if you think it's just a coincidence, think again. Although referred to as a male in the Bible, the Archangel Gabriel is portrayed by New Agers as female or androgynous, so Gabriel, Gabrielle, what's the difference? We'll shoot 'em both.

The intended sacrilege: killing the exalted Messenger of God (oh, *Christ*ina was a bonus, too). Gabriel, whose name means "the strength of God," is one of three archangels mentioned in scripture and is variously identified as the archangel of Annunciation, Resurrection, Mercy, Revelation and Death. Christians and Muslims alike believe him to have foretold the births of John the Baptist to Zacharias and Jesus to the Virgin Mary. Muslims further believe that Gabriel was the medium through which God revealed the Quran to Muhammad over a period of 23 years—and also accompanied the Prophet on his "Night Journey"—and hold that Gabriel sent messages to most, if not all the prophets revealing their obligations.

In Jewish belief, Gabriel, as the Power of God, is regarded as the angel of judgment, and many Christians likewise believe that Gabriel will blow a sacred trumpet to signal the Last Judgment (quite appropriate, as 2012 was held to mark the End of the Age). Thus, although the primary affront was intended for the followers of Christ, this aspect of the Tucson Outer-Space MegaRitual in the end turned out to be an equal-opportunity insult to all three of the world's great religions.

To recap, then, the globalists popped a cap in the Messenger of God, who delivered the good news to Mary and is supposed to blow the Trumpet of the Apocalypse: this was the symbolic Killing of Gabriel, prefiguring the symbolic Killing of Christ affected on 12/25/12.

XX
JUDGEMENT.

The Janus Factor

Janus was also known as Janus Bifrons (Latin for "two-faced"), Bifrons later becoming the name of a demon known as the Earl of Hell, as well as one of the names reportedly given to Baphomet, whom you'll remember from Most Dangerous.

Christian author Texe Marrs refers to the "Janus Factor," which he asserts is the "Illuminati secret formula for world revolution and deceit"—"Satan's hidden method." (According to others, there also supposedly exists a super-secret organization called the Janus Group that utilizes highly-trained psychic assassins to eliminate enemies of the Illuminati—good luck confirming that one.)

Marrs contends that "throughout history, Janus operatives … have successfully employed the Janus method to psychically and culturally churn global events and overturn all standards of morality and human dignity." Janus-faced, two-faced: deceitful, treacherous, devious; saying one thing and doing another (Orwell's Newspeak, doublespeak), altering meanings to confound and confuse—you know, the standard operating procedure of the globalists. War is peace. Slavery is freedom. Ignorance is strength.

By reversing social norms and bringing society into chaos, a New World Order can thus emerge from the ashes. Ordo Ab Chao.[3]

ONWARD AND DOWNWARD

Janus the two-faced is not the only, or even the primary, symbol signifying domination through deception. No, there is another two-headed icon—and we're already familiar with the core underlying symbol—that holds the top spot as the signature of the Freemasonic-Illuminati elite, and we're about to makes its introduction.

They're on a Roll

There were rumors that Gabrielle Giffords may have been targeted for assassination due to her success in obtaining substantial funding to protect the Arizona border against incursions from Mexican drug cartels, or that Judge John Roll, named to the federal bench by President George H.W. Bush in 1991, may have been likewise targeted for opposing measures to ban gun ownership, purportedly a key feature of the New World Order's plans to disarm the population. Other rumors contended that Roll was killed barely 72 hours after making a critical ruling against the Obama administration.

There were also media reports indicating that Jared Loughner practiced Santa Muerte (Saint Death) cult rites as part of his practice of Grim Reaper Black Magic, and related speculation that Giffords and Roll were viewed as enemies of the sect and thus targeted for assassination.

Whether there is any substance to any of these allegations or not (can you say "information fog"?), you can be sure of one thing—the planners of the Tucson Ritual were on a roll, as in "Let's roll" and "Some Heads Are Gonna Roll," and they weren't about to let this opportunity to incorporate yet another reference slip through their fingers.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

THE JOKE'S ON US

"The more we do to you, the less you seem to believe we are doing it."

—Hauptsturmführer SS Dr. Josef Mengele

Friday, July 20th, 2012. Exactly one week before the London XXX Olympics' Opening Ceremony— wherein a 100-foot inflatable effigy of the Janus-inspired Lord Voldemort would tower over the participants and be broadcast to the four corners of the earth—Americans awoke to news of the worst mass shooting in U.S. history.

Former neuroscience doctoral candidate James Eagan Holmes (born December 13, 1987), dressed in full-body protective armor and a gas mask, had allegedly entered a midnight screening of the latest Batman film, The Dark Knight Rises, let loose with a couple of tear-gas grenades, and then opened fire on the audience with a variety of weapons, including an assault rifle and a shotgun—shooting or otherwise injuring over seventy people, killing 12 of those (13 if you count the fetus of the victim who miscarried as a result of her injuries).

Holmes was apprehended at the scene, and reportedly told police that he was "The Joker." Holmes' mug shot showed an orange-mop-topped, bug-eyed, expressionless individual whom most everyone was perfectly willing to believe was the purported crazed lone-wolf gunman. But before the smoke had even cleared, it was becoming abundantly evident—at least to those for whom the techno-hypnotic spell of media-driven false-flag terrorism and mass ritual had previously begun to wear off—that something, actually quite a few things, were amiss.

Crazy Talk

Now, certainly not every mass shooting that occurs is a public ritual or shadow-government-run, mind-control operation (or both). Sometimes individuals—deranged or otherwise—just lose it, and people die. The idea that some nutjob believed he was a villain from a comic book and went to a theater and shot a bunch of people is not terribly difficult to accept as an event that could occur without outside provocation or assistance. Crazy people do crazy things.

Sure, they do, but when Holmes told police he was the Joker, he wasn't talking about the comic book character—and the Dark Knight Rises alright, but it ain't Bruce Wayne in a bat costume.

Son of Aurora

If more Americans in those years had studied classical literature and mythology instead of watching endless hours of "Dancing with the Stars," "American Idol" and "America's Got Talent," the entire episode would've been exposed rather quickly for the occult charade it was. As things stood, however, practically nobody got the reference—as bold as it was and as obvious as it should have been.

The shooting had taken place in Colorado, in a city named Aurora (which, by way, is the birthplace of Skull & Bones member and 2004 Democratic Presidential Candidate John Kerry, as well as the home of Buckley Air Force Base). Unfortunately, many Americans would only have recognized that name as belonging to the Marvel Comics character who is the sister of Northstar and the former lover of Sasquatch (she has also had a relationship with Wild Child)—or, God forbid, as the title character from Disney's Sleeping Beauty.

Aurora, however, is also the name of the Roman goddess of the dawn. In Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet (I.i), Montague says of his lovesick son Romeo

But all so soon as the all-cheering sun
Should in the furthest east begin to draw
The shady curtains from Aurora's bed,
Away from the light steals home my heavy son…

More pertinently to our discussion, though, is that Aurora was also known as the Mother of Lucifer (the Latin word for Venus), the dawn star—Lucifer, the Light Bearer, born of the dawn, the Son of Aurora.

He's Such a Joker

Likewise, if more Americans pre-Black-Christmas had put their comic books down long enough to actually read something of substance, they might have learned that The Joker is not just Batman's arch nemesis, but is also a prime example of the evil clown—which has been called an icon of our times—whose roots lie in the archetypal trickster figure (think Thoth or Janus). They might have understood the relevance of this occult reference and properly viewed it as an invocation of these deities and their malevolent nature.

And if they'd really been serious about removing their heads from their backsides, who knows, our fellow citizens might have even discovered that The Joker[1] is also a persona, or alter (short for alternate personality), utilized in advanced mind-control programming. They might have even come to the realization that the entire incident had nothing whatsoever to do with Batman, and everything to do with keeping them in a state of constant fear and confusion. But such was not to be.

No, Seriously

In retrospect, it probably would have been just way too much to ask of the general public to get their faces out of their iPhones and iPads and consider the date on which the slaughter occurred. Having already missed the Mother of Lucifer and the Trickster, why would they have bothered to notice that July 20th is, on the Satanic calendar, the start of the Grand Climax, which, among other things, requires human sacrifice? I mean, there are all the ingredients for a nice public ritual sitting out on the table, and everyone just walks right past asking, What's for supper?

Since they didn't have a clue about The Joker as a mind-control programming tool, they had no idea that when James Holmes told police that he was The Joker, he was entirely serious. He wasn't referring to the Batman villain, or even

Holmes was allegedly dressed as a police SWAT officer—the bad guy dressed as one of the good guys, an intentional and purposefully-harmful reversal of expectations and meaning (where have we seen that before?)—except that the assailant was also wearing a gas mask. No one actually saw his face as he did the shooting.

In any case, movie goers had at first assumed that the figure dressed in black battle gear was part of some special gimmick related to the movie, until, that is, he began firing live rounds. Confuse them, defy their expectations, then slaughter them.

Of course, the classic reports of multiple shooters emerged almost immediately from eyewitnesses, conflicting with official accounts of a lone-wolf assassin. How ironic, too, various observers commented, that the worst mass shooting in U.S. history took place less than 20 miles from Columbine, site of the deadliest shooting at an American high school. *Yeah, what a f*cking coincidence.*

It was probably just happenstance, too, that the shooting took place less than 20 miles from the Denver International Airport, which with its bizarre murals and Masonic symbols, plays a key role in many New World Order conspiracy theories (according to some, there are miles of secret tunnels and numerous well-appointed bunkers beneath the airport). Aurora, gateway city to Denver, Capitol of the New World Order?

Finally, recalling the multiple drills on both 9/11 and 7/7 that involved wildly-similar, if not identical, scenarios to those which unfolded (and, in a number of instances, the actual locations where the real events occurred), you won't be at all surprised to learn that on the same day that the Aurora massacre took place, Rocky Vista University College of Osteopathic Medicine in nearby Parker, Colorado, held specialized classes in disaster life-support for 150 second-year medical students that included the scenario of a mass shooting at a movie theater. "The irony is amazing, just amazing," commented Rocky Vista Dean Dr. Bruce Dubin in an interview following the shooting. Amazing, my ass—there's always a drill.

to The-Joker-as-Trickster—he meant exactly what he said: "I'm the Joker." Holmes persona was that of the programmed alter called "The Joker," which was activated either to perpetrate the worst mass shooting in American history, or to serve as the innocent patsy for the same.

INVOLUNTARY PARTICIPANTS?

As with Jared Loughner, the alleged shooter in the Gabby Giffords incident, the suspect in this case didn't simply look psychotic, but had the appearance and behavior of someone who'd been pumped full of a cocktail of psychotropic drugs. In his police photo and in subsequent court appearances, Holmes appeared to be completely dissociated from reality.

He had reportedly been seeing a psychiatrist, Dr. Lynne Fenton, to whom Holmes sent a notebook containing all sorts of incriminating writings and drawings (how convenient). The doctor herself apparently had an interesting background, as well, with some conspiracy researchers claiming that she had connections with government mind-control programs. (If you'll recall, Loughner was near-obsessed with the subject of government mind control and appeared to be drugged out of his gourd in his own mug shot.)

In light of these observations, it is of particular interest that in November 2011, lawyers for alleged assassin Sirhan Sirhan argued in federal court that he "was an involuntary participant in the crimes being committed because he was subjected to sophisticated hypno programming and memory implantation techniques which rendered him un-

Movies and Mind Control: A Brief History

L. Frank Baum, author of The Wizard of Oz, was an ardent occultist and an initiate in the Theosophic Society, and his tale of Dorothy and Toto was rich in esoteric references and occult symbology. So much so, in fact, that if conspiracy theorists' descriptions of U.S. intelligence mind-control programs (such as MK-Ultra, Project Bluebird, etc.) are accurate, the film was one of a number of motion pictures chosen to provide a thematic foundation for their trauma-based mind-control experiments in the 1940s (and beyond).

The Wizard of Oz, and other similar films such as Alice in Wonderland, are reportedly used by programmers to create a "common programming matrix" utilizing the movies' themes, imagery and music. Often referred to as Monarch programming, this approach allows handlers to create triggers in subjects' minds enabling access to multiple levels of their personality, which have been split through a process known as dissociation—the result of systematic and highly-traumatic physical and psychological torture, often involving terrifying occult rituals. "Over the rainbow," or "through the looking glass," is where the subjects must go in order to escape the unbearable pain being inflicted upon them. Once a split in the core personality is achieved, alter personas can be programmed through audio and visual aids.

able to consciously control his thoughts and actions at the time the crimes were being committed," according to court papers.

So if Loughner or Holmes wants to lodge a complaint about being forcibly subjected to mind-control techniques, they'll have to get in line behind Sirhan, who's been there quite a while. Please pass the Haldol.

CONSPIRACIES'R'US

The plethora of conspiracy theories that have already cropped up around this incident is seemingly indicative (as with other black ops, including 9/11) of misinformation and disinformation campaigns associated with psychological warfare. Sure, there probably are genuine tantalizing and ingeniously-devised connections to a variety of suspicion-arousing government agencies and educational institutions, but the sheer number of the conspiracy theories would also tend to support the presence of an active nonsense-dissemination program.

Without attempting to determine the validity or significance of the following claims in any way, we can note in advance the presence of numerous pieces of information that do seem to fit within the pattern of evidence and/or disinformation surrounding similar events:

- James Holmes had been a research intern at the Salk Institute at the University of California at San Diego, which had previously partnered with DARPA (the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency) on projects related to DARPA's "Peak Soldier Performance Program." Some consider this "Super Soldier" program as part of a broader, secretly-coordinated effort that is moving the world ever-closer towards an era of trans-humanism.

- Holmes' paternal grandfather had connections to the CIA through the Army Language School, now the Defense Language Institute.

- Dan Oates, Aurora's chief of police at the time of the massacre, worked as head of intelligence for the New York Police Department up until almost immediately before the attacks of September 11, 2001.

- Holmes went to tremendous effort to rig his entire apartment with numerous explosive devices (including more than 30 homemade grenades and 10 gallons of gasoline), then very uncharacteristically left loud music playing, ostensibly to annoy neighbors and attract the authorities, who would then be blown to smithereens. Yet, when apprehended, Holmes told police that he had booby-trapped his apartment (he shoots 70 people and then has a change of heart?)

- James Holmes' father, Robert, was involved with fraud investigation, loosely paralleling a plotline in The Dark Knight Rises in which the character Bane secures software that he uses to expose Wall Street fraud. Robert Holmes was supposedly scheduled to testify before Congress on a major banking scandal (pphhht), and also worked earlier in his career for HNC, a company with DARPA connections (hmmm).

- Holmes reportedly told police that he'd taken 100mg of the painkiller Vicodin before the shootings. This same drug was found in the blood of actor Heath Ledger, who portrayed The Joker in The Dark Knight, following what was officially determined to be an accidental overdose in 2008 (conspiracy theorists think otherwise, but of course they would, wouldn't they?).

Last but not least, James Holmes was reportedly awarded a $26,000 stipend by the National Institutes of Health to help cover graduate school expenses. Some conspiracy researchers have claimed that Holmes used these funds to purchase all of the necessary equipment for his shooting rampage—an unlikely assertion, but good fodder for the rumor mill just the same (and isn't that what really counts?).

WHAT'S IN A NAME? (AURORA EDITION)

Lee Harvey Oswald and Jared Lee Loughner, Sirhan Sirhan, Jack Ruby—sometimes within the names of the alleged perpetrators of infamous crimes (that in many instances turn out to have been the result of active conspiracies), we find odd similarities, interesting clues and seeming hints. Sometimes our intuitions about these things turn out to be nothing after all, and sometimes this line of inquiry leads us places we'd never expect.

James Eagan Holmes—nothing sinister-sounding or terribly odd about that name. So why bother dissecting it? Given that we already suspect that Holmes was a patsy, it's interesting to note that James means "he who supplants (takes the place of)." Eagan as a boy's name is Irish or Gaelic in origin and means "fire," and Holmes is a variant of the surname Holme, which is derived from a name for someone who lived next to a holly tree (from the Middle English holm).

Holmes was either set up to take the fall for the real shooter(s), or was subconsciously coerced into undertaking the task himself. The entire incident has all the hallmarks of the type of occult ritual frequented upon the American public by the Illuminati, whose symbol is the Torch of Illumination (or the Fire of Prometheus, take your pick). The whole thing looks like any number of other media-generated occult affairs/illusions—a Hollywood creation, if you will, with the name "Hollywood" deriving from the traditional use of the wood of a holly tree in the making of magic wands.

Holmes was a patsy, set up by the Illuminati, who brought us this dark Hollywood production—we already knew that much. Having the patsy's name spell it out for us and using his signature as an Illuminati signature? That's a real nice touch.

FORESHADOWING BLACK CHRISTMAS

On July 27th, 2012, one week to the day after the Colorado shooting, a giant inflatable Lord Voldemort did rise quite literally at the Opening Ceremony of the London Olympics. Considering this fact, the hidden message conveyed by the Colorado shooting, "Born of Aurora, the Dark Knight Rises," might seem to have a dual meaning.

As an occult statement, Lucifer Rises is fairly straightforward; yet, it raises the question, When? Are we to understand that Lucifer arose on July 20th, 2012, or that the Aurora tragedy foreshadowed or foretold the rising of the Inflatable Dark Lord a week later—or both? And what the hell does any of this have to do with Black Christmas?

Shooting up a theatre full of innocent civilians is all sport and fun and racks up points with the Big Guy to be certain (as does sending aloft a Super-Sized Blow-Up Beezlebub in front of a global television audience of billions), but neither of these acts is by any means a fitting manner in which to welcome the very presence of the Dark Lord into our world. That requires far more thought and planning, and a far greater sacrifice—along the lines of a nuclear holocaust.

So, where's the connection to Black Christmas? Where do we often find these figurative connections but encapsulated in real connective structures, roadways: U.S. Route 77, Arizona State Highway 77, U.S. Route 93. And just what happens to run almost directly in front of the Century 16 Theater—Interstate 225, I-225.

I-225? Come on. To get 12/25 out of that, you have to drop the dash and make the capitalized "i" a one: I-225→I225→1225→12/25. Not exactly algebra, but a bit of a stretch all the same, isn't it? Actually, it's not that much of a stretch—I-225 as a symbolic marker for 12/25, the biggest date in Illuminati history…I mean, unless you're grading super-strict, you have to give points for that. If you know the answer is 12/25, and the question is, What does I-225 represent?, you'd have to be an absolute dipshit not to get that one right. (Hey, if you want another Aurora-Christmas connection, try this one: Christmas Carols have been utilized quite extensively in the programming of Monarch mind-control subjects…Jingle bells, shotgun shells, shoot 'em in the face...)

The Joker

The Joker is based on the Tarot card, the Fool, one of the 22 Trump cards that make up the Major Arcana. The Fool is often numbered as zero (logical associations: counting down to zero, Ground Zero.)

So, we're supposed to believe that the full message conveyed by this occult ritual was: the Son of Aurora, the Dark Lord, rises on 12/25? Well, he did, after all, didn't he?

Not Believing is Not Seeing

Aurora was a mass sacrifice, it was a shadow-government-orchestrated mind-control operation, it was dark satire and blatant mockery—it was everything we've come to expect, and yet, we never put the pieces of the puzzle together for a lack of real knowledge, and, as importantly, for a lack of belief in the existence of real evil.

We cannot see the New World Order if we do not believe it exists: it is this truth wherein our adversaries rest completely assured of their victory.

> "The best political weapon is the weapon of terror. Cruelty commands respect. Men may hate us. But, we don't ask for their love; only for their fear."
> —Reichsfuhrer SS Heinrich Himmler

I Love You

The Century 16 Theatre where the shooting took place in Aurora is located at 14300 E. Alameda Avenue. Century 16…100, 16…116—if you were so inclined, you might see that as the inverse of 911. But that's a stretch if you ask me, and in any case you're missing the real message here.

According to UrbanDictionary.com, 143 means "I love you': 1 represents the single letter "I", 4 represents the four letters in "love", and 3 "you". American R&B/soul singer-songwriter Musiq even wrote a song entitled "143":

> …'Cause listen
> There aren't many more ways and words that I can say
> So I chose to tell you how I feel in a numerical way
> Got so tired of trying to find the most complicated ways
> To say it to you so I simplified and broke it down in 143
> And that means I love you
> Sugar, you know, yeah, yeah, yeah, yeah, yeah yeah

Interestingly enough, the origin of using 143 as numerical shorthand for "I love you" lies in Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood, where Fred Rogers first demonstrated the concept. According to a TV Guide article, Rogers was so taken with the idea that he maintained his weight at exactly 143 pounds for the last thirty years of his life.

143, "I love you". 14300, "I love you" x 100. It's a beautiful day in the neighborhood …

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

COUP DE GRAS: THE PHOENIX AND THE 33

You can't have this kind of war. There just aren't enough bulldozers to scrape the bodies off the streets.

—Dwight D. Eisenhower, remarking on the use of nuclear weapons

We're all exhausted and running low on patience: the road to Phoenix has been a long and ugly one, littered with bodies and ill omens galore; yet, if there's a single ounce of doubt in your mind as to who's responsible for the 2012 Black Christmas XXX Galactic MegaRitual, this one image will put you out of your misery—although not immediately, and not for the reasons you might expect.

At this point, you may be feeling a little like poor Ralphie Parker in the holiday classic movie, A Christmas Story, who drinks gallons of Ovaltine so that he can get his Little Orphan Annie secret decoder pen, only to decipher the encrypted message and discover that it's "A crummy commercial? Son of a bitch!"

You work all the way through this perverted grimoire with the promise of revelation—of absolute proof—and all you get is a lousy two-headed eagle? Patience.

TWO HEADS ARE BETTER THAN ONE

The eagle itself has been used from time immemorial to represent such ideas as nobility and just rulership, and the double-headed eagle is a common symbol in heraldry and vexillology (the study of the history, symbolism and usage of flags), being most closely associated with the Byzantine Empire, the Holy Roman Empire and Russia.

The symbol of the double-headed eagle has been in use for millennia, and has been found in the archaeological remains of both the Sumerian and Hittite civilizations. In Byzantine heraldry, the two heads of the eagle represent the dual sovereignty of the Emperor (secular and religious) and/or the dominance of the Byzantine Emperors over both East and West. In the heraldry of the Holy Roman Empire, the heads represented the Church and the State.

Use by Freemasons

FREEMASONS

The Double-Headed Eagle of Lagash, as it is known within the Craft, is used as an emblem by the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry. Some researchers believe that Masonic use of the double-headed eagle derives from an early European rite of degrees called the Order of the Royal Secret, from which the Scottish Rite descended, which used the symbol as a heraldic device, having likely appropriated it from the Roman Empire.

Writing in The Chain of Union: Journal of Symbolic and Masonic Studies, Pierre Mollier informs us in his article entitled, “The Double-Headed Eagle: Iconographic Sources of the Masonic Symbol,” that “the double-headed eagle, an image of chivalry and sovereignty belonging to the shared imagery of Western symbolism … appeared in Masonry in France in the early years of the 1760s with the degree of Knight Kadosh or Grand Inspector Grand Elect (G.I.G.E.).”[1]

But this tells us nothing of why they selected the symbol or what it represents to them.

Two Heads are Worse than One

It would be easy to understand the eagle’s appeal to the Freemasons as a sign of rulership, particularly in its two-headed form signifying dominance over East and West, church and state. But we must be careful not to confuse the symbol and its exoteric (public, outer) interpretation with its esoteric (inner, secret) interpretation and what it means within the context of Freemasonry.

What the double-headed eagle represents to the uninitiated may be different from what it represents to rank-and-file Freemasons, which may again be different from what it signifies within the highest degrees of Freemasonry—which may be yet again different from what it means to the orchestrators of Black Christmas, who have not yet been proven beyond a reasonable doubt to be one-and-the-same with the previous category.

Birds of a Feather?

We are already familiar with the Egyptian bennu, which was that ancient culture's representation of the mythical phoenix. Do we find here a similar substitution of the real for the mythical, of a real bird for a mythical one: have we any contemporary sources of support for drawing such a conclusion? To be certain—none other than Manly P. Hall in his book, The Secret Teachings of All Ages, tells us that, "The American eagle upon the Great Seal [of the United States] is but a conventionalized phoenix."

The Freemason's double-headed eagle could in actuality then be a double-headed phoenix, and we are well aware of the symbolic significance of its single-headed cousin: as a sign of immortality in the ancient Mystery Schools, as a "sign of the secret orders of the ancient world and of the initiate of those orders" (Hall, The Phoenix), and as a sign of one "twice-born"—even, to some, as a sign of Lucifer himself (and his followers, those twice-born of hell).

Yet, before drawing any firm conclusions, let's examine additional elements of this symbol.

DEUS MEUMQUE JUS

The 33 and the Triangle

Writing in The Secret Teachings of All Ages, Manly P. Hall asks the reader to "… consider the number 33. The first temple of Solomon stood for thirty-three years in its pristine splendor… Also King David ruled for thirty-three years in Jerusalem; the Masonic Order is divided into thirty-three symbolic degrees; there are thirty-three segments in the human spinal column; and Jesus was crucified in the thirty-third year of His life." (There were also 33 passengers on Flight 93…which departed from Gate A17.)

The number 33 having tremendous occult significance and the highest degree of Freemasonry being the 33rd, we find the number emblazoned upon the emblem of that degree. Not only that, but we also find it contained within a triangle, representative of the pyramid, which, if you'll remember from Most Dangerous, may be considered as the ultimate symbol of the Mysteries, and as a symbol of illumination.

DEUS MEUMQUE JUS

DEUS MEUMQUE JUS

Above the bird's two heads we observe a crown, and in its claws, a sword, which would seem to have the obvious connotations of sovereignty and rule-by-force. We also find a banner bearing the phrase, Deus Meumque Jus, which is generally translated as, "God and my right" or, less frequently, as "God and my moral rightness."

Freemasons would assert that this refers to their right to worship and respect God in any manner they so choose, as well as to their duty to defend and respect the religious beliefs of others.

Yet, might an alternative interpretation be, My rights are granted by my god; or, much more sinisterly, My rights are granted by my god, Lucifer, who gives me license to do whatever I wish? This would certainly be in keeping with the distorted concept of liberty we encountered in Most Dangerous: not "liberty and justice for all," but rather the liberty to do as we damn well please—freedom from God, granted by the light-bearer who frees us from the unnatural constraints of artificial morality. "Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the law."

THERE WILL BE BLOOD

A double-headed phoenix, the number 33 … Phoenix, Arizona, lying along the 33rd parallel … Charleston, South Carolina, birthplace of the Freemasonic "Mother Lodge of the World," (and the site of the beginning of the Civil War at Fort Sumter in Charleston Harbor, as well as of the Concelebration of the enthroning of Lucifer in the Vatican) likewise at the 33rd parallel … the Trinity nuclear test site in the Jornada del Muerto ("Journey of Death") desert of New Mexico, on the 33rd parallel … Harry S. Truman, 33rd Degree Freemason and 33rd President, who authorized the use of nuclear weapons on civilian populations … Nagasaki and Hiroshima, straddling the 33rd parallel …

Freemasons, nuclear weapons, and the 33rd parallel—they go together, well, like Christmas and Santa Claus, a notion reinforced by former Sirhan Sirhan attorney Day Williams, who writes in "Masons and Mystery at the 33rd Parallel": "If a life is taken close to the … 33rd Parallel, this fits with the Masons' demonic mythology in which they demonstrate their worldly power by spilling human blood at a predetermined locale."

Yet, before we grab the torches and pitchforks and impugn the entire venerable institution of Freemasonry, we must still answer the question: is that damn bird a double-headed phoenix or not? Because if not, our whole line of reasoning begins to break down.

The Symbol's True Identity

In "The Two-Headed Eagle of the Ancient and Accepted Rite," Masonic writer Dr. Chetwode Crawley reaffirms the antiquity of this symbol, writing,

> This Double-headed Eagle of Lagash is the oldest Royal Crest in the world. As time rolled on, it passed from the Sumerians to the men of Akhad, from the men of Akhad to the Hittites, from the denizens of Asia Minor to the Seljukian Sultans, from whom it was brought by Crusaders to the Emperors of the East and West, whose successors to-day are the Hapsburgs and the Romanoffs, as well as to the Masonic "Emperors of the East and West," whose successors to-day are the Supreme Councils, 33°, that have inherited the insignia of the Rite of Perfection.[2]

Others, including the illustrious Albert Pike, held the view that the origins of the two-headed bird ultimately derived from the arcane symbolism of alchemy, which portrays a wide variety of two-headed beings often symbolizing the union of opposites. (One might also think of the symbol as representing two-birds-in-one, such as the Shen-Shen and the Rech from Chapter 12, but I just sorta made that up so you shouldn't put a lot of stock in that interpretation.)

> The double-headed eagle as an alchemical symbol illustrates the hermetic and alchemical axiom SOLVE et COAGULA," writes 32° Masonic author Gregory H. Peters in "Solve et Coagula: Alchemical Symbolism of the Double-Headed Eagle," which is, "the process of separating the elements and then bringing them together after purification and consecration.[3]

Peters continues, highlighting the ultimate aim of alchemy, the transmutation of man: "The double headed-eagle, as the ensign of the Alchemical Rebus or Stone of the Philosophers, symbolizes this process, the magnum opus or Great Work of spiritual regeneration. Through its unification of opposites and association with alchemical Fire, the path of regeneration and ascent up the Tree of Life is indicated."

The double-headed black eagle, to be precise, was indeed a principal motif in early alchemical literature, at times being equated with the Philosopher's Stone and thus properly viewed as a symbol of the Great Work itself—and the two-headed bird of the Freemasons is, in fact, a double-headed black eagle, not a double-headed phoenix, despite Dan Brown's repeated assertions in The Lost Symbol, in which he references the double-headed phoenix as the emblem of the highest degree of Freemasonry a reported 13 times. (The Freemasonic bird, particularly in the United States, is frequently represented as a two-headed bald eagle for obvious reasons—don't get hung up on it.)

So, if the glove don't fit ... not so fast.

A Dark Design

The symbolism is too perfect, the design too darkly beautiful, too brilliant—this is not by chance.

The phoenix and Phoenix, the 33 and the 33rd parallel: this was a symbol brought to life. We can be certain that the double-headed eagle represented a double-headed phoenix—but if not to the Freemasons, then to whom?

The phoenix is a symbol of illumination, of the illumined ones, the Illuminati, long rumored to have taken shelter within the upper echelons of Freemasonry to escape persecution and detection by cloaking themselves within the fraternity's hierarchy of secrecy: A Luciferic elite existing among the highest degree of the Craft (though not involving all 33rd degree Masons by any means)—just as was said to be the case with Albert Pike's supposedly-fictitious Palladian Rite, and just as is said to be the case within the highest levels of the Vatican.

Das hailig Römisch reich

Gedruckt zů Augspurg durch

The two-headed phoenix is their symbol, with its own meaning, distinct from that of the double-headed black eagle that is its exoteric identity. It is a symbol within a symbol.

It bears the intent of two-faced Janus, domination by deception, with a twist: rule by duplicity through violence, and, more specifically—particularly with relation to 9/11 and Black Christmas—through fire. Fire is the transformative agent responsible for the demise of the phoenix at the end of its life-cycle, which prepares the way for the creature to rise anew. Fire is light and heat, the gift of Prometheus to mankind: it represents the true light of illumination bequeathed to mankind by Lucifer, the true universal savior.

The Handwriting's on the Wall

The double-headed phoenix might also be considered as a signature in both space and time, with a formulation along these lines: the phoenix –> Christ –> Phoenix, AZ; 33 –> the number of Christ, his age at death–> 33rd parallel…or something like that. In any case, both the phoenix and the 33 reference Christ, and they both reference Phoenix, AZ: Christ/Christmas + Phoenix. Oh, and fire: phoenix –> fire; thus, Christ/Christmas + Phoenix + all-consuming fire. Think of it as shorthand for psychopathic slaughterers of the innocent.

Considering the above, and that we already know this to be a XXX MegaRitual, what are we to make of this piece of graffiti, found in numerous locations throughout downtown Phoenix in the aftermath of Black Christmas: "PhoeniXmas"?

First, who the hell goes around scrawling graffiti in a nuclear hot zone? Second, it doesn't on the surface seem to say anything—what's the point? What anarchist punk is going to risk his life to scrawl meaningless messages on blackened concrete walls?

Who, then? You know who, because this is no pointless spray-painted adolescent brain fart: PhoeniX + X-Mas = PhoeniXmas, pinpointing the location of Black Christmas, again in both space and time…X marks the spot! (Oh, and by the way, you can X Christmas off the calendar for the foreseeable future.)

As the Luciferic Illuminati pervert and distort all religious symbols to serve and reflect their sinister intentions and purposes, here, too, have they subsumed the emblem of the Freemason's highest order, the double-headed eagle, employing it as the ultimate symbol of death and destruction.

The Not-So-Great Work

In the legend, out of the flames arises a new phoenix, and out of the flames and chaos of Phoenix has arisen the long-awaited New World Order: this is not the redeeming Biblical resurrection, but a resurrection of evil in its full hideous glory.

They invoke the opposite of the Great Work, the inverse of the spiritual transformation of mankind: they seek to thwart God's plan for the progressive enlightenment of man's soul. This concerns the resurrection of man all right, but the re-creation of mankind as technologically-, pharmacologically-, genetically-manipulated mind-controlled slaves, awaiting the bidding of their dark masters. This is the demonic transmutation of the species through fear, terror, torment and torture, the establishment of a mechanistic Ahrimanic paradise.

Theirs is a supernaturally-informed scientific system of oppression that could actually be viewed as an advanced form of witchcraft, rooted in alchemy and magic, designed for a single unified purpose: full-spectrum dominance, total control of humanity's physical, psychological, emotional and spiritual selves.

THY WILL BE DONE

According to the age-old plan of the Illuminati, God shall be diminished and Lucifer exalted in the minds of man, which is only fitting from their perspective, as the Bible is a fiction, and in truth, Lucifer is God. It is they who are the true light-workers, setting mankind free from the tyranny of the mind Christianity has held them under for 2,000 years.

They offer us a new take on the hermetic wisdom, As Above, So Below. Their interpretation is more readily understood by reversing, as is their practice, this sacred formulation, yielding: As Below, So Above—as in hell, so on earth. Thy will be done, on earth, as it is in hell.

THE MASCOT OF BLACK CHRISTMAS

The emblem of the 33rd degree of Freemasonry was ingeniously employed by the Illuminati, hiding behind a veil of tradition and secrecy, as an in-plain-sight signature of authorship, an in-your-face claim of responsibility for the heinous crimes of Black Christmas.

To them, the Double-Headed Black Eagle of Lagash—as it represents a monstrous two-faced, ill-tempered, self-immolating, self-resurrecting rapacious beast of prey—is truly a fitting symbol for Lucifer, the Light-bearer, reborn, newly ascendant after having been unjustly cast down from heaven in the days of old.

The Black Phoenix, if you will, was the mascot of Black Christmas, a celebration of the Dawning of the Age of Lucifer, involving a mass sacrifice by fire—and not just any old fire, but rather the fire of creation, the fire at the heart of all matter, the fire at the heart of the sun, nuclear fire. Using the power of the sun to perform a ritual mega-sacrifice in honor of the first dawn rising of the sun of the new Great Age—and, more importantly, in honor of the True Illuminator of Mankind, for which our sun is merely a symbol, a pale representation of the full glory of Lucifer—now that's occult genius.

The phoenix, once a symbol of Christ, was destroyed in the "person" of Phoenix, Arizona, and born anew as the black phoenix, the symbol of Lucifer and the New World Order. This was the Killing of Christ, without the subsequent resurrection and ascension; the message: there is no hope in Christ, Lucifer is the re-born Savior.

Universal Motion, the Great Secret and the Royal Secret

In regard to the "Sublime Mysteries of the Illuminati's Double-headed Eagle," Texe Marrs wrote that "Illuminists refer to the 'Universal Motion' of forces that will annihilate the world as we know it, giving rise to the New Age New Order led by Satan and his Illuminati chiefs."

The long-held "Great Secret" of the illumined ones is, in fact, that the God of the Mysteries, the God of cunning, lies and deceit, the two-faced deity, is Lucifer in disguise; and the exalted "Royal Secret," the Illuminati's core doctrine, their cardinal teaching, is that out of bloody, universal chaos will ultimately arise equilibrium and the Holy Empire of the Illuminati, to be ruled by the cabalistic Messiah, the Anti-Christ.[4]

Have we not, God help us, witnessed the fulfillment of these things in our time?

No Way Out

What now, fellow travelers? Just because we brave few have pulled back the curtain on the wizard in the Land of AZ doesn't mean he's lost any of his power.

Reality, harsh reality, dominates—our precious, hard-won knowledge has no audience, and no means to reach them even if there were one. No one now cares, or is able to care, who did what or knew what when, who's responsible and who's not. Just protect us.

Absolute uncertainty and total fear grip the mass mind. Black Christmas was a massive trauma-based Monarch-Green mind-control operation, psychological warfare on a global scale. And it was a complete success: the collective consciousness has been splintered into so many parts that it could never form a coherent thought, much less a thought of resistance; it's many individual split

Now We Are All Sons of Bitches

J. Robert Oppenheimer, often called the “father of the atomic bomb” for his key role in the Manhattan Project, recalled that while watching the first test of a nuclear weapon at the Trinity site in New Mexico, he was reminded of a line from the Bhagavad Gita, a Hindu scripture: Now I am become Death, the destroyer of worlds.

After witnessing the incredible explosion, test director Kenneth Bainbridge turned to Oppenheimer and established a legendary saying of his own, commenting, “Now we are all sons of bitches,” which Oppenheimer later stated was the best thing anyone said immediately following the test.

“Trinity” was the project code name for the first detonation of a nuclear device, and although the exact origin of the name is somewhat unclear, it is often attributed to Robert Oppenheimer as a reference to the poetry of John Donne. In 1962, in his response to a letter inquiring about the matter, Oppenheimer wrote,

> Why I chose the name is not clear, but I know what thoughts were in my mind. There is a poem of John Donne, written just before his death, which I know and love. From it a quotation: “As West and East / In all flatt Maps—and I am one—are one, / So death doth touch the Resurrection.” That still does not make a Trinity, but in another, better known devotional poem Donne opens, “Batter my heart, three person’d God.”

Now, you can take the man at his word if you want to (I personally can’t make a whole lot of sense out of his comment), but it is certainly worth noting that it was Oppenheimer himself who recorded for posterity his thoughts at the moment of the explosion itself: “Now I am become Death, the destroyer of worlds.”

This fact is of more than mere passing interest, considering that the third person of the Hindu “Great Trinity” is Śhiva the destroyer, whose symbol, like Satan, is the trident, a fire symbol. Remember, too, from Most Dangerous, that “The illustration for The Tower [tarot card] in Aleister Crowley’s Book of Thoth shows the eye of Shiva opening at the top: reality is the dream of Shiva, and when he awakens, all is destroyed.”

Could the Father of the Atomic Bomb truly not remember where he got the inspiration for the project name, or perhaps he just thought it better to keep it to himself. Might Oppenheimer have been drawing on the same source of inspiration as the planners of other “major projects”: Dealey Plaza is less than 3,000 feet from the Trinity River; Trinity Church (on Trinity Place) in downtown Manhattan is less than 1,000 feet from where the Twin Towers stood; and, wouldn’t ya know, the Trinity Cathedral at 100 W. Roosevelt Street in downtown Phoenix was well within the blast radius (although it was not completely destroyed and, again, as with 44 Monroe, its hulking shell was frequently used by the media as a visual reference point in the now-unrecognizable cityscape).

In the end, after all the mockery, all the pain and suffering, all the occult devices and rituals, all the carnage, perhaps Trinity test director Kenneth Bainbridge’s immortal words are in fact the best that we can hope for in describing our own situation: Now we are all sons of bitches.

selves, created through mass trauma, now individually await their instructional programming—I'll do whatever you say, just don't let them hurt me.

As enlightening as our post-apocalyptic journey of discovery may have been, it gains us nothing. The machinery of tyranny is running full tilt—it will grind us up and spit us out if we dare open our mouths. At this point, mere knowledge is worthless: resistance is futile.

All that we can do now that we could not do before is to call our masters by name. We have once again participated in the after-the-fact "Revelation of the Method," further enabling, as Michael Hoffman warned us about in Most Dangerous, our own enslavement.

Foreknowledge: would it have done us any good? Likely not, but it would have been nice to have the opportunity to find out. Now it's too late. We have no ruby slippers.

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

PRESCOTT, GERONIMO AND SKULL & BONES

Less than 100 miles north of Phoenix lies Prescott, Arizona, named in honor of prominent 19th century historian William Hickling Prescott. In 1869, James G. Sheldon, a settler from Maine, was killed by Apaches at Camp Willow Grove, located west of the town of Prescott.

During World War I, six young men from Yale University were serving as Army volunteers at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, which is home to the Apache Indian Prisoner of War Cemetery. During their time there, it is alleged that they stole the skull, and at least one bone (along with a few other items) of famed Apache warrior Geronimo. Remembered as one of the last Native American leaders to hold out against the US government, Geronimo evaded capture for years and eventually surrendered in Skeleton Canyon, Arizona, in 1886.

These six men were all members of the Yale secret society Skull & Bones, among them a purported distant relative of William Prescott himself: his name, Prescott Sheldon Bush, who later became a U.S. Senator and was the father of President George H.W. Bush and the grandfather of President George W. Bush, both Bonesmen themselves.

While it is not known whether Prescott Sheldon Bush was also a distant relative of James Sheldon (after whom a major street in Prescott was named), avenging his death decades after the fact, what is known is that Geronimo's great-grandson, Harlyn Geronimo of Mescalero, New Mexico, appealed to Prescott Bush's grandson, George W., while he was President, requesting his help in securing the return of his relative's remains. Speaking to a reporter covering the story, Mr. Geronimo said,

> I am requesting his help in getting the remains—the skull and the femur—returned, if they were taken. According to our traditions the remains of this sort, especially in this state when the grave was desecrated ... need to be reburied with the proper rituals. To return the dignity and let his spirits rest in peace ... is important in our tradition.

Sorry, Harlyn, but Skull & Bones reportedly has a tradition of its own, and it involves kissing a skull, referred to as "Geronimo."

TRUE OR FALSE

In 2009, a lawsuit was filed on behalf of individuals claiming to be Geronimo's descendants—against, among others, Barack Obama, Robert Gates and Skull & Bones—requesting the return of Geronimo's remains, although the plaintiffs' attorney acknowledged that he had no hard proof that the story of their theft was even true.

Various investigators have rejected the story as false, and a Fort Sill spokesman stated, "There is no evidence to indicate that the bones are anywhere but in the grave site." The chairman of the Fort Sill Apache tribe of Oklahoma also calls the story a hoax.

However, in 1986, a former chairman of the San Carlos Apache had received an anonymous letter with a photograph and copy of a ledger claiming that Skull & Bones was indeed in possession of the remains. The Bonesmen's attorney denied the claim and said the ledger was a hoax, and then, quite oddly, offered to return what appeared to be the skull of a child, which was refused.

Then, in 2006, a letter written in 1918 by a Skull & Bones member was discovered which appeared to openly claim credit for the theft:

> The skull of the worthy Geronimo the Terrible, exhumed from its tomb at Fort Sill by your club... is now safe inside the [society's] tomb and bone together with his well worn femurs, bit and saddle horn.

An Outrageous Insult

Regardless of whether Skull & Bones has Geronimo's remains or not, in 2011 the U.S. military decided that "Geronimo" would be a fitting codename for the raid to capture yet another highly-elusive fugitive from American justice, Osama bin Laden (some reports stated that the name referred to the overall operation; others, to bin Laden himself; and, yet others, to the act of killing or capturing the terrorist leader).

Many Native Americans understandably objected to the selection of the name for the operation, with the president of one advocacy group observing, "It's how deeply embedded the 'Indian as enemy' is in the collective mind of America," and Harlyn Geronimo telling the Senate Commission on Indian Affairs that it was an "outrageous insult."

The End of the bin Laden Fairy Tale

What no one realized was that "Operation Geronimo" was designed as an "outrageous insult" to all of us, and represented the closing of one of the main chapters in the whole 9/11 work of fiction, that of Osama bin Laden as the Islamic-radical boogeyman (CIA-trained, nonetheless, with family connections to the Bushes), whom the combined decade-long efforts of the largest and most-sophisticated intelligence services in the world had somehow failed to locate.

The partially-botched raid had all the tell-tale signs of being yet another made-for-reality-TV production, complete with continually-changing details and lies within lies (as well as related follow-up drama), from bin Laden being buried at sea "according to Muslim tradition," which it's sure the hell not, to Secretary of State Hilary Clinton claiming to be covering her mouth as she sneezed in a photo taken in one of the White House's situation rooms, when it was obvious she was somewhat aghast at something she was viewing.

UNITED STATES
SECRET SERVICE

Whether bin Laden was actually killed during the raid, or, as some conspiracy theorists assert, has been dead for years, the only thing that you can be sure of is that nothing was what it seemed to be, and you'll never know the real truth.

And if you start flapping your gums about it, you might end up like some of the members of Seal Team 6 that conducted the raid, who paid the price for their team members running their mouths about the inconsistencies in the official story, and found themselves—against normal operating procedure—on board an Army National Guard helicopter in Afghanistan, sent out on a mission (first it was fire-support for pinned-down soldiers, then it was search-and-destroy) during which their aircraft was hit by a rocket-propelled grenade, killing all aboard.

Not Worth Counting

Despite their cultural differences, one has to think that hard-core anti-illegal immigration champions Governor Jan Brewer and Sheriff Joe Arpaio would have gotten along fairly well with Geronimo, at least on this particular issue. Geronimo had his own problems with our south-of-the-border neighbors, and wrote in his 1905 autobiography (which you get the impression he may have titled himself), Geronimo, My Life: the Autobiography of Geronimo,

> I have killed many Mexicans; I do not know how many, for frequently I did not count them. Some of them were not worth counting. It has been a long time since then, but still I have no love for the Mexicans. With me they were always treacherous and malicious.

Apparently Geronimo wasn't big on political correctness, either.

So, keep your mouth shut, and remember: Operation Geronimo was just the end of one chapter in a fairy tale that doesn't end happily-ever-after, and those who brought us the production don't give a shit about offending Native Americans or anyone else.

"Geronimo," the idea of using the name of one slippery character to refer to another—that's just window dressing. The real purpose in the selection of that name, if you hadn't figured it out by now, was as yet another tip-of-the-hat to Skull & Bones and the Bush Family Crime Syndicate.

I Should Have Never Surrendered

In February 1909, Geronimo was thrown from his horse while riding home, and lay in the cold all night before being found the next day. He contracted pneumonia as a result, and while on his deathbed, expressed regret to his nephew over his decision to surrender to U.S. forces years earlier. His last words were reported to be, "I should have never surrendered. I should have fought until I was the last man alive."

So should we, by god, so should we.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

BORN UNDER A BAD SIGN: THE YEAR OF THE SERPENT

BLACK FRIDAY

Thirteen, considered by many as the unluckiest of numbers, and by others as the number of the Devil himself. There are thirteen coils in a true hangman's noose and thirteen witches in a coven, sometimes referred to as a "Devil's dozen"—12 witches plus Satan. There are 13 stripes on the U.S. flag, and there were of course 13 original colonies.

In the Great Seal of the United States, both sides of which are reproduced on the reverse of the one-dollar bill, there are:

13 steps in the unfinished pyramid,
13 letters in "E Pluribus Unum,"
13 stars above the eagle,
13 bars on the shield,
13 leaves on the olive branch (as well as 13 olives), and 13 arrows.

There is even an officially-recognized phobia for the fear of the number 13, "triskaidekaphobia."

Of course, we're all familiar with Friday the 13th (fear of which is "friggatriskaidekaphobia"), the basis for which is supposedly rooted in an event involving the Knights Templar, a notion popularized in Dan Brown's The Da Vinci Code. As the tale goes, on Friday, October 13, 1307, France's Philip IV, who was deeply indebted to the Templars, executed a warrant against the Knights, hundreds of whom were arrested; Pope Clement V was also implicated in the scheme.

The Knights' Grand Master (their 23rd and last), Jacques de Molay, was among those arrested, and he and many of the others were tortured into making false confessions. When de Molay later retracted his confession, Philip had him slowly burned upon a scaffold on an island in the River Seine in Paris. Philip then used the previously-forced confessions to sentence 54 Templars to be burnt at the stake.

In Born in Blood: The Lost Secrets of Freemasonry by John J. Robinson, it is proposed that the Templars, who had been officially abolished by papal decree, subsequently went underground among masons in England and later developed into the Freemasons; regardless of whether this is true, the story of de Molay's defiance of his captors has been well-incorporated into Masonic lore.

So, Black Christmas as partial payback for Black Friday—who knows? But keep your eye on that 13.

THE 13TH SIGN

The first of the year 2011 saw a flurry of news coverage concerning the addition of a 13th Zodiacal sign, Ophiucus, the serpent-bearer. Various explanations were offered for this new sign, but the truth of the matter is that Ophiucus has been a recognized constellation for centuries. It's been right there all along, between (and slightly above) Sagittarius and Scorpio, the guardians of Galactic Center.

Now that fact alone should make your ears perk up, as we've just finished (well, not quite) dissecting the inner workings of a Galactic MegaRitual centered upon the Womb of Creation, or Skull Hill, or whatever you want to call it.

The addition of a 13th sign to the traditional Zodiac at Galactic Center, just in time for Galactic Alignment and the birth of the New Great Age—on the cusp of the 13th year of the 21st century, the first full year of the Great Age of Lucifer? Now you're talkin'.

BORN UNDER A BAD SIGN

The foot of Ophiucus stands upon the Cosmic Mountain and is one of the markers of Galactic Center. Ophiucus' true identity is that of Asclepius, the Greek god of healing, and Ophiucus ostensibly protects us from the harmful effects of the great snake, embodied in the constellation of Serpens (he also supposedly mitigates the injurious qualities of Scorpio). In traditional astrological iconography, Ophiucus appears to carry the great serpent, but, technically, Serpens is a completely separate constellation said to run behind the great healer (thus Serpens is the only split or two-part figure in the heavens).

Picture the sun being reborn in the Womb of Creation at the center of the Milky Way—between Sagittarius and Scorpio and beneath Ophiucus—giving rise to the New Great Age of the Light-Bearer, and what do we see: the Luciferian Sun, birthed under Serpens (forget about the great healer) … born under a bad sign.

Ophiucus? He was merely a stooge: here, hold this snake. The Luciferians weren't invoking the god of medicine, for Pete's sake; the real job of the snake-bearer from their point of view was merely to provide a means for a hidden reference. As with the 'symbol-within-a-symbol' Two-Headed Black Phoenix, here we find a symbol behind a symbol, literally.

THE VELVET BULLDOZER: DIED UNDER A BAD SIGN?

Born Albert Nelson on a cotton plantation in Indianola (some say Aberdeen), Mississippi, blues legend Albert King occasionally referred to himself as "B.B. King's half-brother," although they were unrelated. The iconic blues tune "Born Under a Bad Sign" was originally recorded by Albert King as the title track for an album of the same name released in 1967, and it became one of the most popular and influential blues albums of the late '60s.

Bands or performers who subsequently recorded covers of the song include the British rock group Cream and rock legend Jimi Hendrix, who, if you'll remember from book one, starred in the 1972 New Age hippie film, Rainbow Bridge—also the name of Hendrix's posthumously-released fifth album.

Known as one of the "Three Kings of the Blues Guitar" (along with B.B. King and Freddie King), 250-pound Albert stood an intimidating 6-foot 4-inches tall and was known as "The Velvet Bulldozer." The "velvet" part of his nickname arose from his smooth voice and laid-back singing style; the "bulldozer" part from a time early in King's career when he worked as a bulldozer operator during the day before hitting the stage at night.

King shuffled of his mortal coil on December 21st, 1992, and although I don't even think we're even remotely off into the realm of conspiracy or synchronicity here, then again, perhaps that assessment is a failure of imagination on my part.

Born under a bad sign
I been down since I begin to crawl
If it wasn't for bad luck, I wouldn't have no luck at all.

Amen to that, brother.

Serpens, the real 13th sign of the Zodiac—a notion with which at least some would seem to agree: 2013 in the Chinese Zodiac is, you guessed it, the Year of the Snake (the last Year of the Snake was in 2001).

Both, Please

There's tropical astrology, most commonly used in the West, and sidereal astrology, each of which have their own method for determining when the sun falls under a particular sign of the Zodiac. Although December 25th is generally accepted to lie within Capricorn, observably the sun is still in Sagittarius on that date, and underneath Serpens. The point? You can have your cake and eat it, too—born under the goat, born under the serpent, same damn difference. You don't have to choose.

The Dawning of the Age of Aquarius?

Determining when one "New Age" (not New Great Age) ends and another begins depends on establishing in what time frame earth's axis could be said to cease pointing at one constellation and start pointing at another. If this strikes you as being fraught with all sorts of difficulties and room for disagreement, you couldn't be more correct.

Astrology is not an exact art by any stretch of the imagination, and there is little consensus within the astrological community about the beginnings and endings of ages. Although the "Age of Aquarius" is typically used to refer to the heyday of the hippie and New Age movements of the 1960s and 1970s, as the opening song from the 1967 musical Hair tells us, "This is the dawning of the Age of Aquarius"—the full manifestation of the Age will not occur until sometime in the future.

Actually, though, there's not even agreement on this point. Writing in The Book of World Horoscopes, Nicholas Campion shares that he has collected over 90 dates provided by researchers for the start of the Age of Aquarius, with a range of over 2,000 years and beginning in the 15th century: from 1447 to 3621.

All this is a moot point, anyway, because the globalist Luciferians weren't laying claim to one puny little age, they were playing for all the marbles, establishing the New Great Age from its birth as their own—claiming the entire new Cycle of Precession as belonging to their god. Aquarius, regardless of when his wimpy age actually begins, has the sigil of Lucifer branded on his ass, as does every other denizen of the Zodiac from Libra to Leo.

The 13th Tarot

Isn't it just beautiful how things work out for those strongly committed to their beliefs? The real 13th sign of the Zodiac, Serpens; the first year of the Great Age of Lucifer, 2013; and the 13th card in the Tarot … La Mort, Death.

Some would point out the diversity of the characters within the card, implying that all are subject to death. Others would emphasize that although the skeleton outwardly signifies death, on a deeper level it speaks to us of our ultimate absorption back into the Eternal Waters in which we existed before entering into this illusory universe (note, too, the twin towers in front of the Uncle Toby!

Writing in the New York Observer in April of 2001 in an article entitled "At Skull and Bones, Bush's Secret Club Initiates Ream Gore," Ron Rosenbaum (the self-described Ahab of Skull & Bones) recounted his successful attempt to surveil the secret society's initiation ritual.

Rosenbaum and several accomplices—using three night-vision-capable digital-video cameras, on tape recorder, a stepladder and two walkie-talkies—managed to record the occult pyscho-drama, which included "Patriarchs," or Bonesmen, playing the parts of various characters, including the Devil and President George W. Bush (to clarify, two separate characters).

As Rosenbaum recounts, the dialogue was most interesting:

> Then someone—one of the initiates?—called out "Uncle Toby!" (Many Bone ritual personae are taken from Laurence Sterne's Tristram Shandy—you gotta give them credit there for good taste.)
> "Uncle Toby!" the cry repeated.
> "Shut up, neophyte."
> "Take that plunger out of my ass, Uncle Toby."
> Presumably, this mocking [Abner] Louima reference was a ploy to scare initiates into thinking Uncle Toby was going to give them the plunger treatment.
>
> That cheerful rectal theme was followed up by:
> "I'm gonna ream you like I reamed Al Gore!" from the George W. imitator.
> Followed by "Help me! It's the devil!"
> And then "George W." really getting into it: "I'm gonna kill you like I killed Al Gore."
> Silence. Then a door opened. Voices—half of them, it seemed, women—were screaming:
>
> "Run! Neophyte! Run, neophyte!" (The neophytes are, of course, the new initiates.)
> From my post, I could only see hooded figures racing about in the darkness above my head, accompanied by cries of:
> "Run, neophyte!"
> "Find the femur!"
> And (again): "Take that plunger out of my ass, Uncle Toby!"
> Then silence for awhile. The neophyte seemed to have gone back inside the Tomb. After which one of the Patriarchs complained, "We ought to get better blood than this fuckin' syrup, man." It was only later that I learned what the blood was for: the whole throat-slitting "barbarian" tableau after the skull-kissing.
> But first there was a different kind of kissing being referred to. There were cries of "Lick my bumhole, neophyte!" "Lick my ass, neophyte!" "Do you like my bum, neophyte?" (Despite these heartfelt pleas, we did not witness any of those acts being consummated.)
> The bumhole tribute was followed by more cries of "Get the femur!" and at least part of the death mantra I'd heard before: "DEATH EQUALS DEATH."
> Following which, "George W." chimed in with "I'm the President of the motha-fuckin' U.S.A."—apparently just for the sheer pleasure of saying it. (He was sounding more like the real George W. all the time.)
> It began to be clear that what was going on outside in the courtyard was the climax of an initiation ceremony that began inside the Tomb. There, it's reputed, the initiates must first enter into a coffin and "die to the barbarian world," to the world of "savages" (all but the Skull and Bones elect), in order to be reborn as a member of "The Order." Then comes the skull-kissing and the throat-slashing. … A ritual three Presidents, a few Supreme Court justices, maybe a dozen Senators (including 2004 Democratic Presidential contender John Kerry—which would mean a head-to-head, Skull-to-Skull smackdown with George W.), several Secretaries of State, literary and cultural luminaries including John Hersey and William F. Buckley, had all undergone.

Poor Geronimo… that sounds like that could have been a warm-up routine before the performance of the filth-laden script for Black Christmas. Run, neophyte, run.

sun and behind the waterfall). This card represents the continual regeneration of being: we experience disintegration so that we may be reintegrated on a higher plane of existence.

And yet still others, particularly those who orchestrated Black Christmas, would invoke the last line of one of Skull & Bones' key mantras* and simply say to us, "Death equals death."

*Used as part of their initiation ritual, the full wording is:

The Hangman equals death!
The Devil equals death!
Death equals death!

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

THE 2012 LONDON ILLUMINATI MEGASPECTACLE

At this point in our investigations, all I should need to give you regarding the next subject is one piece of information and you'll just about be able to guess the rest: the date of the 2005 London public transport bombings—July 7th, 7/7.

We're only going to spend a brief moment on this event, though, because as Great Britain's 9/11, there's far too much to explore to go into any real detail here at the end of our journey on the road to Phoenix. We'll stop just long enough to note that the fourth of four separate attacks that day took place aboard a double-decker bus in Tavistock Square, which was a tip-of-the-hat to the Tavistock Institute, an organization up to its ears in mind-control projects in both the UK and US and a pioneer in the field. (Also, I would be remiss if I didn't at least mention in passing that the third bombing took place near Russell Square, opposite the British Medical Association, which is headquartered in a building originally constructed for Madame Helena Blavatsky's House of Theosophy.)

"OUTRIGHT TERROR...
BOLD AND BRILLIANT"
THE

Although there are many similarities between 9/11 and 7/7, the key shared ingredient is one we're all-too-familiar with: mockery. And, lest you doubt it, a picture is worth a thousand words…actually, the picture is of words, so I'm not sure how you figure that, but in any case, all you really need to know about 7/7 can be seen in these photos of the attack at Tavistock Square.

"OUTRIGHT TERROR...

"Outright terror, bold and brilliant"…my god, you've just got to love that British sense of humor, don't you?

And, with that brief stop, we're off to the London 2012 Olympics, which, by the way, were awarded to the city by the International Olympic Committee on… July 6th, 2005. Those Brits sure know how to celebrate a win.

Too Obvious

We're only going to stay a few minutes at the Olympics, too, primarily because it was such a blatantly obvious Illuminati affair that it presents a relatively minor challenge compared to all the muck we've already waded through … that, and I suppose I'm a little biased in believing that we Yanks do put on a much better MegaRitual.

We've already explored the origin of the XXX in the 30th Olympiad in Chapter 13, so there's no need to repeat that here. We've also noted that the rationale—or at least part of it—behind the lack of a terror spectacular at the Games: they didn't want to spoil the surprise of Black Christmas, didn't want to preempt the The Big Show.

In addition to that, there's the obvious fact that many of them were in attendance in London, as it was, after all, designed as an Illuminati MegaSpectacle, with some of the most awe-inspiring and in-your-face monumental symbols of Illumination of the 21st century.

Spooks: Code 9

Another reason for the lack of an attack during the London Olympics was that it was just too obvious a target—what's the use in killing a bunch of people if the world is expecting it? Really, where's the fun in that?

That's not to say, however, that the Illuminati didn't derive great satisfaction from gaming the public for years in advance on the likelihood, nay, the practical certainty, of a nuclear terrorist strike during the Games of the 30th Olympiad.

Hell, the Brits even made a TV series in 2008 centered upon the idea, Spooks: Code 9, which ran on BBC and was set in 2012 just after a nuclear attack during the opening ceremony of the Summer Olympics.

[spooks] CODE 9

A Dirty Little Secret

The massive amount of predictive programming was by no means targeted only at the general public, however. There were plotlines integrating blatantly suspicious elements designed specifically for consumption by armchair conspiracy theorists, as well.

One of the best featured main-stream-media reports concerning sizable quantities of radioactively contaminated soil stored in a containment unit 250 meters from the north end of the Olympic Stadium. The area reportedly used to be an industrial dump site, as well as home to a small nuclear reactor used for research purposes, and officials allegedly chose not to remove the radioactive material because of concerns about transporting it through such heavily populated areas.

Another of the best stories served up for conspiracy theorists concerned the existence of, no shit, unexploded Nazi ordnance on the property; some experts said the bombs might actually be located underneath the stadium itself.

Radiological material, conventional explosives—last time I checked, those were the two key ingredients of a "dirty bomb," both already on-site and in close proximity to one another. Even without the Nazi bombs, there were plenty of explosives around, with a warship sitting in the Thames River and anti-missile batteries all around, part of the most sophisticated, all-encompassing, comprehensive security shield ever erected.

In truth, there was no way in hell that any terrorist organization could have gotten a dirty bomb, or even a container of expired yogurt, through the massive security ring; but it was made to look for all the world like a false-flag-terrorist strike was imminent.

GLORIOUS SYMBOLISM

The true glory of the XXX Olympics lay not in the pomp and circumstance of the opening ceremony—the opening music for which was scripted by the group Underworld—but rather in the magnificent (unparalleled, really) display of Illuminati symbols in and around Olympic Stadium, and elsewhere. From the world's largest congregation of all-seeing-eyes (incorporated into the construction of the stadium and incarnated as the two All-Seeing-Eye mascots) to the world's largest torch of Illumination, it was truly a sight to behold.

Ah, yes, children as a living Torch of Illumination. Would someone please dial 9-1-1? Moloch just passed out in the corner.

The official 2012 London Olympic mascots, Wenlock and Mandeville—featuring the All-Seeing-Eye of Horus just for the kiddies. Their design was understandably greeted with some disdain, with one columnist calling them the product of a "drunken one-night stand between a Teletubby and a Dalek." The pair was featured in several animated productions, including "Out of a Rainbow" and "Adventures on a Rainbow."

WE'RE MARCHING TO ZION

Several years before the London Olympics, one bright young chap named Rik Clay happened to notice that the hideous official logo (pictured below, left)—which seemed to defy all standards of aesthetic acceptability—spelled out, when properly rearranged, the word "Zion."

Rik wasn't the only person to take notice: in February 2011, Iran submitted a formal complaint to the IOC and threatened to boycott the Olympics, describing the logo as "racist" and asking both that it be withdrawn and that the logo designers be confronted. The IOC quietly rejected the demands; Iran eventually announced that it would not boycott the games.

The question of whether or not there was any substance to the allegation that this was an intentional aspect of the logo design was never actually answered. Had the London Olympics somehow been intended to facilitate the creation of an earthly Zion, or the arrival of the "New Jerusalem" from the Book of Revelation?

Those in favor of such theories cited William Blake's short poem (printed c. 1808) "And did those feet in ancient time," from the preface to his epic poem, Milton, one of a collection of writings known as the Prophetic Books. Blake's poem was inspired by the apocryphal story that a young Jesus, accompanied by his uncle Joseph of Arimathea, travelled to what is now England during Christ's so-called "lost years," and reads:

And did those feet in ancient time,
Walk upon England's mountains green:
And was the holy Lamb of God,
On England's pleasant pastures seen!

And did the Countenance Divine,
Shine forth upon our clouded hills?
And was Jerusalem builded here,
Among these dark Satanic Mills?

Bring me my Bow of burning gold;
Bring me my Arrows of desire:

Bring me my Spear: O clouds unfold!
Bring me my Chariot of fire!

I will not cease from Mental Fight,
Nor shall my Sword sleep in my hand:
Till we have built Jerusalem,
In England's green & pleasant Land.

"Till we have built Jerusalem, In England's green & pleasant Land" … Were there powerful hidden interests whose agenda this poem reflected and for whom these verses served as a source of inspiration? Well, the famous hymn based upon the poem, called "Jerusalem," has been featured in many television programs and movies, including Monty Python's Flying Circus.

Perhaps more to the point, however, freelance journalist David Hambling, writing in the Fortean Times, informs us in his article, "City of Symbols," that

> To the builders of the new London, the city was to be the New Jerusalem. Rome was in the hands of Catholics, so London must succeed it as the capital of the true faith. This was reinforced by a popular theory that the English were the descendants of the Lost Tribe of Israel, who disappeared into the West after the destruction of the kingdom in 722 BC. Londoner William Blake—who had a tendency to employ Masonic imagery—was merely echoing this idea when he wrote of Jerusalem being "builded here" decades later. This belief was a help to those who believed that Britain should be a global empire, a true successor to Rome, with a temporal and religious capital to match it.[1]

The London 2012 XXX Olympics as a Church-of-England conspiracy then? Not so much. As an Illuminati MegaSpectacle? To be sure. But was the logo in fact intended to spell "Zion," just for kicks or otherwise? Who the hell cares, because look what else it spells just as convincingly:

That's right—Ozzy! The British "Prince of Darkness," the Wizard of Ozz, the embodiment of the True Spirit of the XXX Olympiad. Incidentally, speaking of August 12th, the closing date of the 2012 Games, was the same day that the Wizard of Oz premiered way back in 1939. Crazy Train!

In Closing

The closing ceremony of the 17-day-long London Olympics, and what do we find but a 20m-wide illuminated, flaming phoenix, rising atop the Olympic flame which has been fanned out into a dome representing the creature's burning nest—with the British pop band Take That singing "Rule the World," in which the lyrics "we can rule the world" are repeated six times.

But it gets better still. This was the 30th Olympiad, the XXX Olympics, the Olympics of the Triple Cross, the significance of which has been thoroughly explained. The message is that the phoenix rises at the time of the triple crossing—and the phoenix at the closing ceremony rises before a stage laid out in the shape of the Union Jack, a triple cross. (The current design of the flag of the United Kingdom dates from the union of Great Britain and Ireland in 1801. The flag consists of: #1, the red cross of Saint George, patron saint of England, edged in white and superimposed on #2, the Cross of St Patrick, patron saint of Ireland, which are superimposed on #3, the Saltire of Saint Andrew, patron saint of Scotland. Three crosses, aligned.)

The stage floor itself is covered in oversized newsprint with headlines pulled from British literature. As one observer noted, "Oddly morbid, if not inappropriate choices" included the following: "To die will be an awfully big adventure" (Peter Pan); "This is the way world ends" (T.S. Eliot, The Hollow Men); and "The rest is silence."

This last line consists of the final words spoken by Shakespeare's Hamlet just before he expires. In Shakespeare's day, belief in an afterlife was near universal, and the reality of Heaven, and Hell, was accepted unquestioningly. But Hamlet, a child of the philosophical Renaissance, seems to question the certainty of Heaven with his final line. Hamlet speaks of death throughout the play, in one scene staring into the eyes of a freshly-unearthed skull in search of meaning. As he lays dying, he utters the words, "the rest is silence," in which context the word "rest" could have a dual meaning: it could be read as "the remainder is silence", he dies and will speak no more; or, "rest" could refer to eternal rest, the sleep of death. "For in that sleep of death," Hamlet asks himself earlier in the play, "what dreams may come?" As he slips into death, does he find the answer to his question? What dreams may come? None, the rest is silence. There is no Heaven, just the silence of the grave. Death equals death.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

THE ILLUMINATI END-OF-DAYS CODE

The precise time for the winter solstice in 2012, as listed on the U.S. Naval Observatory's website for years in advance, was 11:11 Universal Time. Given that 2012 was the year of "Galactic Alignment," New Agers and spiritualists went absolutely bonkers over this seeming super-synchronistic Message from the Matrix.

The exact moment of the 2012 winter solstice, and thus Galactic Alignment itself, they believed, was 11:11—the Universe was speaking to us. Entire books were written on the subject and there were more 11:11 YouTube videos than you could shake a stick at.

Nobody stopped to consider the alternative explanation: that, as opposed to being a loving message from the Creator indicating the impending ascension of mankind, this was yet another indicator of the exact depth of the tyranny humanity was now living under—a tyranny so pervasive that it extended into every aspect of our lives, of our existence, including time itself.

ZERO HOUR

Winter solstice: December 21st. 12/21. 11:11. If that looks strangely like a code to you, you're instincts are correct, and if you remember 11 from Most Dangerous as "the number of magick in itself," you're starting to put the pieces together.

2012, the year of the Triple Cross, the year of the Great Wedding (Heaven/MWG meets Earth/horizon). December 21st, the death of the sun, in this instance, the final demise of the sun of the old Great Age. 11:11 UT, the precise moment when this grand cosmic convergence culminates—the Zero Hour.

Do you not think that, being the insane control freaks they have repeatedly shown themselves to be, the Illuminati had some ingenious scheme for counting up (or counting down) to this most momentous of occasions—of defining time itself, according to their own designs?

THE MATH STRUCTURE OF THE ORDER OF THE AGES

To what, exactly, am I referring? This—11:11 UT December 21st, 2012, was not simply a time and date. It was a code, one that reflected the very mathematical structure of the order of the ages:

11:11, 12/21
11 x 111 = 1221

Intriguing, you might be thinking, but what does that really tell us? For one thing, it hints at an ability to manipulate our reality that defies what most of us are willing to accept. But only hints, because that's not the full code, not by a long shot.

You'll recall that the Cycle of Precession is approximated at 26,000 years by astronomers—that's just not good enough for the Global Controllers. Their mastery of our reality is total, and their knowledge of its secret inner workings complete (at least by their own estimation): some would call it magic, some would call it super-knowledge…others would call it occult bullshit, but I'd say we'd better pay close attention to what the folks calling the shots actually believe.

The Mayan long-count calendar, consists of 13 baktun (there's our thirteen again), a baktun being comprised of 144,000 days. December 21st, 2012, corresponded to the end of 13 baktun, to the end of a period of 1,872,000 days.

The Mayans maintained a complex set of interlocking calendars, tracking sets of 260, 360 and 365 days. Dividing 1,872,000 by 360 yields 5,200, and in the Western tradition, a 360-day year is known as a "prophetic year" (p.y.). The Mayans divided the Great Age into five sub-ages, versus the traditional twelve (thirteen, whatever), each consisting of 13 baktun. So, each Mayan age equaled 5,200 p.y., and the Great Age equaled exactly 26,000 p.y.; a Great Age that is 26,000 p.y. in length contains exactly 9,360,000 days.

Now, that's the kind of precision occultist control-freaks can dig, baby; yet, never satisfied with the status quo, they desired a time-keeping system all their own, one just as perfect, or, better still, more perfect. And their wishes were fulfilled.

Mathematical Shorthand for the Apocalypse

As a side enterprise, the Illuminati took great pleasure in devising "mathematical shorthand" for the End of the Age (not that it had any practical use whatsoever):

- The number of prophetic years in the Great Age: 26,000= 360 x 72.2 repeating
- The number of days in the Great Age: 9,360,000 = 360^2 x 72.2 repeating Fascinating—pointless, but fascinating, yet again I say, it's damn hard to argue with mathematical perfection.

THE ILLUMINATI SUPERNUMBER

Bringing the beginnings of our date code forward, we commence the operation:

11 x 111 = 1221
1221 x 21 = 25641
25641 = 777 x 33 = 77 x 333

Now, anybody that knows numerology or Crowleyian gematria will immediately recognize the significance of the 333 (the number of the demon Choronzon) and the 777 (often viewed as the number of God, too much other stuff to even go into), and we of course recognize at least the superficial importance of the 33 and 77 from our own investigations.

Yes, but again, what does this tell us? 25641 is the Illuminati SuperNumber: a mathematical alchemical formulation capable of transmuting its very nature, much like the mythical phoenix. It is 777 and 33, the number of God and the number of Christ, and simultaneously 77 and 333, the number of Satan and the number of Choronzon. Or, would you rather invoke the Biblical anti-Christ, whose number is listed in the Book of Revelation as 666? 25+641 = 666. But wait, some Biblical manuscripts list the number of the Beast as 616. That's okay: 641-25 = 616. 25641 mathematically represents the synthesis of all things, the reconciliation of opposites. It speaks of Unification, of Union.

That's not all, however. Recall that the number of days in the Great Age is 9,360,000, and divide this by 25641: the result, 365.04036. The Illuminati SuperNumber is also the number of 365-day years in the Great Age. (Yes, I know that the length of a year is currently 365.242 days—we have no way of knowing what the actual average length of a day is over the last twenty-five thousand plus years, and, besides, it's damn hard to argue with the mathematical perfection above.)

To fully comprehend this, let's examine further:

11 x 111 = 1221 x 21 = 25641

A total of 25641 "Illuminati years," broken down into 21 sets of 1221, the final set of which came to an close on 12/21 at exactly 11:11 UT—the literal End of Days (9,360,000 days, to be precise). Now that is mathematical genius, and, I dare say, real magick.

POSTSCRIPT: REVELATION

Lest you leave with the false impression that the Illuminati date code was based upon Mayan calendrical wisdom alone, I will briefly point out that there are tremendous similarities between the astrotheological teachings of that South American civilization and those of certain ancient Hebrew priests and writers, in particular the author(s) of the Book of Revelation.

Although the authorship of the book is traditionally attributed to John, who wrote it is not nearly as important as what it contains—which is something far different than what most Christians and Biblical scholars conceive of.

In Chapter 21, Revelation describes the New Jerusalem, the purported City of God, in considerable detail. These details include a variety of items, including 12 gemstones, which are in fact the gemstones associated with the 12 signs of the Zodiac. Revelation is replete with zodiacal symbolism, and what we find in the twenty-first chapter is an encoded calendar very similar in certain respects to the Mayan long-count calendar.

Hebrew writers sometimes used distance as a metaphor for time, and without getting into all of the measurements and the math, this is precisely the case in this instance. These ancient keepers of wisdom utilized a geometric construct as a means of encoding specific numerical information concerning the passage of time, lots of time. The New Jerusalem Zodiacal Calendar.

EPILOGUE

A PAINFUL REMEMBRANCE

Toward the end of Most Dangerous, I reconstructed the Occult Script for the 9/11 Global Luciferian MegaRitual. Here, I'm not going to repeat that process in quite the same manner, because if you haven't read this entire book, a summary is not going to do anything but make your head ache. And if you have read this book, I'm sure your head is already aching, and a full recap wouldn't do anything but make it worse—so I'll mercifully keep this as short as possible. Like federal officials riding high above the carnage following a major nuclear attack, we're just going to skim over the surface, picking out the major details in the landscape… reminding ourselves where we've been and what we've seen (just when you thought you might be able to forget it).

'TWAS THE NIGHT BEFORE BLACK CHRISTMAS…

We started out in Paradise Valley, in the Valley of the Sun, where we witnessed the birth of a second sun, a nuclear-fueled conflagration that was at the very heart of the 2012 Black Christmas XXX Galactic MegaRitual, and the New Ground Zero. We found yet another monumentally-insulting memorial to match the one in Shanksville, PA, and were paid a visit by our old friend 17, who, like a bad rash, seemed to be everywhere. We then witnessed the Return of the Trident and visited with Sparky the Sun Devil in "The House of Heat," but the real shocker was, well, "the shocker" (hand sanitizer, anyone?).

We took a bad trip down US Route 93, the favored roadway of Thelemites in the Land of AZ and, now, around the globe, and we made a pit stop at the OZ Gay & Lesbian Bar before being treated to some "Black Rain" in the Land of Ozz.

We met a cast of real characters, including Joe "America's Toughest Sheriff" Arpaio (aka Nickel Bag Joe) and Jan "The Wicked Witch of the West" Brewer (Arizona's Radiological-Technologist Governor), as well as the deadly duo of Barack "No-Denyin'-I'm-Hawaiian" Obama (the Comic-in-Chief, or, Usurper-in-Chief) and Janet "The Man-Caused Disaster" Napolitano (the Secretary of Homeland Insecurity)—and, last but not least, John "I am older than dirt and have more scars than Frankenstein" McCain (Captain America).

Actually, we didn't meet John last, and the five above weren't the entire cast by any means. There was Elvis Presley (or, maybe not—Sheriff Joe was a little sketchy on the details), commentator Chuck Norris and fellow toughman Steven Seagal, who helped the Sheriff lead a daring daytime raid on unarmed Jesus Llovera and his chickens in a self-propelled howitzer. Hero that he was, Seagal turned out to be just one member of Arpaio's Insane Clown Posse (actually an armed "illegal immigration operations posse"), but one could be forgiven for making such a characterization given that the bunch also included Wyatt Earp and Dick Tracy, as well as the actors who played Willy Armitage from the Mission Impossible TV series and CBS's The Incredible Hulk.

Somewhere along the way, we learned about Hitler's Daughter being involved in "Fingergate," as well as some things we didn't really want to know about Sheriff Joe's pink underwear and green bologna. We became intimate with Aleister Crowley's Liber 44, the Mass of the Phoenix, as well as the number 44 in a variety of other incarnations. We did a little bird-watching, sighting the Bennu, the Shen-Shen and the Rech—Go Big Red!—and were serenaded by shock-rocker and DeMolay International member Alice Cooper.

We witnessed the Mayan Non-Apocalypse and gazed upon the Galactic Alignment, occurring primarily in the minds of New Agers, attended the Great Wedding, and contemplated the use of nuclear power. We discovered a hidden Biblical prophecy, sighted the Triple Cross and watched the fulfillment of the Prophecy of the Last Pope.

On Jerusalem's Skull Hill, we sifted through the pile of rubble formerly known as the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, and in the heavens, we peered into the Womb of Creation, and saw a hawk, or a swan, and the crosses of two criminals, or the Thieves' Cross… shit, I get confused.

And just when we thought we'd seen one cross too many, here came the XXX Oympiad, followed by the 12th Imam, the Superforce, "the Mother Lodge of the World" and the Ayatollah Khomeini. We watched Barack "I will win the war on Christmas" Obama drop a big one on the public unnoticed, and then grimaced as the Biggest Christmas Day Surprise in history was unwrapped. It was a red hot holiday, a Satanic Dawn Mass Sacrifice in Paradise Valley, and Santa left ashes for all the little boys and girls.

Our journey took us further into the Obama Psyop, past the Zeppelintribüne and the Bible-less re-swearing ceremony, past the Nobel-Peace-Prize-for-Absolutely-Nothing and into the President of the World's secret occult identity as the globalist's Sun King (Amen Ra is back BHO USA!), or, if you prefer, the

New Tutankhamon of the World, or, if you prefer, the Anti-Christ. (Attention parents, if there were any kids present on the tour, which I hope to god there weren't, and you made the mistake of letting them look at the Capitol Dome and the Washington Monument as we went past, you're going to need to have the birds-and-the-bees discussion with them all over again. Why the hell do you think I called it a XXX MegaRitual?)

High above, accompanying us on our travels was Capricornus, as below we celebrated Saturnalia, "the best of days"—please pass the leftover Atomic Fireball Hard Candy, and put Christmas Island back on, would you?

Natural Born, Two-Faced Killers

Next, we found ourselves wandering around out in the Arizona desert along Highway 77, counting bodies at a Safeway. Gabby Giffords was among the wounded, and the 9/11 Birthday Girl was among the dead, along with Let's Roll, excuse me, Federal Judge John Roll, and Gabe Zimmerman.

The main target of the attack that morning, however, was the Messenger of God, Gabriel, who was symbolically struck down on the Eve of Agony—under the watchful eye, as well as the Arch, of Janus, or, if you prefer, the Royal Arch of Freemasonry.

Identical twin astronauts came into play somehow, but I keep getting them confused with Dr. David Bowman from the movie 2001, who I in turn get confused with the fellow of the same name who tended the wounded that morning in Tucson. One of the twins was Gabby's husband, and one was in the International Space Station at the time of the shooting, and one of them was a pilot on Discovery, no, wait, that was Dr. Bowman … oh, screw it.

At this point, quite frankly I feel like I've been subjected to mind control, Monarch programming perhaps, or Green programming, or whatever. This is one far out (outer space, to be more precise) megaritual, and, speaking of mind-control, maybe Jared Loughner wasn't just plain nuts after all.

That's No Joke

The Dark Knight Rises—and we learned that it wasn't Batman, and it wasn't the inflatable Lord Voldemort from the Olympics' opening ceremony. The only hint we really needed? He's the Son of Aurora, which as we discovered is one heckuva coincidence, considering that Aurora, Colorado, was the site of the worst mass shooting in U.S. history. Alleged gunman James Eagan "Fire" Holmes played The Joker—actually, he wasn't playing—and really he represented the Trickster in disguise.

With Columbine just down the road a piece, it wasn't too surprising to learn that Holmes had a fair amount in common with both Jared Loughner and Sirhan Sirhan. And as we travelled on down I-225, we figured out that the road led right to Black Christmas.

NOW WE ARE ALL SONS OF BITCHES

I'm really not feeling that well, as a matter of fact—I'm seeing double… a double-headed eagle, which turns into double-headed phoenix… 33s and triangles everywhere… phrases repeated over and over… Deus Meumque Jus… this is a Jornada del Muerto. Dr. Green? I'm not feeling myself anymore, who am I? That's right, I remember—Now I am become Death…

Seriously, though, we've all been the subjects of one massive trauma-based mind-control operation, a XXX Galactic MegaRitual, and, speaking of rituals, split personalities, psychological warfare and trigger words, how about the historical personality behind the codename for the bin Laden raid, Geronimo? Maybe he was just born under a bad sign, like the sun of the New Great Age of Lucifer, who was birthed of Serpens, the true 13th sign of the Zodiac (and perhaps Uncle Toby will tell us whether it is in fact Geronimo's skull that is kissed while the Bonesmen chant "Death equals death").

That's almost it, thank god. We're basically going to skip the Olympics, the not-so-dirty (bomb or otherwise) XXX Illuminati MegaRitual that it was, teeming with huge all-seeing-eyes and featuring a super-sized Torch of Illumination—and a logo that spelled Ozzy. We're not going to say much else about the Illuminati End-of-Days Code or their SuperNumber, either—what can you say when you've been shown that you're nothing but a rat in a maze, under the stopwatch of ultra-villainous lab technicians?

DREAM ON

Now, here at the very end of our journey, after all we've been through together, there's still no relief and no reason for hope. We are not the brave souls of the Fellowship of the Ring, standing at the wrecked Black Gates of Mordor, celebrating the extinguishing of the All-Seeing Eye of Sauron. We have not successfully returned the ring to Mount Doom, and we have not saved Earth, Middle or otherwise, from anything.

There is probably only one thing that is safe to say at this point, and that is that we will all be dreaming of a White Christmas for a very long time to come.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

1. In context of mind-control, The Joker is an elusive, chameleon-like persona—a wild card within the psychological programming system that can imitate anything and take any form necessary. Jokers will manifest when a mind control victim attempts to study the codes and programming that direct their actions. In victims who have been extensively programmed and subsequently seek help with deprogramming, Jokers are one of the mechanisms that the deep level (Omega) programming can use to regenerate itself and rebuild any damaged parts of the general operating system.

Chapter One: The Enigma

"When Lucifer and the Trinity began to war with each other, those who did not take sides, worthy, noble angels, had to descend to earth to that Stone which is forever incorruptible. I do not know whether God forgave them or damned them in the end: if it was His due He took them back. Since that time the Stone has been in the care of those whom God appointed to it and to whom He sent His angel. This, sir is how matters stand regarding the Grail."

- Wolfram von Eschenbach's Parzival.

The Accursed Treasure

In Latin, the word "sacrum", from whence we derive the English word "sacred" has two apparently opposite connotations. One is "holy", or "consecrated", and the other is "accursed, horrible, detestable." You have to look at the context in which the word "sacrum" is used to determine whether the object being referred to is blessed by the powers of good, or cursed by the powers of evil. In the case of the object known as the “Holy Grail”, however, and the related mystery of Rennes-le-Chateau, France, the determination is far from straight-forward.

As a researcher into the subject, I have often felt the spine-tingling sensation of the Devil himself breathing down my neck, and the presence of praeterhuman intelligences guiding me down the path towards revelation. That revelation was, for me, akin to the taste of the Tree of Knowledge Adam and Eve purportedly enjoyed in the Garden of Eden, giving them insight into the mind of God, a true divine illumination. As I continued down this path, following the twists and turns of the Holy Grail mystery wherever it led me, I discovered the answers to age-old questions, and revealed ancient secrets that have lain untouched in the dusty catacombs of dead history for thousands of years. Most of those secrets, I knew, would be of incalculable value to scholarship, and to humanity as a whole, once I was able to publish them. Other secrets I have learned are, as the saying goes, meant “only for the initiated.” They are “to keep and conceal, and to never reveal”, according to the well-known Masonic oath. For the legacy of the Holy Grail is the legacy of a forgotten race: the fathers of kings, builders of civilizations, and keepers of an arcane tradition meant only for an exclusive elite - the rightful inheritors of the secret doctrine of the Grail. To the initiated, a glimpse of the Grail is illumination, the sum of all desires, but to the profane unbeliever it is poison. Was I up to the perilous challenge of the Grail quest? Could I avoid the tricks, pitfalls and false roads that would greet me at every turn, and solve the riddle that hundreds of previous seekers had failed to? This book describes my adventurous quest, and the incredible results that it led me to.

The primary impetus for my interest in this mystery was, as it is for many Grail researchers, the publication of the best-selling Holy Blood, Holy Grail, by Michael Baigent, Henry Lincoln, and Richard Leigh. This book presented a radical new theory: that Jesus Christ did not die on the cross, but lived on to father children, whose descendants intermarried with what became the Royal House of France. And it all started with Henry Lincoln's investigation in the mystery of Rennes-le-Chateau.

The region of Southern France in which Rennes-le-Chateau is situated, called the Languedoc, has a long and fascinating history. During medieval times, It had been an important headquarters for the famous fighting monks known as the Knights Templar, the battle ground for the Catholic Church's crusade against the heretical Cathar sect, and the site of the capitol for France's first royal dynasty, the Merovingians - all subjects that I shall get to in due course. The tiny mountaintop village known as Rennes-le-Chateau had once been home to the Merovingian king-de-jure Sigisbert IV, and was quite possibly the home of his mother, Giselle de Razes, herself a Visigothic Princess. This village's central feature was, and still is, a little Catholic parish dedicated to Saint Mary Magdalene. To this quaint little church came, in 1885, a new cure, Berenger Sauniere, then 33, quite a learned man to be receiving such a seemingly lowly position. At that time, only about 200 people lived in Rennes-le-Chateau, and Sauniere's salary was a mere pittance - only a few dollars per year in today's rates.

In 1891, borrowing funds from the township, Sauniere began a restoration project for the church, on the encouragement of his friend, Abbe Henri Boudet, cure of a church at nearby Rennes-le-Bains. During these renovations, he had the altar stone lifted, which rested on two ancient Visigothic pillars. It was inside one of these pillars that Sauniere discovered four parchments, sealed inside wooden tubes, apparently written and deposited there by the parish's former cure, Abbe Antoine Bigou. Two of these parchments contained genealogies detailing the lineage of Dagobert II, the last effective king of the Merovingian dynasty. The other two parchments consisted of passages from the New Testament. But these were not mere pieces of scripture. They were written with deliberate spelling errors, misplaced truncated letters and spacing anomalies which revealed a clever coding system. Sauniere was sent by Monsignor Felix Billard, the Bishop of Carcassonne, to have the parchments interpreted by Father Bieil, Director of Saint Sulpice in Paris, as well as the priest‘s nephew, Emile Hoffet - an ecclesiastic scholar, closet occultist, and expert in cryptography. However, once deciphered, the parchments still did not make much sense, at least to the lay reader. The first one, which I will hereafter refer to as Parchment One, said:

“To Dagobert II, King and to Sion belong this treasure and he is there dead.”

Parchment Two was much more cryptic. It read:

“Shepherdess - No temptation that Poussin and Teniers hold the key; Peace 681 by the cross and this horse of God I destroy this dæmon of the guardian at midday blue apples.”

After the parchments had been deciphered, Father Bieil gave Berenger Sauniere copies of two paintings: one, an unspecified work by David Teniers, and the other, a work by the prolific Nicolas Poussin called Les Bergers d’Arcadie - The Shepherds of Arcadia. These facts help us to understand the reference in the parchments which reads: “Poussin and Teniers hold the key." Poussin's painting, although once thought to have been a figment of his imagination, is now known to have depicted an actual tomb that existed near the village of Arques at the time, six miles from Rennes-le-Château. In fact, Rennes-le-Chateau itself can be seen in the corner of the painting. The inscription on the tomb reads: "Et in Arcadia Ego", and is the title of an earlier work from 1618 by the painter Guercino, as well as another Poussin painting on the same theme made ten years previous. Often translated "Even in Arcadia I am", and taken to be a reference to the pervasiveness of Death, it means, more literally: "And in Arcadia I...", like an unfinished sentence. This sentence would take on an increasing significance as my investigation continued

When Sauniere returned from his trip to Paris, he is said to have exhibited strange behavior, continuing to renovate his parish, but now in a very strange bizarre fashion. For instance, he installed depictions of the Stations of the Cross on the church walls bearing some marked irregularities. Station XIV showed Christ's body being installed in the tomb at nighttime, in contrast to the traditional daylight depiction, causing the authors of Holy Blood, Holy Grail to question whether it was actually being removed from the tomb instead. Sauniere erected a large, Satanic-looking statue inside the doorway: a depiction of the demon Asmodeus, keeper of secrets and hidden treasures (and, according to cabalistic tradition, the true architect of Solomon's Temple). Above the door Sauniere placed a sign that read "Terribilis est locus ist", meaning "This place is terrible." He erected a Gothic-looking tower called "Tour Magdala" to house his library in, and a villa named "Bethania", after one of Christ's other disciples, Mary of Bethany. Sauniere could often be found up late at night, walking the grounds, digging in the graveyard and making excavations underneath the parish foundation. One interesting excavation involved lifting what was called "the Knight's Flagstone", which stood before the altar. No one knows exactly what he found under there, but he immediately told his workmen to put everything back, and had the stone (which bore a depiction of two knights riding the same horse, the seal of the Knights Templar) paved over.

Sauniere's behavior extended to the church's graveyard, where, without regard for the sanctity of human remains, he proceeded to desecrate a grave. It was that of the noble Marie, Marquise de Blanchefort, a descendant of the Merovingian kings, whose family had been deeply involved with the Knights Templar, providing them with their fourth Grand Master. The tombstone and plate had been designed by the parish's former cure, Abbe Bigou, who had been the Blancheforts' personal chaplain. The text of the tombstone's inscription contained spelling and spacing anomalies that turned out to be yet another code.

When deciphered, it was found to be an exact replica of the coded text on Parchment Two, “Shepherdess - No temptation...” The plate was inscribed with a strange mixture of Greek and Latin letters that formed the words “Et in Arcadia Ego”, along with a bizarre depiction of a spider, and again, the letters “PS.” The inscriptions were removed by Sauniere, clearly in an attempt to cover up the “terrible” secrets he had learned from the parchments, but he did not realize that somebody had already made engravings, which remained in the town’s archives.

At about this time Sauniere began receiving a large cash deposit from Archduke Johann von Habsburg, a cousin of Franz Josef, Emperor of Austria, and he proceeded to spend extravagantly - on food, wine, clothes, parties, trips to Paris, and more church renovations, using, at times, extremely rare and expensive materials. He was then, it seems, hired by Jean-Stephane Habsburg specifically to search for secret documents within the church. He also started carousing with a circle of occult initiates which included Emile Hoffet, opera singer Emma Calve (his suspected lover), and composer Claude Debussy. To all appearances, Sauniere had been converted to some strange occult sect, presumed by many to have been a Masonic-oriented secret society. But at the time, no one knew the name of this group. However, the answer may perhaps be found in an inscription placed on the Calvary in the church courtyard, “AOMPS” - which, as author Henry Lincoln theorizes, could stand for Latin words that translate to, “Ancient Mystical Order of the Priory of Sion.” This is perhaps also the meaning of the two letters, “PS”, which can be found at the bottom of one of the parchments, along with the word “Sion”, which is written backwards at the bottom of Parchment Two.[1]

Sauniere continued his lavish spending and strange behavior for his remaining years, apparently keeping his secret within his circle of occult friends, including his friend Abbe Boudet, and his housekeeper, Marie Deneraud. Then on the 17th of January, 1917, the “Feast Day of Saint Sulpice”, and the same date of death found on the tombstone of Marie de Blanchefort, the sixty-five-year-old Sauniere had an unexpected stroke - quite unexpected, considering that just five days previous, his parishioners had been noting how healthy he seemed for a man his age. Strangely, Marie Deneraud had already ordered a coffin for Sauniere.

For the next five days he lay on his deathbed. A priest from a nearby town was called in to hear his confession and administer Last Rites. But as witnesses state, the priest emerged from the bedchamber moments later, stricken with terror, and having refused to give Sauniere Extreme Unction. According to one witness, he “never smiled again”, and his inexplicable state of mental anguish lasted for several months. On January 23, the day after his death, Sauniere's body was seated upright in front of the Tour Magdala, dressed in a red ceremonial robe with long tassels, which his parishioners proceeded to pluck off of his garment as they filed past, one by one, giving their respects. The meaning of this ceremony has eluded most researchers, but as I will later demonstrate, its roots are quite ancient.

[1] Another word found in that parchment was “Rex Mundi”, meaning “King of the World.” Rex Mundi was considered by the heretical Cathars who had once occupied the area to be the evil demiurge that had created existence. The significance of this will soon be understood.

When Sauniere's will was read, there were more surprises in store, for he was declared to be penniless, having given all of his accumulated wealth to Marie Deneraud. She continued to live off of this wealth until 1946, when a new French currency was issued. Frenchmen were required, while exchanging old franc notes for new, to give a basic account of how they had acquired their money. Rather than give any explanation, Madam Deneraud chose to burn all of her old francs in a bonfire outside of the Villa Bethania. This villa she then sold, and lived off of the proceeds for the next seven years. The villa's new owner, Neil Corbu, became her best friend, and she promised him that before she passed, she would reveal to him a secret that would bring him not only wealth, but "power." Unfortunately, she herself suffered a stroke before she could reveal it, and spent the rest of her short life in bed, having been rendered mute.

Over the years, much has been made of this mystery. The authors of Holy Blood, Holy Grail have suggested that the "he" referred to in the second parchment ("and he is there dead") might have actually been the big "He" - Jesus Christ, who, according to this theory, survived the crucifixion, faked his death, and was smuggled out of the Holy Land, allowing rumors of his ascent to Heaven to gather in his wake. Indeed a long-standing tradition embraced for generations in rural Southern France attests to this being the case. As the legend tells us, Jesus was not alone, but accompanied by his wife in this story - Mary Magdalene, the "reformed whore" of Catholic theology whom Jesus, to the consternation of his other disciples, loved above all others. She was also, of course, the patron saint of Rennes-le-Chateau. As Holy Blood, Holy Grail argues, Christ was a flesh and blood being, the biological son of his father Joseph, not some "Holy Ghost" merely inhabiting a human body. Furthermore, in the Gospels his disciples refer to him as "Rabbi", and rabbis were required to be married, encouraged to have families so as to set a proper example for the rest of the Jewish people. As the theory goes, Christ was no peasant, no mere beggar, but literally the King of the Jews, with a rightful claim to that title through his descent from King David. And as it happens, the local French legends state that Mary was pregnant at the time with Christ's child, the royal heir to the throne of Jerusalem. Southern France already included a large Jewish population that would have welcomed them. Thus the legends state that "Mary Magdalene brought the Holy Grail to France" - the Holy Grail, in this context, being a symbol for Mary's womb, pregnant with the royal blood of the Holy Family. This blood became, through Christ's descendants, intermingled, they say, with that of local nobility, and eventually ended up flowing through the veins of the Merovingian kings of France.

This tale, along with a number of other, more ancient mythological elements, eventually evolved into the Grail myths of the Middle Ages. One of the most convincing pieces of evidence for this is that fact that the French word for "Holy Grail" - "Sangreal", is remarkably similar to the French words for royal blood, "Sang Real." As perhaps confirmation of this, the authors of Holy Blood, Holy Grail did receive, while researching their book, information from a priest with connections to Emile Hoffet stating that that treasure which Sauniere discovered, and which led to him receiving cash payments ensuring his secrecy on the matter, consisted of "incontrovertible proof" that Christ survived the crucifixion, only to die years later in Southern France. Presumably, therefore, Christ's body would be interred there, perhaps elaborately so, by his loyal Visigothic subjects, who would have passed down the story in allegorical form to the generations that followed. Was this, then, the meaning behind the allegory of the tomb in Poussin's painting, The Shepherds of Arcadia? Did it, perhaps, depict an actual tomb clearly visible near Rennes-le-Chateau while at the same time pointing metaphorically to another, more important tomb that still lies hidden within the region's voluminous mountains?

In fact Henry Lincoln has discovered an amazing correspondence between The Shepherds of Arcadia and the landscape of Rennes-le-Chateau - specifically, a pentagram which he found implied in the painting's geometry.[2] The same pentagonal geometry can be found on a map of Rennes-le-Chateau, formed by five mountain peaks that make, seemingly against all odds, a mathematically perfect pentagram. Perhaps this pentagram acts as the proverbial "X" marking the spot of the sacred tomb. Thus the painting, which may be a coded message from a Renaissance painter clued in to the mystery, could actually be a map to buried treasure, the remains of the most popular man in history (Jesus) and the link between the French Merovingian kings and the biblical House of David. Could Poussin have known all this, enough to encode such a message in his picture? As it turns out, in 1656, Poussin was visited in Rome by Abbe Louis Fouquet, brother of Nicolas Fouquet, Louis XIV's superintendent of finances. After the meeting, while still in Rome, the Abbe sent a letter to his brother saying:

[2] The pentagram, of course, is a symbol of Venus, and one of the most recognizable symbols of the occult.

"He and I discussed certain things, which I shall with ease be able to explain to you in detail - things which will give you, through Monsieur Poussin, advantages which even kings would have great pains to draw from him, and which, according to him, it is possible that nobody else will ever discover in the centuries to come. And what is more, these are things so difficult to discover that nothing now on this earth can prove of better fortune nor be their equal."

Shortly after receiving this, Nicolas Fouquet was arrested, imprisoned, and held "incommunicado" for the rest of his life. The letter was confiscated by Louis XIV, who later went to great efforts to obtain The Shepherds of Arcadia, which he hung at his private apartments in Versailles. But what was it that Poussin and the Abbe discussed? What had he discovered "which even kings would have great pain to draw from him"? Was it, perhaps, "incontrovertible proof" of the tomb of Christ in France?

But why, many have asked, if he was not the son of God, and did not die on the cross for our sins, should his bloodline be so important? If the people who ascribe to this theory do not believe in his divinity, why should they care about his descendants? And why did Sauniere erect that demonic statue in the doorway of his church, with the inscription outside that said “This Place is Terrible?” Why was it that when Sauniere lay on his deathbed, the priest assigned to administer Last Rites refused him Final Unction, and exited his bed-chamber white as a ghost, terrified out of his wits? What secret was it that Sauniere divulged on his deathbed which caused this priest to be thereafter a changed man, who reportedly “never smiled again?” It is illogical that the prospect of Jesus Christ being married and having children would, at the close of the 19th century, illicit such a response. Such an idea is heretical, but certainly not demonic, and not the kind of thing that would cause a person to lose his sense of humor for the remainder of his life. Furthermore, why would the Catholic Church and the hidden hierarchy of Europe be willing to kill, as they purportedly had in the past, to keep a such a secret, the implications of which would seem to be purely theological and academic? It did not make sense to me when I first to write a book about this mystery. But as I discovered, throughout history, the Holy Grail has played a pivotal role, and the powers of the Grail are both sacred and demonic.

What is the Holy Grail?
